By a local act a corporation was enabled to levy tolls and duties, in respect of specified goods, upon ships entering a harbour, and out of the funds arising from such tolls and duties to repay moneys borrowed for the improvement of the harbour, and to keep it in repair. The act cuntained exemptions in favour of the Crowu. but there was no express cauctment that the Crown should be liable to toll in other respects. Goods not included within the exemption having been imported into the harbour for government purposes:—Held, that the Crown was not liable for duties in respect of them. Ib.

Limitation of Dignities.]—Semble, that the Crown has not an unlimited power of limiting dignities in any way that it pleases, and that it cannot create a mode of succession to a title totally unknown to the law. Cope v. Delaware (Eurl), 42 L. J., Ch. 870; L. R. 8 Ch. 982; 23 L. 7. 555; 22 W. R. 3.

The Crown cannot give to the grant of a dignity or honour a quality of descent unknown to the law. Wiltes' Peerage, L. R. 4 H. L. 126.

Creation of Courts.]—Although the Crown may by its prenegative establish courts to proceed according to common law, it cannot create any new court to administer any other law. Naturi (Bishapp), Le re, 3 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 115, 11 Jun. (N.S.) 353; 12 L. T. 188; 13 W. R. 549. Under the Bombay charter of justice, the

Under the Bombay charter of justice, the Supreme Court at Bombay is invested with full and absolute power to allow or deny an appeal in criminal cases, and no power is reserved to the Crown by such charter to grant leave to appeal in such cases. The case of Christian v. Chrice (1.P. W. 329), observed upon. Rey. v. Allow Perno, 5 Moore, P. C. 296.

The royal court of Jersey has no power to order charges for alterations made in the court house, directed at its instance, to be derived out of the Crown revenues of the island. Judgment of the Corn to Jersey, declaring the attorney-general and receivers of the island liable for such charges, revised on appeal, with costs, Jersey (Jtt. Gen.) v. Capelain, § Moore, P. C. 37.

Prize.]—Privateer sailing and taking prize without letters of marque, the prize belongs to the king as a droit of the Crown, Nichol v. Goodall, 10 Ves. 155.

Title in Extra-parochial Places.]—The king, in right of his crown, has a general right to the tithes of all lands situate in extra-parochial places. Att.-Gen. v. Eardley (Lard), Dan. 271; 8 Price, 39; 22 R. R. 697.

Effect of Judiesture Acts.]—The prerogative of the Crown to intervene in actions affecting the rights or revenue of the sovereign has not been affected by the Judienture Acts; and for the determination of such matters the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice had all the powers formerly possessed by the Court of Exchequer. Aft.-Cen. v. Constable, 48 L. J., Ex. 455; 4 Ex. D. 172; 27 W. R. 661.

Liberty of Subject.]—The Court of Chancery is cautious of extending the prerogative of the Crown, so as to restrain the liberty of the subject, or his power over his own person and estate, further than the law will allow. Barnesley, Emparte, 3 Ack. 171.

Coinage.]—The right to regulate the coinage and paper money of a state is part of the sovereign percogative recognised by the law of nations, which is part of the common law of England, and therefore such right will be protected by the courts of this country. Austrian Emperor v. Kosseth, 2 Giff. 628. Affirmed. 30 L. J., Ch. 690; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 483; 4 L. T. 494; 9 W. R. 712.

Treatics—Interference with Private Rights.]—Where the government justified certain acts, in derogation of the private rights of the plantifi in regard to his lobster fishery, as acts and matters of state arising out of political relations between Her Majesty and the French government, contending that they involved the construction of treaties and of a temporary modus vivendi for lobster fishing in Newfoundland and other acts of state, and that they were matters which could not be inquired into by the court:—Held, that this defence disclosed no answer to the action. Walker v. Baird, 61 L. J., P. C. 92; [1892] A. C. 491; 67 L. T. 513—P. C.

Salmon Fishing—Rights of Crown—Staying Proceedings.]—Where in a ponding cause it appears that the Crown has a prima facie claim to salmon fishings in dispute, the court ought to direct intimation to be made to the Crown authorities, and stay the action pending their decision to appear or bring a separate action. Ogston v. Stewarf, [1896] A. C. 120—H. L. (Sc.)

Enemies' Goods.] — Enemies' goods coming into this country may be seized for the use of the Crown. Land v. Lord North and the Bank of England. 4 Dong. 266.

Right to Print.]—The Crown has not a prerogative or a power to grant the printing of almanacs to the Company of Stationers, exclusive of any other. Stationers' Co. v. Carman, 2 W. Bl. 1004.

The king's printers were authorised to print statutes and abrilgments at common law, exclusively of all others who had not prior grants. Basket v. Cambridge University, 2 Burr. 661; 1 W. Bl. 105; 2 Ld. Ken. 307.

Royal Palacos.]—The privilege of exemption from the execution of legal process which attaches to royal residences is based solely on the principle that the personal dignity and comport of the savereign should not be interfered with; and though actual personal residence is not necessary to confer it, the privilege does not extend to the precincts of a palue such as that of Hampton Court, the compation of which as a royal residence has been clearly and unequivocally abandoued, which has been appropriated to uses practically inconsistent with the personal residence of the sovereign, and which the sovereign has shown no intention of using again as a residence. Att.-Gav. v. Dakhia, 19 °L. d., Ex. 113; L. R. 4 H. L. 338; 23 °L. T. 1; 18 W. R. 1111.

Exemption from Tolls.]—Carriage and horses belonging to the Queen, driven by her coachman, and used by a member of her household, or his family, with the Queen's permission, though not upon her service, held exempt from turnpike tolls. Westever v. Perkins, 2 El. & El. 57; 28

The king is exempted, by virtue of his prerogative, from the operation of all statutes imposing duties or taxes upon the subject; and, therefore, the post-horse duty imposed by 25 Geo. 3, c. 51, was not to be paid for horses employed in forwarding public expresses on the service of the government. Reg. v. Cook, 3 Term Rep. 519.

Undertaking as to Damages. |-The court will not, in favour of the Crown, depart from established practice, therefore, in the case of an action by the Crown to restrain the defeudants from proceeding to construct certain tramways, the court refused to grant an interim injunction against the defendants unless the Crown would consent to be bound by the usual undertaking as to damages. Secretary of State for War v. Chubb. 43 L. T. 83.

Where in an action by the attorney-general, suing on behalf of the Crown, the court, on the merits, is of opinion that an interlocutory injunction should be granted, such injunction will be granted, although counsel on behalf of the Grown decline to give the undertaking as to damages required in the case of an ordinary applicant. Att.-Gan. v. Albany Hotel Ch. 65 L. J., Ch. 885; [1896] 2 Ch. 696; 75 L. T. 195-C. A.

If the case for the Crown were a very doubtful one an injunction might be refused unless some undertaking in damages were given. Ib.

No Liability for Predecessor.]-The reigning sovereign is not liable to make compensation for damage to the property of an individual occasioned by the negligence of the servants of the Crown in a preceding reign; nor, semble, even where such damage has been done in his own reign. Canterbury (Viscount) v. Att.-Gen., 1 Ph. :306; 12 L. J., Ch. 231; 7 Jur. 224.

Royal Marriages. |- The Royal Marriage Act, 12 Geo. 8, c. 11, extends to prohibit the coutracting of marriages, or to annul any already contracted, in violation of its provisions, wherever the same may be contracted or solemnised, cither within the realm of England or without. Susseav Peerage, 11 Cl. & F. 35 : 8 Jur. 793.

Prohibition. - Prohibition lies not in an inferior court after the defendant has pleaded there; for by pleading the defendant submits to the jurisdiction. But at the suit of the king prohibition lies, though the defendant pleaded: but if a prohibition has been granted, the court will grant a supersedeas if there is an affidavit that the cause arose within the jurisdiction. Anon., 1 Vern. 301.

India-Exercise of Arbitrary Power in. |-The seizure by government of the property of a deceased independent raigh, under circumstances which imply the exercise of force and arbitrary power, cannot be inquired into by a municipal court of justice. East India Co. v. Kamachee Boye Sahiba, 7 W. R. 722.

Colonies. ]—The prerogative of the Crown runs in the colonies to the same extent as in England. Bateman's Trusts, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 553; L. R. 15 Eq. 355; 28 L. T. 395; 21 W. R. 435.

-Colonial Assembly. ]-Semble, the Crown, by its prerogative, can create a legislative

L. J., M. C. 227; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1352; 7 W. R. (assembly in a settled colony, subordinate to parliament, but with sufficient power within the limits of the colony for the government of its inhabitants; but quære whether it can bestow upon it an authority, viz., that of committing for contempt, not incidental to it bylaw. Kielley v. Carson, 4 Moore, P. C. 63; 7 Jur. 137.

> Waiver of Forfeiture - Proof of.] - A forfeiture may be waived by the Crown as well as by private individuals, and such waiver may be proved by similar evidence, e.g. by the contimed acceptance of the Crown rent in respect of a market after conduct which would give the Crown a right to forfeit a grant. Middleton (Lord) v. Power, 19 L. R., Ir. 1.

> Action of Ejectment by the Crown-Equitable Defence—Specific Performance.]—In an action of ejectment by the Crown a defendant may set up any equitable defence which would have availed against a private plaintiff. Judgment held to have been rightly entered for the defendant where a concluded contract with the Crown was proved entitling him to the issue of a grant in respect of the land in suit. Att. Gan. for Trinidad v. Bourne, [1895] A. C. 83-P. C.

Royal Proclamation. - The object of a royal proclamation is only to make known the existing law; it can neither make nor unmake the law. Hence the proclamation of the 13th May, 1861, whereby the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act were enforced, and the subjects of the Crown were warned of the risks they incurred by sending contraband of war to either of the belligerent powers in America, had no effect upon the legality of an adventure for transporting munitions of war to the Confederate Porting Industrials War to the Confederate States. Charasse, Ex parte, Grazobrook, In re, 4 De G., J. & S. 655: 34 L. J., Bk. 17; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 406; 12 L. T. 249; 13 W. R. 627.

Interpleader.]—Order of interpleader made against the Crown. Reid v. Stearn, 6 Jur. (N.S.)

Relief under Interpleader Act, 1 & 2 W. 4. c. 58, refused in a case where pending an action an extent in chief issued against the plaintiffs, and on inquisition had, the debt sued for was returned as seised to the use of the Crown. Condy v. Mangham, 6 Man. & G. 710; 7 Scott (N.R.) 401; 13 L. J., C. P. 17.

Right of Crown to Discovery.]-The Crown has the same right of discovery against a subject as one subject has against another, but cannot be compelled to give discovery to a cannot be compensat to give discovery to a subject. Att. Gen. v. Newcoastle-upon-Tyme Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1897] 2 Q. B. 384; 77 L. T. 203—C. A.

The fact that on an information the defendants' answer has not been excepted to within six weeks does not preclude the Crown from obtaining discovery in the usual way. Ib.

Executive Government—Liability for Negligence—Reasonable Care.]—Where the executive government possessed the control and management of a tidal harbour, with authority to remove obstructions in it, and the public had a right to navigate therein, subject to the harbour regulations and without payment of harbour dues, the staiths and wharves belonging to the executive government which received wharfage and tonnage dues in respect of vessels using them :-Held, that vessels using the staiths in the ordinary manner may do so without damage to the vessel. Reasonable care is not shewn when, after notice of danger at a particular spot, no inquiry is made as to its existence and extent, and no warning is given. Reg. v. Williams, 53 L. J., P. C. 64; 9 App. Cas. 418; 51 L. T. 546—P. C.

The principle of liability for negligence estab-lished by Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co. (11 A. & E. 223), and Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (L.R. 1 H. L. 93), approved of, and applied to the executive government in the above circumstances, which were distinguishable in respect of Crown or Executive.]—An action for trespass against committed or intended is not maintainable against officials of the Crown or government against difficults of the Crown of given man, such in their official capacity or as an official body. Raleigh v. Goschen, 67 L. J., Ch. 59; [1898] 1 Ch. 73; 77 L. T. 429; 46 W. R. 90. Such an action will, however, lie against such officials in respect of acts actually done or directed by them if sued in their individual capacity, even although such acts be done by the authority of the government. Ib.

Civil Servant—Engagement for Term Certain
—Right to Dismiss at Pleasure. |—There is an absolute power in the Crown, in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, to dismiss at pleasure a person employed in the civil service of the Crown. Dunny. Reg., 65 L. J., Q. B. 279; [1896] 1 Q. B. 116; 73 L. T. 695; 44 W. R. 243; 60 J. P. 117-C. A.

Reduction in Rank.]-A supervisor of Inland Revenue was appointed in 1881 to hold office "during the pleasure of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue." By s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890, the commissioners have power to reduce or discharge any such officer as they see eause. The commissioners directed the supervisor to collect statistics for the Board of Agriculture. The supervisor refused to comply with the order as being one which did not concern his duties as an official of Inland Revenue. The commissioners thereupon reduced him in rank. In an action against the commissioners to recover damages :- Held, that no cause of action was shewn, and that, in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the court, the action should be stayed. Acts transferring Jurisdiction of Courts. ]-Quære, whether, when an act of parliament transfers jurisdiction from one court to another. or grants an extension of the jurisdiction of an existing court, it is necessary, in order to make non-receipt of harbour dues, notwithstanding the Crown Suits Act, 1881, s. 37. Ib. should be named therein. London Corporation Tort by Government Officials—Trespass against 270; 14 L. J., Ch. 305; 9 Jur. 570.

> Bankruptcy Acts before 1883.] — The Crown not being bound by the Statutes of Bankruptcy, the protection of a bankrupt from an extent islimited to actual attendance upon the commissioners upon the common-law privilege of a asoness upon the common-law privilege of a witness or party, not extending through the intervals of adjournment by the statute. Temple, Exparte, 2 Ves. & B. 391; S. P., Russel, Exparte, 19 Ves. 165; Crawford v. Att.-Gra., 7 Price, 2.

Whether the king was bound by the Statutes of whether the King was bound by the Statutes of Bankraptcy was doubted in Att. Gen. v. Stany-forth (Bunb. 98). But in Rev v. Pialey (Bunb. 202), it was held they did not bind the Crown.

Bankruptcy Act, 1883.] - Sect. 150 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, enacting that, save as therein provided, the provisions of that act rea debtor, the priorities of debts, the effect of a composition or scheme of arrangement, and the effect of a discharge, shall bind the Crown, does not by virtue of the Judicature Act, 1875, s. 10, operate as an incorporation in the Companies Act, 1862, of a similar provision so as in a winding-up to bar the Crown of its prerogative of Ing-ip to our the Crown of its prerogative of priority of payment over all creditors. Oriental Bank Corporation, In re. The Crown, Ex parks, 54 L. J.; Ch. 327; 28 Ch. D. 643; 52 L. T. 172.

- Disclaimer binding on Crown. ]-The provisions of s. 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, as to the disclaimer of onerous property, are "provisions relating to the remedies against the property of a debtor" within the meaning of s. 150 of that the inherent juriscustion of the court, the action within the historian of the should be stayed. Worthington v. Holinson, 75 L. T. 446—C. A.

— Civil Service in New South Wales.]—The Civil Service Act, 1884, defines and limits the 4th Service Act, 1884, defines and limits the Property, therefore, in the occupation of the Crown, or in that of persons using it exclusively in and for the service of the Crown, is not ratable to the relief of the poor. Ib.

Crown property, as well as property devoted to or made subservient to the Queen's government, is exempt from poor rates, but property held upon trust to create or to improve docks and harbours in seaport towns, though having a public character, and though devoted to public purposes, is nevertheless subject to be rated to the v. Adamson, 4 Macq. H. L. 931.

The law of England and the law of Scotland

are in these points identical. Ib.

Effect of Saving Clause.]—Semble, that a saving clause in a statute in favour of the Crown refers to rights of property or rights in the as Crown property which belong to the Crown as Crown property. Farmouth Corporation v. Simmons, 47 L. J., Ch. 792; 10 Ch. D. 518; 38 L. T. 881; 26 W. R. 802.

Colonial Statute.]—The Victorian Statute, Crown Liability and Remedies Act, 1865 (28 Vict. No. 241), s. 17, does not affect the prerogative of the Crown when suing in this country. Ib. See Exchange Bank of Canada v. Rey., 55 L. J., P. C. 5; 11 App. Cas. 157. And see COLONY.

Lands Clauses Act-Payment out of Court.]-A railway company, under the powers of its act, gave notice to a lord of the manor to take a piece of land on the seashore which he claimed as part of the waste of his manor. The purchasemoney was assessed by arbitration, but an adverse claim having been made by the Crown, the company paid the purchase-money into court under the 76th section of the Lauds Clauses Act. The Crown filed an information against the lord of the manor claiming the land, together with other land, as part of the fore-shore. The lord of the manor having filed a petition for payment of the purchase-money to him :-Held, that as the Crown could not be brought before the court under the Lands Clauses Act to contest the claim of the pctitioner, the petition ought to stand over till the information had been heard. A voyage of discovery having been executed, and a narrative of it prepared under the orders of the Crown, the narrative is the property of the Crown; but on a bill by a publisher authorised by the secretary to the Board of Admiralty to publish such a narrative, the profits remaining at their disposition, an injunction restraining publication by a stranger was dissolved. Nicol v. Stockdule, 3 Swanst, 687.

When part of the mortgagor's interest is vested in the Crown, the court will not decree foreclosure in respect thereof, but will give the plaintiff liberty to apply in chambers for a sale. Bartlett v. Rees, 40 L. J., Ch. 599; L. R. 12 Eq. 395; 25 L. T. 373; 19 W. R. 1046.

Bank stock was purchased by the government of Maryland before the American war, and vested in trustees for the discharge of certain bills. After the peace, upon a bill under an assignment by the new state of part of the stock as a compensation to mortgagees of lands that were eonfiscated, the fund subjected to that assignment was claimed by the new state, and, there being no claim under the bills, the whole was claimed by the surviving trustee beneficially, also by the proprietary under the old government, and a specific lien was insisted on in respect of losses by confiscation occasioned by the refusal of the trustees to transfer :- Held, that there was no lien; that the new state could take only such rights of the old as were within its jurisdiction; that the claims of the plaintiffs and the state, in respect of the confiscations, were the subject of treaty, not of municipal jurisdiction; and the fund, no object of the trust existing, must be at the disposal of the Crown. The court cannot decree against a title in the Crown apparent on the record, though not insisted on at the hearing. Barclay v. Russell, 3 Ves. 424.

Grant of Land and of Licence to Depasture Cattle, Effect of . A grant of land in fee by the Crown, and also a licence to depasture cattle on Crown lands (which is in substance a lease), carries with it the right to capture and approgives an appeal against an order of justices, priate all wild animals found on such land, that there was a duty imposed by law upon the extends to cases where the right of the Crown is executive government to take reasonable care merely nominal. Civil Servant—Engagement for Term Certain—Right to Dismiss at Pleasure.]—There is an absolute power in the Crown, in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary, to dismiss at pleasure a person employed in the civil service pressure a person employed in the civil service of the Crown. Dunn v. Req., 65 L. J., Q. B. 279; [1896] I Q. B. 116; 73 L. T. 695; 44 W. R. 243; 60 J. P. 117—C. A.

Reduction in Rank. ]-A supervisor of Inland Revenue was appointed in 1881 to hold office "during the pleasure of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue." By s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890, the commissioners have power to reduce or discharge any such officer as they see cause. The commissioners directed the supervisor to collect statistics for the Board of Agriculture. The supervisor refused to comply with the order as being one which did not concern his duties as an official of Inland Revenue. The commissioners thereupon reduced him in rank. In an action against the commissioners to recover damages :- Held, that no cause of action was shewn, and that, in the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the court, the action should be stayed. Worthington v. Robinson, 75 L. T. 446-C. A.

- Civil Service in New South Wales. |-The Civil Service Act, 1884, defines and limits the powers of the Crown in the Colony of New South Wales to dismiss civil servants in that colony, and has made an exception to the rule which prevails in New South Wales, as well as in this country, that in a contract for service under the Crown there is imported a condition that the Crown may dismiss at pleasure. #### B. WHEN BOUND BY STATUTE.

Limitation Acts. |-The rights of the Crown are not barred by any Statute of Limitations, named. Lord Hardwicke, however, doubte unless it is expressly named therein; and this rule doctrine. Addington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 154.

Prescription Act. ]-Crown not bound by s. 3 of the Prescription Act as to ancient lights. Perry v. Eames, [1891] 1 Ch. 658. Approved in Wheaton v. Maple, 62 L. J., Ch. 963; [1893] 3 Ch. 48; 69 L. T. 203; 41 W. R. 677—C. A.

Acts transferring Jurisdiction of Courts. 1-Quære, whether, when an act of parliament transfers jurisdiction from one court to another, or grants an extension of the jurisdiction of an existing court, it is necessary, in order to make the act binding on the Crown, that the Crown should be named therein. London Corporation v. Att.-Gen., 1 H. L. Cas. 440. Affirming 8 Beav. 270; 14 L. J., Ch. 305; 9 Jur. 570.

Bankruptcy Acts before 1883.] — The Crown not being bound by the Statutes of Bankruptcy, the protection of a bankrupt from an extent is limited to actual attendance upon the commissioners upon the common-law privilege of a witness or party, not extending through the intervals of adjournment by the statute. Truple, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 391; S. P., Russel, Exparte, 19 Ves. 165; Crawford v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 2.

Whether the king was bound by the Statutes of Bankruptey was doubted in Att. Gen. v. Stany-forth (Bunb. 98). But in Rew v. Piwley (Bunb. 202), it was held they did not bind the Crown.

Bankruptcy Act, 1883.] — Sect. 150 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, enacting that, save as therein provided, the provisions of that act relating to the remedies against the property of a debtor, the priorities of debts, the effect of a composition or scheme of arrangement, and the effect of a discharge, shall bind the Crown, does not by virtue of the Judicature Act, 1875, s. 10, operate as an incorporation in the Companies. Act, 1862, of a similar provision so as in a winding-up to bar the Crown of its prerogative of priority of payment over all creditors. Oriental Bank Corporation, In re. The Crown, Exparte, 54 L. Disclaimer binding on Crown. ]-The provisions of s. 55 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, as to the disclaimer of onerous property, are "provisions relating to the remedies against the property of a debtor" within the meaning of s. 150 of that act, and are therefore binding upon the Crown. Commissioners of Woods and Forests, Ex parte, Thomas, In re, or Thomas, Ex parte, Trotter, In re, 57 L. J., Q. B. 574; 21 Q. B. D. 380; 59 L. T. 447; 5 Morrell, 209; 36 W. R. 735.

Receiver. ]—The Crown, though not bound by the 3 & 4 Will, 4, c, 55, s, 31, and 3 & 4 Vict. c, 105, s. 20, which give to creditors by judgment to row, 2.0, wine give to reactions by jungment or recognizance a right to have a receiver appointed on petition, may take advantage of the acts, but is not bound by the restrictions imposed on that right by the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 95, s. 10. Reg. v. Cruise, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 65.

Statute of Frauds. ]-The Statute of Frauds. does not bind the Crown, but takes place only between party and party, for the king is not named, Lord Hardwicke, however, doubted this Exemption from Foor Rates. —The Crown, binds the Crown. Moore v. Smith, 28 L. J., not being named in the Poor Relief Act, 1601, M. C. 126; 1 El. & El. 597; 5 Jur. (N.s.) 892; 7 43 Eliz. c. 2. is not bound by its enactments. W. R. 206. Property, therefore, in the occupation of the Crown, or in that of persons using it exclusively in and for the service of the Crown, is not rat-

able to the relief of the poor. Ib.

Crown property, as well as property devoted to or made subservient to the Queen's government, is exempt from poor rates, but property held upon trust to create or to improve docks and harbours in scaport towns, though having a public character, and though devoted to public purposes, is nevertheless subject to be rated to the relief of the poor. Clyde Navigation Trustees v. Adamson, 4 Macq. H. L. 931. The law of England and the law of Scotland

Effect of Saving Clause.]-Semble, that a saving clause in a statute in favour of the Crown refers to rights of property or rights in the nature of property which belong to the Crown as Crown property. Yarmouth Corporation v. Simmons, 47 L. J., Ch. 792; 10 Ch. D. 518; 38 L. T. 881; 26 W. R. 802.

Colonial Statute.]—The Victorian Statute, Crown Liability and Remedies Act, 1865 (28 Vict. No. 241), s. 17, does not affect the prerogative of the Crown when suing in this country. Ib. See Exchange Bank of Canada v. Reg., 55 L. J., P. C. 5; 11 App. Cas. 157. And see Colony.

Lands Clauses Act-Payment out of Court. ]-A railway company, under the powers of its act, gave notice to a lord of the manor to take a piece of land on the seashore which he claimed as part of the waste of his manor. The purchasemoney was assessed by arbitration, but an adverse claim having been made by the Crown, the company paid the purchase-money into court under the 76th section of the Lands Clauses Ac. The Crown filed an information against the lord of the manor claiming the land, together with other land, as part of the fore-shore. The lord of the manor having filed a petition for payment of the purchase-money to him :-Held, that as the Crown could not be brought before the court under, the Lands Clauses Act to contest the claim of the petitioner, the petition ought to stand over till the information had been heard. #### C. CROWN PROPERTY.

1. GENERALLY.

The object of the act 21 Jac. 1, c. 14, was to put a defendant litigating with the Crown in the same situation as any other defendant; but the statute does not apply in equity, where, in the matter of discovery, the Crown and a subject litigating together are precisely on the same footing as ordinary parties. Att.-Gen. v. London Corporation, 2 Mac. & G. 247; 2 Hall & Tw. 1; 19 L. J., Ch. 314; 14 Jur. 205, Affirming 12 Beav. 171.

Where the Crown has been in possession of lands for more than 160 years, and a corporation who originally claimed under various charters granted by the Crown, and particularly charters of Edward VI., Henry VIII., and Charles II., refrain from asserting their legal rights, having had opportunities of doing so during such period, the court will not interfere in equity, but remit the parties to their legal remedies. Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. Att.-Gen., 5 L. T.

A voyage of discovery having been executed, and a narrative of it prepared under the orders of the Crown, the narrative is the property of the Crown; but on a bill by a publisher authorised by the secretary to the Board of Admiralty to publish such a narrative, the profits remaining at their disposition, an injunction restraining publication by a stranger was dissolved. Nicol v. Stockdule, 3 Swanst. 687.

When part of the mortgagor's interest is vested in the Crown, the court will not decree foreclosure in respect thereof, but will give the plaintiff liberty to apply in chambers for a sale.

Copyhold Surrendered to Trustee for Crown -Encroachments.] -A copyhold was surrendered in 1809 to a trustee for the Crown for military purposes. In 1808 the then lord of the manor had granted to M., the governor of an adjoining fort, a licence to inclose part of the waste adjoinpower to convey lands under these clauses, and ing the copyhold, and to occupy it at a yearly that, supposing such power to exist, no purchase rent during his life if he so long continued governor, which he ceased to be in 1811. Nothing further was shewn as to the title to the land included in the licence, except that at the commencement of this action in 1874 the Crown had been in possession of it as inclosed ground. A grant from the Crown of undefined and nn-ascertained shares in land will not be held void than forty years. Since 1811 there had been for uncertainty after long replacements. repeated admittances of trustees for the Crown to the original copyhold, in which it was described by metes and bounds not including the close L. comprised in the licence. In 1874, the lord of the manor, without the consent of the Crown. granted a licence to get coprolites ont of close L. at a royalty, and received 2227. for royalties. Trial.]-The Crown cannot by its mere prerogative have the venire facias juratores awarded into any county. Att.-Gen. v. Churchill, 8 M. & W. 171; 10 L. J., Ex. 314.

Pleading in.]-The court has no authority under 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, s. 4, to allow a defendant to plead several matters in an information of intrusion. Att.-Gen. v. Donaldson, 7 M. & W. 422; 9 D. P. C. 319; 10 L. J., Ex. 139.

Venue.]—In an information of intrusion, the Crown may, as of its prerogative, lay the venue in any county, without regard to the local situation of the premises. Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 M. & W. 23; 2 Gale, 227; 5 D. P. C. 165; 1 Tyr. & G. 980; 5 L. J., Ex. 243.

Commissioners of Woods. ]—The Commissioners | dwelling house being parcel of the royal palace of Woods and Forests having power, under the of Kensington, then in the occupation and in the intruded and made entry upon a messuage or hands and possession of the Queen, as in right of her crown. They pleaded in the form given by 23 Hen. 8, c. 5, s. 11, that they committed the trespasses under the authority of the commiswas not allowable in an information of intrusion at the suit of the Crown. Att. - Gen. v. Donaldson, 10 M. & W. 117; 11 L. J., Ex. 338.

The title of the Crown to lands of which it has need not be first found by inquisition of office; the onus of proving title in the first instance, in first, where the Crown professes to give a greater such a case on the Crown. Att.-Gen. v. Pursons, estate than it possessed in the subject-matter of such a case, on the Crown. Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 M. & W. 23; 2 Gale, 227; 5 D. P. C. 165; 1 Tyr. & G. 980; 6 L. J., Ex. 9.

Adverse Possession.]—Although the king can never be put out of possession in point of law by the wrongful entry of a subject, yet there may be an adverse possession in fact against the crown. Therefore, after such an adverse possession by a subject for twenty years, the Crown could only recover the land by an information of intrusion; consequently ejectment will not lie at the suit of the grantee of the Crown, notwithstanding the rights of the Crown are not barred by the Statute of Limitations. Doe d. Wall or Watt v. Morris, 2 Scott, 276; 1 Hodges, 215; 4 L. J., C. P. 285; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 189.

Duchy of Cornwall. |-- Prince of Wales may file an English information of intrusion by his attorney-general, for lands, parcel of the duchy of Cornwall. Att.-Gen. v. St. Aubyn, Wightw. 167; 12 R. R. 718, n.

D. CROWN GRANT.

Construction, |- Grants by the Crown are construed favourably to the grantor, and in such a case the usual rule as to the construction of grants is inserted. If it be shewn that the king is deceived in his grant, it will not include a subject-matter not expressed. Att.-Gen. v. Ewelme Almshouse Chaplains, 22 L. J., Ch. 846; 17 Beav. 366; 1 W. R. 523.

Words of Reference.]—A grant of a manor to A., with particular words of reference to a previous grant to B., as "with all liberties, &c., which B. had," in as full and ample manner as B. held and enjoyed, &c., is not sufficient to pass rights which had been granted to and enjoyed by B. without express words. Att.-Gen. v. Downshire (Marquis), 5 Price, 269.

Ancient Charter-Long and Continuous User, ] -In construing an old charter dated 1440 as to the limits of a borough, the fact that the usage of the last 150 years has been to rate a certain place to the relief of the poor of the borough is admissible to explain the meaning of the charter. Sattan Harbour Co. v. Plymouth Guardians, 63 L.T. 772; 55 J. P. 282.

Grants to Inhabitants of Parish.]-A grant made by the Crown to the inhabitants of a parish is good, though such grant cannot be made by private individuals. Willingdale v. Maitland, 36 L. J., Ch. 64; L. R. 3 Eq. 103; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 932; 15 W. R. 83.

Conditional Grant. ]-The Crown, by its prerogative, may annex a condition against alienation to a grant in fce. Fowler v. Fowler, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 507.

Crown Deceived.]—Injunction to stay suit because king deceived of fine. Pascall v. Smith, Cary, 77. Brockhurst v. Cotton, and Ward v. Cobone, Id. 85.

Grant made under mistake may be recalled, notwithstanding that derivative titles depend upon it. Cumming v. Forrester, 2 Jac. & W. 334 ; 22 R. R. 157.

- Grounds for Avoiding. ]-Grants from the only effect of 21 Jac. 1, c. 14, being to throw the Crown may be avoided upon three grounds; the grant; secondly, where the same estate, or part of the same estate, has already been granted to another; and thirdly, where the Crown has been deceived in the consideration expressed in the grant. Gledstanes v. Sandwich (Earl), 5 Man, & G. 995; 5 Scott (N.R.) 689; 12 L. J.

If the king makes a grant which cannot take effect according to its terms, it must be concluded that he has been deceived in his grant, and it is void. Alcock v. Cooke, 2 M. & P. 625; 5 Bing.

Where, therefore, wreck was conveyed by a lease for a term of years which had not expired, if such lease is not recited in a grant conveying an immediate estate in fee to the grantees, such grant is void, because the king having already leased the right of possession, he cannot convey the same right to another, and all leases from the king must be inrolled. Ib.

Grant "in Trust," -The Crown, by royal warrant "granted to the Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being" certain booty taken in war "in trust for the use of certain persons, who had been adjudged entitled to it upon a reference to the Court of Admiralty, to be distributed among them, with a further provision that in case any doubts should arise in the course of the distribution the decision of the Secretary of State should be final, unless the Crown should otherwise order :- Held. (1) That the Secretary of State for India in Council could only sue or be sued as a corporation under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 106, s. 65, in proceedings which might have been taken by or against the late East India Company; (2) That the royal warrant constituted the Secretary of State for India in Council au agent of the Crown for the purpose of the distribution of the fund under the control of the Crown, but did not constitute him a trustee for the persons interested subject nm a truster for the persons interested subject to the control of a court of equity. Measurder v. Wellington (Duke) (2 Russ. & My. 35) dis-cussed. Brown v. Harris (13 Ves. 552; 9 R. R. 221) distinguished. Kinlowk v. Secretary of State for India, 51 L. J., Ch. 885; 7 App. Cas. 619; 47 L. T. 133; 30 W. R. 845—H. L. (E.).

An annuity was granted by the Crown to a trustee on trust to pay it into the hands of B. alone, her executors or administrators, and that she was not to have the power of depriving herself thereof either by sale, mortgage or anticipation:—Held, that a judgment registered as a mortgage under the 12 & 18 Vict. c. 29 (Irish), was an involuntary alienation, and was not a breach of the conditions, Fowler v. Fowler, 15 Ir. Ch. B. 507.

Grant of Undefined Shares.]-A grant from the Crown of undefined and unascertained shares in land will not be held void for uncertainty after long modern possession, for in such a case a supplementary and confirmatory grant may be presumed. Des Barres v. Shey, 29 L. T. 592; 22 W. R. 273.

Reservation of Right implies Means of Enjoyment. - It is a settled principle of law, that not only as between the Crown and a subject, but as between subject and subject, the reservation of a right implies the means of enjoying it. Gould v. Great Western Deep Coal Co., 12 L. T. S42.

A right to the use of flowing water does not necessarily depend upon the ownership of the soil covered by the water. Lord v. Sydney Commissioners, 12 Moore, P. C. 473; 33 L. T. 1; 7 W. R. 267.

A grant by the Crown of land bounded by a stream may include by implication the soil of the stream, ad medium filum aque. Ib.

Grant of Mines.]—The prerogative right of the Crown to gold and silver found in unines will not pass under a grant of hand from the Crown unless the intention that it shall so pass is expressed by apit and precise words. Wordley v. Att.-Gra. of lictoria, 46 L. J., P. C. 18; 2 L. R. App. Cas. 163; 30 L. T. 12; 25 W. R. & S2.

— Of Fee Farm Rents.]—Grantee of fee farm rents has the same power of distress as the king had; and so may distrain on other land of the tenant, though not subject to the rent. Att.-Gea. v. Coventry. 1 P. W. 306: 2 Vern. 713.

— In Derogation of Forestal Rights.]—
Grants by the Crown in derogation of forestal rights are good grants, though they would not be good except in derogation of such rights. Willingdate v. Maithand, 36 L. J., Ch., 64; L. R. 3 Eq. 103; 12 Jur. (X.S.) 982; 13 W. R. 83.

A grant by the Crown to the inhabitants of a parish which was a Crown manor and parish within a royal forest, that the labouring or poor people inhabiting the parish, and having families, might, during a certain period of every year, cut or lop the boughs and branches above seven feet from the ground, on the trees growing on the waste lands of the manor and parish, for their own use and consumption, and for sale, for their own relief, to all or any of the inhabitants for their consumption within the parish as fuel, is a valid grant. Ib.

— Of Escheated Land.]—A. and B. join in a petition to the Grown, representing an estate to have escheated, and procure a grant of it to be made to them:—Held, that A. could not afterwards set up a claim to one part under a prior title in himself, while taking the beuefit of the grant as to the rest. Cumming v. Forrester, 2 Jan. & W. SSH, 22 B. R. 157.

Semble, the doctrine of election does not extend to grants from the Crown. Ih.

Grant by the Crown of an estate, &c., for-feited, before, &c., any inquisition finding the forfeiture, is illegal. Leighton's Cuse, 2 Vern. 173

Of Land Subject to Provise for Re-entry, I—King Charles II. by letters patent, granted some property in fee, subject to a fee farm rent and to a provise of re-entry, in ease a decree should be made at the suit of the king for repairing the property, and the same should afterwards remain for a year out of repair. The Crown afterwards granted away the rest:—Held, that the provise for re-entry could not be exercised, and that it therefore formed no objection to the title to the property. Flower v. Hartopp, 6 Beav. 476: 12 L. J., Ch. 507; 7 Jur. 613.

Subsequent Grants and Statutes. - In 1830. A. obtained from the Crown a grant in feesimple of lands in the county of Chester. In 1853, the Birkenhead Docks Commissioners obtained from the Commissioners of Woods and Forests a conveyance of the same lauds, upon which, under the sanction of various acts of parliament (to some of which A. was an assenting party), the dock commissioners proceeded to construct docks and other public works. In 1855, all the rights and privileges of the Birkenhead Docks Commissioners were, by act of parliament, transferred to and vested in the corporation of Liverpool, and, by subsequent acts of parliament, from the corporation to the Liverpool Docks Commissioners, and ultimately to the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board :-Held, that the conveyance of 1853 could not divest the estate which had vested in A. under the grant of 1830; and that the subsequent acts of parliament created no statutable title either in the dock commissioners or in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, Vynor v. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 753, Substitution of other Landa, —If a private act confirms a settlement of estates made by a tenuar in tail under a grant from the Crown, and a subsequent act vests pair of those estates in tractees for sale, with directions to purchase often lands with the produce of such sale, to be other lands with the produce of such sale, to be other lands with the produce of such sale, to be other lands with the predecting act, the trustees have no power to convey the estates so granted to a purchaser in fee simple : and the substitution of other lands does not destroy the reversionary interest of the Crown in the estates originally granted. Mitprior v. Editalt, 1 Moore, 434.

An estate granted by the Crown to a subject as tenant in tail, for services, is not barriet so as to destroy the reversion of the Crown; all hough two private acts of parliament may have been passed, continuing a settlement by the tenant in tail, purporting to pass such reversion, the Crown being a party to actither of such acts, and each of them containing a saving clause, by which its rights were expressly reserved. Ib.

Under Letters Patent.]—Where a subject claims a specific portion of land, the property of the Grown, under a grant by letters patent, he must skew a specific description of the particular place as meant to be conveyed by the instrument, for he cannot avail himself of general words. Purmeter v. Gibbs, 10 Pice, 412.

For Benefit of Grown—Conditions.]—Semble, that grants from the Crown for the benefit of the king. by augmenting the revenue formded on inquisition ad quad bornum, must be conformable with the finding—must be acted upon promptly—must be upheld by possession and enjoyment—and the grantees must fulfi all continuing considerations, or the right of possession will not pass thereby from the Crown. Att.-Gen. v. Piermeter, 19 Price, 378. S. C. nom. Purmeter v. Att.-Gen., I Dov. 316, 323. And see Chata v. Nised, 2 Br. & B. 403; 5 Moroe, 185; and Gray v. Bond, 2 Br. & B. 667; 5 Moore, 257.

Held, that the provise for re-entry could not be exercised, and that it therefore formed no objection to the title to the property. Flower V. Hartopp, 6 Beav. 476; 12 L. J., Ch. 507; 7 Jur. 613.

good title could be made under the grant to this daughter, in such manner as titles are thereinparticular spot, the Crown having been in possession for about 150 years from the date of such grant, which must be presumed as against its own grant, there being no sufficient evidence of adverse possession on the part of the claimants.

Of a Town-Toll Traverse. - Where the king before the time of legal memory was entitled to the soil of the town of C., and to toll traverse within it, and afterwards granted to the burgesses of the town "the town of C. with all its appurtenances"; these words are sufficient to pass the toll. Brett v. Beules, M. & M. 426.

Rent-When Unauthorised, ]-Henry VIII. being seised of lands in fee, in right of his crown, granted them by letters patent in tail male to W., reserving rent to himself and his heirs and successors. After the 22 Car, 2, c. 6, and 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 24, Charles II., by letters patent referring to and professing to pursue the former statute, granted the reut to trustees named in s. 2 of the 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 24, their heirs and assigns, and the trustees granted the rent to a dean and chapter and their successors for ever : -Held, that the grant to the trustees was not authorised by either statute, the rent being reserved upon an estate whereof the reversion was in the Crown, and therefore being within the exception in 22 Car. 2, c. 6, s. 3. Vigers v. St. Paul's (Dean), 14 Q. B. 909; 19 L. J., Q. B. 84; 14 Jur. 1017-Ex. Ch.

- Of Fee Farm Rents-Loss by Non-claim. -It is no objection to title that two fee farm rents. created by letters patent by James I, are not shown to have been extinguished, it being proved that no claim has been made by the Crown for the rents from the year 1706, and no proof of any previous claim. Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. 609: 16 R. R. 276.

Meaning of "Progenitors."]—By statute 10 Hen. 7, all manors, &c., advowsons, &c., whereof the king or any of his progenitors were seised in fee simple or fee tail from the last day of Edw. II.'s reign, were resumed and seised, and all fcoffments, &c., or grants, &c., made thereof, whether by act of parliament or by letters patent, were revoked:—Held, that the word progenitors was synonymous with predecessors, and that a grant of an advowson made by Edw. 4, by letters patent, was avoided by the act, whether or not it had belonged to him jure corona or as Earl of March; and, further, that by the avoidance of such grant, the advowson was re-appended to a manor to which it was before appendant, and which at the time of the resumption was still in the hands of the Crown. Grant for Maintenance of Dignities. ]-Estates granted by the Crown for the maintenance of dignities, with reversion to the Crown, have the usual incidents, and may be taken in execution. Daris v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 Swanst, 136,

Estates which by 5 Anne, c. 3, are limited to the then Duke of M, for life, remainder to S., statute 17 Edw. 2, c. 15, created a restriction as his duchess, for life, remainder to heirs male of to advowsons of churches only, and did not apply daugner, in such manner as trues are increm-before limited, in order that they may always "go along and be enjoyed with titles and dignities," with proviso restraining alienation to prejudice of persons in remainder, are not inalienable, and rents and profits may be effectually aliened by person in possession, as against himself. Pension granted by 5 Anue, c. 4, "for the more honourable support of the diguities" of Duke of M. and his posterity, payable out of revenues of post office, to such persons severally and successively to whom same should come by virtue of tha tact, with proviso, that acquittance of every such person should be sufficient discharge, is inalienable, S. C., 1 Swanst, 74.

Right to grant Fishery to Subject—Exclusion of Owner of Soil. ]—The Crown can hold a riverbed throughout a manor and the fishery in the river flowing over the same as parcel of the manor, and may grant the manor with the riverbed and fishery to a subject, and the subject may grant the banks of the river with reservation of the river-bed and fishery. Deconshive (Duke) v. Pattinson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 189; 20 Q. B. D. 263; 58 L, T. 392; 52 J. P. 276-C. A.

Grant of Advowson.]—A grant from the Crown of an advowson (excepted in a former grant under general words) will be presumed after a pos-session evidenced by title-deeds for 133 years, and three presentations. Gibson v. Clark, 1 J. & W. 159; 20 R. R. 266.

In 1437 an almshouse or hospital was founded and endowed by the lord of the manor of Ewelme for thirteen poor men, two priests for praying for souls and the education of youth, and the right of nominating the master was vested in the lord of the manor for the time being. Previous to 1518 the manor and the rights of patronage became, on the attainder of the lord, forfeited to the Crown. In 1618 King James I., by letters patent, granted the right of nomination of the master to the University of Oxford, for the support of the Regius Professor of Medicine, and in 1818 the manor, with all its advantages and endowments, was duly granted by the Crown to J. B. The following points were held :- First, that the rights of nomination and visitation, incidental to the manor, did not, upon the forfeiture by attainder, become merged and extinguished, but vested in the Crown; secondly, that the property, &c., of the hospital was not affected by the statutes for the dissolution of monasteries (27 Hen. 8, c. 28, and 31 Hen. 8, c. 13), but remained vested in the Crown as before; thirdly, that they were not, in any degree, affected by the act respecting chantries (1 Edw. 6, c. 14) so as to vest the property in the Crown, as its quasi "private possessions"; fourthly, that the founder, by annexing the right of nomination to the manor, could not and had not made them inseparable, but that the right of patronage was in the nature of a lay advowson, which the lord might alien without parting with the manor, and the converse; fifthly, that by the grant of King James to the University of Oxford, the jus patronatus had, de facto, been severed from the manor of E.; sixthly, that by the common law the grant of a manor by the king cum pertinentibus would pass an advowson appendant to it, and that the body of duke, remainder to all and every his to the present case of a lay advowson. Att. Gen.

the Crown contained an exception of all churches and vicarages thereto belonging, a perpetual curacy belonging to the rectory passed by the grant, not being included in the exception. Arthington v. Chester (Bishop), 1 H. Bl. 419.

Tithe.]-A grant by Edw. 6 of certain tithes originally appropriated to a dissolved priory by the description of "omnes alias decimas garbarum, granorum, blodorum fæni lanæ et agnellorum ac alias decimas nostras quascunque," &c. :-Held, to pass the rectory and all tithes. Holdsnorth

v. Fairfax, 3 Cl. & F. 115; 8 Bh. (N.S.) 882.
The words "tithes" and "hereditaments," occurring amongst words of general description in a grant, after a particular description of the thing intended to be passed, will not pass tithes in gross. Att.-Gen. v. Eurdley (Lord), Dan.

271; 8 Price, 39.

Where, on the dissolution of monasteries, the possessions of an abbey came to the Crown, and the Crown subsequently granted all the tithes yearly renewing, with all their rights, members. and appurtenances : -Held, that the Crown being the rector, or in loco rectoris, the tithes granted must mean the rectorial tithes, or all the tithes, except such as had been withdrawn by an endowment for the minister. But royal grants being strictly construed, the court would not hold that the grant extended to the rectory, the rectory not being granted in express terms.

Fair.]—The grant of a fair "cum omnibus libertatibus et liberis consuctadinibus ad lunjus modi feriam pertinentibus" does not give a right to take tolls. Egremont (Earl) v. Saul, 6 A. & E. 924; 6 L. J., K. B. 205.

Office of Barmaster-Lot and Cope. ]-Where a lease from the Crown of lot and cope also contained a grant to the lessees of the office of barmaster, the grant of the office was void. because the barmaster had duties which could not be impartially executed by the lessee. Ark. wiright v. Cantrell, 7 A. & E. 565; 2 N. & P. 582; W. W. & D. 686; 7 L. J., Q. B. 63; 2 Jur. 11.

But the grant was not void, as giving incompatible offices, the lease not conferring an office.

Office amounting to a Pension. ]-The office of chamberlain and collector of revenues payable to the Crown out of Ettrick Forest was granted by Geo. 4 to Lord D. for his life, with a salary, as well in consideration of the office as out of royal bounty and favour, to be paid out of the moneys of the collection, and, if they should be insufficient, out of the Crown revenues of other lands in Scotland. The salary exceeded the moneys collected, and was paid out of them and the other Crown revenues for several years after the demise of Geo. 4:-Held, that the grant, under grant of a pension to endure beyond the life of 9 Hare, 415; 21 L. Theatre Patent. ]- No play can lawfully be acted for hire, gain or reward within twenty miles of London, without the authority of letters patent from the king, or of a licence from the lord chamberlain; and no such letters patent, or licence, can be granted so as to authorise the performance of plays at any place except within the city or liberties of Westminster, or where the king may happen to reside. An agreement, therefore, for a partnership in acting plays at a theatre situate within twenty miles of London, but not within the city or liberties of Westminster, or in the place of the king's residence, is one to which the court will not give effect. Ewing v. Osbaldiston, 2 Myl. & C. 53; 6 L. J., Ch. 161; 1 Jur. 50.

The court refused to seal a patent for representing Italian operas, because the provisions for carrying it on were by agreement with the lord chamberlain, his executors and administrators, and the right to the patent was not sufficiently connected with the property in the house. Not sufficient for the party applying merely to answer objections, but he must lay a proper case. Upon such application the court will take care that the king is not deceived, or his object disappointed, and will represent the whole to the king, but will not decide upon the merits of the various claimants. Essential to the complaint of an old market against a new one set up near it, that the old is competent in the accommodation of the public; so here the old proprietors must be able to keep it up properly, the accommodation of the public being the principal thing. O'Reilly, Ex parte, 1 Ves. J. H2; 1 R. R. 89.

By 26 Geo. 8, c. 57, s. 1, the Crown was authorised to grant letters patent for establishing and keeping a theatre in Dublin; and, by s. 2, it was enacted that no person should, for hire, act any play in any theatre in Dublin except in such theatre as should be so established by letters patent, under the penalty of forfeiting 300% for every such offence, to be sued for by the common informer. Under this statute the Crown granted letters patent to H., authorising him, during a certain time, to keep a theatre in Dublin, and his majesty prohibited all persons from keeping during the term open, in any manner, any theatre in Dublin, and therein acting any play, unless they should be thereunto authorised by his majesty—Held, that the patentee could not maintain a bill for an injunction to restrain unauthorised persons acting plays in a theatre in Dublin, for the keeping of which no patent had been granted; and that such a bill could only be maintained upon the ground of interest in the plaintiff. Calcraft v.

Trade Patent.] - The Crown has always exercised a control over the trade of the country, and though restrained by the common law and the Statute of Monopolies (21 Jac. 1, c. 3) within reasonable limits, the Crown might grant the exclusive right to trade with a new invention for a reasonable period. The statute 21 Jac. 1, c. 3, did not create, but controlled, the power of the Crown in granting to the first inventors the disguise of a grant of an office, was in reality a new manufactures. Before the Patent Act, 1883, a company contracted with the Crown to provide and deliver a quantity of Martini-Henry rifles at a fixed price per rifle, and according to a specification. The stocks and the tubes for the barrels were to be supplied to the company by the Crown, and the rifles, when completed, were to be submitted to officers of the Crown for approval. In order to carry out this contract the company was compelled to make use of an invention for breech action, for which letters patent in the usual form had been granted by the Crown to the plaintiff:—Held, first, that the Crown's right to use the invention was not affected by the grant of letters patent for the use of it to the plaintiff. Dixon v. London Small Arms Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 617; 1 App. Cas. 632; 85 L. T. 559; 25 W. R. 142.—H. L. (E.)

Held, secondly, that the company were private contractors, and not servants or agents of the Crown, and were therefore liable in an action by the plaintiff to recover damages for the infringement of his patent. Ib.

Letters patent, under which lands sold by private contract were held, contained covenants by the grantee : first, that he would place three free tenants of English or British race, blood, or name, on the premises, each of which should have fifty acres, or one free tenant, who should have one hundred acres for one life; secondly, that he should have on the premises eight cullivers or muskets, and a proper number of arms to arm eight pikemen for his defence against rebels, &c.; thirdly, a provise that if he should demise any part of the premises to the mere Irish for any term exceeding forty-one years, or three lives, or if he should demise the premises limited to be disposed of to any British or English person to any person being mere Irish, the Crown might re-enter. The particulars of sale described the lands as a valuable fee-simple property, and one of the conditions of sale alluded to the letters patent. It appeared from a statute (10 Car. 1, s. 3, c. 3), and certain public documents therein referred to, that the covenants were those inserted in patents at the plantation of Ulster, where the lands were situated :- Held, that the purchaser, having express notice of the letters patent, was bound by constructive notice of the covenants contained in them ; held, also, that the first and third eovenants were no longer in force, every subject of the Crown, since the Union, being a person of British race, name, and blood, and there being no person now answering the description of mere Irish; semble, the second covenant could not now be enforced by the Crown. Stewart v. Conyngham (Marquis), 1 Ir. Ch. R. 534.

Presumption, when Allowed.]-A grant or a charter from the Crown, which ought to be by matter of record, may, under circumstances, be presumed, though within the time of legal memory. In this case the presumption was founded on a possession of 350 years, and Cowp. 102; Loft, 576.

A right founded upon length of enjoyment originates in a grant which is presumed from the owner, but the presumption of a grant only arises where the person against whom it is to be arises where the person against whom it is to be raised might have prevented the exercise of the subject of the presumed grant. Foster v. Hargreaves, 1 Keen, 281,

2. PRIORITIES OF.

Distress. ]-Where claims of the Crown and of a subject as creditors come into competition, the a subject as creations come into competition, the prerogative right of the Crown to priority is not limited to proceedings by writ of extent, but equally attaches in proceedings by distress, although the distress put in by the Crown be subsequent in date to that of the subject, provided the distress put in by the subject has not been completely executed by actual sale. Att.-Gen. v. Leonard, 57 L. J., Ch. 860; 38 Ch. D. 622; 52 L. T. 624; 87 W. R. 24.

Bankruptcy. ]-When claims of the Crown and of a subject, as creditors, come into competition, the prerogative right of the Crown is not limited to proceedings by writ of extent, but equally attaches to proceedings by sci. fa. upon a bond; and a debt due to the Crown, together with such costs as were incurred in proceedings to enforce it, is a preferential debt upon the assets of the bankrupt. Corley, In re, L. R. 28 Ir. 249.

Postmaster-General.] - Letter-receivers were in the habit, with the sanction of the postmastergeneral, of paying moneys received on account of the post-office into a bank to their private account, together with their own moneys, and of drawing cheques both for their own purposes and for payment to the post-office. The bank had notice that their customers were letterreceivers and drew cheques for post-office purposes. The bank having gone into liquidation:
-Held, that the postmaster-General, on behalf of the Crown, was entitled to payment in priority over other creditors of the bank of the balance due upon the letter-receivers' accounts in respect of post-office moneys. How v. Ward (2 Ex. 301, n.) followed. West London Commercial Bank, In re, 57 L. J., Ch. 925.; 38 Ch. D. 364; 59 L. T. 296.

Property Tax.]—The Crown has priority over the general creditors of a liquidating company in respect of property tax due from the company on the winding-up where no distress or entry in respect thereof has been made. Healey & Co., In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 147; 9 Ch. D. 479; 39 L. T. 53; 26 W. R. 885—C. A.

Extent of Priority in Colony. ]-Held, that the right of the Crown to be paid, in preference to other creditors, out of the estate of a defaulting treasurer (at Trinidad), was confined to his default in respect of moneys in his hands as treasurer, and as part of the revenue of the colony, and did not extend to a claim in respect an order of the Court of Audience of the island. Wildes v. Att. Gen. for Trinidad, 3 Moore, P. C. 200.

Rights of Surety.]—A surety to the Crown who has paid the debt of his deceased principal, is entitled to the Crown's priority in the administration of his principal's estate. Churchill (Lord), In rc, Manishy v. Churchill, 39 Ch. D. 174; 59 L. T. 507; 80 V. R. 803.

F. EXTENT, EXECUTION BY.

1. GENERALLY.

Distinction between Extent in Aid and Extent in Chief in Second Degree. —The distinction between an extent in aid and an extent in chief in the second degree is this: the first is where the extent is suged at the instance of a Crown debtor against his clebtor, to aid his payment of the Crown debt, the latter is a bestle proceeding by the Crown against the debtor of a Crown debtor, against whom also an extent in chief has issued. Rev. v. Sandke, 11 Price, 772.

Does not Defeat Right of Grown Debtor to Sue his Debtor.]—An extent at the suit of the Crown against the debtor of its debtor has not, before inquisition taken, the effect of divesting the Crown debtor's right to sue his debtor or to receive the debt. Lakeman v. M'Adam, 8 Price, 576; 22 R. R. 774.

Sale of Goods under—Effect of Agent of Crown Bidding at.]—A sale under an extent is not vitiated as against a purchaser by the agent of the Crown making a bona fide bid for himself. Hew v. March, 1 C. & J. 407.

Satisfaction of—Right to Surplus.]—In 1802, in pursuance of an order of the court under 25 Geo. 3, c. 35, the extended lands of a Crown debtor were sold for more than the amount of the Crown debt, and the debtor being a lunatic, the amount of the purchase-money was, by order of the court, paid into the hands of the deputy remembrancer, and was by him invested in the public funds in the name of the accountant-general. In 1841, by 5 Vict. c. 5, the fund and accumulations were vested in the Queen's remembrancer to attend the orders of the court. On the petition of the helot of the debtor:—Held, that he was entitled to the surplus of the moneys after payment of the Crown debt, interest and costs. Delemette, In re. 27 L. J., Ex. 110; 2 H. & N. 559.

Costs of.—In cases of extent, costs are not recoverable where goods and lands are seised, and the goods alone are more than sufficient to pay the debt leviel, not even in the case of an immediate extent. Rew v. Hupper, 3 Price, 40.

Other Points.]—Notice of motion for order of sale of Crown debtor's mortgaged lands, under extent, should be given to mortgagee before the motion. Rex v. Combes, 1 Price, 207.

If estate subject to mortgage be sold absolutely, under extent, and purchase-money paid into court. Crown will not be allowed, on motion, to satisfy mortgagee, but court will order reference to deputy remembrancer to ascertain what is due on mortgage. Ib.

Court will not interfere to assist a purchaser for valuable consideration of estate, soized make extent against vendor, for which he has paid the principal part of purchase-money, and offers to pay the remainder to Crown, or to give up the estate on satisfaction made to himself. Rew v. Hollier. 2 Price. 394.

It is no objection to the title of an estate that an extent has issued from the Crown against the owner, which remained in the hands of the sheriff unexcented; it appearing that the lovids of the treasury had, in fact, compromised the debt, though a writ of amoves manus had not actually issued. Poole v. Shergold, 1 Cox, 160; 1 R. R. 37.

An extent of the Crown is an action and execution in the first instance. Marshall, Expurte, 1 Atk. 262.

Upon the assignees of a bankrupt, against whom an extent had issued, paying the Crown's debts, and performing the bankrupt's promise to pay his father's debt to the Crown, the extent was discharged. Rev v. Lacy, Bunb. 337.

25 Geo. 3, c. 35, gives the Crown no right to costs. Ib.

2. EXTENT IN CHIEF.

a. What may be Taken Under.

Lands.]—The lands of every person who has received money belonging to the Crown, or for which he is accountant to the Crown, are liable to an extent under 13 Eliz. c. 4. Wilde v. Forte, 4 Tuntt. 384: 13 R. R. 616.

And at common law also. *Ib.*A simple contract debt to the Crown will not bind the land of the debtor in the hands of a bona fide purchaser. Row v. Smith, Wightw. 34.

Equitable Mortgage, ]—An equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds by an accountant of the Crown, in the hands of one who has an opportunity of knowing that the depositor is, or may become, a debtor of the Crown, is not available against an extent. Broughton v. Davis, 1 Price, 216.

An equitable mortgage, by a deposit of title-deeds, was established against the claim of the Crown under an extent. Casherd v. Att.-Gen., 1 Daniel. 238.

Equity of Redemption.]—An equity of redemption may be taken under an extent. Rew v. De la Motte, Forrest, 165.

Mortgage Term.]—Where A. having, by marriage articles, dated in 1795, covenanted to settle lands, to be purchased with a certain sum of money, to uses (in strict settlement), and in 1802 entered into bonds to the Crown, and in 1802 purchased lands in fee, and had a mortgage term assigned to a trustee to attend the inheritance, and the estate then settled to the uses declared by the articles, under which he himself only took a life interest:—Held, that the term did not protect the inheritance of the fee against the Crown's debt, the settlement being voluntary. Rew v. 8. John, 2 Price, 317.

Term to attend Inheritance.]—A term of years, originally created out of an estate purchased by a person who afterwards became indebted to the Crown, to secure a sum of money purchaser of the estate for a valuable consideration without notice, to attend and protect the inheritance, such latter purchaser claiming directly under the first incumbrancer by a title paramount to the Crown debtor, is not liable to an extent for a Crown debt. Rev v. Lumbe, M'Clel. 402; 13 Price, 649.

Money Paid by Agent of Crown to Sheriff. |--A sheriff cannot retain against the Crown a sum of money deposited by an agent of the Crown, to cover the expenses of a sale by auction of property seized under an extent, and sold under a venditioni exponas. Her v. Jones, 1 C. & J. 140; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 2.

Goods Chargeable with Duties.]-A tax-collector was accustomed to pay moneys received on account of taxes to R., who paul the sum into his banker's, to his private account, with knowledge of the banker that the same were blended with the moneys of R. The banker having become insolvent :—Held, that an extent in chief might issue against him for the recovery of the Crown moneys, the amount being a question for a jury. Reg. v. Ward, 2 Ex. 301.

Goods which have become chargeable to the Crown for duties cannot be discharged, except by an actual bonâ fide sale. Att.-Gen. v. Trueman, 11 M. &. W. 694; 13 L. J., Ex. 70.

Crown held entitled upon information for money had and received to recover the entire proceeds of a sale of malt, on which W., who had advanced money thereon, claimed a lien for his advances, and the Crown claimed duties, the facts not amounting to an authority from the Crown for W. to appropriate them, or to payment by the Crown of his claim; and, therefore, the question mooted, whether the Crown can recover money paid under a full knowledge of the circumstances, but in ignorance of the law, not arising. Att. Gen. v. Warmsley, 12 M. & W. 179 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 66.

An extent in chief may issue against a banker for the recovery of interest allowed by him on the half-yearly balance of a tax-collector's account, in which his own and the Crown moneys are blended together: also to recover the amount of a banker's promissory note, in the hands of a tax-collector, and received by him in payment of taxes. Iteg. v. Adams, 2 Ex. 299.

A sum of money in the hands of the accountant-general in bankruptcy, to the credit of a party against whom an extent had been issued, was seized by the sheriff into the hands of the Crown, although, in consequence of its being in the accountant-general's hands, he could not obtain actual possession of it; the court granted a rule calling on the sheriff to pay over the money to the use of the Crown, but refused to make the accountant-general a party to the rule. Reg. v. Austin, 1 D. (N.S.) 666; 10 M. & W. 691; 12 L. J., Ex. 85; 6 Jur. 222.

Semble, that the lien of the Crown for duties in arrear is divisible, and confined to the several specific matters in respect of which the various several sums of the duties have accrued; and that the whole is not liable generally to the satisfaction of the duties arising on each several part. Rew v. Dale, 13 Price, 739.

The 3 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 10, gave a lien for arrears of stage-coach duties upon the coaches real property (freehold and leasehold) should due by one of the vendors, and vested in a and horses and barness employed therein, in trustee for that purpose, and after several mesne respect of which such arrears had accrued:—conveyances assigned to a trustee for another Held, first, that the lien attached though the property had passed to the assignees under a commission of bankruptey; and, secondly, that the duties on each coach attached as a lien upon that coach, &c., only, and not upon the general stock of coaches, horses, &c. Day, in re, M'Clel. 384.

> Goods already Seized under Fi. Fa. ]-Goods of the debtor already seized under a fi. fa., but not sold, may be taken under an extent, either in chief or in aid. Giles v. Grover, 9 Bing, 128; 2 M. & So. 197; 1 Cl. & F. 72; 6 Bligh (N.S.) 277.

> Partnership Property.]—Under an extent against one partner, the Crown can only take the separate interest of the partner, liable to the partnership debts. Hex v. Sunderson, Wightw. 50: 12 R. R. 713.

> If two writs of extent are issued, the one for a joint debt and the other for a separate debt, in the same sum, and the inquisitions find a joint debt and a separate debt in different sums, the court will not set them both aside on the ground of irregularity, but will support that which is correct. Rew v. Mallett, 1 Price, 395.

> Where a joint debt has been found, the death of one of the debtors does not vitiate the proceedings as against the survivor. Ib.

A. and P. carried on business in partnership; they were also members of a firm which traded as C. & Co.; A. & B., for the purpose of paying off certain of their debts, assigned in trust to the other members of the firm of C. & Co. portions of their shares in that firm. The assignment, which was bona fide, was regularly intimated, and it was duly entered in the books of the firm. An extent at the suit of the Crown afterwards issued against A. and B. :-Held, that the portions of shares thus assigned could not be seized under the extent. Spears v. Lord Advocate, 6 Cl. & F. 180 : 1 Robinson, 585.

Debt in Wife's Right.]—A debt due to a man jure uxoris is considered as originally due to him within 7 Jac. 1, c. 15, and therefore seisable on an extent. Reg. v. Thornton, Park, 271,

One Man's Land, where Many Liable.]-Not to extend one man's land only, where many are liable. Reg. v. Colbourne, Cary, 111.

Other Points.]—Where conusee of a statute extends lands in one county, which extent is afterwards returned and filed, yet all the lands of the conusor, though in other counties, shall Outs v. Robinson, 2 P. W. 91.

After an estate had been held under an extent for a long time, and has gone through several hands, whether upon a bill to redeem, the defendants shall account otherwise than at the extended value. Poole v. Guise, 1 Vern. 468.

A. is bound by statute to B.; C. lends money to A., and land is bought therewith; B., extending this land, has priority. Anon., Cary, 8.

Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds by accountant of Crown, to one who has opportunities of knowing mortgagor is or may become a debtor to Crown, not available against extent. Broughton v. Davis, 1 Price, 216.

Agreement on borrowing (by recital in bond) money, on the part of the borrower, that certain stand pledged for repayment of it; and a de-which they arise, although process does not issue livery of the title-deeds, amounting, in equity, till after an assignment of it to a provisional to a mortgage, or right to a mortgage, creates assignee under a commission of bankruptey. a lien binding as against the prerogative lien of the Crown, in respect of a debt accruing due to the king subsequently; and the equitable mortgagees are entitled to be first paid their principal and interest out of the produce of the sale of the premises, the property of the Crown debtor seised under an extent in chief. Fector v. Philpott, 12 Price, 197; 26 R. R. 650.

Debt to the Crown levied out of lands mortgaged by debtor subsequent to becoming indebted to the Crown :- Held, that all the estates of which he was seised whilst a Crown officer must, according to their ratable value, be contributory with the mortgaged premises to pay the debt; excepting, however, lands purchased under decree of foreclosure against debtor; the purchaser not having notice of the Crown debt, and having got in an old judgment against the ancestor of the debtor : the court would itself be the agent of a fraud if it displaced a title given by itself, where the proceedings were in all respects conformable to the rules and established law of the court : the purchaser paying his money into court, and the conveyance made under its sanction, and everything transacted not only with regularity, but optima fide by the purchaser. But although all the estates are thus contributory, in ease of the mortgagee, yet, as between the debtor's eldest son deriving under settlement, and purchasers from the son, the contributory fund must be so marshalled as to make the son's remaining property first applicable, and if that be insufficient, the portion of the last purchaser must be applied before that of any prior parchaser. Hartley v. O'Flaherty, Beat. 61.

b. Priority of.

Over Extents in Aid.]-Immediate extent and extent in chief, in the second or any degree, are to be satisfied before an extent in aid of a prior teste, where the same goods were seized under both extents, although the inquisition on the latter was taken before that on the former, and on the same day as the inquisition on the immediate extent, and the venditioni exponas on the extent in aid was tested before that which issued on the extent in chief in the particular degree. Rew v. Larking, 8 Price, 683.

It is not necessary that the Crown, in proceeding to recover debts of its debtor by extent within the first degree, should first apply the immediate debtor's proper effects in discharge of its debts, before it resorts to the debtor's debts. 1b.

Over a Commission. ]-If an extent and a commission issue on the same day, the extent shall have the preference. Rex v. Earl, Bunb. 33.

Over Assignees in Bankruptcy. ]-Where the adjudication in bankruptcy and appointment of. an official assignee take place at an earlier period of the same day on which a writ of extent is issued against the bankrupt for a Crown debt, the fraction of a day is not to be taken in account, and the title of the Crown must prevail. his hands unsold, an extent came at the king's Reg. v. Res v. Dale, 13 Price, 739.

Replication to a plea in bar to an extent in aid, that the defendant was trustee under a prior deed of assignment for the general benefit of all the insolvent's creditors; that the prosecutor of the extent was indebted to the Crown at the time of executing the deed; that the insolvent then carried on trade, and was not then seised of lands; that the insolvent was then indebted to the prosecutor, and that the prosecutor had not executed the assignment, is bad. Rew v. Watson, 3 Price, 6.

Over Landlord. |-Although the title of the Crown attaches from the teste of the writ, it is commensurate only with the interest of its debtor; and, therefore, when that was determined by the act of seizure under a claim of forfeiture in a lease, the title of the Crown was defeated by the same event. Rev v. Topping, M'Clel, & Y. 544; 29 R. R. 839.

Over Executions of the Subject. ]-The provision of the latter part of 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, s. 74, applies only to cases where the goods of the debter are not only taken in execution, but sold, the property in them not being altered till then; and until the property be altered and transferred absolutely from the debtor, by sale and delivery, the Crown's execution is to be preferred, even where the Crown process was so sued out. Rex

v. Sloper, 6 Price, 114. Process sued out by the Crown against a defendant to recover penalties, upon which judgment for the Crown is afterwards obtained, entitles the king's execution to have priority within 33 Hen. 8, c. 39, s. 74, before the execution of a subject whose execution had issued and been commenced on a judgment recovered against the same defendant prior to the king's judgment, but subsequent to the commencement of the king's process; the king's writ of execution having been delivered to the sheriff before the actual sale of the defendant's goods under the plaintiff's execution. Butler v. Butler, 1 East, 338. S. P., Att.-Gen. v. Aldersey, 1 East, 341 ; 6 R. R. 279.

Although Extent is Tested after Delivery of Subject's Writ to Sheriff. ]—Goods seized under a fi. fa., at the suit of a subject, are before sale liable to be taken by virtue of the king's extent, tested after the delivery of the fi. fa. to the sheriff. Res v. Wells, 16 East, 278, n.; 14 R. R. 347. S. P., contra, Rorke v. Dayrell, 4 Term Rep. 402 ; 2 R. R. 417 ; and Uppom v. Sumner, 2 W. Bl. 1294.

Recognised and adhered to by the Court of Exchequer as clear law; and, as it stood uncontradicted by later authority, although at variance with former determinations, they would not allow it to be questioned on an interlocutory motion. Where goods were taken in execution by the sheriff on a fi, fa., and whilst they remained in suit, tested after the entry of the sheriff under the fi. fa.; and the sheriff thereupon seized the said goods subject to the former seizure, and attaches on the subject-matter in respect of afterwards sold them under a venditioni exponas

The sheriff seized the goods of a debtor under a fi. fa., and whilst they remained in his hands unsold an extent in chief in the second degree tested after the seizure was delivered to the sheriff :- Held, that the goods might be seized and sold under the extent, without regard to the ti. fa.; and that it makes no difference whether the extent is in chief or in aid. Giles v. Grarer. 1 Cl. & F. 72; 6 Bligh (N.s.) 277; 2 M. & Scott, 197: 9 Bing, 128,

The doctrine of the Crown process having priority, where it bears teste on a day subsequent to a subject's execution on a fieri facias under which the sheriff has seized, applies to cases of extents in aid. Rex v. Slaper, 6 Price, 144.

- Or at the same Time. ]-Where writs of extent and fieri facias were issued against the goods of the defendant, tested on the same day, the court refused to grant a writ of venditioni exponas on the return to the fieri facias. Rev v. Deron (Sheriff), 1 Chit, 643.

- Extent Delivered after Sale by Sheriff. -A fieri facias issued at the suit of the plaintiff on Friday, the 14th of November, against the goods of J. S. : on Saturday, the 15th, the sheriff seized and sold part of the goods, and the re-mainder by 12 o'clock on Monday, the 17th; after they had been delivered to the purchasers, and removed, but while the money arising from the proceeds of the sale remained in the hands of the sheriff, namely, at six in the evening of the 17th, a writ of extent was delivered to him : -Held, that by the sale the execution of the plaintiff was executed, and that he might recover the moneys levied under such sale from the sheriff in an action for money had and received. Swain v. Morland, 1 Br. & B. 370; Gow, 39; 3 Moore, 740; 21 R. R. 651.

Enlargement of Time for Returning. ] - The court, upon the application of the sheriff, enlarged the time for his making a return to a fi. fa. apon a suggestion of a reasonable doubt whether the goods seized under the writ were not covered by an extent afterwards issued at the suit of the Crown for malt duties under 28 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 21, for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to go into the Court of Exchequer, and there contest the question of right with the Crown in a more eligible manner than in the King's Bench. Wells v. Pickman, 7 T. R. 174; 4 R. R. 410.

The court allowed five days' time to the sheriff to make his return to a fi. fa., on the snggestion of a difficulty occasioned by a writ of extent having been afterwards issued at the suit of the Crown; but the rule for further time was granted on payment of costs. Rev v. Deron (Sheriff), supra.

Res v. Burns, 1 Y. & J. 579.

Levy under an Extent-Return of Nulla bona by Sheriff to Writ of Fi. Fa.]—The sheriff entered and took possession of the defendant's goods under a fi. fa. Before the sale, the officers of the customs entered to levy for a penalty recovered against the defendant for an offence against the revenue. The sheriff permitted the goods to be taken for the penalty, and returned nulla bona to the fi. fa.:—Held, that he was justified in so doing, as there is no distinction between a warrant to levy a penalty given to the Crown by statute and an execution under an extent, Grove v. Aldridge, 2 M. & Scott, 568; 9 Bing, 428.

Inquisition - Finding of ] - An inquisition finding special matter, without stating any con-clusion as a fact, is bad, and may be quashed on motion. Rev v. Sherwood, 3 Price, 269.

An inquisition finding A. indebted to B. and the other partners and proprietors of a certain society or company called the Kent Insurance Company is sufficiently certain without naming the individual members of such company, although they are not incorporated. Runsbottam v. Rex. 7 Price 570.

Upon a seire facias to recover money found due to the Crown for duties of customs by an inquisition taken under a commission to find debts, it appeared on the record that the commission, which was tested the 21st February, and returnable the 15th April, 1843, authorised the commissioners to inquire whether D, is now indebted in any and what sums of money. The inquisition was taken and returned on the 1st March, 1843, and the jury found that D. was, on the day of taking that inquisition, indebted to the Crown in 2621. 10s., for the duty of customs on silk imported by him between the 6th and 14th February, 1841, and that the sum and every part thereof still remained due and unpaid:— Held, that this fluding was good in form, and was warranted by the commission. Dean v. Reg. (in error), 15 M. & W. 475; 3 D. & L. 714; 15 L. J., Ex. 236.

The scire facias was tested the 30th March, 1843 :- Held, that its having issued before the return-day of the commission was a mere irregularity, and not a ground of error. Ih.

In an immediate extent, on an inquisition to find debts, the jury may find the fact of a debt being due to the Crown, on the sole evidence of an affidavit that the debt is due. Reg. v. Ryle, 9 M. & W. 227; 1 D. (N.s.) 431; 11 L. J., Ex. 234 : 6 Jur. 238.

On the execution of a commission issued previously to an extent in chief, it is competent to the jury to find the debts due to the Crown on any evidence that will satisfy them of the fact; and the common-law rules of evidence are not by the sheriff, and whilst the money levied was obligatory on them or on the commissioner. Ib. For a form of a commission, see 6 Jur. 238. n.

— Nature of ]—The inquisition is not Maberly, 3 L. J., Ex. 154; 2 Dowl. P. C. 383; wholly an ex parte proceeding, and a claimant 2 C. & M. 537; 4 Tyr. 545. of property in the goods inquired of may assert his claim before the sheriff, and put material questions to witnesses examined on the part of the prosecution, in the way of cross-examination, to shew that the goods belonged to him; and if the sheriff refuses to permit such interrogatories to be put, the court will set aside the extent and inquisition, Rev v. Collingridge, 3 Price, 280.

When it can be Traversed. ]-The court will admit a party claiming goods seized by the sheriff, under a capias utlagatum, to enter his claim, and traverse the inquisition after the time for so doing has expired, and a venditioni exponas executed, where the claimant's attorney has mistaken his course, and brought an action against the sheriff instead of having claimed and traversed on payment of costs. Rex v. Randell, 5 Price, 576.

It is sufficient, if a defendant claiming goods seized under an extent traverses the property being in the debtor to the crown's debtor at the time of the seizure or of taking the inquisition ; and it is not necessary to say at the time of the issuing of the extent. Rex v. Lumbton. 5 Price.

____ Onus Probandi.]—Parties claiming goods which have been found by inquisition to be the property of a defendant under an extent must shew title in themselves, and cannot, unless that title is admitted on the record, object on demurrer to the proceedings upon the extent. Rew v. Soulby, 1 Y. & J. 249.

- Scire Facias, Founded on.]-Where a scire facias, founded on an inquisition, misrecites the inquisition, and therefore fixes by such recital a day on which the debt had been found to be due differing from the true day named in the inquisition, the court will give leave to amend the writ on payment of the costs, even after the defendants have pleaded. Rew v. Scott, 4 Price, 181.

If an inquisition to find debts, executed in vacation, were returnable in the following term, and a scire facias issued thereon, tested as of the term preceding the vacation, the court would set it aside for the repugnancy which must appear on the face of the record; nor would they allow it to be aided by inserting the true dates, by means of a memorandum on the record. Rev v. Pearson, 3 Price, 288.

- Doubt as to Priority of Writ. |-- Upon an inquiry under an extent, it appeared that the defendant had assigned all his property two days before the teste of the writ, by a deed, which was an act of bankruptcy, and upon which a fiat was issued before the teste of the writ. The sheriff returned that, to the knowledge of the jurors, the defendant had no goods. Upon an application by the attorney-general, the court ordered a writ ad melius inquirendum to issue. that the facts as to the assignment might appear upon the inquisition, it being suggested that the Crown would be entitled to the goods as against the assignees. Reg. v. Jobling, 4 Ex. 483; 19 L. J., Ex. 14.

Return of Writ. ]-Writs of extent held returnable in vacation, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 86, 8. 8. Reg. v. Renton, 2 Ex. 216; 5 D. & L. 750; 17 L. J., Ex. 204.

Pleadings.]-A plea stating that the defendant accepted a bill drawn upon him by the original debtor, and which did not become due till after the inquisition was taken, is good. Res v. Darcson, Wightw. 32.

A defendant cannot enter a claim and traverse an inquisition after he has moved to quash the proceedings on affidavits which were satisfactorily answered; and a rule for that purpose was discharged. Rew v. Biehley, 4 Price, 323.

Election as to Proceedings by Extent or Scire-Facias.]—The Crown has no election to proceed either by extent or scire facias where the debtoris not insolvent. Rea v. Thompson, 3 Price,

When Court will Grant a New Writ for same: Claim. ]-The court will not grant a new writ of extent of the date of a former, tested between eight and nine years before, on the ground that the defendant had been since found to have been further indebted to the Crown, and to havehad, at the time of issuing the first extent, property not then known to belong to him, and though his goods and chattels, seized and sold under that writ, produced only so much as would satisfy but a very small part of the Crown's original debt; but a new writ of present teste should be issued, which might be doneat any time, on application to a baron, where, while the Crown debt remaining unsatisfied, the-defendant becomes possessed of newly-acquired-property. Rew v. Harroy, 7 Price, 238.

— For Different Claim. ]—Where an extent to find debts had been issued against a person in the service of the Crown, and an inquisition taken thereon, such proceedings were held to be noobjection to a second extent and an inquisition by the same revenue board against the sameproperty on a prior claim. Rev v. Rawlings, 12' Price, 834.

To found and support such proceedings, a statement that the party owed to the king a sum of money claimed to be due from him to the-Crown, as the balance of his account delivered in to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts in his capacity, &c., is a sufficient averment and finding a debt due to the king.

A person claiming to be an incumbrancer on lands seized by the Crown under an extent and inquisition against the Crown debtor is not entitled to notice of the holding a further inqusition under another extent against the sameperson, on a similar charge of prior date, although on the first inquisition the jury had returned him an incumbrancer on the estate found to belong to the debtor. Ib.

The court refused an application on the part of the incumbrancer, for an order that he might have notice of the holding any further inquisition. Ib.

____ Date of Writ.]—The court refused to allow the writ to be ante-dated. Rex v.

But, where the extent is issued against a surety, the affidavit need not state that application has been made to the principal debtor for payment, or that he is in decayed and insolvent circumstances. Rev v. Marsh. M'Clel. 688: 13 Price. 826 : 28 R. R. 748, 758,

Where an extent in chief had been issued for where an extent in chief had been issued and the recovery of a sum of money, being proceeds of assessed taxes for part of a year, deposited by a collector with a banking-house which had stopped payment, and such sum was partly composed of balances left in the hands of the collector upon his several monthly payments to the receiver-general, the court refused to refer it to the king's remembrancer to see (in effect) whether the poundage upon all those payments ought not to be deducted from the sum mentioned in the extent, as being the collector's and not the king's money : upon the grounds-1st, that the application was without precedent; 2nd, that the collector's title did not accrue till the completion of his collection, and payment of his entire assessment: 3rd, that the same did not come within the jurisdiction of the court as a debt or liquidated demand, but was subject to the control of the lords of the treasury, who have all the requisite accounts before them, as an equitable claim to be adjusted or wholly disallowed, according to circumstances; 4th, that it would be impossible for the master, without the accounts, to see whether ultimately the collector would have any claim. Ih.

It is not necessary in the affidavit made for obtaining a baron's fiat for an extent in chief in the second degree that there should be any averment of the insolvency of the Crown debtor, or any fact stated from which it may be inferred. Rew v. Shackell, 11 Price, 772.

Nor is it necessary in such a case to negative collusion. Ib.

Inquisition; and that they could not set aside an extent quia improvide emanavit on motion, on a statement of such facts by affidavit as would amount to a defence. Rev v. Seton, 8 Price, 671.

> Power of Crown to Retake. ]-A defendant in execution, under a writ of extent at the suit of the Crown, who has been taken from prison under an order of the commissioners of excise for the purpose of giving evidence, without any writ or other process being issued, and after giving such evidence has been reconveyed to prison is not entitled to his discharge; as, even assuming it to amount to a voluntary escape, the Crown has power to retake and detain him in custody under the original writ. Reg. v. Renton. 5 D, & L. 750 : 2 Ex. 216.

> Interest, ]-A debt due to the Crown, although originally merely a simple contract debt, if it has been brought into court in the shape of the produce of a sale under an extent, carries interest from the time when the debt shall have been ascertained by the deputy remembrancer's re-port, notwithstanding there is no specific appropriation in the report. Rev. v. Mainwaring, 2 Price, 67.

a Who Entitled to

Bankers.]—Bankers having money in their house arising from the assessed taxes paid in for the purpose of being paid over to the Exchequer on account of a receiver-general, for the due payment of which by him they have given a bond to the Crown, are still entitled to sue out an extent in aid, and that upon affidavit stating generally their having received the money for that purpose. Rew v. Gibbs, 7 Price, 633.

An immediate debtor to the Crown, indebted by reason of his receipt of the Crown's money, as a country banker, to whom it had been paid by the district collector of excise for the purpose of being remitted by him to London, is not entitled (although he has entered into the usual bond to the Crown given by persons in such situations to pay over the money, or remit good bills for the amount, within twenty-one days after the receipt of it) to sue out an extent in his own aid, unless there has been, in point of fact, a literal breach of the condition of the bond; and such breach must be stated in the affidavit to obtain the fiat for the extent. Rew v. Turleton, 9 Price, 647.

obligor can only obtain an extent upon a commission and inquisition to find a debt due to the Crown, as in the ordinary course of proceeding with respect to simple contract debtors of the Crown. Ib.

Brewer.]-A brewer who is indebted for excise duties is entitled to an extent in aid. Rex v. Rippon, 2 Price, 398.

Maltster.]-But the surety in a bond to the Crown by a maltster, for securing the payment of duties on malt made by him, is not entitled to prosecute an extent in aid. Rex v. Sly, 2 Price,

Committee of Lunatic against preceding Com- | covered judgments against the executors, though mittee. ]-The court refused to grant a fiat for an extent, on an application made by a committee against a preceding committee (on the usual bond to the Crown), where he had been declared bankrupt under a commission of bankruptcy issued against him so long as ten years before the application. The remedy of the party is by scire facias. Lacy. In re, 10 Price, 135.

Rew v. Hunter, 4 Price, 258,

Cash, Notes, Cheques, and Bills of Exchange, banking-house, containing cash, notes, and cheques of the latter, and bills of exchange, the morning of the 4th, who was in the habit of whilst remaining model in the sheriff's han calling for such parcels before banking hours, is Rev v. Giles, 8 Price, 293. See 22 R. R. 759. seizable under an extent in aid, tested on the 2nd of July, and returnable on the 6th of November, although the inquisition, finding the debt due to the debtor of the Crown debtor, was not taken till the 4th of November following: because such circumstances do not amount to a delivery of the parcels to the persons to whom it Ex. 266. was addressed, or their agent, and therefore confers no right of property. Seens, if it had been delivered to the postman, Rea v. Lambton, 5 Price, 428: 19 in the banking-house, under such circumstances remain there at the risk of the bankers who made it up, and it is still subject to their control. Ib. A writ of extent binds from the teste, and such property as a bill of exchange is bound while in the custody of the debtor. Ib.

Account, and Repayment of Surplus. ] - Semble, that the Court of Exchange had power to refer it to the Master to take an account of the rents and profits extended to the plaintiff, and to order him to refund the surplus, if it should appear that he had been overpaid, Brookbank v. Miers, 4 Dowl. P. C. 179.

Person of Defendant.]-The capias clause of the writ of extent is not usually enforced. Rev v. Plaw, 3 Price, 94.

But an extent in aid against the body of a defendant may be issued, although not applied for in open court. Rev v. Mares, 2 Price, 151.

A defendant taken into custody under an extent in aid was ordered to be discharged, where the sheriff had also received property more than sufficient to cover the demand. Rew v. Kinnear, 3 Price, 536.

Where the agent of an insurance company who was indebted to them for premiums and duties payable to the Crown filed his petition under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116 (a repealed Insolvent Debtors' Act), and was afterwards arrested on an extent in chief, the court refused to discharge him upon affidavit that he was informed and believed that the Crown debt had been paid by the company who had in reality issued the extent. Reg. v. Bennison, 1 D. & L. 613.

A party in custody under a writ of extent, at the suit of the Crown, allowed voluntarily to escape, but retaken and restored into the same custody and under the same writ, is rightly in custody, and is not entitled to his discharge. Reg. v. Renton, 2 Ex. 216; 5 D. & L. 750; 17 L. J., Ex. 204.

c. Priority of.

Over other Creditors. ]-A debtor of the Crown may gain a priority by extent for his own demand before other creditors, although it is sworn that the Crown is in no danger; and the court has no discretion to prevent him. Rex v. Blatchford, 1 Anst. 162.

Where the sheriff seized goods of a defendant Parcel containing. —A parcel made up by a under a fi. fa., sued out on a judgment recovered banking-house, scaled, and addressed to another at the suit of a subject creditor; and after the seizure, but before the sale of the goods by the sheriff, a writ of extent in aid issued, tested after specially indersed to the former to make up a the seizure, and founded on a commission to find balance due from them on their general account, debts, dated, and an inquisition taken thereon, and deposited on the 3rd of July, after the bank the same day as the writ of extent was put into was shut, with a woman servant left in care of the sheriff's hands to be executed :—Held, that the banking-house, to be given to the postman in the extent attached upon the goods so taken whilst remaining unsold in the sheriff's hands.

> Cesser of, after Crown Debt paid. ]-A Crown debtor, after he has paid his debt to the Crown, cannot continue prerogative proceedings against his own debtor. Reg. v. Bingham, 1 C. & M. 862; 3 Tyr. 938; 2 Dowl. P. C. 128; 2 L. J., # d. Proceedings in.

When a Crown debtor is entitled to an extent The contents of such a parcel, while remaining in aid, he need not have the sanction of the solicitors or officers of any of the revenue boards. Rer v. Williams, 3 Price, 75.

When the surety of a Crown debtor has paid he debt of his principal, an order that he shall be placed in the situation of the Crown, and a writ of extent be put in force in his behalf, is not absolute in the first instance, though notice of motion has been served on the principal and the Crown, and no one appears to oppose the application. Reg. v. Salter, 1 H. & N. 274, Affidavit.]-A plaintiff, having recovered damages for a libel against the proprietor of a newspaper, is not entitled to an extent against the principal and sureties in the cognisance given by them to secure the payment of penalties under 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 73, s. 3, merely by getting a return of nulla bona to a fi. fa. issued against the principal; but he must convince the court, by affidavit, that every exertion has been made to obtain satisfaction from the defendant. Pennell v. Thompson, 1 C. & M. 875; 3 Tyr. 823; 1 D. P. C. 137.

Amendment of Writ.]—On a motion opposed by counsel the court ordered an amendment of a writ of extent in aid, issued to find debts, by inserting therein the word "second," being the day of the mouth on which the extent in fact issued and on which the flat bore date; a blank having been left in the process for the day of the month, which was not supplied, nor was the omission observed till after the inquisition taken thereon had been returned into court. Rew v. Attwood, 9 Price, 483.

Inquisition-Finding of.]-Where an extent issued in aid of a company of individuals (not incorporated), and the inquisition found that their debtor was indebted to L. and H. (two of the company, who had executed the usual bond to the Crown as taken from joint insurance com-panies, under 22 Geo. 2, c. 48, on behalf of themselves and the company), and the other partners and proprietors of a certain society called, &c. :-Held, sufficient, on motion in arrest of judgment, and that it was not a fatal objection not to have named all the members of the company in the finding of the debt by the inquisition. Rea v. Ramsbottom, 5 Price, 447.

Nor is a finding that two persons were indebted to L and H, and the other partners and pro- ing the ad valorem duty on two conveyances, prietors of the unincorporated company at varidebts are due to L. and H. on behalf of themselves and a certain society called, &c. 1b.

A recital in a writ of extent that two persons are indebted to the Crown by bond (generally) is sufficient to authorise a command to the sheriff to inquire of debts due to two such persons ou behalf of themselves and other persons. Ib.

In an inquisition on an extent in aid it is sufficient that the prosecutor of the extent is found to be indebted to the Crown (generally) at the time of taking the inquisition, without stating the amount of the debt or the time and manner of its accraing due. Rex v. Franklin, 5 Price, 614.

When Writ will be Set aside.]—The court will not set aside an extent in aid on the ground that the debt levied under it is of greater amount than the debt sworn to be due from the original debtor of the Crown. Rec v. Bunney, 1 Price, 394.

In one case the court observed, that if on the trial of the cause there should appear reason for considering the proceeding to be framed for the purpose of unduly obtaining an extent, which could not be supported, the defendant would be protected by the court, who would stay the proceedings after verdict, and on an application by the defendant would recollect that a motion had been made. Rew v. Burbery, 10 Price, 46.

The court ordered a fiat to be quashed, quia improvide emanavit, and an extent in aid issued thereon to be set aside upon a summary motion; the objections, founded on affidavits, were that the inquisition on which the flat was obtained, and the extent sucd out, was made without viva voce testimony having been offered to the jury of the existence of the debt; and that they found the debt to be due solely on the usual affidavit on which the judge's fiat was obtained and made for that purpose, by or on the part of the prosecutors of the extent. Rev v. Harnblower, 11 Price, 29. But see Reg. v. Ryle, 6 Jnr 238

The court will not juterfere to assist a purchaser of an estate seized under an extent, for which he has paid part of the purchase-money, on an offer of arrangement. Row v. Hollier, 2 Price, 394.

Satisfaction of prior Extent-Right to Surplus. - Where an extent in chief has been satisfied, parties prosecuting an extent in aid should apply to the court by motion to be paid out of the overplus. Rew v. Larking, 8 Price, 683.

The court will order the residue of the proceeds, after the debt of the Crown has been satisfied, to be paid into court to the credit of the cause. Rew v. Freume, 1 Price, 299.

So they will, on motion, order the surplus to be refunded with costs where a greater sum than is netually due has been levied. Rew v. Edwards, 1 Price, 447.

Purchase under-Reconveyance by Purchaser. -An extent having issued against a defendant, certain freehold property was seized and sold under 25 Geo. 3, c. 35. The purchaser having paid the purchase-money into the bank after-wards, and before any conveyance was executed, sold the property to another person for a less sum, and, in order to avoid the necessity of paysic lands devised before lands descended, under applied to the court that the sub-purchaser's ance with a command to the sheriff to find what name might be substituted in the conveyance for that of the original purchaser. The court declined to grant the application unless with the consent of all parties; which was afterwards obtained, and an order made. Rev v. Rawlings, 2 C. M. & R. 471; 4 D. P. C. 407; 5 Tyr. 895; 4 L. J., Ex. 295.

> Order for Sale of Land Seized under. ]-Lands held by a debtor to the Crown under lease on lives from a collegiate body having been seized under an extent in aid, previously to 25 Geo. 3. c. 35, the court made an order for the sale of the lands under that statute. Reg. v. Lane, 6 M. & W. 489; 9 L. J., Ex. 175; 4 Jur. 464.

Leave to Traverse. ]-The court will not give a defendant leave to traverse an extent in aid who has let the time within which he ought to plead pass by without doing so, on the failure of a motion to set aside the proceedings. Rew v. Gibbs, 7 Price, 633,

4. AMOVEAS MANUS.

When Granted. The court will not give judgment as if the plea is confessed for the defendants (claiming as assignces the goods of a bankrupt seized under an extent), on motion for that purpose, where the attorney-general has not demurred, replied, or otherwise proceeded; but it seems that in such a case they would grant an amoves manns. Rew v. Ecans, 6 Price, 480; 20 R. R. 676. And see Rew v. Hupper, 3 Price, 40: 18 R. R. 641; and Rew v. Glenny, 2 Price,

The court will not grant an amoveas manus to release property seized under an extent in aid against a debtor, on the ground that the debt which had been found on the original commission to be due to the king's debtor, had been subsequently satisfied by the payment of bills deposited with him for securing that debt, if it appears that the bills were not in fact the property of the person depositing them. Rev v. Blackett, 1 Price, 96.

An action commenced after an extent issued against the debtor of a Crown debtor, but before the taking of an inquisition under it, and proceeded in by the assignee of the plaintiff (who had in the meantime become bankrupt) in his name after inquisition taken, and the debt so sued for had been seized under it into the hands of the Crown, and an amovens manus issued on the application of the bankrupt after issue joined :-Held, to have been well proceeded in. Lakeman v. M'Adam, 8 Price, 576; 22 R. R. 774.

Practice as to.]—Upon a proceeding of amoveas manus, the court may take judicial notice of the bond on which the extent has issued. Reg. v. Ellis, 4 Ex. 652; 19 L. J., Ex. 77.

5. DIEM CLAUSIT EXTREMUM.

When Issued, -A debtor of the Crown cannot have a diem clausit extremum issued after the death of his debtor, against the estate, unless the debt has been found in the lifetime of the deceased. Hippinley, Ex purte, 2 Price, 379.

a writ of diem clausit extremum. Rev v. Hassel, | that E. also was ignorant of them ; that E. died

To ground this writ, a scire facias against the devisees is not necessary where the debt is on record. Ib.

Absolute in the first Instance.]-Where a erown debtor has died insolvent, a motion for a diem clausit extremum is absolute in the first instance. Rew v. Crewe (Lord), 5 D. P. C. 158.

Action of Court under. ]-Where freehold and leasehold property had been seized under a diem clausit extremum, on an old commission and inquisition, and various claims were entered on the part of persons insisting on a prior right to that of the king and the executor of the deceased Crown debtor, and his surviving partners in trade, and the purchasers of part of his leasehold estate from his executors and mortgagecs applied by motion to the court (without prejudice to the right to traverse the debt found due to the Crown) for an amoveas manns as to the leasehold property, for a reference as to the partnership property, and a further reference as to part of the leasehold estates which had been sold, and the proceeds of which had been applied in paying off or reducing mortgages on the other parts of the property, the court refused to entertain any part of the application, on the ground that where so many claims were made and points of law were raised they could not act in a summary way without the consent of the Crown. Rew v. Hodge, 12 Price, 537.

G. ESCHEAT.

Escheat Procedure Act, 1887, 50 & 51 Vict. c. 53. Escheat Procedure Rules, 1889.

1. INQUISITION.

An inquisition will not entitle the Crown to seize where there is a legal title in possession.

Buryess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 188; 1 W. Bl. 121.

Where the nominee of the Crown was in possession of an intestate's estate and certain parties, who had failed to prove themselves next of kin before the Master, obtained an issue to try that question, the court would not, against the consent of the nominee of the Crown, who was defendant, grant an advance out of the found. Layton v. Manlore, 2 Salk. 469. estate for the purpose of trying the issue. Nie v. Maule, 4 Myl. & C. 342; 8 L. J., Ch. 329; 3 Jur. 669.

Finding not alien not conclusive against the Crown ; though no new commission ; but a melius inquirendum issues, if ground for it: if again so found, conclusive. Duplessis, Ex parte, 2 Ves.

J. M. having granted an annuity of 300L, charged on all his property, to A. and her assigns for ever, devised his estates upon trust to pay debts, &c. ; and as to the residue, to the use of his illegimate daughter E. for life, remainder to K. and his heirs. A, filed her bill nineteen years after the testator's death, and soon after the death of E., the tenant for life, against K., the remainderman in possession, the executor and trustee of the will, and the attorney-general, stating that no demand on account of the annuity was ever made upon E.; that during E.'s lifetime A. was ignorant of her rights, and Orown, when the mortgagor has died without intestate and unmarried, and that upon her death all her property vested in the Crown; and praying that the arrears of the annuity from the time of testator's death might be raised, &c. Upon demurrer to this bill :- Held, that supposing her personal estate should have been represented, the attorney-general would under the circumstances, in right of the Crown, and without any grant of administration, have sufficiently represented it. M'Kiernan v. Kernan. 4 Ir. Eq. 269; Fl. & K. 353.

Semble, that the courts lean strongly towards applications for further investigation in cases in which property falls to the Crown, as that generally happens not from want of next of kin but from failure of legal evidence of their title. Robson v. Att.-Gen., 10 Cl. & F. 471. And see S. C. sub nom. Monkton v. Att.-Gen., 2 Russ, & M. 147.

Order made under the Escheat Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, for a reference to inquire whether a person convicted of felony in the year 1822 was a trustee of stock standing in his name for the petitioner, and whether any grant thereof had been made by the Crown —Held, not necessary to serve the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown with notice of the application to the court. Tyson, In re, 1 Jur. 281.

2. TRAVERSE OF INQUISITION.

Right of subject to traverse inquisition extends to every case in which property is found in Crown, and is not confined to cases where Crown claims property by reason of incidents of tenure. But when application for permission to traverse is made to this court, it will not be authorised, unless petitioner makes out prima facie title against Crown. Gwydir (Lord), Ex parte, 4 Madd, 281, Order upon petition for leave to traverse an inquisition upon a commission of escheat, found in favour of the Crown. Webster, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 809.

Application for leave to traverse an inquisition refused, no evidence being produced, except the oath of the applicant, to invalidate the inquisition. A mere trustee, it seems, is not allowed to traverse. Scaller, In re, 1 Madd, 581. Inquisition finding some points well, and nothing as to others, may be supplied by melius inquirendum; otherwise, if defective in points

The supposed heir of a bare trustee who was stated to have died without heirs cannot traverse an inquisition of escheat where there is no evidence except the oath of the applicant to invalidate the inquisition. Sudler, In re, 1 Madd. 581.

The court, upon the petition of the lord of a manor, ordered that he should be at liberty to traverse an inquisition, under which it had been found that certain hereditaments held of the manor had devolved on the Crown for want of heirs. Beaufort (Duke), Ex parte, Parry, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 651; L. R. 2 Eq. 95; 14 L. T. 617.

3. ON FAILURE OF HEIRS.

a. Mortgages.

hundred years, and having subsequently mortgaged them to B. for an additional sum by deposit of the title-deeds. The fee simple was not worth the mortgage money :--Held, nevertheless, that the mortgagor could not be deemed a bare trustee for the mortgagee within the statute 4 & 5 Will, 4, c. 23, s. 2, so as to deprive the Crown of the equity of redemption, but it was ordered that the estate should be sold in the administration of assets, and B. declared a purchaser with liberty to apply to the Crown for a grant of the fee simple. Rogers v. Maule, 1 . & Coll. C. C. 4.

A. made a mortgage in fee, and died intestate and without heirs :- Held, that the equity of redemption did not escheat to the Crown, but belonged to the mortgagee, subject to the debts. Beale v. Symonds, 16 Beav. 406; 22 L. J., Ch. 708; 1 W. R. 137.

Where the lord of the manor took by escheat, on the death of the tenant without heirs, the fee simple, subject to a mortgage for a term created by the tenant:—Held, that as against the mortgagee, the lord had a right in equity to redeem. Downe (Viscount) v. Morris, 3 Hare, 394; 13 L. J., Ch. 337; 8 Jur. 486.

Where a copyhold was surrendered to a mort-gagee and his heirs, and no condition was expressed in the surrender, and the mortgagee died intestate and without an heir :- Held, that the lord of the manor was entitled to enter Att.-Gen. upon the copyhold as an escheat.

v. Leeds, 2 Myl. & K. 343. If the lord, taking lands by escheat on the failure of heirs of his tenant, is liable, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, out of such lands to pay a mortgage debt of the tenant charged thereon, he is cutitled to redeem the lands and get in the securities which the creditor held for the debt. Ib.

An escheat was in its nature feodal; and in default of heirs, the land, strictly speaking, reverted. Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 277; 1 W. Rl 121.

b. Other Property.

By letters patent of 31 Car. 2, the lands of H. were granted to Sir G. A. in tail male, and a rent of threepence per acre, the amount of quit rent prescribed by the Act of Settlement, was reserved. In 1681 Sir G. A. conveyed the lands to S. and his heirs, saving the estate and right of the Crown. In 1776 the estate tail determined by failure of the issue male of Sir G. A. The representatives of S. remained in possession of the lands down to the filing of the bill in 1841, and dealt with the estate as an absolute estate in fee. The rent reserved by the letters patent was regularly paid to the proper officer, and the usual receipt given for it as quit rent:—Held, that the right of the Crown to the land on the determination of the estate tail was barred by the 48 Geo. 3, c. 47, the case not coming within any of the exceptions in the first section of that act. Tuthill v. Rogers, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 429 ; 1 Jo. & Lat. 36.

heirs. Semble, no escheat of an equitable in- applicable to real estate; the money not having been laid out, the Crown, on failure of heirs, A. died intestate, unmarried and illegitimate, has no equity against next of kin to have it having mortgaged his real estates to B. for five laid out in real estate in order to claim by escheat. The devisees, on becoming absolutely entitled, have the option given by the will; and a deed of appointment by one, a feme covert, was held sufficient indication of her intention that it should continue personal property, against her heir claiming it as ineffectually disposed of for want of her examination. Walker v. Denne. 2 Ves. J. 170; 2 R. R.

Trustee not having the legal estate cannot hold against the Crown claiming by escheat.

A., seised in fee ex parte paterna, conveys to trustees in trust for herself, her heirs and assigns, to the intent that she should appoint, &c., and for no other use. A. died without appointment, and without heirs ex parte paterna: -Held, that the heir ex parte materna was not entitled, and that from the analogy between trusts and legal estates, the Crown was entitled by escheat; but that if the conveyance had barred the Crown of its rights, as between the maternal heir and trustee, the former was entitled. Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 177; 1 W. Bl. 121.

A testator devised a share in the New River Company to such trust as he should afterwards declare, but he never made any declaration of trust as to it. The testator died without having any heir at law :- Held, that A., and not the Crown, was entitled to it. Davall v. New River Ch., 3 De G. & Sm. 894; 18 L. J., Ch. 299; 13 Jur. 761.

Under the Escheat Act, trust moneys may be followed into land against the lords of the fee: and if it were otherwise, the estate in the hands of the lord by escheat is liable to the debts of the person whose estate has escheated. Hughes v. Wells, 9 Hare, 749; 16 Jur. 927.

Where lands escheat to the king, he shall have the benefit of a term to attend the inheritance. Bodmin v. Vandebenby, 1 Vern. 357; Pre. Ch. 65; 2 Ch. Ca. 172.

Devise of copyhold land in fee, on condition to pay 1,000% to charity. Testator having left no next of kin, nor any customary heir, and gift to charity being void, devisee held entitled to 1,000/, and not the Crown or lord of manor. Henchman v. Att.-Gen., 3 Myl. & K. 485. Reversing 2 Sim. & S. 498.

The effect of a testamentary appointment, either of real or personal estate, to a trustee apon trust for A., who dies in the lifetime of the appointor, is that the appointed property does not revert to the donor of the power, nor to those who would have taken under a gift over (if any) in default of appointment, but remains part of the general estate of the ap-pointor. Semble, if the heir at law could not be found, the title of the trustee was good as against the Crown. Van Hagan, In re, Sperling v. Rockfort, 50 L. J., Ch. 1; 16 Ch. D. 18; 44 L. T. 161; 29 W. R. 84.

A devise to trustees and their heirs for an illegitimate person and his heirs. Quere, whether such freeholds are liable to the debts in priority to, or pari passu with, lands specifically devised. Ih.

c. Re-grant by Crown.

It is the ordinary rule for the Crown to give a lease to the party discovering an escheat. Mogg-ridge v. Thuckwell, 7 Ves. 71; 6 R. R. 76.

A. and B. join in a petition to the Crown, representing an estate to have escheated, and procure a grant of it to be made to them :-Held, that A. could not afterwards set up a claim to one part under a prior title in himself. while taking the benefit of the grant as to the rest. Cumming v. Forrester, 2 Jac. & Walk. 334 : 22 R. R. 157.

The grantee of letters of preference of escheated property in Jamaica is bound to prosecute the escheat to final judgment for the Crown within a proper time, otherwise he will be held accountable to the Crown in respect of the rents and profits from the time of his entering into possession, although the letters of preference and the possession have not the effect of making the grantce the bailiff of the Crown. And this is so although the estate be encumbered to such an extent that the interest of the Crown is swallowed up. Mason v. Att.-Gen. for Junaica, 4 Moore, P. C. 228; 7 Jur. 1071.

d. Other Matters.

Bank stock was purchased by the government of Maryland before the American war, and vested in trustees for the discharge of certain bills. After the peace, upon a bill under an assignment by the state of part of the stock as a compensation to mortgagees of lands that were confiscated, the fund subject to that assignment was claimed by the new state, and there being no claim under the bills, the whole was claimed by the surviving trustees beneficially, also by the proprietary under the old government; and a specific lien was insisted on in respect of losses by confiscation occasioned by the refusal of the trustees to transfer :-Held, that there was no lien; that the new state could take only such rights of the old as were within their jurisdiction; that the claims of the plaintiff, the state, and in respect of the confiscations, were the subject of treaty, not of municipal jurisdiction, and the fund, no object of the trust existing, must be at the disposal of the Crown. The court cannot decree against a title in the Crown apparent on the record, though not insisted on at the hearing. Burclay v. Russell, 3 Ves. 424.
Bill for the specific performance of a covenant, by which the defendants engaged, within two years, to procure the heir at law of A. B. to convev certain lands to the plaintiffs, or within the same period to prefer a petition to the House of Lords for, and to use their utmost endeavours to procure, an act of parliament for substituting a trustee in the place of the heir, in case such heir could not be found, or there should not be any heir. On inquiry, no heir being found, the court decreed the defendants to allow their names voluntarily; but not subject to debts at large.

the act, expressing, however, a doubt whether such an application could succeed, the estate appearing to have escheated. The court will not decree that which seems to be impossible ; and it is more than doubtful whether the old law now prevails by which a man was com-pellable to procure his wife to levy a fine. Erderick v. Coxwell, 3 Y. & J. 514.

The repealed 8 Hen. 6, c, 16, and 18 Hen. 6, c. 6, prohibiting the granting to farm of lands seized into the king's hands upon inquest before escheators, until such inquest is returned in the chancery or exchequer, and for a month afterwards, if the king's title to the same is not found on record, unless to the party grieved who shall have tendered his traverse to such inquest, and avoiding all grants made contrary thereto, extended to the case of an eschent upon the death of the tenant last seised without heirs, where no immediate tenure of the Crown was found by the inquest; and as the Crown could not grant to a stranger in such a case without office, neither could a plaintiff in ejectment ecover upon the demise of the Crown. Doe d. Hayne v. Redfern, 12 East, 96.

The repealed 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 8, s. 8 (which was in general terms, and not confined to the particular inquisitions mentioned in other clauses of the act), extended to avoid any such inquisition or office before escheators not finding of whom the lands are holden, in the same manner as if the jury had expressly found their ignorance of the tenure. 1b.

Duties of Grantee of Escheat. ]-The grantee of escheated property is bound to prosecute the escheat to final judgment for the Crown within a proper time; is liable to account to the Crown within a proper time ; and is liable to account to the Crown for the rents and profits received by him from the time of entering into possession. Muson v. Att.-Gen. for Jamaica, 4 Moore, P. C. 228; 7 Jur. 1071.

Bankrupt's Land.]—Semble, that freehold pro-perty of bankrupt disclaimed by trustee under s. 23 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (repealed), reverts to the Crown. Mercer and Moore, In re, or Beyrdsworth and Moore, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 201; 14 Ch. D. 287; 42 L. T. 311; 28 W. R. 485.

4. ON FAILURE OF PERSONAL REPRESENTA-

Absolute Right of Crown.]-The personal estate of an intestate who leaves no next of kin, belongs absolutely to the Crown, as part of the droits of the Crown. The fact that these droits are by statute paid into the Treasury, and made to form part of the public revenue, makes no difference in this matter. Att.-Gen. v. Köhler, 9 H. L. Cas. 654; 8 Jnr. (N.S.) 467; 5 L. T. 5; 9 W. R. 993.

The right to goods belonging to persons dying intestate without leaving husband or widow and without kindred, as "bona vacantia," has from the earliest times been vested in the king in right of his crown. Dyke v. Walford, Moore, P. C. 434; 12 Jur. 839, Duchy of Lancaster.]—The Queen being entitled to the Duchy of Lancaster, separate from the Crown of England, is entitled to the goods of a bastard intestate dying without next of kin in right of her duchy of Lancaster. Ib.

Duchy of Cornwall.]-T. C. died in Cornwall, intestate, without known relations. The court granted letters of administration of his estate for the use of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Duke of Cornwall; but, semble, without prejudice to the rights of the Crown. Cornwall (Solicitor of Ducky) v. Cunning, 5 P. D. 114; 41 L. T. 737; 28 W. R. 278.

Letters of Administration granted to Duke—Evidence.]—On motion for grant of letters of administration of an intestate's effects of Cornwall, it is not necessary, if the facts are sufficiently set forth in the warrant, that they should be verified by affidavit. Griffith, In the goods of, 53 L. J. P. 30; 9 P. D. 63; 32 W. R. 524; 48 J. P. 312.

Illegitimacy.]—Semble, that the attorney-general, without taking out administration, sufficiently represents for the purposes of a suit the personal estate of a bastard. M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 1 Fl. & K. 352.

A bastard dies intestate, without wife or issue, and leaving personal estate; the king is entitled, and the ordinary, of course, grants administration to the patentee of the Crown. Jones v. Goodchild, 3 P. W. 33; 2 Eq. Abr. 168.

Quere, if a church lease for three lives is granted to a bastard and his heirs, who dies without issue and intestate, what shall become of the lease? Ib.

One having a bastard leaves personal estate to her executor, in trust for the bastard, who dies intestate, and without wife or issue. The exedemurrer disallowed, for that the executor has no heir at law or next of kin. The court

A settlor settled 1,000% upon trust for his illegitimate daughter. The settlement contained a proviso that if at her death the daughter should not be under coverture (which event happened), the money should be held in trust for her, her executors, administrators and assigns. Then followed a clause, that if any interest in the fund would, but for that proviso, be held in trust for the Crown, or belong to the trustees of the settlement, then this money was to be held upon trusts in favour of the settlor and his widow : Held, that the gift over after the absolute gift was void for repugnancy, and that the Crown took. Wilcocks, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 163; 83 L. T. 719; 24 W. R. 290.

One seised in fee of land limits a term to trustees for 100 years, upon such trust as he, by deed or will, should appoint, and, for want of such appointment, to attend the inheritance, and afterwards, by a nuncupative will, gives all to J. S., and, being a bastard, dies without issue. This will not pass the trust of the term. Thruston v. Att.-Gen., 1 Vern. 340.

- Husband Surviving Bastard Wife. ] -The Crown has no claim as against the surviving husband of a bastard wife. Hawkins v. Hawkins, 4 L. J., Ch. 9.

Surplus Proceeds of Leaseholds Directed to be Sold. - Upon the construction of a will :- Held. that executors were entitled, as against the Crown claiming in default of next of kin of the testatrix, to the surplus proceeds of certain leaseto his royal highness the Prince of Wales, as Duke holds which were bequeathed to be sold for payment of the testatrix's debts and legacies. Russell v. Clowes, 2 Coll. 648; 10 Jur. 732.

> Further Investigation. ] - Semble, that the courts lean strongly towards applications for further investigation in cases in which property falls to the Crown, as that generally happens not from want of next of kin, but from failure of legal evidence of their title, Robson v. Att.-Gen. 10 Cl, & F, 471. And see S, C, sub nom, Monkton v. Att.-Gen., 2 Russ. & M. 147.

Executors not Beneficially Entitled. -- Where personal property is given to executors upon trust, they are excluded from claiming for their own benefit; and if the trust fails, and there are no next of kin, the executor is trustee for the Crown. Powell v. Merrett, 1 Sm. & G. 381; 22 L. J., Ch. 408; 17 Jur. 449.

A testatrix, by will, in 1841, gave two devisees. who were also her executors, all her real and personal estate, upon trust for sale, and she gave out of the produce of her real and personal cutor brings a bill against one who has part of estate 50', to each executor for his trouble, and personal estate in his hands. The defendant other pecuniary legacies. There was no gift of dommy, because the attorney-general and the the residue, and after payment of debts are administrators of the bastard are not parties; legacies a surplus remained. The testatrix left three persons, upon trust to pay various legacies; he also gave legacies of unequal amounts to each of his trustees, whom he appointed executors. The trustees were also empowered to appoint new trustees in the place of those unable to act. The testator afterwards gave an additional legacy to one of his executors. He was illegitimate, and died without having ever been married :-Held, that the undisposed-of residue did not belong to the executors, but lapsed to the Crown, and that it was unaffected by the Executors Act, 1830, it was unaneuted by the facetrois Act, 1830, 11 Geo. 4 & I Will. 4, c. 40. Read v. Stedman, 26 Beav. 495; 28 L. J., Ch. 481.

A. devised his residuary personal estate to his executors, upon trusts which failed under the Statute of Mortmain; he then devised real estates to his wife, charged with a mortgage, and also charged with the payment of his debts. The testator made his will, and died in 1858, leaving a widow, but no child or next of kin :-Held, that the executors did not take the personalty for their own benefit, but as trustees for the widow and the Crown in moieties; that the general debts were to be paid out of the personalty : but that the devisee of the real estate was not entitled to have the mortgage debt discharged out of the personalty. Davre v. Patrickson, 29 L. J., Ch. 846; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 863; 8 W. R. 597,

A testatrix devised real and personal estate to executors and three trustees, in trust to sell, immediately after her death, and invest the proceeds, and out of the income to pay certain annuities, and the residue in trust for such persons as by any codicil she should direct. She made no codicil, and died, leaving no heir or next of kin :- Held, that the Crown was entitled only to the residue of the personal estate, and that the proceeds of the real estate belonged to the trustees, the Crown having no equity to compol the conversion of the real into personal estate. Taylor v. Haygarth, 14 Sim. 8.

A man dying possessed of leasehold property, which he orders to be sold and the money paid to a charity, which is prevented from taking effect by the Statute of Mortmain, the executor having a legacy and there being no next of kin, is a trustee for the Crown. Middleton v. Spicer,

1 Bro. C. C. 201.

B. devised and bequeathed the residue of his freehold, leasehold and personal estates to five trustees (whom he appointed executors), four of them being ministers of the Presbyterian church in London, and the fifth being, as well as the testator, a member of that church. The answer admitted that it was the expressed wish and hope of the testator, as to his residuary property generally, that his residuary legatees would make use of the same for the benefit of a Presbyterian college, to which he had been in his lifetime a benefactor; and the trustees also admitted that they did not allege, or contend, or believe, that the testator intended them to enjoy the property beneficially. There were no next of kin :- Held, that the bequest of the leascholds was void, and that that portion of the residuary estate belonged to the Crown. Johnstone v. Hamilton, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 777; 12 L. T. 822; 13 W. R. 961.

apportioned the legacies and costs of the suit The Executors Act, 1830 (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, between the proceeds of the real and personal c. 40, s. 2), does not affect the rule laid down in Middleton v. Spicer (1 Bro. C. C. 201, supra). Ib.

Effect of Marriage Settlement.] - By a A testator, who died in 1855, by will gave all marriage settlement, a fund, the property of the property and the residue of his estate to the wife, was settled on her and her husband and their issue, and in default of issue on the wife's next of kin. The wife, who was illegitimate, died without issue, and her husband administered to her :--Held, that the Crown was not entitled to the fund, but that it belonged to the husband as administrator to his wife. kins v. Hawkins, 7 Sim. 173; 4 L. J., Ch. 9.

By a marriage settlement, a fund belonging: to the wife was assigned to trustees for her separate use for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage with power of appointment, and in default to her next of kin. On her death without issue and intestate, not having exercised the power of appointment, it appearing that she was illegitimate, the husband was held entitled to the fund in his marital right, as all the trusts of the settlement which intercepted the marital right had failed. Anon., I Giff.

Executors, when Beneficially Entitled.]—A. testatrix, by her will dated in 1878, after directing her just debts and funeral expenses to be paid by her executors, appointed her friend and medical advisor, R., and her friend, C., solicitor, her executors, and gave a number of legacies, including one of 1,000*t* to R., and another of 100% to C., and revoked all other wills made by her. Testatrix died in 1878, without any next of kin, possessed of large personal estate:-Held, that the executors, R. and C., were absolutely entitled as against the Crown to the personal estate for their own benefit. Knowles, In re. Rouse v. Chalk, 49 L. J., Ch. 625; 43 L. T. 152; 28 W. R. 975.

Irrecoverability from Successor to Crown of Payment to Predecessor.]—Money paid to one sovereign in this right cannot, if improperly paid, be recovered from that sovereign's successor. A nominee of the Crown taking out administration to the estate of an intestate is under the same obligation as any other administrator. The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 3, only dispenses with the necessity of his giving the usual bond to the ordinary, but imposes on him all the duties and liabilities of a private administrator. If he improperly pays to the Crown part of the intestate's effects, though such payment is made nuder authority of a warrant of the sign-manual, he makes himself personally liable to restore it to parties afterwards proving themselves legally entitled. Att.-Gen. v. Köhler, supra.

Upon his death that liability only continues. against his personal representatives, and not against his successor in office; but that successor may make himself personally liable for the acts of his predecessor, as by taking out letters of administration de bonis non to the same estate.

Where the nominee of the Crown has improperly paid money (thus coming to his hands) to the then sovereign, and the succeeding nominee of the Crown had taken out letters of administration de bonis non to the same estate, and, in a suit by the next of kin against him, had only contested the fact of the claimants being truly the next of kin, and denied, if they were so, liability to pay interest on the sumnext of kin, and the claimants having satisfactorily established their title to that character, the liability to pay interest followed, as of course, on the liability to pay the principal. Ib.

A., as administrator on the nomination of the Crown, in a suit by the alleged next of kin, died ; B., his snecessor in office, took out letters de honis non. A bill to revive the suit was filed, and an order made thereon, reciting the prayer of the bill thus : "That the suit and proceedings, which had so become abated. might be revived, and be in the same plight and condition against B. as they were at the time of the death of A., and that the plaintiffs might have the same relief against B. as they would have been entitled to and had against A, had he been living," and then added, "which is hereby ordered by the court as prayed " :- Held, that this order did not of itself create any liability in B., but merely put the suit in the same state as it had been in before A.'s death. Ib.

Payment of Interest by Crown. ]-The trustees and executors of a will administered the estate, and upon its being decided in a suit instituted for the purpose that there was an intestacy, and no heir or next of kin being discovered, the trustees assigned the leasehold property to the solicitor for the treasury, to be held for the afterwards, established their claim as next of kin of the testator, and the court declared them entitled :- Held, that the Crown was not chargeable with interest on the rents and profits received from the property while in its possession. Gosman, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 624; 17 Ch. D. 771: 45 L. T. 267; 29 W. R. 793—C. A.

A., on behalf of the Crown, took out administration to the estate of B., who, it was alleged. had died without leaving any next of kin, and as such administrator sold out a sum of stock belonging to B., and paid the proceeds into the Some years after a suit was instituted by the next of kin of B. against A., and a decree obtained in his favour :- Held, that interest was payable on the proceeds of the sale of the stock since the time of the sale. Turner

v. Maule, 18 L. J., Ch. 454; 14 Jur. 165.
Where administration of the effects of an intestate has been granted to the nominee of the Crown in the absence of any next of kin, the nominee of the Crown is liable to pay interest to the next of kin upon the balance in the hands of the nominee. Edgar v. Reynolds, 4 Drew. 269; 27 L. J., Ch. 562; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 399; 6 W. R. 404.

Where property, no next of kin appearing, had been taken possession of by the solicitor to the treasury, who had paid off all the debts of the intestate, and then paid over the balance to the Crown, and, after some years, the claim of the next of kin was established, and the solicitor of the treasury ordered to pay over the principal amount, with interest, to the next of kin. Partington v. Att.-Gen., 38 L. J., Ex. 205; L. R. 4 H. L. 100; 21 L. T. 370.

Costs. ]- The solicitor for the affairs of the treasury, as nominee of the Crown, having taken out letters of administration to the goods of an intestate, on the assumption that he had died without next to kin :- Held, not entitled claimed .—Held, that this was in substance an rightfully claiming as next of kin. Kane v. admission of liability to pay the principal to the Reynolds, 4 De G., M. & G. 565; 24 L. J., Ch. 321; 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 148; 3 W. R. 85-L.J.J.

The nominee of the Crown had successfully resisted, in a previous suit, an unfounded claim by a person wrongfully asserting a title as next of kin, and in the suit of the rightful claimant there had been the usual decree for an account, with all just allowances:-Held, without deciding that the costs of the previous suit might have been included under just allowances, that inasmuch as no objections had been taken to the chief clerk's certificate by the nomince of the Crown, he was precluded from raising the question as to his right to the costs of defending the previous suit, when the cause came on before the court for further consideration. Ib.

Where the Crown and an alien were adverse and misuccessful claimants to estates, they were ordered to pay their own costs. Rittson v. Stordy, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 771; 3 W. R. 627. B. died intestate, and his estate was administered to by the Crown. Parties claimed his property, but all failed to substantiate their right, with the exception of C., who afterwards defended a suit successfully against another When the decree was taken, the claimant. court held, that the Crown was liable to pay interest. The attorney-general, on behalf of the Crown, appealed upon the whole case to the House of Lords. The decree having directed payment of costs out of the fund which subject thereto was to be carried over to other suits relating to the property, C. moved for payment of his costs pending the appeal of the Crown. The attorney-general also moved that the fund might not be parted with till after the appeal had been heard:—Held, that, as the question whether the Crown was entitled to interest on balances or not had been decided by the court for the first time, upon which point the House of Lords might take a different view, and as also the matter decided involved very doubtful and difficult questions of law and fact, the Court would retain the fund until the appeal was heard; but that C.'s costs in defending the suit against another claimant must be paid out of the fund at once, as had he not appeared as defendant the attorney-general must have done so. Bauer v. Mitford, 3 L. T. 575; 9 W. R. 185.

Held, assuming the liability to pay the debts to have been transferred to the East India Company by the annexation, that such liability was transferred by the Government of India Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c, 106), ss, 65-68, from the East India Company to the secretary of state in council for India; that the remedy, if any, was by action against him; and that the petition of right, therefore, could not be sustained. Frith v. Rep., 41 L. J., Ex. 171; L. R. 7 Ex. 365; 26 L. T. 774; 21 W. R. 19.

Sum due from Chinese Merchants-Crown not agreed to pay to the British government 3,000,000 dollars on account of debts due to British subjects from certain Chinese merchants, who had become insolvent, being largely indebted to British subjects. The money laving been re-British subjects. The money having been re-ceived by the British government:—Held, that a petition of right would not lie by one of the British subjects to obtain payment of a sum of money alleged to be due to him from one of the Chinese merchants, on the grounds that there was nothing in the terms of the treaty to make the Crown agent a trustee in respect of any specific sum for the suppliant or any other person; and that, in all that relates to the making and performing of a treaty with another sovereign. the Crown cannot be either a trustee or an agent for any subject. Compensation for Office. - Demurrer allowed to a petition of right presented by a medical officer in the army, claiming compensation for loss sustained by him by reason of his being deprived of an appointment alleged by him to be permanent, and compulsorily retired upon half pay. Tufnell, Ju rv., 45 L. J., Ch. 731; 3 Ch. D. 164; 34 L. T. 838; 24 W. R. 915.

Compensation for Loss. -A British subject claimed to be entitled to compensation for the losses suffered by him through confiscation of his property in the first French revolution. The governments of England and France entered into conventions respecting compensation to be afforded to British subjects. The English government received all the money agreed upon between the two governments as the amount of compensation, and undertook to satisfy all the claimants, An act of parliament was passed, declaring how claims were to be preferred and liquidated. He presented his claim to the commissioners appointed under the act and adopted the modes of proceeding provided by it; his claim was rejected. After payment of the claims which were estab-lished to the satisfaction of the commissioners, a surplus remained, which, in accordance with the provisions of the act, was paid over to the Lords of the Treasury. He proceeded to make his claim afresh under a petition of right:—Held, that he had no remedy except under the provisions of the act. De Bode v. Reg., 3 H. L. Cas. 449. S. C., in Q. B., 8 Q. An officer of the navy employed in the sup pression of the slave trade destroyed, in the supposed performance of his duty, a vessel not engaged in the slave trade. The owners of the ship sought redress from the Crown by petition of right: Held, that no complaint was shewn in respect of which a petition of right could be maintained, on the grounds, first, that the seizure of the ship was not made in obedience to a command of her majesty, but in the supposed performance of a duty imposed upon the officer by act a Trustee.]-By a treaty between the Queen of of parliament; secondly, that if the officer was England and the Emperor of China, the Emperor assumed to be an agent of the Queen to seize vessels engaged in the slave trade, he acted beyond his authority, and could not make his principal liable in respect of such seizure; and, thirdly, that a petition of right cannot be maintained to recover unliquidated damages for a trespass. Not limited to Chattels or Land. ]-A petition of right is not limited to specific chattels or land, but will lie for breach of contract, or to recover money claimed either by way of debt or by way of damages on breach of contract. Thomas v. Reg., 44 L. J., Q. B. 9; L. R. 10 Q. B. 31; 31 L. T. 439; 23 W. R. 176. A petition of right alleged, in a first count, a mutual agreement between the suppliant and the secretary of state for war, that in consideration of the suppliant's referring an invention, devised by him for rifled artillery, with plans and models, to the ordnance select committee, in the event of the invention being approved and adopted, a reward should be given to the suppliant, the amount to be determined by the master-general and the board of ordnance. Although all conditions precedent were fulfilled, the amount of the reward had not been determined, nor any part paid to the suppliant. A second count alleged that, in consideration of the suppliant's shewing and delivering up his plans of the invention to her majesty's government, the government promised to reimburse the expenses incurred by him. Although all conditions precedent were fulfilled. the government had not reimbursed to the suppliant any part of the premises:-Held, that, assuming the authority of the secretary of state for war and the government to make such contracts, the two counts were good in law, Ib.

Repayment of Income Tax. ]-A land company paid debenture interest in excess of the assess ments under schedule A., deducted income tax from the interest, and returned the whole amount deducted for assessment under schedule D.:-Held, that a petition of right did not lie to obtain repayment of the sum paid under schedule D. Holborn Viaduct Land Co. v. Reg., 52 J. P. 341.

Land in Colonies.]—Where land in a colony is vested in the Queen by a colonial act for the public purposes of the colony, the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 34, does not give jurisdiction to the Court of Chancery to entertain proceedings against the Crown as a trustee of such land present within the jurisdiction of the court. Holmes, In re. 2 J. & H. 527; 31 L. J., Ch. 58; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 76;

5 L. T. 548; 10 W. R. 39.

By an act of the legislature of Canada, land taken for a canal was vested in the Queen. By a second act the land so taken was vested in the officers of the ordnauce; and it was cuacted that so much of the land taken as had not been used for the canal should be restored to the owners, By a third act the lands were revested in the Queen for the purposes of the colony, and subject to future colonial legislation. To a petition of right by suppliants claiming the restoration of lands taken for the canal from their predecessors in title, but not used, a demurrer was allowed on the ground that the courts of this country had no jurisdiction. Ib.

The fiction that the Crown is at all times present in all parts of its dominions does not give jurisdiction to the courts in this country, acting in personam, to entertain a petition of right as to lands situate in a colony and vested in the Crown for the purposes of the colony by an act of the provincial legislature. Ib.

But generally in the Australian colonies local acts have been passed giving the subject a similar mode of redress against the Crown and local government, by petition of right, as is conferred Boverlinen, by Jeruson of Fight, as is contered by Sir William Bovill's Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 34). Robertson v. Dunaresq, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 66; 3 N. R. 58; 10 L. T. 110; 13 W. R. 280.

An officer in military service in a colony sold his commission, and settled there on the promise of a grant of "an allotment of land" at W. This promise was made verbally by the governor, and afterwards recognised by him and his successors in certain official letters and minutes, but was never performed. Subsequently the settlor consented to an allotment of land at H. being substituted for that at W. ### 2 PROCEDURE.

a. At Common Law.

When a petition of right is referred to the Lord Chancellor, with the indorsement, "let right be done," if such right, supposing it to exist, is subject to certain rules of proceeding for its ascertainment and enforcement, those rules must be followed, and the rights of the parties will be bound by all equities to which they are properly subject. Moncton v. Att.-Gen., 2 Mac. & G.

The first step in proceedings upon a petition of right on which the royal indorsement has been made, is to ascertain the facts on which the petitioner's claim is founded; and a commission for that purpose is of course, unless the attorneygeneral is willing to admit the facts as alleged and to take issue upon them by demurrer. # I. LAW OFFICERS.

1. GENERALLY.

Precedence.]—After the 14th Dec., 1814, the thermer and solicitor-general took precedence before all the Queen's serjeants; whereas before they were accustomed to have place and audience in the courts next after the von most ancient of the Queen's serjeants, but before the others. 6 Taunt. 242; 2 Ves. & B. 422.

The attorney-general in the Queen's business, has pre-audience in the Exchequer over the postman and tubman. Reg. v. Exerter (Bishap), 7 M. & W. 189: 9 D. P. C. 276; 10 L. J., Ex. 92.;

5 Jur. 102.

Although not a serjeant, he had a right of audience in the Common Pleas, ir. a cause in which the Crown was interested, before the exclusive privileges of the serjeants were abolished by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 54. Paddack v. Fuerster, 8 D. P. C. 834; 1 Scott (N.R.) 391; 1 Man. & G. 522

The attorney-general, by an order of the House of Lords, has pre-eminence over the lord advocate, and the solicitor-general over the Scotch solicitor-general, 2 Cl. & F. 482.

The Crown has no precedence in a criminal court. The Court of Exchequer is the only court in which the Crown has right of precedence in revenue cases. Reg. v. Landon, 1 F. & F. 381.

Right of Reply.]—Where a question affecting the Crown is discussed on motion, the attorney-general, having shewn cause against the rule, has no right to reply. Reg. v. Treasury Commissioners, 16 Q, B. 357; 20 L. J., Q, B. 305; 15 Jun 767.

Where the Crown, by any of its officers, is a party respondent in an appeal, it is not the usage of the Honse of Lords to allow the counsel for the Crown a general reply after the reply of the appellant. Lord Advacate v. Douglas (Lord), 9 CI, & F. 132.

Representation of Crown by.]—The attorneygeneral is the only legal representative of the Crown in the courts. Rex v. Austen, 8 Price, 142.

But during the vacancy of the office the whole business and authority of the attorney-general devolve upon the solicitor-general. Rew v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2554, 2570.

The attorney-general is an officer of the Crown, and in that sense only the officer of the public. Att.-Gen. v. Brown, 1 Swanst. 288; 1 Wils, 323.

— Solicitor-General.]—Where the king may have an interest to apply the excess of receipts in the nature of tolls (held not to be a charitable use), by sign-manual, the subject-matter of an information, that distinct right should be represented by the solicitor-general, who may be present at the hearing without being made a party in the cause. Att.-Gen. v. Galway Corpuration, I will. 95.

Attoracy-General for Duchy of Lancaster.]—It is not competent to the attoracy-general of the Duchy of Lancaster to exhibit an information in the High Court of Justice, and the court will order an information exhibited by him to be taken off the file on the application of the defendant even after answer put in by him. Att.-Gen. Chuchy of Lancaster) V. Dievonshire (Duke), 5 f. J. J., G. B. 271; 14 Q. B. 195; 33 W. B. 867.

The attorney-general, as such, is always supposed to be in court, and if he will not appear, it must be considered as a nill dieit. The court therefore refused to order the attorney-general to appear to a bill. Barelay v. Russell, blek. 729.

Attorney-General for Duchy of Cornwall.]-An information being laid in Middlesex by the attorney-general for the duchy of Cornwall, for the recovery of dues claimed in respect of goods imported into a port alleged to be parcel of the duchy, the defendant applied to change the venue to Devonshire, upon an ordinary affidavit that the cause of action arose and the witnesses resided there :- Held, first, that although the attorney-general may not have a right in all cases to lay and retain the venue where he pleases, he has such a right in the case of such an information, it being a suit in the nature of a transitory action. Att.-Gen. (Prince of Wales) v. Crossman, 4 H. & C. 568; 35 L. J., Ex. 215; L. R. 1 Ex. 381; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 712; 14 L. T. 856; 14 W. R. 996.

Held, secondly, that in the case of such an information relating to matters affecting the duchy of Cornwall, the attorney-general for the Prince of Wales would have the same right as the attorney-general for the Crown. Ib.

But as documents relating to the ducity of Cornwall would have to be produced from their place of deposit in Middlesex, there was no such preponderance upon the balance of convenience in favour of a trial in Devonshire as to call on the court to interfere, or to render it necessary to decide the question of prerogative, Lb:

Peerage Cases. ]—The attorney-general attends in peerage cases, as assistant to the lords' comnitioes for privileges, and it is said that he is entitled to sit (on a chair) inside the box. Saya and Sole (Barony), 1 H. L. Cus. 511, n.

Control of Law Officers by Courts.]—The courts exercise over the attorney-general the same anthority which they exercise over every other surior; and the attorney-general would not, any more than any other suitor, be permitted to prosecute any proceeding which was merely exations or had no legal object. Bley. V. Prosser, 11 Beav. 306; 18 L. J., Ch. 35; 13 Jur. 71.

Proceedings on behalf of the Public.]-The attorney-general may properly take proceedings on behalf of the public, when acts tending to the injury of the public are being done without lawful authority, even though no evidence be produced of actual injury having been inflicted. After the expiration of the parliamentary powers of a bridge company the company continued to carry on their operations, on and off their own lands, intending to apply for a new act to revive and extend the powers conferred by their original act. An action having been commenced by the attorney-general, on the information of two of the shareholders, for the purpose of restraining the company from proceeding with their works without due anthority, and from using the moneys of the company for such works, or for other unauthorised purposes, the company obtained their new act, and the plaintiffs thereupon obtained leave to discontinue so much of their claim as related to matters other than the claim to have the company restrained, before the passing of the new act, from executing works off their own lands. The action being brought to a hearing:—Held, that the action was justifiably costs of the action, other than those relating to Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury (Kingsland) Bridge Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 746; 21 Ch. D. 752; 46 L. T.

687; 30 W. R. 916.

Where there has been an access of the statutory powers granted to a public company, but no injury has been occasioned to any individual, and there is none which is immiuent, or of irreparable consequence, the attorney-general alone can obtain an injunction to restrain the exorbitancy. Ware v. Regent's Canal Co., 3 De G. & J. 212; 28 L. J., Ch. 158; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 25; 7 W. R. 67.

Delay or laches may not be imputed to the attorney-general suing on the behalf of the public where it might be against an individual in a similar case. Att. Gen. v. Brudford Cunal Co., right in a case involving general interest, as a

Action against Corporation by Freemen-Information unnecessary. ]-In an action by some (on behalf of all) of the freemen of a borough to establish the right of all the individual freemen to share for their private benefit the net proceeds of certain properties vested in the corporation :- Held, on demurrer, that the effect of the saving of rights in s. 2 of the Municipal Corporations Act of 1835 was to legalise the beneficial interests therein mentioned, without reference to the legality of their origin, and, in particular, to obviate any objection which might otherwise arise in respect of the tendency to-wards a perpetuity of any such beneficial interest. Prostney v. Colchester Corporation, 51 L. J., Ch. 805; 21 Ch. D. 111.

An action to establish such rights as aforesaid may be brought by parties claiming to be en-titled, without an information by the attorney-general. Ib.

Information by, to restrain Public Body.]— Upon an information filed by the attorney-general to restrain a public body from transgressing powers conferred by an act of parliament, it is not necessary to prove that injury to the public will result from the acts complained of ; and in this respect there is no difference between an ex-officio information and an information at the relation of a private individual. Att.-Gen. v. Chekermouth Loval Board, 44 L. J., Ch. 118; L. R. 18 Eq. 172; 30 L. T. 590; 22 W. R. 619.

No Answer to Information, that more Persons Benefited than Harmed by Act complained of. ]-It is no answer to an information by the attorneygeneral, to say that a larger section of the public is benefited than injured by the act complained of. Att.-Gen. v. Ely, Huddenham and Sutton Ry., 38 L. J., Ch. 258; L. R. 4 Ch. 184; 20 L. T. 1; 17 W. R. 356.

Right to Sue Railway Company for Breach of its Powers. |-The right of the attorney-general to sue a railway company for breach of its powers is not taken away by the provisions of the Railway Regulation Act, 1844, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85. Att.-Gen., v. G. N. Ry., 29 L. J., Ch. 794; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1006; 2 L. T. 653; 8 W. R. 556.

Right to Trial at Bar-Change of Venue. ]-By the Crown Suits Act, 1865, 8, 46, where in any cause in which the attorney-general is centified an behalf of the Crown to demand as (Q. B. 205; 7 Jur. (X.S.) 674.

commenced, and that the company must pay the of right a trial at bar he states to the court that he waives that right, " the court on the applicathe part of it which had been discontinued, tion of the attorney-general shall change the venne to any county he may select":—Held, that an action under 39 & 40 Vict, c. 80, s. 10, against the secretary of the board of trade, to recover damages for the detention of a ship for survey without reasonable and probable cause, is within the above section, that the attorneygeneral is entitled to demand as of right a trial at bar in such an action, and that the court is bound on his waiving that right to change the venue to any county wherein he elects to have the action tried. Dixon v. Furrer, 56 L. J., Q. B. 53; 18 Q. B. D. 43; 55 L. T. 578; 35 W. R. 95 : 6 Asp. M. C. 52-C. A.

revenue case, to be let in to appeal than a subject has. Ling v. Ingham, 3 Moore, P. C. 26.

Fiat for Bringing Error.] — The attorney-general having refused his fiat for a writ of error to a person convicted of a misdemeanour :- Held, that in a proper case the flat was the ex debito justitize; but that the attorney-general was to determine, on his own responsibility, whether or not each case was proper, and that the court could not review his decision. Memon, Expurte, 4 El. & Bl. 869; 24 L. J., Q. B. 246; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 591. S. P. and S. C., 16 C. B. 97.

Where, in a colony, a person has been convieted of a criminal offence, and is undergoing his sentence, no writ of error will be granted to bring up the record of conviction unless the attorney-general has given his flat for the writ. Reg. v. Levs. El. Bl. & El. 828; 27 L. J., Q. B. 403; 5 Jur. (N.s.) 338.

Certificate of the attorney-general not necessary to entitle the party seeking writ of error to the lords in a case of misdemeanour, where, although the king's name is used, the Crown is not directly concerned. Raw v. Rowe, 2 Moll. 27.

Fiat for Information.]—It is irregular to obtain the fiat of the attorney-general to an information, original or amended, after it has been filed. Att.-Gen. v. Ironmongers' Co., 4 L. J.

Charity Cases. ] - Petitions for filling up vacancies in charity trustees require the fiat of vacancies in chartry trassecs returns the har on the served upon him. Warvick Chartites, In re, 1 Ph. 539, Petition under the Chartites Procedure Act, 1812, 52 Geo. 3, c. 101, must have the signature of the attorney-general, or of the solicitorgeneral, in case only of there being no attorneygeneral at the time. Such signature not to be affixed without the same deliberation as in the case of an information regularly filed. Skinner, Ex parte, 2 Mer. 453; 1 Wils. 14.

Court will not act under an award in a charity cause without consent of attorney-general, or inquiring whether it is for the benefit of charity. Att.-Gen. v. Hewitt, 9 Ves. 232.

CHARITY.

Entry of Nolle Prosequi.]—Where a defendant has been found guilty upon several counts of an information, the attorney-general may enter a nolle prosequi on one of the counts, after a rule nisi for a new trial. Reg. v. Leatham, 30 L. J.,

The attorney-general has power to enter a nolle prosequi on an indictment without calling upon the prosecutor to shew cause why that should not be done; and where he has done so, the court will not interfere. Reg. v. Allen, 1 B, & S, 850; 31 L. J., M. C. 129; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 230; 5 L. T. 636; 9 Cox, C. C. 120.

2. WHEN ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO BE MADE PARTY, AND WHEN NOT.

Setting Aside Lease.]-Bill to avoid a lease. on ground that the lessor was a lunatic; the attorney-general must be a party. Leigh v. Wood, Rep. t. Finch, 135.

Attorney-general is not a necessary party to bill, to set aside ecclesiastical leases. Att.-Gen.

v. Moses, 2 Madd, 294.

Bastard's Estate,]-The attorney-general, as a party in the cause, held not sufficiently to represent the estate of an intestate bastard, so as to dispense with a duly constituted legal personal representative. Bell v. Alexander, 6 Hare, 543.

Semble, that the attorney-general, without taking out administration, sufficiently represents, for the purposes of a suit, the personal estate of a bastard. M'Kiernan v. Kernan, Fl. & K. 352;

4 Ir. Eq. R. 269.

Where a bastard interested in the subject of the suit dies intestate, it is not sufficient that the attorney-general is made a party to the suit in respect of his interest, but administration must be taken out. Lewis v. Lewis, 16 Jur. 324.

One having a bastard, leaves a personal estate to her executors in trust for the bastard, who dies intestate, and without wife or issue. The executor brings a bill against one who has part of this personal estate in his hands. The defendant demnrs, because the attorney-general and the administrator of the bastard are not parties; demureer disallowed, for that the executor has the legal title, and consequently may sne for the estate. Jones v. Goodchild, 3 P. W. 33; 2 Eq. Abr. 168. And see BASTARD.

Nuisance.]-A bill may be filed to restrain a public nuisance, without making the attorneygeneral a party, if the plaintiff sustains special damage from the nuisance. Soltau v. De Held, 2 Sim, (N.S.) 133; 21 L. J., Ch. 153; 16 Jnr. 326.

An injunction was granted to restrain the ringing of six large-sized bells in the belfry of a Roman Catholic Chapel on Sundays only, for former cannot compet on Santany only, to five periods of five minutes each, the plaintiff having previously recovered 40s, damages in action at law for much more frequent ringing.

Where Few of Many Complainants Sue-Where All Sue. ]—A few of a large number of persons may institute a suit on behalf of themselves and the rest, for relief against acts injurious to their common right, although the majority approve of those acts, and disapprove of the institution of the suit; and the attorney-general need not be a party to it; but where the whole body concur in seeking relief from an abuse, the suit must be instituted by the attorney-general. Bromley v. Smith, 1 Sim. 8; 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 53.

Action by Local Authority. -A local authority is not empowered by s. 107 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to bring an action in their own name for an injunction to restrain a public nuisance by which they have not suffered any special damage. Wallasey Local Board v. Gracey (56 L. J., Ch. 739; 36 Ch. D. 593) approved. Semble, if the sanction of the attorney-general be obtained, such an action may be brought in the name of the attorneygeneral at the instance of the local authority as relators. Tottenham Urban Conneil v. Williamson, 65 L. J., Q. B. 591; [1896] 2 Q. B. 353; 75 L. T. 258; 44 W. R. 676; 60 J. P. 225—C. A.

Embankments of Thames. The attorney-general (after the passing of the Court of Chancery Act, 1841, 5 Vict. c. 5) filed an information in chancery against the mayor and commonalty of London, alleging that the Crown was seised of the bed and soil of the river Thames, that the defendants were conservators thereof, and, in breach of their duty as such conservators, had granted to divers persons (also made defendants) licences to embank parts of the river, and had received fines for such licences, and that such embankments were nuisances; and the information prayed that the rights of the parties might be ascertained, that the licences might be declared void, and that injunctions might issue to prevent the completion of the embankments. The defendants denied that the embankments were misances, and demurred to the rest of the bill for want of equity :--Held, that upon these pleadings the information was maintainable. London Corporation v. Att.-Gen., 1 H. L. Cas. 440. Affirming 8 Beav. 270; 14 L. J. (N.S.) Ch. 305; 9 Jur. 570.

Abandonment of Branch Line of Railway-Restraining Opening of Direct Line. |-- Where a railway company were authorised to make a direct line of railway, with a branch railway, and were about to complete and open the direct line, but had abandoned the branch line, the attorney-general has no right to file an information to restrain the opening of the direct line as a means of compelling a completion of the branch line, alleging that the abandonment of the branch line was an injury to the public. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham and Oxford Junction Ry., 3 Mac. & G. 453; 16 Jur. 113.

Action for Specific Performance-Inhabitants of Particular Places.]-The attorney-general is not a necessary party to a suit for specific performance, merely on the ground that certain parties to the agreement, of which specific performance is sought, entered into an agreement on behalf of themselves and all other the inhabitants of certain places mentioned. Wilson v. Furness Ry., L. R. 9 Eq. 28; 21 L. T. 553; 18. W. R. 89.

Information against Corporation. ]-A suit against a corporation to compel the performance of a public trust should be by information by the attorney-general. Evan v. Avon Corporation, 29 Beav. 144.

The attorney-general has power to restrain, or afterwards impeach, the alienation of corporate property made pending the granting of a charter, Att. Gen. v. Avon Portreeve, 2 N. R. 564; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1117; 11 W. R. 1050—L.JJ. against an individual officer of it, making a case the Crown rate concerned, the atomorp-general in which the latter would be personally liable, is ought to be before the court. Horenden v. tot demurrable. Att.-clen. v. Limerick Corr. Almeetey (Lordy, 2 Sch. & Lef. 617. poration, Beat, 563.

Boundaries in Colonies. ]-In a suit between the proprietors of provinces granted by the Crown to settle boundaries, the attorney-general should be a party. Pen v. Baltimore (Lord), Ridgw. 332.

Foreign Government Stock.]-Court refused to order dividends received before bill filed, of stock purchased by the old government of Switzerland, to be paid into court by the trustees on application of the present government, without having the attorney-general made a party. Dolder v. Bank of England, 10 Ves. 352.

Question of Excess of Parliamentary Powers eterminable on Information by Attorney-Determinable on Information by Attorney-General alone,]—Two neighbouring gas companies, A. and B., were by their respective acts empowered to make and supply gas within certain slefined limits. B. proceeded to supply gas to buildings beyond its own parliamentary limits and within those of A., who thereupon filed a bill to restrain B. from so doing. The bill alleged that by the unauthorised acts of B., A. would be deprived of the profits arising from the sale of gas to the buildings illegally supplied or about to be supplied by B., and that great loss would be sustained by A. if such illegal acts were allowed to continue. A demarrer by B. for want of equity was allowed, on the ground that the bill had not alleged such a private injury as a court of equity could take notice of, and that the question of excess of parliamentary powers could only be determined upon an information by the attorney-general. Pudsey Coul Gas Co. v. Bradford Corporation, 42 L. J., Ch. 293; L. R. 15 Eq.

In other Matters.]—Petitions for receivers on tenants' and receivers' recognizances should be entitled in the name of the Queen, and the attorney-general should be the petitioner. Reg. v. Cruise, 2 Ir. Ch. R. 65.

In incumbrancers' suits, the attorney-general, made a party in respect of a recognizance, sufficiently represents the parties interested in it for all purposes, and it should be reported an incumbrance, though the condition be not broken, Delany v. Firman, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 304.

In suit by equitable mortgagee to obtain benefit of mortgage on lands of mortgagor (who was a simple contract debtor of Crown), which had been seized by Crown and sold, the to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale before the Crown should be satisfied; the purchaser under Crown-assignee of term therein, the debtor and the attorney-general were made parties. Casherd v. Ward, 6 Price, 411.

To a bill by the assignce of a bankrupt against the representatives of a deceased assignee for an account of unclaimed dividends in their hands, neither the attorney-general nor the creditors to whom the dividends belonged, are necessary parties. Green v. Weston, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 414; 3 Myl. & C. 385; 7 L. J., Ch. 67; 1 Jur. 955.

3. Relators.

General Rules.]—Every information is properly the suit of the attorney-general, and he onght not to be heard as counsel for any other party but himself, as the institutor of the suit, though it has been the practice to allow the relators to appear by counsel of their own, and though the attorney-general observed that he had been heard in opposition to the information in the House of Lords in the case of Lady Hewley's charity. Att.-Gen. v. Ironmongers' Co., 1 Cr. & Ph. 208; 10 L. J., Ch. 201; 5 Jur. 356. Affirming 2 Beav. 318.

As to the position of the attorney-general in informations at the instance of a relator, and the practice in such cases. Ib.

In an information, the attorney-general, and not the relator, is the party prosecuting the cause, and therefore the court will not allow counsel for the relator to be heard in any other character than as counsel for the attorney-general, Ib,

Form and Title. ]-In an action by the attorney-general at the relation of a plaintiff, the title information should no longer be used. Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury Bridge Co., 42 L. T.

The attorney-general may proceed without a relator. Bedford Charity, In re, 2 Swan, 520; 19 R. R. 107.

The attorney general possesses the entire dominion over every information instituted in his name, whether it be filed ex officio or at the instance of a relator. Att.-Gen. v. Haberinstance of a relator. Att.-Gen. v. Huber-dushers' Co., 15 Beav. 397; 16 Jur., 717.

Giving Leave to File Information.]—Where it was desired to restrain a sale, to take place at a distant locality from London, so that the necessary affidavits could not be sworn at such locality in time, if the relator's authority to file an information was first required the court dispensed with such authority. Att.-Gen. v. Murray, 11 L. T. 332; 13 W. R. 65.

When the authority of a relator had been substantially given to the filing of an information in his name, but his absence abroad prevented the filing of his anthority in strict compliance with the Chancery Judicature Act:

—Held, that such information was properly filed, and a motion to take off the file was refused with costs. Att.-Gen. v. Willshire, 45 L. J., Ch. 53.

Information at relation of lunatic not proper, he must be party. Att. Gen. v. Tiler, Dick. 378

In an information at the relation of a lunatic, proper relator was directed to be appointed, who might be responsible for the costs of the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Tyler, 2 Eden, 230.

Change of.]-Where relators refused to proceed further in an information, new relators were substituted, who offered an indemnity for all past and future costs. Att.-Gen. v. Cushel Corporation, 1 San. & Sc. 333.

An application by a number of relators named from the Crown, each reserving a rent, but of in an information, to strike out the names of several of themselves, will not be granted, even though the defendants will not be prejudiced, nuless it appears either that without the alteration justice will not be done, or that the sit cannot be so conveniently prosecuted if the alteration be not made. Att.-Gen. v. Cooper, 3 Myl. & C. 258; 1 Jur. 790.

On death of relator new one named. Att.

Gen, v. Powell, Dick, 355.

Where sole relator dies, application for new relator must be made by the attorney-general. Att.-Gen. v. Plumtree, 5 Madd. 452.

Where the original relators had after decree died, the court held that the application for the appointment of a new relator could not be made by the attorney-general, but that it must be made by the new relator with the consent of the attorney-general. Att.-Gen. v. Horreey, 1 Jur. (X.S.) 1062; 3 Eq. Bep. 1992; 3 W. R. 636.

A relator and plaintiff cannot be heard in person. Att.-Gen. v. Barker, 4 Myl. & C. 262.

Where, in an information and bill, the same individual who is named as the relator is alone the plaintiff sing in his own right, the court will not dismiss the information and bill upon the ground that the relator having been required by the attorney-general to give security for costs, has failed to do so. Alt.-Gen. v. Knight, 3 Myl. & C. 154.

Form of decree in an information without a relator where a defendant is liable to pay the costs of a co-defendant. Att.-Gen. v. Chester Corporation, 14 Beav. 338.

The attorney-general and relator cannot be allowed to take opposite views on an information. Att.-Gen. v. Sheeboene Grummar School Governors, 18 Beav. 256; 24 L. J., Ch. 74; 18 Jur. 636.

The attorney-general may appear as counsel for defendants, to an information filed by relators in his name. Shore v. Wilson, 9 Cl. & F. 355.

A suit instituted for the purpose of regulating and apportioning a rate levied on the inhabitants of a parish, under an act of parliament, ought to be by information and bill, and not by bill only; therefore, a person who had filed a bill for this purpose, on behalf of himself and all other the rated inhabitants of the parish, upon affidavits being made of his insolvency, was onlered to give security for costs. Tredwell v. Byrch, I X, & Coll. 476.

4. PROCEDURE PRACTICE AND PLEADING.

Service of Process.]—Petition in the matter of a person found an idiot, must be served on the attorney-general. Watson, Ex parte, Jac. 161.

Service of petition by bankrupt who had absconded, on the attorney-general at his house, irregular; the proper service on the attorney-general is through the Crown solicitor. Mullay, Ex parte, 3 Moll. 71.

Service upon the attorney-general (who has not been made a party to the suit) of a decree directing inquiries, does not under 15 & 16 Viet, c. 86, s. 42, so far bind the Crown as to preclude the institution, on behalf of the Crown, of further inquiries; and it is not the practice that the Crown should be restricted under such circumstances either to apply for a re-hearing, or to proceed by summons at chambers to add to the decree. Johnston v. Hamilton, 12 L. T. 822.

Suing Jointly, or Jointly and Severally.]—By the practice of the Court of Exchequer, the attorney-general land up the privilege of suing any one or more persons, jointly, or jointly and severally, indebted to the Crown, at his discretion, Att.-Genc. v. Mughes 11 L. J., Ch. 329.

The same rule as to parties must be applied in a creditors' suit, between the Crown and persons jointly, and jointly and severally, indebted to the Crown, as between subject and subject. Ih.

Changing Venue.]—In an information by the attorney-general of the Prince of Wales to recover dues alleged to be payable to thin in right of his duchy of Corowall, the court refused to change the venue from Middlesex to Devonshire, on the ground of inconvenience and exposes in brigging the defendant's witnesses from Torquay to London, it appearing that it would be more convenient for the attorney-general to try in Middlesex. Att.-Gen. (Prince of Wales) V. Crossman, 4 H. & C. 568; 35 L. J. Ex. 215; L. R. 1 Ex. 381; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 712; 14 L. T. 866; 14 W. R. 1996.

It is incumbent on the officers of the Crown to make out clearly the prerogative in any case where they claim to be on a different footing from the subject, as regards procedure in any litigation. Ib.

Effect of Statute of Limitations.]—A rector and overseers of a parish conveyed to purchasors for value (subject to a perpetual rent-charge) land belonging to the parish, and the hecome from which was applied to the relief of the poor. Above sixty years clapsed, and then the attorney-general filed an information to have the deed of conveyance cancelled :—Hebl; that the attorney-general in such a suit was merely acting for the interests of the parts-hioners; that they would mader the Limitation Act, 1883, 3 & 4 Will, 4, c. 27, have been barred as against a purchase for value; and that the, saing in their interest as against such a purchaser, was likewise barred. Augusten (Linique) (Linique

Appearance of Attorney-General for Defendant,—The attorney-general may appear, as comisel for defendants, to an information filed by relators in his name. Shore v. Wilson, 9 (d. & F. 355.)

Pleading.]—Where a question of great difficulty and delicacy arises between a subject plaintiff and the Grown defendant, the court will not allow it to be decided upon denurrer, but an answer must be filed, and the benefit of the demutrer will be reserved to the defendant. Luntour v. Alt.-Gen., 11 Jur. (N.S.) 7; 11 L. T. 613; 13 W. R. 305.

Where, upon such an order, no costs are given, the order itself ought expressly to state that

The repealed 4 & 5 Anne, c. 16, s. 4, did not extend to the case of the Crown, and therefore the court has no authority to give a defendant leave to plead several matters in an information of intrusion filed by the attorney-general. Att. Gen. v. Donaldson, 7 M. & W. 422; 9 D. P. C. 319; 5 Jun. Supplementary.

Nor to actions at the suit of the king. Rea v. Caldwell, Forcest, 57.

At common law the Crown is not precluded and the right of the Crown to plead double is unaffected by any of the statutes or rules of transferred by any of the statutes of reasts of court relating to pleading and procedure. Tbbin v. Rey., 14 C. B. (x.s.) 505; 32 L. J., C. P. 216; 9 Jur. (x.s.) 1130; 8 L. T. 392; 11 W. R. 701. S. P., Rey. v. Diplack, 19 L. T. 380.

Reply.]-Right of Crown to general reply in all cases in the Court of Exchequer. Buckingham (Duke) v. Iuland Recenue Commissioners, 2 L. M. & P. 311.

Where the Crown is defendant in error, it is not incidental to the office of attorney-general that he should have the right to the last reply; but the court, in the exercise of its discretion, allowed it in an appeal from the revenue side of the Exchequer. Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 33 L. J., Ex. 209; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 393; 10 L. T. 835.

J. COSTS. 1. GENERALLY.

General Principles.]—There is no such general principle in equity that the Crown cannot receive costs. Att.-Gen. v. Ashburnham, I Sim.

Before the Crown Suits Act, 1855, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 90, the House of Lords refused to award costs against the Crown, on the ground of the inflexible rule which existed to that effect. Lord Advocate v. Hamilton, 1 Macq. H. L. 46.

The Crown Suits Act, 1855, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 90, s. 2, which gives costs against the Crown, is confined to such informations as are mentioned in the 1st section, and to which the attorneygeneral must be a party. Reg. v. Beudle, infra.
The Exchequer Court (Scotland) Act, 1856, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 56, s. 24, allows costs to be given for or against the Crown, and applies as well to all causes presently depending as to those which shall come to depend. Alexander v. Officers of State for Scotland, L. R. 3 H. L.

Magistrates' Cases.]-On appeal from a decision of justices on an information by an excise officer, the quarter sessions have no power to order costs to a successful defendant. Rey. v. Beadle, 7 El. & Bl. 492; 26 L. J., M. C. 111; 3 order costs to a successful defendant, Jur. (N.S.) 863; 5 W. R. 498.

The Crown, and not the officer, is the party to such proceedings, and, not being named, is not bound by the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, which empowers quarter sessions to give costs against the unsuccessful party in any appeal. Ib.

But upon an appeal against a conviction upon the information of an officer of excise, prosecuting for the Crown by order of the commissioners of inland revenue, for an offence under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 17, the court confirming the conviction, may order costs, to be paid to the excise office runder 20 & 21 Vict. c. 48. Manre v. Smith, 1 E. & E. 597, 28 L. J., M. C. 126; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 892; 7 W. R. 206.

Customs. ]-An information against two for smuggling, under the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853, 16 & 17 Viet. c. 107, contained several counts, in each of which they were charged severally. A from pleading double, or pleading and demurring, claimed, with an arrangement that execution should issue against each for a portion only, the remembrancer, on taxing costs against one, under s. 263, having allowed the Crown costs on the whole record, the court refused to review the taxation. Att.-Gen. v. Roberts, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1024; 4 W. R. 7.

> Excise.]-In an excise information, where the Crown, if successful, is entitled to full costs of suit, the Crown is entitled to full costs as in an ordinary suit between subject and subject, notwithstanding that the Crown solicitor conducting the information is employed by the Crown at an annual salary. Att.-Gen. v. Shillibeer, 6 D. & L. 236; 19 L. J., Ex. 115; 4 Ex. 606.

> Several Penalties.]—Where one count of an information charges several penalties, the Crown, having established a right to one penalty alone, is entitled to the costs of proving that penalty only. Ib.

Costs of Witnesses. ]-In another count the defendant was charged with the wilful omission of an entry and the Crown had a verdict :-Held, that the Crown was entitled to the costs of all such witnesses as were reasonably necessary to prove that the omission was wilful. Ib.

Proceedings before Attorney-General. ]-The court has no authority to make an order adversely with regard to the costs of proceedings before the attorney-general, not under its direction or sanction, Att.-Gen. v. Harper, 8 L. J., Ch. 12.

Appeal by Crown, ]-Against any judgment awarding costs against an officer of the Crown, suing on behalf of the Crown, an appeal may be brought, notwithstanding the general rule that no appeal lies for costs.

Action against Attorney-General-Right to Costs.] -In an action against the attorney-general and other defendants, to establish the plaintiff's right to the sca-shore, the attorney-general did not actively contest the plaintiff's claim, but did not admit the same until their right had been established by evidence at the trial :- Held, that the attorney-general was not entitled to be paid his costs of the action by the successful plaintiffs. Kilmorey (Eurl) v. Att.-Gen., 29 L. R., Ir. 320. And see Bain v. Att.-Gen., 61 L. J., P. 135-C. A.

Information - Discontinuance by Crown -Costs of Defendant.]-An English information was filed in the name of the attorney-general on behalf of her majesty against the defendant in respect of certain foreshore rights, and after the proceedings had been continued for some time, and considerable expense incurred by the defendant, the solicitor acting on behalf of the attorney-general informed the defendant's solicitor that the attorney-general did not propose to proceed further with the information. The defendant applied to the court for an order directing that the information should be dismissed, or judgment entered for the defendant, and that the Crown should pay to the defendant his costs of and incidental to the information and suit :- Held, that the court had no power to dismiss the information for want of prosecution, as by Ord, LXVIII, r. 2, the rules providing for verdict having by consent been taken against the dismissal of an action for want of prosecuboth on all the counts for the full penalties tion were not applied to proceedings on the 79

Held further, that, as the suit revenue side. Held further, that, as the suit had not been determined, the Crown could not be ordered to pay the defendant's costs. Att .-Gen. v. Williamson, 60 L. T. 930.

Costs of Counsel.]—Liberty given to except to the Master's report of taxation being applied for, on the ground of his disallowance of a brief to the attorney-general, besides two other counsel in a charity information, the report was referred back to the Master for review. Att.-Gen. v. Drapers' Co., 4 Beav. 305.

Upon the taxation of costs as between party and party, where the attorney-general is made a party to protect the interests of the Crown, the rule is to allow two counsel in addition to the attorney-general, in every case in which, if it were that of a private individual, that number of counsel would be allowed. Cockburn v. Ruphael, 12 L. J., Ch. 263; 7 Jnr. 246.

Other Points. |-The attorney-general, made a party to a cause as representing a charge belonging to a deceased bastard, is not entitled to costs if nothing is reported to be due on the charge. Murphy v. Osborne, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 254.

In a suit to have the rights of the parties to the property in question declared, to which the attorney-general was a defendant, as representing the Crown, the court refused to give the attorney-general his costs, though it gave all the other parties their costs as between solicitor and client. Burney v. Macdonald, 15 Sim. 6; 9 Jur.

Where the interests in respect of which the attorney-general is made a party to a suit are of such a description that the court would, in the case of a private individual, allow fees to three counsel upon the taxation of cost, the court will, in such cases, allow fees to two counsel besides the attorney-general. Cockburn v. Raphael, 12 L. J., Ch. 263,

The attorney-general, appearing in support of a bill for a legacy, the bill being dismissed:— Held, not entitled to costs. Gloucester Corporation v. Wood, 3 Hare, 149.

A fund was settled on A. for life, with remainder to B. and others. B. mortgaged his reversionary share to C., and was afterwards convicted of felony. A suit was instituted for the administration of the fund, to which C. and the attorney-general were made defendants :-Held, that the attorney-general was not entitled to his costs out of the general fund. Kitchener v. Kitchener, 18 L. J., Ch. 152; 13 Jur. 761.

Where the Crown sucs without the intervention of a relator, the rule is, that costs can neither be given to nor against the Crown. Smith v. Stair (Earl), 2 H. L. Cas. 807; 13 Jur.

Costs cannot be given against the Crown where the attorney-general is not a party co nomine. Reg. v. Beadle (26 L. J., M. C. 111; 7 El. & Bl. 492) followed, in preference to Jurdin, Exparte (31 L. R., Ir. 1). Galvin, In re, 1387] 1 Ir. & 520.

The attorney-general attended in a cause to which he was not a party, to support a claim for legacy duty upon a fund in court. The claim failed :- Held, that the Crown was not entitled to costs. Hobson v. Neale, 17 Beav, 178: 1 Eq. Rep. 165.

The solicitor for the affairs of the treasury as nommee of the Crown, having taken out letters of administration to the goods of an intestate, on the assumption that he had died without next of kin :- Held, not entitled to the costs of a suit instituted by a person rightfully claiming as mext of kin. Kane v. Reynolds, 4 De G. M. & G. 565; 24 L. J., Ch. 321; 1 Juv. (N.s.) 148; 3 W. R. 85—L.JJ.

The nominee of the Crown had successfully resisted in a previous suit, an unfounded claim by a person wrongfully asserting a title as next of kin, and in the suit of the rightful claimant there had been the usual decree for an account, with all just allowances :- Held, without deciding that the costs of the previous suit might have been included under just allowances, that inasmuch as no objections had been taken to the chief clerk's certificate by the nomince of the Crown, he was precluded from raising the question as to his right to the costs of defending the previous suit, when the cause came on before the court for further consideration. Ib.

Where the Crown and an alien were adverse and unsuccessful claimants to estates, they were ordered to pay their own costs. Rittson v. Stordy, 3 Sm. & G. 230; 3 Eq. Rep. 1039; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 771: 2 Jur. (N.S.) 410: 3 W. R. 627.

The attorney-general pressing the claim of the Crown, and failing, not entitled to his costs of appearance. Gough v. Davies, 25 L. J., Ch. 677;

W. R. 757.

Where a plaintiff succeeds in establishing his title as next of kin to an intestate against the Crown as administrator, the costs of the suit must come out of the estate, the Crown, as in the case of an ordinary administrator, not paying any costs. Partington v. Reynolds, 6 W. R. 615.

Where in a suit against the Crown the plaintiff succeeds, and the Crown appeals and fails, it can have no costs of such appeal. Ib.

A decree in a suit and information directed the plaintiff's costs to be paid by the defendants: -Held, that the costs of obtaining the attorneygeneral's fiat before filing the information, and in respect of proceedings entitled in the suit, which had been taken before the attorneygeneral, with reference to the withdrawal of his fiat pending an appeal, were costs in the cause, payable by the defendants. Att.-Gen. v. Halifax Corporation, 41 L. J., Ch. 100; L. R. 12 Eq. 262; 24 L. T. 655.

Where a charity information was filed without relator under the repealed 59 Geo. 3, c. 91, the court had jurisdiction to order defendant to pay costs to attorney-general, Att.-Gen. v. Ashburnham, 1 Sim. & S. 394.

In a charity information filed without a relator, the attorney-general did not personally appear at the hearing, but two other counsel appeared in support of the information :- Held, that the costs of a brief to the attorney-general ought to be allowed in addition to those of the two counsel, in the taxation of costs as between party and party. Att.-Gen. v. Drapers' Co., 4 Beav. 305.

2. OF OR AGAINST RELATORS.

The relator, by the information, insisted on a claim, which was afterwards abandoned, having, as was alleged, shaped the whole information with a view to his own demand. As, however, directions were to be given, so that the information had a foundation, the relator was not made to pay costs. Att.-Gen. v. Bolton, 3 Atk. 321; 3 Anstr. 820 ; 4 R. R. 869.

Where the information was quite causeless and contrary to the right, the relators were ordered to pay the costs. Att.-Gen. v. Parker, 1 Ves. 43; 3 Atk. 578. Att.-Gen. v. Smart, 1 Ves. 72.
An information was dismissed, with costs, against the relator, because it appeared to proceed from a private motive of revenge in him, and that from a very improper cause. Att.-Gen. v. Middleton, 2 Ves. 327.

If the solicitor gives a relator an indemnity for costs or uses his name without anthority (though afterwards assented to), the court will order the information to be taken off the file with the costs to be paid by the relator and attorney. Att.-Gen. v. Skinners' Co., C. P. Coop. 7.

Where relators refused to proceed further in an information, new relators who offered an indemnity for all past and future costs were substituted. Att.-Gen. v. Cashel Corporation, Sau. & Sc. 333.

A new information was filed after a former, A new information was filed after a former, and two verdicts, on full evidence, in intrusion:

—Ordered, that the attorney-general name a relator, and he to show cause why he should not be answerable for costs. Att.-Gen. v. Puckering. 2 Fowl, Exch. Pr. 313.

Defendant restrained from proceeding against relators for costs of an information dismissed with costs, upon affidavit of intention to appeal, but upon terms. Att.-Gen. v. Dublin Corporation,

2 Moll. 355. In an information against a corporation to restrain them from applying certain funds in aid of the borough fund, a decree was made by which the corporation was ordered to pay to the relator the costs of the information :-Held, that the relator was entitled to charge these costs upon a find standing in trust for the corporation, and arising from the proceeds of the sale of property belonging to the corporation. Att.-Gen v. Thetford Corporation, 8 W. R. 467. Relators have their costs, charges and expenses. Att.-Gen. v. Winchester Corporation, C. P. Coop.

a. Generally.

For Excess of Jurisdiction.]—Where a jury, summoned under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 68, has taken into consideration, in awarding compensation, one claim among others as to which the jury had no jurisdiction, a certiorari lies, although such excess of jurisdiction does not appear upon the face of the proceedings; and such excess of jurisdiction may be shown by affidavit. Penny v. S. E. Ry., 7 El. & Bl. 660; 26 L. J., Q. B. 225; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 957; 5 W. R. 612.

The rule of the court is that the writ should only go when the act sought to be reviewed or quashed was in excess of jurisdiction, and not on any mere point of form. Reg. v. King, 14 Cox, C, C, 434.

To Inferior Courts only, ]—A certiorari was issued to the judge of an inferior jurisdiction to return and certify the practice of his court. Williams v. Bagot (Lord), 4 D. & R. 815; 3 B. & C. 772; 27 R. R. 482.

A certiorari lies only to inferior courts of record. Educards v. Baven, 7 D. & R. 709; 5 B. & C. 206; 2 Russ, 153; 2 Sim. & S. 514.

Record itself must be Removed.]-Where the tenor of a record instead of the record itself is removed by certiorari ont of an inferior court, it is erroneous, as no proceedings can be had upon it. Woodcraft or Woodraffe v. Kinaston, 2 Atk. 317; 9 Mod. 305; Dick. 238.

To mitigate Fine. ]-The court will not mitigate a fine imposed by an inferior court, the record whereof is removed there by certiorari. In this case, however, they recommended an application to the Exchequer. Rev v. Loveden, 8 Term Rep.

For Judicial Acts only.]—No certiorari for other than judicial acts. Rew v. Lloud. Cald.

When it Issues as of Right. |-At common law, where a person comes forward to redress an individual grievance the writ of certiorari issues as of right; where a person comes forward to assert a right in which a more or less numerous class of the public are interested, the issue of the writ is within the discretion of the court. Reg. v. Drury, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 489.

On Application of the Crown, ]-A ceron application of the course, upon the application of the Crown. Rew v. Eaton, 2 Term Rep. 89; 1 R. R. 436.

But not so when a defendant applies; he must lay some ground for it before the court, supported by affidavit. Ib.

The writ of certiorari does not go as of right save on the application of the attorney-general in his official capacity, but if a person directly aggrieved by the order of an inferior tribunal can shew that it had no jurisdiction or had in substance exceeded its jurisdiction, or was improperly constituted, the general course is to award the writ as of common right, unless the applicant has, by his conduct, forfeited that right, or rendered it inexpedient that the court should interfere. Listowel's (Lord) Fishery, In re, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 46.

Administrative Act, Not Granted to Remove-Lighterman's Licence.]-The making of an order for the issue of a licence or certificate by the Court of the Company of Watermen and Lightermen of the River Thames authorising a person who has actually served for two years under a contract with a lighterman qualified to take apprentices, to act as a lighterman, is not a judicial, but an administrative act, and consequently such an order cannot be removed into the High Court by certiorari. Reg. v. Lucey, Gosling, Exparte, 66 L. J., Q. B. 308; [1897] 1 Q. B. 659; 61 J. P. 388.

After Judgment. |- It is a general rule, that a certiorari does not lie to remove a cause from an inferior court after judgment signed there; especially where the defendant has suffered judgment by default. Walker v. Gann, 7 D. & R. 769. S. P., Kemp v. Balne, 1 D. & L. 885; 13 L. J., Q. B. 149; 8 Jur. 619.

Where a judgment has been removed from the inferior jurisdiction pursuant to the Judgments Act, 1838, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 22, the court will not inquire into the regularity of the proceedings of the court below previously to judgment. Simons v. De Wrats (Count), 8 D. P. C. 646; 4 Jur. 989. A local act, establishing a court for the recovery of debts not exceeding 15L, contained a proviso that "no plaint entered in the court, nor any order, judgment, or proceeding therein, should be removed into any superior court by any writ or process whatsoever, except by leave of one of the judges of the superior courts at Westmiuster"; and then concluded with a proviso that all the provisious contained in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 22, for the removal of judgments of inferior courts into the courts at Westminster. for the purpose of having execution issued on them, should be applicable to the newly-created court :-Held, that after judgment had once been obtained in the jufcrior court, the proceedings could only be removed for the purpose of issuing execution on them. Fow v. Veale, 8 M. & W. 126; 9 D. P. C. 798; 10 L. J., Ex. 273; 5 Jur. 345.

Does not lie after Conviction and Judgment.] -An application for a certiorari to the Queen's Bench Division does not lie after conviction and judgmeut. Poole's Case (L. R. 14, 1, 14) explained. Nally v. Reg., 16 L. R. Ir, 1; 15 Cox, C. C. 638.

Who may Apply.]—Semble, a rival publican has no locus standi to apply for a certiorari to quash a publican's licence granted to another person. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 52 J. P. 423.

Conduct of Applicant. ]-On application for certiorari, the court will take into consideration

Position of Applicant. ]-A certiorari is not a writ of course, yet where an applicant, in the case of illegally stopping up a highway, has, by reason of his local situation, a peculiar grievance of his own, and is not merely applying as one of the public, he is entitled to the writ ex debitojustitiæ. Rog. v. Surrey JJ., 39 L. J., M. C. 145 ; L. R. 5 Q. B. 466.

When Judges are interested Parties. -- Where a sheriff, by whom a jury had been summoned under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Viet, c. 18, ss. 39 to 145, for awarding compensation for lands taken by a railway company, was a shareholder in the company, a certiorari was granted to bring up the inquisition. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 9 L. T. 423; 12 W. R. 208.

If an appeal is determined at quarter sessions. by magistrates, some of whom are interested in the matter, the proceeding is null, and the proper course is to quash it on certiorari. Hopkins, In re, El., Bl. & El. 100; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 529.

Action "fit to be tried" in Superior Court. |-A party to an action in the Mayor's Court is not entitled as of right to remove the action by writ of certiorari into the High Court, but can only do so by leave of a judge of the High Court in a case where it shall appear to him that the action cose where a suan appear to him that the action is one which is fit to be tried there. Symonds v. Dimsdale (2 Ex. 533) explained. Cherry v. Endean, 55 L. J., Q. B. 292; 54 L. T. 763; 34 W. R. 458.

Rule 12 of the Borough and Local Courts of Record Act, 1872, which is applicable to the Mayor's Court, provides that "no action entered in the court shall, before judgment, be removed or removable from the court into any superior court by any writ or process, except by leave of a judge of one of the superior courts, in cases a judge of the superior courts," ac. The plaintiff brought an action in the Mayor's Court against the defendant, a stockbroker, for alleged misconduct in connection with the purchase of certain shares, and claimed 1101, as damages :- Held, that the action was one which was "fit to betried" in the superior courts, and that the defendant was accordingly entitled to a writ of certiorari. Simpson v. Shaw, 56 L. J., Q. B. 92; 56 L. T. 24.

- Obstructing Right of Way. ]-An action for obstructing a right of way is not an action concerning the frechold, or inheritance, or titleof land, and, therefore, is prevented being removed out of an inferior court by 21 Jac. 1, c. 23. Franks v. Quinsce, 2 W. W. & H. 58.
- Ejectment.]-A judgment in ejectment, man inferior jurisdiction, is not within 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4; and, therefore, if the defendant leaves the jurisdiction, the judgment cannot be removed into a superior court. Doe d. Stansfield v. Shipley, 2 D. P. C. 408.

Costs—Certiorari to quash Orders of Town Council—Liability of Individual Members.]—A rule having been made absolute for a certiorari against a municipal corporation to bring up and the conduct of the party applying. Reg. v. quasis a minimplat corporation to sing aparet the conduct of the party applying. Reg. v. quasis certain orders made by the town council South Holland Drainage Committee. 8 A. & B. for illegal payments out of the borough fund:—429; 1 P. & D. 79; 1 W. W. & H. 647; 8 L. J., Held, that members of the town council who Q. B. 64. them, to pay the costs of the certiorari. Rey. v. Vaile or Whiteley, 58 L. J., M. C. 164; 23 Q. B. D. 483; 61 L. T. 253; 54 J. P. 134—D.

b. County Court.

In what Cases. ]-The power to remove a cause by certiorari given by 9 & 10 Viet, c, 95, s, 90, was not taken away by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 16. Parker v. Bristal and Exeter Ry., 6 Ex. 184; 20 L. J., Ex. 112. S. P., Munyran v. Wheatley, 6 Ex. 88; 20 L. J., Ex. 108. Brookman v. Wen-ham, 2 L. M. & P. 233; 20 L. J., Q. B. 278.

When a judge has declined to grant a certiorari, the court will not do so merely because it appears that possibly a serious question of law may arise (as that may be reserved by a special case), nor merely because the decision on the particular case, though involving directly only a small sum, may be of great importance to the applicant, as likely to affect other cases of a similar nature. Staples v. Accidental Death H. & W. 320. Insurance Co., 10 W. R. 59.

Devise by a testator to his son of freehold and leasehold estates and chattels as follows :- "On condition of my son paying the following sums, viz., I will, order and direct him to pay unto his mother 4s. a week, weekly and every week during her natural life":—Held, that this was not a claim of a legacy within 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 65, but of a debt; and an action having been brought in a county court, the court granted a certiorari. Longbottom v. Longbottom, 8 Ex. 203; 22 L. J., Ex. 74.

A justice of the peace sued in a county court for an act done in the execution of his office, having given notice under the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 10, that he objects to being sued in the county court, cannot after such notice remove the plaint into a superior court by certiorari. Weston v. Sneyd, 1 H. & N. 703; 26 L. J., Ex. 161; 5 W. B. 817.

19 Geo. 3, e. 70, s. 4, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 22, by which judgments of inferior courts of record are removable into the superior courts. have no application to the judgments of the county courts established under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95. Mareton v. Holt, 10 Ex. 707; 24 L. J., Ex. 169; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 215; 3 C. L. R. 348; 3 W. R.

- Employers' Liability Act-Action in County Court and in High Court. ]—The plaintiff, a labourer in the service of the defendants. claimed compensation for injury caused by the negligence of the defendants in having defective machinery, and brought his action in the county court under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, 43 & 44 Vict. e. 42, but in which he had given a defective notice under that act. He also brought his action in the High Court to try the question of the defendants' common law liability; in this action he claimed over 50l. The plaintiff sought to remove the action in the county court into the High Court for the purpose of consolidation, on the ground that the questions of the character of the negligence, the applicability of the act, the sufficiency of the notice, and the other questions on which the liability of the defendants v. G. W. Ry., supra.

to be ordered, on a separate application against | depended were of considerable complexity and legal difficulty:—Held, that it was clearly the object of the legislature, in providing less costly and more speedy remedies as between masters and servants, that these actions should primarily be brought in the county court; and that there was nothing in the circumstances of the present ease to warrant the removal of the action in the inferior court into the High Court. Munday v. Thames Ironworks and Shipbuilding Co., 52 L. J., Q. B. 119; 10 Q. B. D. 59; 47 L. T.

> - Action for Less than £20.]-A certiorari to a county court was refused, the plaint being for a sum under 201., although it was sworn that various nice questions of law and fact, important to the applicant, would probably arise. Solomon v. L. C. & D. Ry., 10 W. R. 59.

Where it appears, by the declaration in a cause instituted in an inferior jurisdiction, that the sum claimed by the plaintiff is exactly 20*l*., it is not necessary to enter into the recognizance required by 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 6, and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 71, s. 6, in order to remove it into a superior court. Brady v. Veeres, 5 D. P. C. 415; 2

In Interpleader.]—A certiorari does not lie to remove interpleader proceedings in a county count. Summers. Exparte, 2 C. L. R. 1284; 18 Jar. 522; 2 W. R. 477.

All Material Facts must be brought before the Court on Application for. ]-All the material facts relative to the state of the cause should be brought before the judge, upon the applica-tion for the writ; and, therefore, where a certiorari had been obtained without the judge having been informed that the cause had already been heard for several days in the county court, the writ was set aside as having been issued improvidently. Parker v. Bristol and Exeter  $R_{\mathcal{Y}}$ , 2 L. M. & P. 137; 6 Ex. 184; 20 L. J., Ex. 112; 15 Jur. 109.

Practice.]-A rule for a certiorari to remove a cause from a county court is absolute in the first instance, Duvding v. G. W. Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1130.

And must be made in the first instance at chambers. Staples v. Accidental Death Insurance Cr., 10 W. B. 59.

The writ must be tested of a day in term. Symonds v. Dimsdale, 6 D. & L. 17; 17 L. J., Ex. 247; 12 Jur. 485.

Costs on Removal.]—Where a defendant has removed from a county court by certiorari under 19 & 20 Viet. c. 108, s. 38, a plaint for a sum not exceeding 51., the plaintiff is not bound to follow out his suit, and if he declines the defendant cannot, after serving notice to declare, sign judgment for want of declaration or recover from the plaintiff his costs of removal. Garton v. G. W. Ry., 1 El. & El. 258; 28 L. J., Q. B. 103; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 7 W. R. 53.

On an application for a certiorari to remove from a county court a cause in which the demand is over 201., the court does not make it a condition that the defendant, if successful, shall have no more costs than would have been allowed in the county court. G. W. Ry., Ex parts, 2 H. & N. 557; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1130. S. P., Dowding

c. In Criminal Cases,

For Removal of Indictment.]-An indictment preferred at the assizes by direction of justices at special sessions, in pursuance of the Highways Act, 1835, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 95, may be removed by certiorari, such indictment being a common-law proceeding and therefore not within s. 107, which takes away the certiorari. Reg. v. Sandon, 3 El. & Bl. 547; 2 C. L. R. 1699; 23 L. J., M. C. 129; 18 Jur. 401; 2 W. R. 374.

Upon an indictment against a parish for not repairing a highway, the right to repair may come in question, so as to entitle the parish to remove it by certiorari, though the parish pleads not guilty only. Rew v. St. Mary, Taunton, 3

M. & S. 465.

An indictment found at quarter sessions upon the Toleration Act, 1 Will. & M. c. 18, for disturbing a dissenting congregation might be removed by certiorari before verdict. Rev v. Hube, 5 Term Rep. 542; 2 R. R. 669.

So an indictment found at the quarter sessions upon the Places of Religious Worship Act, 1812, 52 Geo. 3, c. 155, s. 12, for disturbing a religious assembly. Rew v. Wadley, 4 M. & S. 508; 16

R. R. 534.

Application by defendant for certiorari to remove an indictment under 5 & 6 Will. & M. e. 11, s. 2, and the repealed 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2, held an application for the discretion of the judge. Reg. v. Wilks, 5 E. & B. 690; 25 L. J.,
 Q. B. 47; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 4 W. R. 86.

A constable having preferred an indictment at the quarter sessions against a butcher, for having exposed for sale corrupt and unwholesome victuals, the butcher brought an action against the constable for the seizure. On motion on behalf of the constable for a certiorari to remove the indictment, with a view to its being tried before the same forum as the action, the court allowed the writ to go. Reg. v. Broomhead, 2 D. (N.S.) 715; 7 Jur. 558.

Where an indictment for forcible entry found at the quarter sessions had been quashed by a subsequent sessions, the court granted a certiorari to bring up the indictment, in order that the court might see what had been done upon it at the sessions; it not appearing whether it had been quashed by a regular judgment, so as to enable the prosecutor to bring a writ of error on the judgment. Reg. v. Wilson, 1 New Sess. Cas. 190; 8 Jur. 1069.

A certiorari will be granted to remove an indietment, found at the quarter sessions, for a misdemeanor, and an order of that court quash-ing it. Ib.

A rule for setting aside such an order, on the ground that it has been pronounced without jurisdiction, is not absolute in the first instance. Ib.

- After Conviction.]-If a defendant who has been convicted on an indictment in an inferior jurisdiction removes the record by certiorari, between verdict and judgment, with a view of making objections to the indictment in arrest of judgment, the court will send the record back by proceedendo, without going into the objections to the indictment. Rew v. Jackson, 6 Term Rep. 145; 3 R. R. 138.

The court refused a certiorari to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor, and proceedings applying for a new trial, on the judge's report of 2 Jur. (N.S.) 235.

the evidence, upon the ground of the verdict being against evidence and the judge's direction. Rex v. Oxford, 13 East, 411; 12 R. R. 386.

A certiorari will not lie to the sessions to remove a conviction for a misdemeanor before judgment, for the fine being uncertain, the court cannot tell how to assess it; otherwise, where the punishment is certain. Rea v. Nicols, 13 East, 414, h; 12 R. R. 388.

After Judgment. - After conviction and judgment on an indictment at the quarter sessions, the court will not grant a certiorari to remove the proceedings for the purpose of having such indictment quashed on motion, for error on the record. Rew v. Pennegoes, 2 D. & R. 202; 1 B. & C. 142; 25 R. R. 334.

A defendant in an indictment for a misdemeanor surreptitiously obtained an acquittal, by not complying with the practice of the sessions in giving notice of trial and bringing on the indictment for trial after disposing of the felonies ; the court would not grant a certiorari to remove the indictment in order to set aside the verdict. Reg. v. Unwin, 7 D. P. C. 578.

The court quashed a certiorari, which was issued before but not served until after judgment on an indictment for a misdemeanor. Rew v.

Seton, 7 Term Rep. 373; 4 R. R. 466,

- When there are Several Defendants. ]-The court will not grant a certiorari to remove an indictment against several defendants charged with a misdemeanor, unless they all concur in the application. Rew v. Hunt. 2 Chit. 130,

The court will grant a certiorari to remove an indictment for conspiracy, on application of one of several defendants, without the consent of the others, if the defendant will enter into a recognizance to pay costs if either he is or any of the others are convicted. Reg. v. Foulkes, 1 L. M. & P. 720; 20 L. J., M. C. 196, Several were indicted for a misdemeanor; one was in custody on the charge, the others were out on bail. The court, on the application of one who was out on bail, granted a certiorari to remove the indictment on the terms that if the defendant in prison did not consent, the applieant was to find bail for him. Reg. v. Drake, 22 L. J., Q. B. 304.

The court will not interfere with the discretion of a judge in granting a certiorari to remove an indictment, at the instance of one of several defendants, where all the facts were fairly laid before the judge upon the application for the writ. Reg. v. Wilks, 5 E. & B. 690; 25 L. J., Q. B. 47; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 4 W. R. 86. Under 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 33 (repealed), as well as by the antecedent practice, a certiorari obtained by one of several defendants removed the indictment as to all, and the previous recognizances of all are discharged, though the parties not applying for the certiorari do not give any fresh security. Rev v. Boxall, 4 A. & E. 513; 1 H. & W. 741; 5 L. J., M. C. 78.

On what Grounds-In order to obtain a Fair and Impartial Trial.]-The court issued a certiorari on behalf of a prisoner to remove an inquisition before a coroner of a county in which a verdiet of murder had been given, and any indictment for murder which might be found by the grand jury at the assizes, upon affidavits that thereon at the assizes, after conviction and before a fair and impartial trial could not be had in judgment, which was prayed for the purpose of that county. Reg. v. Palmer, 5 El. & Bl. 1024;

Where a defendant was indicted for an impious libel on Christianity, the court refused to remove the indictment, on the ground that it was neither alleged that a fair trial could not be had, nor that difficult points of law were likely to arise at the trial at the sessions. Reg. v. Heywood, 4

Where it primâ facie appears that a fair and an impartial trial cannot be had in a particular place, and such is not displaced by a strong case in answer thereto, the court will grant a certiorari to remove the proceedings into the Queen's Bench to enable an application to be made in order to have such ease tried in some other jurisdiction. Reg. v. Bell, 8 Cox, C. C. 287.

An indictment found at the assizes allowed to be removed, where it appeared that paragraphs had appeared in the newspapers which were likely to prejudice the minds of the petty jurors.

Reg. v. Lever, 1 W. W. & H. 35.

The allegation of a strong prejudice entertained against a defendant by the chairman at quarter sessions is not a sufficient ground for granting a certiorari to remove an indictment for an assault.

Reg. v. Jacobs, 3 Jur. 999.

Where an indictment had been found at the Oxford sessions against two, one of them being a member of the University, and exercising great influence at the place of trial, and the other being the son of an influential magistrate in the neighbourhood, and a plaeard had been exhibited, and a series of articles published against the prosecutor, the court granted a certiorari. Reban v. Treror, 4 Jur. 292.

Where a magistrate is indicted at a quarter sessions, he being in the commission for the county, and having circulated among the other magistrates a printed account of the charges brought against him, it is a good ground, within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 1, for removing the indictment. Reg. v. Grover, 8 Dowl. P. C. 325; 4 Jur.

Certiorari to remove an indictment found at sessions, on the ground that a magistrate was interested in the matter, granted. Rev v. Jones. 2 H. & W. 293.

The mere fact of a defendant on an indictment for an assault being a member of the bench of magistrates who are to try it is not a sufficient ground, within 5 & 6 Will, 4, c., 33, s. 1, for removing the indictment by certiorari. Fellowes, 4 D. P. C. 607; 1 H. & W. 648.

The Court will not remove an indictment from the quarter sessions, on the ground that the chairman of the court is intimate with the father of the prosecutrix. Reg. v. Renshaw, 5 Jur. 801.
If the number of jurors in a borough is small, and the defendant is intimate with many of them, the Court will allow an indictment for a libel, found at the sessions for the borough, to be removed. Garbett v. Ouseley, 6 Jur. 193.

In order to induce the court to grant a rule nisi for a certiorari to remove an indictment for felony from a particular county upon the application of the defendant, it is not sufficient to swear that the political opinions entertained by that county in general are strongly opposed to those known to be professed by the defendant; and that his political employment and position have rendered him an object of peculiar dislike in the county, and subjected him to abuse and threats of violence. Lynes, Ex parte, 1 B. C. Rep. 31; 1 Cox, C. C. 262.

It is only in very exceptional cases that indictments for felony will be permitted to be removed out of a claim to property, and that difficult into the Queen's Bench, and where an application. was made for a certiorari for such removal from the quarter sessions of a borough upon the ground of local prejudice, and difficulty in obtaining a jury, the court recommended an application to the recorder to send the case to the assizes, and the motion was withdrawn. Reg. v. Reynolds, 12 L. T. 580; 13 W. R. 925.

The fact, that a prosecution is an unusual one, that it is instituted at the suit of the Crown, whose officers will attend to prosecute, and that the defendant, on this account, desires the assistance of queen's counsel and a special jury, is a sufficient ground for granting a certiorari at his request to remove the indictment into the Queen's Bench. Reg. v. Jeffs, 9 Jur. 580; 1 Cox, C. C.

On application for a writ of certiorari toremove indictments from quarter sessions for a large borough into the High Court for trial at the county assizes, it appeared that the applicant was a tradesman in the borough who had been adjudicated bankrupt, and was in the borough charged with obtaining goods by false pretences. The great majority of his ereditors resided in the borough, where considerable feeling against him had been openly expressed by them :-Held, that although there were 20,000 names on the jury list, and that it was possible to keep all the creditors off the juries at the ensuing quarter sessions, it was reasonably probable that a fair and impartial trial could not be had in the borough, and therefore the writ must go. Reg. v. Whittuker, 59 J. P. 197.

When a probability of the existence of pre-judice to a substantial extent is established in relation to a county, the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, should not allow the fair and impartial trial of a prisoner to depend upon the power of the Crown officials to order jurors to stand aside, but should remove the proceedings by certiorari. Reg. v. Boughton, [1895] 2 Ir. R.

- That Judge has Misconceived a Point of Law. ]-A certiorari will not issue to remove a record of conviction on an indictment good on the face of it, on the ground that a judge has misconceived a question of law. Reg. v. Christian, 12 L. J., M. C. 26; 2 D. (N.s.) 408; 6 Jur. 1039.

That Difficult Points of Law will Arise. ]-A certiorari will not be granted to remove from the sessions an indietment for the obstruction of a highway, on an affidavit that difficult questions. of law might arise; some specific difficulty in point of law must be shewn. Rex v. Joule, 5 A. & E. 539; 1 N. & P. 28; 5 D. P. C. 435; 2 H. & W. 375.

The court refused to grant a certiorari for removing an indictment for perjury from the county of Leicester to London, to be tried by a special jury, upon a suggestion that the truth of special fury, upon a suggestion that the total of the evidence given by the defendant would depend upon the result of a long series of accounts, and that a point of law was likely to be raised in his favour. Reg. v. Marton, 1 Dowl. (N.S.) 543.

The court refused to grant a certiorari to-remove an indictment for an assault found against a party and his wife at the sessions, where no suspicion was cast upon the sessions, although it was alleged that the assault arose questions, involving the right to the property, might arise, and that it was wished to have the benefit of a special jury, and the assistance of counsel who do not usually practise at the quarter sessions. Clark v. Wellington, 7 Jur. 44.

Justices-Committal for Trial-Admitting to Bail. |-The decision of justices, committing a defendant for trial, or admitting him to bail, under the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 93), s. 15 [the language of which is practically identical with s. 25 of the Indictable Offences (England) Act, 1848], cannot be brought up by certiorari. Reg. v. Roscommon JJ., [1894] 2 Ir. R. 158.

Does not lie to Central Criminal Court.]-The High Court has no jurisdiction to issue a writ of certiorari, directed to the Central Criminal Court, to remove a conviction obtained in the Central Criminal Court, for the purpose of having the same quashed. Reg. v. Bouler, 67 L. T. 354; 17 Cox; C. C. 569; 56 J. P. 792.

- Removal from the Central Criminal Court. ]-The court will remove an indictment by certiorari, at the instance of the defendant, from the Central Criminal Court, on the suggestion that it involves points of law arising out of proceedings in Chancery, relating to matters of account. Rew v. Wartnaby, 2 A. & E. 435.

The fact of an indictment being bad in point of law is not a sufficient ground to remove it from the Central Criminal Court. Templar, 5 D. P. C. 249.

The court refused to remove an indictment from the Central Criminal Court on the ground that a difficult question of law might arise. v. Templar, 1 N. & P. 91; 2 H. & W. 430.

In order to support a motion for a certiorari to remove an indictment for perjury from the Central Criminal Court, it must be shewn that points of difficulty are likely to arise on the trial. Rey. v. Josephs, 8 D. P. C. 128; 1 W. W. & H. 419.

The Central Criminal Court Act, 1834, 4 & 5 Will, 4, c. 36, s. 16, does not affect the removal of indictments from the Central Criminal Court into the Queen's Bench. Such removal held to be regulated by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 29 [a repealed bankruptcy act], so that a defendant removing such indictment under the latter statute became liable, in case of conviction, to pay the prosecutor the costs occasioned by such removal. Reg. v. Hawdon, 9 D. P. C. 1007; 1 Q. B. 464.

Revising Barrister's Order for Costs-Distress Warrant.]-Certiorari will not be issued to bring up distress warrant of two justices on a revising barrister's order under the Parliamentary Registration Act, 1848, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, ss. 46, 71, on the ground of want of jurisdiction after the warrant has been acted on. Bradley, John, In re, 11 W. R. 640.

Venue on Removal from Central Criminal Court. - By 9 & 10 Viet. c. 24, s. 3 (repealed), every writ of certiorari for removing an indictment from the Central Criminal Court had to specify the county or jurisdiction in which the same shall be tried, and a jury shall be summoned and the trial proceed in the same manner in all respects as if the indictment had been originally preferred in that county or jurisdiction. An Central Criminal Court for perjury committed within the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court. The perjuries assigned in one count were in respect of an oath taken before a commissioner in chancery, in the city of London; and in the other count, in respect of an oath taken in the Court of Common Pleas, in Middlesex. The indictment was removed by certiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, and Middlesex was specified as the county in which the indictment should be tried, and the jury was taken from that county :- Held, that the Court of Queen's Bench had a discretion to name in the certiorari the county or jurisdiction in which the trial was to take place, and that by the jurors summoned from that jurisdiction the same issues could be tried that would have been tried in the Central Criminal Court had the indictment not been removed. Reg. v. Castro. 43 L. J., Q. B. 105; L. R. 9 Q. B. 350; 30 L. T. 320; 22 W. R. 187; 12 Cox, C. C. 454.

Removal to Central Criminal Court.]—Under the Central Criminal Court Act, 1834, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16, the Queen's Bench may make an order, in the nature of a certiorari, to remove an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, from certain sessions mentioned in the act, to be tried at the Central Criminal Court, notwithstanding the [repealed] 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, which enacted that no indictment for obtaining money by false pretences should be removed by certiorari, Reg. v. Sill, Dears, C. C. 10; 21 L. J., M. C. 214; 17 Jur. 22.

Where an indictment at sessions, under 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, for keeping a disorderly house, has been removed into the Central Criminal Court, nuder 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16, the opposite party may remove it again into the Queen's Bench, notwithstanding the 25 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 10. Reg. v. Brier, 14 Q. B. 568; 19 L. J., M. C. 121; 14 Jur. 391.

Upon an application under the Central Criminal Court Act, 1856, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 3, to the Queen's Bench by a defendant, who had been held to bail for a felony, supposed to have been committed beyond the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, for an order directing that the offence wherewith he was charged should be tried in the Central Criminal Court; the court, in the first instauce, granted a rule nisi only for the making of such order, and directed notice of the rule to be served on the prosecutor, and also on the committing magistrates. Reg. v. Waters, 13 W. R. 807.

Practice-Rule for.]-A rule for a certiorari to remove an indictment from the sessions into the Queen's Bench, on the ground that grave questions of law are likely to arise, and that a view is necessary which cannot be had at the sessions, is not necessarily a rule absolute in the first instance, but it rests in the discretion of the court so to grant it. Reg. v. Bird, 2 D. & L. 939; 14 L. J., M. C. 179; 9 Jur. 492.

- Affidavits used on Application for.]-In moving for a rule nisi for a certiorari, the affidavit must not be entitled in any cause. Nerough, Ex parte, I B. & C. 267; I L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 112.

On application for certiorari to remove indictment found at inferior court, on ground that difficult questions of law are likely to arise, either the points should be specifically stated, or indictment was found by the grand jury in the the affidavit should disclose facts from which the likely to arise; for a mere general statement, without entering into particulars, is not sufficient. Reg. v. Hodges, 9 Jur. 665; 1 Cox, C. C. 194.

- Conduct of Trial. ]-In an indictment for stopping up a highway, removed by eertiorari into the Court of Queen's Bench, and tried at the assizes, the counsel for the defendant may sum up his evidence at the close of his case, as in a civil action, Reg. v. Broke, 1 F. & F. 514.

Entry for Trial. -In a Crown case, removed by certiorari, issue not having been joined before the commission day, although by the default of the officer :- Held, that the case could not be entered for trial. Reg. v. Luckie, 4 F. & F. 502.

Entry for and Order of Trial.]-Where an indictment for misdemeanor has been removed by certiorari, and the defendant has entered into recognizances to appear and trythe indictment, the prosecutor has a right to try it in its turn, as in that respect an indictment so removed has all the incidents of a civil action. Reg. v. Duffield, 5 Cox, C. C. 286.

Therefore, where there were two indictments for conspiracy arising out of the same transactions, one against D, and others, and the other against R. and others, and they were entered by the prosecutor in that order, Nos. "2" and "3" in the cause list, and the defendants subsequently entered the cases as Nos. "10" and "13" in the list, placing the proscention against R. and the others first, it was held that the prosecutor had the right of trying the indictments in the order entered by him. Ib.

Warrant of Remand on False Charge.]-Where a person has been taken into enstody, and subsequently remanded, on a charge which turns out to be false the court will not grant a certiorari to quash the warrant of remand, preliminary to his suing either the parties who gave him into custody, or the justices signing the warrant : for the former are entitled to whatever protection the warrant can afford them, and in an action against the latter the validity of the warrant will be tried. Reg. v. Ely JJ., Gilling, Ex parte, 4 W. R. 13.

Costs. ]-5 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3, is not confined to cases in which there is a legal obligation to intention to commit felony. Anan., 1 B. & Ad. 382. prosecute, but entitles them to costs if they institute a prosecution in obedience to a duty of imperfect obligation only. Reg. v. Kenealey, 4 Cox, C. C. 845.

It is no objection to a prosecutor's right to costs under 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3, that he has received aid from subscriptions towards the expenses of the prosecution. Where one of many defendants removes an indictment by certiorari, an attachment for costs may issue against him without demand from the other defendants. Reg. v. Dobson, 2 Cox, C. C. 42.

Several Counts-Acquittal on some Counts. Conviction on Others. —An indictment containing several counts, charging different misdemeanors, was removed into the High Court by certiorari, the prosecutors entering into a recognizance, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5, court may conclude that such difficulties are defendant was convicted on some of the counts and acquitted on others. On a rule to tax the costs to be paid by the prosecutors to the defen-dant in respect of the counts on which she had been acquitted:—Held, that the defendant had not been "acquitted upon the indictment," within the meaning of the recognizance, and Within the ficking of the recognizance, and therefore was not entitled to costs. Reg. v. Bayard, [1892] 2 Q. B. 181; 67 L. T. 313; 40 W. R. 525; 56 J. P. 650.

d. To Remove Convictions and Acquittals.

Convictions—Generally.]—It is discretionary in the court to grant or refuse a certiorari to remove a conviction before justices of the peace; and if the court sees that the justices have drawn the proper conclusion from presumptive evidence, they will not grant a certiorari. Rex v. Buss, 5 Term Rep. 251; Nolan, 227.
A conviction under the Game Act, 1831,

A conviction under the Game Act, 1631, 1 & 2 Will, 4, c. 32, s. 80, its still irremovable under s. 45, notwithstanding the [repealed] 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 20, s. 21. Rew v. Hester, 4 D. P. C. 589, 1 H. & W. 650.

Where it is enacted, generally, that no summary conviction in pursuance of an act shall be removed by certiorari into a superior court, a certiorari may, nevertheless, be issued at the instance of a private prosecutor, although the application is not made by the attorney-general, and the Crown is not directly interested. Rex v. Boultbee, 6 N. & M. 26; 4 A. & E. 498; 5 L. J., M. C. 57.

The court, in deciding on the legality of a conviction, cannot take cognisance of any fact contained in the certiorari, by which the conviction is removed, and not apparent on the conviction. Rev v. Liston, 5 Term Rep. 838; Nolan, 259.

Two justices convicted summarily as of a common assault, where it appeared by the deposition that the defendant had laid hands upon the prosecutor in an indecent manner, but without violence. A certiorari being moved for, on the ground that the offence, if committed, was accompanied by a felonious attempt, and therefore within 9 Geo. 4, c. 3, s. 29 (repealed), the court refused to interfere, inasmuch as no excess of jurisdiction appeared on the face of the conviction, and the evidence (of which the magistrates were the judges) did not shew an

The court will not grant a certiorari to bring up a conviction by justices in a matter over which they have jurisdiction, even though it is alleged that they convicted without any evidence whatever. Blewitt, Er parte, 14 L. T. 598.

A certiorari was granted to bring up a conviction by justices for an offence created by the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 3, upon the ground that the justices were shareholders, and therefore interested in the railway company, in respect of which the offence was committed. Reg. v. Hammond, 9 L. T. 423; 12 W. R. 208.

____ Defect in—Right of Justices to Substi-tute fresh Conviction where former Drawn up and Filed. ]-When justices have convicted for an offence unknown to the law, and have returned the conviction to the clerk of the peace, the recognization and the second representation of the control of the places, the court will allow a rule for a certificart to ex-she should be acquitted upon the indictment, her notwithstanding that the justices in skewing costs incurred subsequent to the removal. Before Filing with Clerk of Peace. ]-K. was charged with opening his premises for sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday within the prohibited hours, and was convicted and fined 51., and also 13s. 6d. for costs. The conviction, when drawn up, contained no clause of distress, but ordered imprisonment in default of payment: -Semble, the justices might draw up a fresh conviction containing the clause of distress, any time before filing it with the clerk of the peace. Kenyon, Ex parte, 45 J. P. 303.

Indictment for Misdemeanor.]-The affidavit in support of an application for a certiorari to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor must be brought within the terms of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1853, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 4. Reg. v. Gate Tulford Inhabitants, 3 W. R. 212. S. P., Reg. v. Russell, 1 W. R. 171.

- Under Malicious Injuries to Property Act. ]-A conviction by justices, under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), s. 52, cannot be brought up upon a writ of certiorari on the ground that their jurisdiction was ousted by a mere boua fide claim of right. Reg. v. Mussett, 26 L. T. 429; 20 W. R. 670. The proviso in s. 52, that "nothing herein contained shall extend to any case where the party acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to do the act complained of," impliedly restricts the exemp-tion of bona fide claims of right from summary jurisdiction to cases where the justices are satisfied of the fairness and reasonableness. 1b.

For Selling Meat unfit for Food.]—A conviction under s. 63 of the repealed Public Health Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, for selling meat unfit for food, could only be removed on certiorari on the ground of excess of jurisdiction. Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 16 L. T. 430.

Effect of Railways Clauses Consolidation Act. ] -The Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, is so incorporated with the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, as to take away the right to remedy by certiorari. 1b.

Together with Special Case.]—On an appeal against a conviction under the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 92, s. 2, passed for the more effectual prevention of cruelty to animals, the sessions, with the consent of counsel on both sides, confirmed the convic-

A writ of certiorari for the purpose of bringing up the conviction and the case had been obtained. By s. 26 of the act, no conviction, judgment or proceeding relative thereto, shall be removed by certiorari, or otherwise, into any superior court :- Held, that the writ of certiorari, having been taken away generally, without any exception, in favour of a special case, the consent of the parties could not give the court jurisdiction, and therefore that the writ had issued improvidently, and must be quashed. Reg. v. Chantrell, 44 L. J., M. C. 94; L. R. 10 Q. B. 587; 33 L. T. 305; 23 W. R. 707.

- Under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879.] -The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 40, renders a writ of certiorari nnecessary to bring up a case stated by sessions on a rating appeal. The clerk of the peace, on receiving notice from the solicitor of the party requiring it, should send up the case to the Crown Office. Clark v. Alderbury Union, 29 W. R. 334.

 While an Appeal is Pending.]—A certiorari will not be granted where a person has been committed by the justices to the sessions as a vagrant, against which commitment he has appealed. Rew v. Sparrow, 2 Term Rep. 196, n.; 1 R. R. 459.

Special Cases.]-Where a case was stated by the sessions for the opinion of the court, and the proceedings, including the order of sessions, were removed by certiorari, under s, 108 of the Highways Act, 1835, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50 (the certiorari whys Ace, 1000, 5 & 6 of 11. 4, c. 50 class certainer being taken away as to questions of form by s. 107), the court cannot look at any question except that stated in the case, and has not jurisdiction to quash the order, though bad on the face of it. Reg. v. Thomas, 7 El. & Bl. 399; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 713; 5 W. R. 321.

Although the certiorari is taken away on appeal at the quarter sessions against a conviction, a case stated by consent of parties raising the question of jurisdiction may be brought up for The purpose of being quashed. Reg. v. Dickenson, 7 El. & Bl. 831; 26 L. J., M. C. 204; 3 Jnr. (N.S.) 1076; 5 W. R. 321.

Upon a case stated under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 84, it is unnecessary to bring the record before the court by certiorari; if the facts appear by affidavit it is sufficient. Reg. v. Gamble, 16 L. J., M. C. 149.

Where a case has been sent from the sessions, the court will not, upon the certiorari, go intoany objections arising on the face of the order itself, not raised by the case. Reg. v. Hartpury, 2 New Sess. Cas. 648; 16 L. J., M. C. 105.

If it is intended to object to the order of sessions as bad on the face thereof upon any grounds not raised by the special case, the certiorari must be moved for in open court, and such additional grounds of objection stated. Reg. v. Heyop, 8 Q. B. 547; 2 New Sess. Cas. 270; 15 L. J., M. C. 70; 10 Jur. 200.

Acquittals, ]—A certiorari lies to the justices at sessions to bring up the record of an acquittal remaining in the court. Jackson v. Oaks, 11 Jur. 1105.

Whether or not a justice of the peace may draw up a corrected record of a summary conviction after he has returned one record of it totion, subject to a case to be stated for the Court | the quarter sessions, he cannot do so in a case-where the first conviction has been brought up by certiorari and quashed. Chancy v. Payne, 1 G. & D. 348; 1 Q. B. 712; 6 Jur. 80.

Practice on.]-The court will not quash a conviction unless the original record is brought up. Rey. v. Brickhall, 12 W. R. 909.

where a conviction is removed no motion can be made in arrest of judgment, unless the defendant is personally present. Rex v. Spraggs, 1 W. Bl. 209.

The proper practice upon the return of a certiorari to remove a conviction is, that the case should be put into the Crown paper. Reg. v. Lord, 16 L. J., M. C. 15.

e. To Remove Orders of Sessions.

Jurisdiction of Justices.]—When an order of justices is returned, and the proceedings are regular in practice, and the case is one over which the justices had jurisdiction, the court will not hear affidavits impeaching their decision on the facts; nor, if they return the evidence, will it review their judgment thereupon. Reg. v. Bolton, 4 P. & D. 679; 1 Q. B. 66; 5 Jur. 1154.

The test of jurisdiction under this rule is whether or not the justices had power to enter upon the inquiry, not whether their conclusions, in the course of it, were true or not. Ib.

It may be shewn by affidavit that they had no authority to commence an inquiry, inasmuch as the question brought before them was not one to which their jurisdiction extended; and this, although, by mis-statement, they have made the proceedings on the face of them regular. Ib.

The repealed Highway Act, 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 80, which took away the certiorari, did not extend to cases where the justices at sessions acted wholly without jurisdiction. Therefore, where justices at the petty sessions made an order for the allowance of the accounts of a surveyor of highways, which accounts had not previously been verified before one justice, pursuant to the requisites of s. 48:—Held, that they acted wholly without jurisdiction; that their order was not a proceeding had pursuant to the act; and, consequently, that a certiorari lay to remove it for the purpose of having it quashed. Row v. Somersatshire J.T., 6 D. & R. 469; see S. C., 5 B. & C. 816; 8 D. & R. 738; 5 L. J. (0.8.) M. C. 35.

An order of sessions confirming a rate was removed by certiorari into the Queen's Bench; that court quashed the order of sessions. subsequent rate having been made by the sessions, open to the same objection, pending the argument on the case, but against which no appeal was made:—Held, that as the objection was made express matter for an appeal to the sessions, the appellants were not entitled to have the rate quasiled on certiorari, it being good npon the face of it. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 1 P. & D. 402; 9 A. & E. 540; 2 W. W. & H. 100; 8 L. J., M. C. 85.

Order of Petty Sessions Affirmed on Appeal to Quarter Sessions—Order of Quarter Sessions Quashed on Certiorari.]—An order made in petty sessions is not affected by the quashing on certiorari of an affirming order by quarter sessions. Suffolk County Lunatic Asylum v. Stow Union, 76 L. T. 494; 45 W. R. 620; 61 J. P.

Vaccination Order - Costs - Enforcement-Distress—Imprisonment.]—Sect. 6 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, repeals s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, only so far as the latter gives justices jurisdiction to enforce by distress and imprisonment an order directing the payment of money when such order was made on a complaint that a sum of money was claimed to be due. W. was summoned under s. 31 of the Vaccination Act, 1867, to shew cause why he should not have his child vaccinated, and an order was made on the summons directing that he should have the child vaccinated within a given time, and also directing that he should pay the costs of the order, and on his failure to do so that there should be distress, and in default of distress he should be imprisoned. On certiorari to quash this order :-Held, that it was good under s. 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848. Reg. v. Burrows, Wilson, Ex parte, 77 L. T. 338; 46 W. R. 29; 61 J. P. 724.

When Order has been Quashed on Appeal.] Where an appeal against an order of removal has been tried with the acquiescence of the appellants and the respondents, and the order quashed, a certiorari to remove the proceedings for the purpose of quashing the order of sessions will not be granted, although the respondents received no notice of trial, as required by a rule of court of the sessions, and were consequently wholly unprepared for the trial. Rew v. York-shire (E. R.) JJ., 3 N. & M. 93.

Order sent to Justices to be Re-stated-Reversal by them. -A certiorari removing an order of sessions, which order, upon being sent back to the sessions for re-statement, is reversed by them, does not operate to remove the new order of sessions. Rew v. Blowam, 3 N. & M. 385; 1 A. & E. 386; 3 L. J., M. C. 115.

For Payment of Costs.]-On an application for a certiorari to bring up an order of sessions for payment of costs, on the ground that the costs were taxed after the sessions had expired, the court refused the writ on the ground that the party should have objected at the time of taxation. Wutkins, Ex purte, 5 L. T. 605; 10 W. R. 249.

A divisional court granted a writ of certiorari to quash an order of justices for the abatement to quist an overer of insteas for the anaement of a missure:—Held, that this being a criminal matter, the court had no jurisdiction to give costs, as Ord. XLV. did not apply. Semble, the court could not give costs to successful applicants for certiorari to quash orders, whether the matter be civil or criminal. Reg. v. Parlby (No. 2), 53 J. P. 744.

Justices Interested in Subject of Order. The court will not grant a certiorari in the first instance to remove an order for the appointment of overseers for the purpose of having it quashed, on a suggestion that the justices made the appointment from corrupt and improper motives; the propriety of the appointment being matter of appeal to the sessions. Rex v. Somersetshire J.I., 1 D. & R. 443.

Where an order of quarter sessions confirming a conviction is void on the ground of interest in the justices, the court will grant a certiorari to bring up the order for the purpose of quashing it, with a view to a mandamus to enter continuances and hear the appeal. Hopkins, Ewparte, El. Bl. & El. 100; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 529.

- Before Filing with Clerk of Peace. - K. was charged with opening his premises for sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday within the prohibited hours, and was convicted and fined bl., and also 13s. 6d. for costs. The conviction, when drawn up, contained no clause of distress, but ordered imprisonment in default of payment: -Semble, the justices might draw up a fresh conviction containing the clause of distress, any time before filing it with the clerk of the peace. Kenyon, Ex parte, 45 J. P. 303,

Indictment for Misdemeanor. ]-The affidavit in support of an application for a certiorari to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor must be brought within the terms of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1853, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 4. Rey. v. Gete Tulford Inhabitants, 3 W. R. 212. S. P., Reg. v. Russell, 1 W. R. 171.

- Under Malicious Injuries to Property Act.]—A conviction by justices, under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), s. 52, cannot be brought up upon a writ of certiorari on the ground that their jurisdiction was ousted by a mere bona fide claim of right.

Reg. v. Mussett, 26 L. T. 429; 20 W. R. 670.

The proviso in s. 52, that "nothing herein contained shall extend to any ease where the party acted under a fair and reasonable supposition that he had a right to do the act complained of," impliedly restricts the exemption of bona fide claims of right from summary jurisdiction to cases where the justices are satisfied of the fairness and reasonableness. 1b.

For Selling Meat unfit for Food.]—A conviction under s. 63 of the repealed Public Health Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Viet, c. 63, for selling ment unfit for food, could only be removed on certiorari on the ground of excess of jurisdiction, Reg. v. Staffordshire JJ., 16 L. T. 430.

Effect of Railways Clauses Consolidation Act. -The Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, is so incorporated with the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, 10 & 11 Viet. c. 84, as to take away the right to remedy by certiorari. Ib.

Quarter Sessions-Amendment of Summary Conviction imposing Imprisonment in Default of Distress—Striking out "hard labour."]—The defendant was convicted by a metropolitan police magistrate under the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, 54 & 56 Vict. c. 76, for not abating a nuisance. The conviction imposed a fine and imprisonment with hard labour in default of distress. The defendant paid the fine without appealing to quarter sessions :-Held, on certiorari, that the conviction must be quashed. Reg. v. London JJ., Saunders, Exparte, 64 L. J., M. C. 278; 72 L. T. 568; 18 Cox, C. O. 153; 59 J. P. 279.

- Together with Special Case. - On an appeal against a conviction under the Cruelty passed for the more effectual prevention of cruelty to animals, the sessions, with the consent of counsel on both sides, confirmed the convic-of the conviction, shewing such conviction to have been properly made. Austin, Exparte, 50 purpose of bringing up the conviction and the L. J., M. C. 8; 44 L. T. 102; 45 J. P. 502. no conviction, judgment or proceeding relative thereto, shall be removed by certificatin, or otherwise, into any superior court :—Held, that the writ of certiorari, having been taken away generally, without any exception, in favour of a special case, the consent of the parties could not give the court jurisdiction, and therefore that the writ had issued improvidently, and must be quashed. Reg. v. Chantrell, 44 L. J., M. C. 94; L. R. 10 Q. B. 587; 33 L. T. 305; 23 W. R. 707.

> Under Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879. —The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, 42 & 48 Vict. c. 49, s. 40, renders a writ of certiorari nnnecessary to bring up a case stated by sessions on a rating appeal. The clerk of the peace, on receiving notice from the solicitor of the party requiring it, should send up the case to the Crown Office. Clark v. Alderbury Union, 29 W. R. 334,

Several Orders to the same Effect. -- Three orders for payment of a rate had been made upon the members of a bridge company; one of them had been brought up by certiorari. The court made a rule absolute for a certiorari to bring up the others. The proper course is to apply to the court, when the orders come up, to stay proceedings upon two of them, until one is disposed of. Reg. v. Chasemore, 12 Jur. 11.

Sessions Confirming Justices. - Where an order of sessions confirming an order of justices is removed by certiorari, the writ does not necessarily bring up the original order of justices. Reg. v. Cornwall JJ., 1 New Sess. Cas. 414; 9 Jnr. 110.

Recognizance to Keep the Peace. ] defendant was arrested and taken before a magistrate on a charge of using threats towards F. O. The magistrate, after hearing the evidence of F. O., refused, on the application of the defendant, to adjourn the case, and compelled him at once to enter into recognizances to keep the peace towards F. O. for twelve months, The defendant subsequently brought an action against F. O. for a malicious prosecution, and recovered a verdict for 25l. He then applied to the court for a certiorari to remove the recognizances and information, in order that the recognizances might be discharged :-Held, that the certificari should not be granted, as he had already vindi-ented his character by recovering damages for the malicious prosecution; and further, that as the magistrate had acted on an information on oath, the court could not interfere. Reg. v. Groves, S L. T. 311.

Justices-Dismissal of Summons. |- In no case can a certiorari issue to remove and quash an order of dismissal of a summons by justices, Reg. v. Antrim J.J., [1895] 2 Ir. R. 603.

f. Restraint by Statute.

Generally. ]-A certiorari cannot be taken away by any general, but only by express, negative words. Rew v. Reeve, 1 W. Bl. 231.

If a statute, creating an offence, gives cognizance of it to one justice, with an appeal to the sessions, and takes away the certiorari as to all the proceedings, and afterwards further powers for the punishment of the offender are given to the sessions by another statute, which does not take away the certiorari, the clause for taking away the certiorari in the former act cannot be extended to the proceedings under the latter. Res v. Terret, 2 Term Rep. 735.

Jurisdiction to Grant.]—When a certiorari is said to be taken away by statute, the superior court is not absolutely deprived of the power to issue the writ; but its action as to the writ is controlled and limited, and it cannot quash the order removed by certiorari except upon the ground either of a manifest defect of jurisdiction in the tribunal that made the order, or of maniffest fraud in the party procuring it. Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Willan, 43 L. J., P. C. 39; L, R. 5 P. C. 417; 30 L, T. 237; 22 W. R. 516.

Matters on which the defect of jurisdiction depends may be apparent on the face of the repeated in the interest of the face of the proceedings, or may be brought before the superior court by affidavit, but they must be extrinsic to the adjudication impeached. Ib.

Objections on the ground of defect of juris-diction may be founded on the character and constitution of the inferior court, the nature of the subject-matter of the inquiry, or the absence of some preliminary proceeding which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the inferior court. Ib.

The objection of defect of jurisdiction cannot be entertained if it rests solely on the ground that the judge has erroneously found a fact which was essential to the validity of his order, but which he was competent to try. Ib.

A section in an act of parliament taking away the writ of certiorari does not apply in the ease of a total absence of jurisdiction. Bradlaugh, Ev parte, 3 O. B. D. 509. And see also next case,

____ No Affidavits in Answer to.]—By the repealed Excise Management Act, 1827, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 79, no certiorari shall be issued at the suit of the defendant out of any of the courts of record to remove an information before justices of the peace in pursuance of any excise. act, or a judgment thereon ; provided, that nothing herein contained shall extend to a certiorari sued on behalf of his majesty out of the exchequer. A conviction of G. for committing an offence against the excise laws, maliciously, and with intent to injure his master, under the repealed Malt Duties Act, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 52, s. 46, having been removed by certiorari, a rule was obtained on behalf of the Crown, and served upon G., calling upon the convicting justices to show cause why the conviction should not be quashed. The affidavits charged frand by the master in procuring the conviction, for the purpose of relieving himself of penalties incurred by him. There were no affidavits in answer :-Held, that the court must take the charge to be admitted: and consequently had jurisdiction to quash the and consequently mat jurisdiction to quasic the conviction, notwithstanding 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 79. Therefore, where a party was convicted and adjudged to pay 2s. 6d. as a penalty, and 2l. 7s. 6d. for costs, and gave notice of appeal, afterwards abandoned, and the sessions made an order upon him to pay a certain sum to the respondent towards his costs, on the appeal the court issued a certiorari to bring up the last mentioned order to be quashed, though s. 26 prohibits removal by

When Right not expressly taken away.]—If jurisdiction is given to an inferior court of common law to try a new offence created by statute, the proceedings may be removed by habeas corpus cum causa, or certiorari, unless expressly taken away: unless in cases where the statute creating the offence prescribes a special jurisdiction not known to the common law. Hartley v. Hooker, Cowp. 524.

When Order has been made without Jurisdiction.]—The adoptive Public Health Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63 [repealed], by s. 55 empowered a local board of health to make by-laws for the removal by the occupier of dust, ashes, rubbish, filth, mannre, dung and soil, in or by the side of any street; and s. 115 provided that such bylaws shall not be of force until confirmed by a secretary of state. A by-law required all ocenpiers within the district to remove all snow or other obstructions from the footpath, opposite their premises, before nine a.m. Upon an information before a magistrate for disobedience to the by-law, it was objected that the by-law was void; but he decided that he could not enter into the question of the validity of the by-law, because it had been allowed by a secretary of state, and convicted the party for the alleged offence:—Held, that snow was not within the terms of s. 55, and therefore the by-law was invalid, and that the magistrate had exceeded his jurisdiction, and therefore a certiorari might ns jurisinesion, and therefore a certainfair inight issue, although it was taken away by s. 137. Reg. v. St. Albans JJ., 22 L. J., M. C. 142: 17 Jur. 581.

is taken away by statute, it will nevertheless lie in the case of excess of jurisdiction; but a merely formal defect in an information whereby an alleged offence is not properly stated is not an Breadley, 63 L. J., M. C. 183; 10 R. 183; 70 L. T. 379; 17 Cox, C. C. 739; 58 J. P. 199.

When Order has been made by Interested Magistrates.]-A paving act empowered commissioners to levy rates, giving to parties grieved an appeal to the quarter sessions, whose order was to be final; and no order, rate, &c., was to be removed by certiorari. On appeal against a rate, the respondents objected to the admission of certain evidence; the sessions, by a majority of eleven magistrates to eight, held the cyldence Tolzey Court of Bristol a writ of foreign attach-clause as to the certiorari related as well to the | admissible; three of the eleven magistrates were partners in a company to which belonged certain premises assessed to the rate in the name of the occupier. The sessions quashed the rate :-Held, that a question in the cause having been decided by a court improperly constituted, on account of the interest of the three magistrates, the clause prohibiting certiorari did not operate; and the court had the order of sessious brought up by certiorari, and quashed it on affidavit of the above facts, although the affidavits did not satisfy the court that the magistrates had acted partially. Reg. v. Cheltenham Commissioners, 1 Q. B. 467; 1 G. & D. 167; 10 L. J., M. C. 99. S. P., Reg. v. Aberdare Canal Co., 14 Q. B. 854.

But if a party to the appeal, knowing of the interest, expressly or impliedly assents to the interested magistrate acting, such party cannot afterwards make the objection. Ih.

Upon an application to remove an indictment into previously to the writ being issned, although, the other defendants be convicted; and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5, makes no difference in this respect. Reg. v. Jewell, 7 El. & Bl. 140; 26 L. J., Q. B. 177; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 5 W. R. 202.

> On Removal of Presentment. |-If a person against whom a presentment is made by a court of sewers obtains a certiorari to remove it into the Court of Oneen's Bench, he must, before the allowance of the writ, enter into the recogniz-ance required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 33, s. 2. Rea. v. Baker, 28 L. J., Q. B. 377; 7 W. R. 476.

c. Notice.

When necessary.]-A certiorari to remove an indietment from the sessions may be sued out by the prosecutor without giving six days' previous notice. Rew v. Battams, 1 East, 298.

The words "party, person," &c., in the statute, do not include the Crown; therefore, a certiorari on the motion of the attorney-general, was directed to issue, although the time limited by the statute for applications for such writs had clapsed and the directions in it, relative to notice to the justices, had not been complied with by the Crown. Rew v. Berkeley, 1 Ld. Ken. 80.

The notice of such motion must be given to the justices, notwithstanding the order of sessions was made subsequently to the opinion of the court, on a case to be stated, which was the case afterwards stated and settled by the justices at the sessions. Rew v. Sussew J.J., 1 M. & S. 631,

Service of.]-Notice of intention to move for a certiorari "on the first day of next term, or so soon after as I can be heard," is irregular, if served on the first day of that term, though the party does not, in fact, move till after the expiration of six days, Flounders, In re, 4 B. & Ad. 865; 1 N. & M. 592.

The notice of application for a certiorari was sworn to have been served on F. S. and another justice, "who were present at the sessions," when the appeal mentioned in the notice was heard and were and are two of the instices "by and before whom the order of sessions mentioned in the notice was made." The notice was signed by J. M., the attorney for the inhabitants of "the respondent parish":—Held, that the service was sufficient, inasmuch as F. S., under the circumstanees, must be considered as a member of the court, and one of the justices who made the order. Reg. v. Suffolk, 18 Q. B. 416; 21 L. J., M. C. 169; 16 Jur. 612.

Service of notice of certiorari upon two justices, sworn to have been present at the hearing of the appeal, is sufficient. Reg. v. Cornwall JJ., 1 New Sess, Cas. 414: 9 Jur. 110.

- Affidavit of.]-An affidavit of service of notice for a certiorari to remove an order of justices stating, "that the deponent did serve N., esquire, one of the justices, at the dwellinghouse and usual place of abode of him, R. N., at, &c., by leaving a duplicate or counterpart of the notice with W. R., the medical assistant of R. N., he R. N. being ill in bed," is insufficient, as it does not appear that the service of the notice upon W. R. was at the dwelling-house of R. N. Reg. v. Nunn, 1 New Sess. Cas. 49.

An affidavit must shew distinctly that the by certiforar by one of several defendants, the justices upon whom the notice of the intended judge may order him to enter into a recognizance application for the writ was served, were present, to pay the costs, not only if he, but if, either of judd taking a part in the proceedings when the order was made. It was stated in an affidavit! that the deponent was present at the sessions on the day when the order was made, and did then and there see E. and L., the justices served, acting as justices of the peace:—Held, insufficient, as not shewing they were the justices by and before whom the order was made, although their names were set out in the caption of the order of sessions. Reg. v. St. James, Colchester, 2 L.

M. & P. 314; 20 L. J., M. C. 203; 15 Jur. 467. On the 20th of April, the quarter sessions granted a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench; on the 13th October, notice in writing of an intended application for a certiorari, to bring up the order of sessions, was served upon two justices: on the 20th October, an application was made at chambers for a judge's fiat, allowing the issue of a certiorari; no judge being in town on that day, an affidavit of notice to the justices, and of the other necessary facts, was sworn before a commissioner, and on the same day the affidavit was filed at the Crown Office, and a eertiorari issued; on the 21st of October, the judge's flat was obtained, and filed at the Crown Office. Upon motion to quash the writ quia improvide emanavit :- Held, first, that the notice to the justices on the 13th of October, was in abundant time, and that such notice on the 14th of October would have been sufficient. Reg. v. St. Mary, Whitechapel, 2 D. (N.S.) 964; 12 L. J., M. C. 85; 7 Jur. 602.

Held, secondly, that, upon shewing cause against the rule for quashing the writ, which was sought to be sustained, upon the ground that the writ had been granted upon an insufficient affidavit of the service of notice, it was competent to the party shewing cause to produce affidavits in explanation of such affidavit of ser-

An affidavit that notice had been given to J. T. and H. W., two justices of the peace present at the sessions, at which the appeal mentioned in the notice came on for hearing, is insufficient, as it does not shew that J. T. and H. W. were actually present on the beach when the appeal was heard. Reg. v. W. R. JJ., 1 New Sess. Cas. 406; 2 D. & L. 500; 14 L. J., M. C. 41; 9 Jur. 133.

Writ will only issue at instance of Party giving Notice.]—A certiorari cannot be issued at the instance of any but the party who has given such notice, although he avowedly drops the proceeding, and although it is too late to give a fresh notice. Rew v. Kent JJ., 3 B. & Ad. 250 : 1 L. J., M. C. 29.

Contents of. ]-The notice must state upon the face of it the name of the party applying for the writ. Rew v. Lancashire J.J., 4 B. & Ald. 289.

In support of an application for a certiorari to remove an order of justices, the party sning forth the writ must be identified on affidavit with the party who gave the notice to the justices. Such notice ought to specify the name of the party intending to sue forth the writ. Reg. v. Shreves-bury JJ, 9 D. P. C. 501; 10 L. J., M. C. 8; 5 Jur. 291; S. C., nom. Reg. v. How, 4 P. & D. 320; 11 A. & E. 159.

It must also appear, affirmatively, on affidavit, that the justices to whom notice was given were the justices who made the order. The court will not infer the identity from the mere coincidence of names and descriptions in the order and notice, and affidavit of service. Ib.

The enlargement by consent of the rule nisi for the certiorari will not cure objections to the notice. Ib.

The quarter sessions having confirmed an order of removal subject to a case, a notice of the intention of the appellant parish to apply for a certiorari was addressed to "J. S. and T. H., two of her majesty's justices," for the West Riding of the county of York; and an affidavit of service of such notice stating, that the deponent served "J. S. and T. H. M., two of her majesty's justices of the peace" for the West Riding, is insufficient. by reason of its not stating, that the justices so served were two of the justices before whom the order of sessions was made. Reg. v. Cartworth, 1 D. & L. 837; 3 G. & D. 162; 5 Q. B. 201; 13 L. J., M. C. 26; 7 Jur. 1129.

The caption of an order of sessions contained the names of A. and B. as two of the justices before whom the order was made; and it was also sworn on behalf of an applicant for a certiorari, who was not at the sessions, that A. and B, were two of the justices present at the sessions at which such order was made :- Held, against the party serving the order of sessions, that notice of motion for the writ upon A. and B. was sufficient. Reg. v. Sevenouks, 1 New Sess. Cas. 595; 7 Q. B. 136; 14 L. J., M. C. 92;

9 Jur. 489.

It is necessary that the notice should be, in the first instance, sworn to have been given to two justices, before whom the order was made; and an omission in this respect cannot be supplied by a subsequent affidavit. Reg. v. Gilbersome, 13 L. J., M. C. 46. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Gilberdyke, 5 Q. B. 207; 8 Jur. 792.

A notice "in six days from the giving of this notice, or as soon after as counsel can be heard," is sufficient. Reg. v. Builey or Rose, 3 D. & L. 359; 2 New Sess, Cas. 166; 15 L. J., M. C. 6.

An affidavit that the notice of motion was served on three justices (naming them), and that they were present at the trial and hearing of the appeal, is a sufficient notice to the justices making the order. Reg. v. Wilts JJ., 9 D. P. C. 524; 10 L. J., M. C. 25; 5 Jur. 291.

Length of. ]-The notice must be made six days, computing one day exclusively and one day inclusively, before the rule nisi is applied for. Rev v. Cumberland J.J., 4 N. & M. 378; 1 H. & W. 16. S. P., Rew v. Goodenough, 2 A. & E. 463 : Roberts, Ex parte, 50 J. P. 567.

Rule nisi-Notice to Justices, a Condition Precedent, ]—The six days' notice to the justices, required by rule 33 of the Crown Office Rules. 1886, as a preliminary to the grant of a writ of certiorari must precede the motion for a rule nisi, and not merely the motion for the rule absolute. Roberts, Ex parte, supra.

By whom Signed.]—A notice to justices of a motion to be made for a certiorari "on behalf of the churchwardens and overseers of S.," if signed by one churchwarden, is not a smilicient notice by the "party or parties suing forth" the writ. Rew v. Cumbridgeshire JJ., 8 B. & Ad. 887; 1 L. J., M. C. 97.

A notice signed "W. and S., attorneys for the overseers of the parish of K.," is sufficiently signed. Reg. v. Westmoreland JJ., 7 Jur. 899. S. P., Rex v. Abergele, 1 N. & P. 235; 5 A. & E. 795: 2 H. & W. 375.

A notice, signed in the name of a solicitor, who describes himself "solicitor for the present amount of the assessment:—Held, that an ehurchwardens and overseers of Market Harapplication for a certionari to remove the pre-borough," is sufficiently signed.  $\mathit{Heg}_v$ .  $\mathit{Solly}_s$ , sentenent and other proceedings, in Easter Texture and the proceedings, in Easter Texture and the proceedings in Easter Texture and the 9 D. P. C. 115; 1 W. P. C. 6.

Where the applicants are the churchwardens and overseers of a parish, it is unnecessary that it should give their names. Ib.

A notice of an intended application for a certiorari to remove an order relating to a borough, signed by "A. and B., solicitors for C., a ratesigned by "A. and B., solicitors for C., a rate-payer of the township of M., within and part of the said borough," is prima facle proof of notice from the party suing forth the writ, without any affidiavit by C. that the solicitors acted by his authority, Reg. v. Leavashive JL, 3 P. & D. 86; 11 A. & E. 144; 9 L. J., Q. B. 9; 4 Jnr. 121.

A notice of motion for a certiorari to remove an order of quarter sessions, made on appeal, setting forth the names of the appellant and of the respondents, and subscribed by "J. B., attorney for the respondents," is sufficient, though it does not expressly state that the respondents are the parties suing forth the writ. Reg. v. Wilts JJ., 9 D. P. C. 524; 10 L. J., M. C. 25; 5 Jur. 291.

A notice for a certiorari to bring up an allowance of accounts by a poor-law auditor, under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844, 7 & 8 Viet. c. 101, s. 35, signed by an attorney on behalf of the inhabitants of a parish, is sufficient. Reg. v. Chiddingstone, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 125.

d. Limitation of Time.

Six Calendar Months. ] - A certiorari to remove a conviction must be applied for within six months after the date of such conviction. Rew

v. Bunghey, 4 Term Rep. 281; 2 R. R. 381.
So, to remove an order of sessions. Ann.,
Lofft, 544. S. P., Rey. v. Anglesea JJ., 1 B. C. Rep. 75; 10 Jur. 816.

So, to remove an order of sessions confirming an order of removal by two justices, must be moved for within six calendar months after such order of sessions made. Res. v. Sussea J.J., 1

M. & S. 631.

So, where the order is subject to a ease to be stated, the certiorari must be applied for within six months after making the order of sessions, and not within six months after settling the case.

Rev. v. Susser JJ., 1 M. & S. 734.

- How Calculated.]-The six months run from the date when the sessions adjudicate on the appeal, and not from the date of the original order of justices. Reg. v. Morrice, 2 D. & L. 952; 1 New Sess. Cas. 585; 14 L. J., M. C. 75; 9 Jur. 731.

A certiorari to remove an order for stopping a highway may be applied for within six calendar months after such order has been confirmed at sessions, though more than six calendar months have clapsed since the order was made. Rew v. Middlesex JJ., 5 A. & E. 626; 1 N. & P. 92; 6 L. J., M. C. 10.

In August, 1841, a sewers' jury made a presentment of several persons, who received benefit, or avoided damage, from certain sewers; one of the persons, at a subsequent court, delivered in a paper purporting to be a traverse of the presentment. This was specially demurred to by the clerk to the commissioners for informality; the clock to the commissioners for informality | (b) If a certomar were appeared by a support and his and in September, 1841, the traverse was held only to state that the party applying and his immifficient, and in amended traverse refused, solicitor did not know at the time that one of the control of the and an assessment made upon the party. In the justices was interested. Reg. v. Kent JJ., July, 1842, he was distrained upon for the 44 J. P. 298.

1843, was made too late. Reg. v. Tower Hamlets Commissioners of Sewers, 13 L. J., Q. B. 12; 7 Jnr. 1169.

Application made within Six Months—Absence of Judge. ]—If a party attends with all necessary materials for making an application for a certiorari on the last day of the six months allowed for making such an application, and leaves his papers with the judge's clerk for the purpose of being laid before the judge, and states the nature of his application, the application will be considered in time, even though no indge should be at chambers on that day, and no decision given till a subsequent day. Reg. v. Allan or Hodgson, 4 B. & S. 915; 33 L. J., M. C. 98; 10 Jur. (N.s.) 796; 9 L. T. 761; 12 W. R. 423. But sec Reg. v. Hodgson, 9 L. T. 711.

The court refused a certiorari to bring up an order of sessions made subject to a case more than six months after the making of the order, where application had been made at chambers within the time, but had failed in consequence of non-attendance of a judge there until after the six months had expired. Linbeblig, In re, 2. New Sess. Cas. 315; 15 L. J., M. C. 92. S. P., Rey. v. Anglesen JJ., 1 B. C. Rep. 75; 10 Jur.

e. Affidavits.

How Intitled.]-In moving for a rule for a certiorari, it is irregular to intitle the affidavits on which the motion is founded in any cause : and if they are intitled they cannot be read. Nohro, Ex parte, 1 B. & C. 267. S. P., Reg. v. Walworth, 1 B. C. Rep. 258; 4 D. & L. 403; 10

Affidavits in support of an application to quash a certiorari, bringing up an order of justices for stopping up a road, must be intitled in the names of the parties in the proceeding, and not merely "in the Queen's Bench." Reg. v. Jones, 8 D. P. C. 80; 4 Jur. 365.

Affidavits on which a rule nisi is obtained to set aside a rule absolute for a certiorari before it has issued may be intitled "in the Queen's Bench," without naming the parties. Reg. v. Chasemore, 12 Jnr. 11,

Contents of, where Decision sought to be set aside by reason of Justices being Interested.]-W. having applied to the licensing justices for a licence for a new hotel, and the three justices who were sitting having refused it, afterwards applied to the court for a mandamus to have the case heard again on the ground that B., one of the justices, was interested as owner in one of the licensed houses near the proposed hotel. The affidavits shewed that B.'s wife had succeeded to the licensed house, and was tenant for life, but it was a small house without hotel accommodation, and not likely to be injured by the new licence being granted :- Held, (a) that a mandamus could not be granted because the decision not having been set aside or quashed on certiorari, the ease could not be heard again : (b) If a certiorari were applied for, the affidavits Jurat.]-In the jurat of an affidavit sworn in the country for a certiorari, the commissioner's name should be preceded by the words "before and the omission of them is a fatal defect, and not a mere irregularity. Reg. v. Norburg, 2 New Sess. Cas. 344; 15 L. J., Q. B. 264. S. P., Reg. v. Blarham, 6 Q. B. 528; 1 New Sess. Cas. 370; 2 D. & L. 168; 14 L. J., Q. B. 13; 8 Jur. 1117.

For what Admissible.]-On a return to a certiorari for bringing up an order of magistrates, made in a matter over which an act of parliament had given them original and final jurisdiction as to the merits, affidavits are admissible to shew that the charge made before the magistrates was one over which they had no jurisdiction; but when a sufficient charge, appearing on the face of the information to be within their jurisdiction, is brought before them, they act within their jurisdiction in commencing the inquiry, and affidavits are not admissible to shew that they came to a wrong conclusion. Reg. v. Bolton, 4 P. & D. 679; 1 Q. B. 66; 5 Jur. 1154.

The court will not allow the evidence in the court below to be supplemented by affidavit of other facts which occurred at the time of the offence, but were not given in evidence before the court below. Reg. v. Cork County JJ., 15 Cox. C. C. 78.

When Necessary, -Where a certiorari is moved for to bring up the depositions against a person charged with felony, in order to have him bailed in the country, an affidavit that he cannot afford to be brought up into court by habeas corpus is not necessary. Reg. v. Gregory, 1 W. P. C. 4; 4 Jur. 1015.

In moving for a certiorari to bring up depositions taken before a coroner or magistrate, with a view to admitting a party committed for trial on a charge of murder or manslaughter, it is the proper course to produce copies of such depositions verified by affidavit, and on them to ground the application. Roy. v. Bartholomy, Dears. C. C. 60; 17 Jur. 184.

A certiorari will not be granted to bring up an inquisition of a compensation jury, unless defects in the inquisition are positively sworn to. Rey. v. Manchester and Leeds Ry., 8 A. & E. 413; 3 N. & P. 439; 1 W. W. & H. 458; 8 L. J., Q. B. 66; 2 Jur. 857.

f. Motion and Rule.

Rule.]—There must be a rule nisi in the first instance for a certiorari, to remove proceedings of the commissioners of sewers. Auon., 2 Chit.

The rule for removing an indictment for nonrepair of a road from an inferior jurisdiction is nisi in the first instance. Rev v. Leeds, 5 D. P. C. 128.

In order to remove an indictment for a misdemeanor, the rule is absolute in the first instance, but in the case of a felony it is nisi. Re Spencer, 8 D. P. C. 127; 1 W. W. & H. 418.

A rule for a certiorari to remove a record from an inferior jurisdiction is absolute in the first instance. Pausey v. Goodey, 3 D. P. C. 605.

The rule for a certiorari, under 19 Geo. 3, c. 70, s. 4, is absolute in the first instance, and applies to all cases where the defendant re-moves himself and his effects out of the inferior jurisdiction. Knowles v. Lynch, 2 D. P. C.

In formâ pauperis.]-Where a defendant removes an indictment by certiorari, being, at the period when the indictment is removed, a prisoner in a debtors' prison, the court will allow him tosue in forma panperis. Nicholson, Ex parte, 4 Jur. 506.

Application by Two Parties—Death of One. ]-Where a certiorari was granted on the application of two parties, and one of them died before the matter came on for argument, the court heard the case notwithstanding. Rev v. Yorkshire (N. R.) JJ., 9 D. & R. 204.

Notice of Rule.]-Where an order of sessions has been returned under a certiorari, and a rule has been obtained to quash the order, it is a good preliminary objection to an argument on such rule, that no notice of it has been served on the justices who made the order, although served on the parties interested in supporting it. Reg. v. Spackman, 9 D. P. C. 1060.

Confirmation of Order by Quashing Rule. ]-Under 5 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 2, an order removed by certiorari is confirmed by simply discharging the rule for quashing it. Reg. v. Latchford, 6 Q. B. 567

Appeal on.]-On a point reserved on the trial of an indictment for non-repair of a highway, removed by certiorari, there cannot be an appeal to a court of error. Reg. v. Hawkhurst, 11 W. R.

No appeal lies in a case of a certiorari. Boston v. Lelièvre, 39 L. J., P. C. 17; L. R. S. P. C. 157; 22 L. T. 735; 18 W. R. 408.

A rule for a certiorari having been obtained in the Queen's Bench Division to bring up a summary conviction by justices to quash it on the ground of want of jurisdiction, the court dis-charged the rule:—Held, that the case was within the last clause of s. 47 of the Judienture Act, 1873, as a judgment of the High Court in a criminal matter, and that there was therefore noappeal, Reg. v. Fletcher, 46 L. J., M. C. 4; 2 Q. B. D. 43; 35 L. T. 538; 25 W. R. 149; 13. Cox, C. C. 358-C. A.

Leave to Appeal not Required. ]-An appeal from an order of the Queen's Bench Division, discharging a rule for a certiorari to bring up am order of justices in petty sessions, is not an appeal from an inferior court within s. 45 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and no leave to appeal is required. Reg. v. Pemberton, Reg. v. Swith, 49 L. J., M. C. 29; 5 Q. B. D. 95; 41 L. T. 664; 28 W. R. 362; 44 J. P. 184-C. A.

Argument of Rule for Certiorari Simultaneously with Case under Summary Jurisdiction. Act, 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43. ]-A. was convicted for having woollen materials suspected to have been embezzled on his premises; he applied and obtained a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench under the Summary Inrisdiction Act, 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, which was in due-course entered in the Crown paper; he after-wards, but before the argument of the case, ascertained that the convicting justices were connected with the woollen trade, contrary to-the Hosiery Act, 1848, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 40, s. 25. The court granted a rule nisi for a certiorari, to be heard at the same time as the special case. Reg. v. Armitage, 2 L. T. 459.

3 REPURN TO

Form of.]—A return to a certiorari need not be under seal. Rew v. Pichersgill, Cald. 297. The seals of justices of over and terminer are not essentially necessary for the removing and authenticating a record transmitted to the court. The return of justices to a certiorari is a mere ministerial act, which the court requires to be anthenticated in a particular form; but as it is a form prescribed by no positive law of the land, the court which requires it may receive and adopt any other authentic certificate, that the record transmitted is the genuine record of the court below; and the omission of the particular form can only be objected to by the court itself. Atkinson v. Reg., 3 Bro. P. C. 517.

The return of a certiorari must return the record itself, and not set it out according to its tenor. Askew v. Hayton, 1 D. P. C. 510.

The return to a certiorari to remove proceedings from an inferior court, setting out a copy of the record, but not returning the record itself, is irregular, and the court quashed the return on motion. Palmer v. Farsyth, 6 D. & R. 497; 4 B. & C. 410; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 260.

A return to a certiorari, to remove a cause, directed to the judge of an inferior court, certifying the cause, and claiming conusance by charter, is sufficient if good upon the face of it. Perrin v. West, 5 N. & M. 298; 3 A. & E. 405; 1 H. & W. 401.

Amendment of, ]—A return to a certiorari was sent back to justices by the court to be amended, because they did not put their seals to it, or describe themselves as justices. Rew v. Kenyon, 6 B. & C. 640 : 9 D. & R. 694.

The court refused a criminal information against a magistrate for returning to a certiforari a conviction of a party in another and more formal shape than that in which it was first drawn up, and of which a copy had been delivered to the party convicted by the magistrate's clerk; the conviction returned being warranted by the facts. Rew v. Barker, 1 East.

Distress Warrant — Action — Limitation of Time.]—Where to a certiorari, to bring up an order of justices for payment of money, enforced by a distress warrant, the justices returned that there was no order in writing, and the six months within which action had to be brought under the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, would elapse before cause could be shewn, the court quashed the return, and granted a rule nisi to draw up an order and return it with the warrant issued upon it. Roy. v. Trufford, Wilson, In re, 13 W. R. 55.

Enlargement of. ]-Return enlarged for a year on account of defendant's absence from England upon a voyage. Tomlinson, Richard, Ex parte, 20 L. T. 324.

Practice as to. —A defendant appealed to the sessions against a conviction on a penal statute, where the conviction was affirmed; afterwards the record was removed, and the conviction was quashed for a defect in the information: then the prosecutor moved either that the certiorari should be sent back to the magistrates, in order that they might return the original information (which had not the defect), or that a mandamus might issue to compel the magistrates to proceed on the original information; but the court refused to make such a rule. Hex v. Jukes, 8 Term. Rep. 625; 5 R. R. 445.

After a rule for a certiorari has been made absolute, and the return thereto filed, if the certionari issued improvide, the court will order it to be superseded, and the return taken off the file. Rew v. Wakefield, 1 Burr. 489; 2 Ld. Ken.

164. Third persons cannot object to the misdirection of a certiorari, to remove a cause from an inferior court, if the proper officers, in whose keeping the record is, waive the objection, and return the record upon such writ. Daniel v. Philips, 4 Term Rep. 499.

4. OHASHING WRIT.

When Writ will be Quashed.]—The court will not quash a certiorari, unless there is an admission, or something tantamount to it, by the party sning it out, that he has done it for the purpose of delay. Lundons v. Sheils, 3 D. P. C. 90.

The court will grant a rule absolute in the first instance, to quash a certiorari removing a cause out of an inferior court, which has been issued by the party moving to quash it, where no step has been taken by the other party. Ruffman v. Thornwell, 2 W. W. & H. 51.

A party indicted at sessions for obstructing a highway, obtained a certiorari, but, without informing the prosecutor that he had done so, gave notice of trial at a subsequent sessions. The prosecutor attended with his witnesses, and on the last day of the sessions, before the case was called on, the defendant lodged his certiorari. The court, under all the circumstances, quashed the certiorari, and ordered a procedendo. Rex v. Higgins, 5 A. & E. 554.

If a cause has been removed from an inferior court after judgment, a rule may be granted for quashing the certiorari, though the party is entitled to a rule for a procedendo. Ord v. Rubinson, W.W. & D. 593.

- For Misdescription of Conviction. ]-A conviction by instices of a borough on the 22nd September, 1846, for harbouring a scannar contrary to s. 40 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112 (repealed), was drawn up and returned to the Michaelmas sessions. On the 12th November, a certiorari at the suit of the attorney-general issued to remove the conviction, and on the 21st the justices returned a copy of it. On the 3rd December a certiorari issued to the justices of the county, to remove the record of a conviction by two justices assigned to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses and other misdemeanors committed within the borough, for certain trespasses and contempts against the form of the statute. On the 5th the conviction was returned. Each of the writs was issued without a rule to shew cause. On the 2nd January a rule for a concilium was obtained at the instance of the attorney-general, and one of the points for argument was, that the conviction was bad in not setting forth the evidence. The court in its discretion refused an application to have the couviction taken off the file and returned to the justices in order they might amend it, on the ground that the application was too late; and upon an application to quash the writ :- Held, that the form of the writ was right. Reg. v. Turk, 10 Q. B. 540; 16 L. J., M. C. 114; 11 Jur. 774. Held, secondly, that a misdescription of the conviction was no ground for quashing the writ after it had been obeyed and the conviction certiorari, set out a declaration in the inferior returned. Th

- For not Setting Out Order. ]-Where a certiorari had been issued to bring up an order under the Parochial Assessments Act, 1836, 6 & 7 Will, 4, c. 96, s. 6, and neither the order itself nor a copy was returned, the court quashed the writ of certiorari, as it neither set out the order nor stated that it was in writing, Reg. v. Wigan JJ., 8 Jur. 930.

Affidavits used in Proceedings to Quash. ]-Affidavits, on moving for a rule to quash a cer-tiorari, on the ground that it has issued improvidently, should not be intitled in a cause. Reg. v. Gilberdyke, 8 Jur. 792.

When Application to Quash should be made.] -A certiorari to bring up a case from the sessions was issued in December, 1848, on an affidavitof service of notice on two magistrates sworn to have been present at the time the order was made. A rule nisi to quash the order of sessions was obtained on the 5th May, in Easter Term, 1849, the return to the certiorari being filed nearly at the same time. A rule nisi to quash the certiorari on affidavit, denying the presence of one of those magistrates, obtained in Michaelmas Term, 1849, was too late. Rey. v. Basingstoke, 3 New Sess, Cas. 693; 6 D. & L. 303; 19 L. J., M. C. 28.

Where a case from the sessions comes on for argument, it is too late to take an objection to the form of the certiorari. Reg. v. Hordham, 11 A. & E. 73; 3 P. & D. 95; 9 L. J., M. C. 3; 4 Jur. 218.

5. Procedendo.

When Granted, ]-A certiorari to remove an order of sessions had been quashed, because the affidavit on which it issued omitted to state that the justices on whom it was served had been present at the making of the order. A fresh certiorari being subsequently moved for and refused, in consequence of more than six months having clapsed, application was then made for a mandamus, commanding the justices to enter continuances and hear; but, semble on the antecedent facts, there had been already a hearing of the appeal by the justices. On an intimation, however, that a doubt existed at the Crown Office as to whether it was the record or a transcript merely which had been returned and filed, the court granted a rule nisi for a procedendo to carry back the record to sessions. Reg. v. Curt-worth, 8 Jur. 360.

The 17 Geo. 3, e. 56, s. 14, imposes a penalty of 201, on any person having in his possession materials purloined or embezzled, which forfeiture may be levied by distress. By a conviction by two justices under this statute, the defendant was sentenced to a forfeiture of 201, or, in default, to be committed to prison. The conviction, having been subsequently quashed on appeal, subject to a case, was removed into the Queen's Singlet to a case, was tended into equeen's Benich by certification, and confirmed. A levarifacias issued for the penalty, to which there was a return of nulla bona. The court granted a procedendo to carry back to the sessions the record of conviction, commanding the justices to proceed to enforce execution against the defendant. Reg. v. Rushworth, 1 New Sess, Cas. 415 : 9 Jur. 161.

If the city of London, in their return to a court, containing a defective count, the court will not, therefore, refuse a procedendo. Clark v. Denton, 1 B. & Ad. 92; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 333.

Where a cause was removed from an inferior court after interlocutory judgment, and before inquiry, the court refused to award a procedendo, as the cause might be removed at any time before the sheriff's jury was sworn. Goldley v. Marsden, 6 Bing, 433 : 4 M, & P, 138 : 8 L, J, (o.s.) C. P.

A procedendo was denied to a borough court, who had tried a cause without the presence of an utter barrister of three years' standing. Fairley v. M. Connell, 1 Burr. 513.

Though a habeas corpus was not delivered to the sheriff's court in London till after interlocutory judgment and notice of inquiry, yet a procedendo was denied. Cow v. Hart, 2 Burr. 758.

If the judge of an inferior court of record receives a certiorari after the time limited by 21 Jae. 1, c. 23, s. 2, a procedendo will issue; and that although in the meantime the record has been filed in the court above. Larerach v. Bean, 3 M. & W. 62; 6 Dowl. P. C. 111; M. & H. 338; 7 L. J., Ex. 10 ; 1 Jur. 964.

If an indictment for felony has been removed from an inferior court, in order to issue process of outlawry upon it, and the party accused comes in, the court will award a procedendo to carry the record back. Res v. Perry, 5 Term Rep. 478.

When a prisoner was convicted of perjury in an inferior jurisdiction, and the sentence of transportation was entered on the record as follows :- "Wherefore all and singular the premises being seen by the justices here, and fully understood, it is therefore ordered that he the said L. K. be transported to the coast of New South Wales, or some one or other of the islands adjacent, for and during the term of seven years" :- Held, that this was not a judgment, but merely an order; and the court awarded a procedendo commanding the court below to pronounce the proper judgment, and in the meantime admitted the prisoner to bail. Rew y. Kenwarthy, 3 D. & R. 173: 1 B. & C. 711.

Jurisdiction to Grant. ]—A judge of any of the three superior common law courts has jurisdiction to make an order for the issning of a procedendo, to send back proceedings on an indictment for felony removed by certionari from an inferior court, and it rests in his discretion whether such order should be made upon a summons to shew cause, or immediately. Reg. v. Scaife, 18 Q. B. 773; 2 Den. C. C. 513; 3 Car. & K. 211; 21 L. J., M. C. 221; 17 Jur. 282.

On the return of a by-law to a habeas corpus cum causa, a procedendo cannot be awarded to any corporation except London, Res v. Wor-cester Chamberlain, 2 Ld. Ken. 469.

When Stayed.]—A cause was removed from an inferior court by habeas cornus cum causa, to which a return was made, stating a custom under which the defendant was sucd and arrested: error was suggested upon the face of the proceedings below; the court would not stay procedendo merely on that ground, but left the defendant to his writ of error. Horton v. Beekman, 6 Term Rep. 760.

Practice as to.]—A cause remanded from an inferior court by habeas corpus, and afterwards tance. Hayward v. Wright, 2 Man. & Ry. 366; 8 B. & C. 386; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 359.

The court will grant only a rule nisi in the first instance for a procedendo, a cause having been removed from an inferior court without the proper recognizance having been entered into. even where it appears on the return to the certiorari that the sum demanded was under 201. Catton v. Fuires, W. W. & D. 46.

Where one of several defendants has removed an indictment for conspiracy by certiorari and he alone has entered into the necessary recognizances, the court will not award a writ of procedendo, or impose terms as to the other defendants taking short notice of trial, although, by the practice of the court, the trial could not be pressed on against the other defendants, and great delay would probably take place. Rew v. Newton, 2 N. & P. 121; W. W. & D. 497.

Where a cause has been removed from an inferior court by habeas corpus at the defendant's instance, and no further step taken on either side for a year, the plaintiff may apply ex parte for a procedendo to issue, unless bail in the Queen's Bench is given within four days. And the bail below cannot move to set aside such procedendo when issued, until they or the defendant have put in bail in that court. Blanchard v. De la Crouée, 9 Q. B. 869; 16 L. J., Q. B. 181; 11 Jur. 283. S. P., Day v. Paupierre, 13 Q. B. 802; 18 L. J., Q. B. 270.

1. General Principles.

Discretionary.]—The granting of a criminal information is discretionary under the circumstances. Anon., Lofft, 323. And see Rew v. Robinson, 1 W. Bl. 541.

The court will not entertain an application for a criminal information on light or trivial grounds. or where no imputations are made individually on the person applying for the information, but will leave him to his remedy by action or indiet-ment. Reg. v. Mead, 4 Jur. 1014.

On a rule for an information, though the court may think a ground is laid, yet if under the circumstances the payment of the prosecutor's costs appears an adequate punishment, they will discharge the rule on the defendant's undertaking so to do. Rev v. Morgan, 1 Dougl. 314.

Not grantable against a very poor person.

Anon., Lofft, 155.
An information was refused until an action for the same offence was discontinued. Rex v. Fielding, 2 Burr. 654; 2 Ld. Ken. 386.

Hopper, Ex parte, 2 W. R. 517.

> When Offence against Public Interests.]-Thecourt will grant a criminal information on thesole testimony of a particeps criminis (uncontradicted), where the offence is against the publicinterest, as bribery in the election of an alderman, who will, by virtue of his office, be a justice of peace. Res v. Steward or Turner, 2 B. & Ad. 12; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 148.

> Between Individuals. ]-A letter between private individuals, containing abusive matter, but not inciting to a breach of the peace, will not support an application for a criminal informa-

> The court will not grant a criminal information for breach of a public statute creating a state offence on the application of a privateperson, but only on the information of the law officers of the Crown. Crawshay, Ex parte, 3 L. T. 320; 8 Cox, C. C. 356.

> If a private person desires to punish an infraction of such a statute, he must do so by the ordinary machinery for the administration of justice, by preferring an indictment. Ib.

> Ex Officio by the Attorney-General. |- Information for a misdemeanor refused to the attorney-general, on behalf of the Crown, because he may grant one himself. Rew v. Plymouth Corporation, 4 Burr. 2087.

> The court will not give leave to quash an information filed ex-officio by the attorneygeneral. He may stop the proceedings upon it by nolle prosequi, and file another. Rew v. Stratton, 1 Dougl. 239.

A defendant, in an information at the suit of the attorney-general, is not entitled to a change of venue without his consent. Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 2 Price, 113.

In an information at the suit of the Crown, the attorney-general is entitled, as a matter of right, to amend the information on payment of costs. Att.-Gen. v. Ray, 11 M. & W. 464; 12:

L. J., Ex. 352; 7 Jur. 561.

An information in rem may be amended by the-Crown, after plea pleaded, by adding additional counts, although a recognizance has been entered. into by the bail to pay the costs occasioned by the claim, such recognizance having been entered into before the information filed, Att.-Gen. v. Smith, 5 M, & W, 372,

By Solicitor-General. - May be filed by the solicitor-general during a vacancy of the office of attorney-general, and such vacancy need not be averred on the record. Rev v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2576. S. P., Wilkes v. Rew (in error). 4 Bro. P. C. 360.

2. AGAINST MAGISTRATES.

When Granted.]-When a justice of the peaceacts from indirect or corrupt motives, the court will punish him by information. Rew v. Cozens, 2 Dougl, 426.

No information will be granted against justices-Refusal on Ground of Delay.]—Rule for cri- acting in sessions, except in very fiagrant cases. minal information refused on ground of delay, Rex v. Seuford JJ., 1 W. Bl. 432. granted against them. Rev v. Jackson, 1 Term

Rep. 653 : 1 R. R. 343.

On an application for a rule nisi for a criminal information against a magistrate, the question is not whether the act done might on full investigation be found to be strictly right, but whether it proceeded from oppressive, dishonest, or corrupt motives (under which fear and favour may generally be included), or from mistake or error; in either of the latter instances the court will not grant the rule. Rev v. Borron, 3 B. & Ald. 432; 22 R. R. 447.

The court will not grant an information against a magistrate, for having improperly convicted a person, unless the party complaining makes an exculpatory affidavit, denying the facts. Rex v. Webster, 3 Term Rep. 388. See Rew v. Williams,

A criminal information was refused against a magistrate for returning to a writ of certiorari a conviction of a party in another and more formal shape than that in which it was first drawn up, and of which a copy had been delivered to the party convicted by the magistrate's clerk; the conviction returned being warranted by the facts. Rew v. Barker, 1 East, 186.

Where the justices had not appeared to have acted corruptly, an information was refused.

Rew v. Baylis, 3 Burr. 1318.

The court will not grant a rule nisi for a eriminal information against magistrates, unless it appears they have acted from an oppressive, dishonest, or corrupt motive, under which fear and favour are included. Fentiman, In re, 4 N. & M. 128; 1 A. & E. 127.

Misconduct in his office may render a magistrate amenable to a criminal information, though he be not actuated by motives of pecuniary interest or personal malice—as, if he gives way to passion so as clearly to interfere with the due administration of justice; but a mere display of ill-humour, or an error of judgment, such as the omission to administer an oath, or to give a cantion to a dying man before taking his examination, will not induce the court to interfere. Reg. v. Barton, 4 Cox, C. C. 353.

A criminal information was granted for these words, in a letter to a mayor : " I am sure you will not be persuaded from doing justice by any little acts of your town clerk, whose consummate malice and wickedness against me and my family will make him do anything, be it ever so vile. Rew v. Waite, 1 Wils, 22.

Improperly Issuing Summons. ] - Where a magistrate, upon whose property a malicious trespass had been committed, issued a summons requiring the offender to appear before himself, or some other magistrate, and purporting that information had been given to him (the magistrate) on oath, whereas no oath had been taken, and the information had been communicated by the magistrate to the informer; the court, in discharging a rule for a criminal information against the magistrate, refused to give him his costs. Rev v. Whateley, 4 Man. & Ry. 431, Improperly Committing.] - An information goes against a justice for committing a man for not paying 1s. for discharging his warrant, Rev v. Jones, 1 Wils, 7.

Wherever magistrates act uprightly, though viously taking the prosecutor's oath, who was wherever magnetices are unigness, will be a peer of the realm, and also for neglecting oranted noming them. Reav. Jackson, I Term to take the noble prosecutor's recognizance to prosecute, discharged, these being deemed only irregular, not criminal. Rese v. Fielding, 2 Burr.

> No ground for criminal information where no imputation of a corrupt motive on the part of the judge. Anon., 16 Jur. 995.

Granting or Refusing Licence. - An information will be granted against a justice of the peace, as well for granting as for refusing an ale licence improperly. Rew v. Holland and Forster, 1 Term Rep. 692; 31 R. R. 362. An information was granted against justices of the peace for refusing to grant an ale licence from motives of resentment. Rew v. Harris, 3 Burr. 1716. And see Rew v. Young, 1 Burr. 556, An information against a justice, upon a charge of refusing to grant a licence, will be refused if the reasons assigned for the refusal prove false in fact. Rew v. Athay, 2 Burr. 653.

An information was granted for refusing to grant licences to those publicans who voted against their recommendation of candidates for members of parliament for the borough. Rev v. Williams, 3 Burr, 1317.

Accusing Magistrate of Misconduct. ]-The court will not grant a criminal information for calling a magistrate a liar, accusing him of misconduct in reference to his having absented himself from an election of clerk to the magistrates, and threatening a repetition of the same language whenever such magistrate came into the town, unless there appears an intention to provoke a breach of the peace. Chapman, Er parte, 4 A. & E. 778.

The court will not grant a criminal information for unwritten words imputing to a justice malversation in his office, if the words neither were spoken at the time when the justice was acting, nor tended to a breach of the peace. Marlhornigh (Duke), Esc parte, 5 Q. B. 955; D. & M. 720; I New Sess. Cas. 195; 13 L. J., M. C. 105; 8 Jur. 664. See Rew v. Rea, 7 Ir. C. L. R. 584.

Rejecting Bail.]—A rule for a criminal infor-mation will not be granted against justices who wrongly or improperly reject ball, unless it manifestly appears to the court, by conclusive and satisfactory evidence, that they were also influenced by partial and corrupt motives. Reg. v. Badger, 6 Jur. 994.

Where the pecuniary sufficiency and solvency of bail are undisputed, the rejection of such bail on the ground of a coincidence of political opinion with the person or persons for whose appearance the bail offer to become surety is improper, even though such rejection by the justices is reconcilable with the absence of corrupt motives. Ib.

Where justices reject bail on the ground that the parties entertain objectionable political opinions, and on other grounds which are concealed and not stated, the court will grant a rule nisi, calling on the magistrates refusing to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against them. 1b.

The justices, in answer to the rule, deposed that they were not actuated by any corrupt or Rule nisi for an information against justices of malicious motive in the rejection of the bail. the peace making a commitment without pre- The court discharged the rule, but required them to pay all the costs. S. C., D. & M. 375; with misconduct in his magisterial capacity, 4 Q. B. 468; 12 L. J., M. C. 66; 7 Jur. 216. although other misconduct is also charged. Rew.

Court will regard Motives of Acts. - When a criminal information is applied for against magistrates, the question for the court is, not whether their acts be found upon investigation to be strictly right or not, but whether they were influenced by corrupt, oppressive, or partial motives, or acted in error, and from mistake only. In the latter case the court will not grant the rule. Reg. v. Budger, D. & M. 375; 4 Q. B. 468; 12 L. J., M. C. 66; 7 Jur. 216.

Assault. - Where an assault is committed by a magistrate on an attorney several days after he had conducted certain proceedings against such magistrate, the court will not grant a rule for a criminal information (inasmuch as the breach of the peace has not been qua magistrate), but will leave the party to the remedies by indietment or action. Lee, En parte, 7 Jur. 441.
Upon a motion for a criminal information, it appeared that the applicant was an attorney, and an officer of the court, and the person against whom the application was made was a magistrate, and that the latter had assaulted the former in revenge, it was snggested, for his having conducted some proceedings against him, on behalf of a client, before justices, for a previous assault. The court refused to interpose its extraordinary protection to the applicant, but left him to his remedy by indictment or action. Reg. v. Arrowsmith, 2 D. (N.S.) 704.

Application—Time for.]—The court will grant a rule nisi for a criminal information at the end of a term against a magistrate for malpractices during the term, but not for any misconduct before the term. Rex v. Smith, 7 Term Rep. 80.

A criminal information for misconduct in office may be moved for against a magistrate in the second term after the alleged misconduct, though an assize has intervened, the motion being made early enough to allow of cause being shewn in the same term. Reg. v. Saunders, 10 Q. B. 484.

Where facts tending to criminate a magistrate took place twelve months before the application to the court, they refused to grant a criminal information, although the prosecutor, in order to exense the delay, stated that the facts had not come to his knowledge till a very short time before the application was made. Rev v. Bishop, 5 B. & Ald. 612; 24 R. R. 494.

A criminal information may be moved for against magistrates, for misconduct in the execution of their offices, in the second term after the offence committed, there being no intervening Rew v. Harries, 13 East, 270 ; 12 R. R.

The court will not grant a rule nisi for a criminal information against a magistrate, so late in the second term after the imputed offence, as to preclude him from the opportunity of shewing cause against it in the same term. Rew v. Marshall, 13 East, 322; 12 R. R. 340.

Costs of.]—If complaint for information against justice proves frivolous, attorney as well as original complainer must pay the costs. Rex v. Fielding, 2 Burr. 654; 2 Ld. Ken. 386.

v. Hemming, 2 N. & M. 477; 5 B. & Ad. 666; 3 L. J., M. C. 3.

A magistrate is entitled in all cases to six days' notice, of an intention to apply for a rule nisi for a criminal information; and it is not suffi-cient that six days have in fact expired between the notice and the motion, if the notice contemplates an earlier application. Ib.

On an application for attachment or criminal information against a justice of the peace for misconduct in the exercise or under the authority of his office, it must be shewn that six clear days' previous notice in writing has been given to him. Reg. v. Rae, 8 Ir. R. C. L. 524.

3. SENDING A CHALLENGE.

Upon what Evidence granted.] - Upon a motion for a criminal information against A, for ehallenging B., an affidavit stating, that in a correspondence between them A. had intimated an intention, after the settlement of accounts between himself and B., to require an apology for offensive expressions contained in a letter received by him from B., or "such satisfaction as is usual on such occasions between gentlemen and that afterwards C., a relation of A., came with a letter of B. in his hand, settled the account by paying a balance due from A. to B., and after saying that he had come in consequence of the letter in his hand, delivered a hostile message as from A. :- is insufficient to connect A. with the challenge; and therefore the court refused the rule. Rev v. Younghusband, 4 N. & M. 850.

Where the affidavits in support of an application for a criminal information against a party for writing letters, provoking a breach of the peace, stated the belief of the deponents, that the letters were in the handwriting of the party, not from their own knowledge of his handwriting, but from the information of other persons, the court refused a rule to shew cause, on the ground that such evidence would not warrant a grand jury in finding a true bill. Williams, Ex parte, 5 Jnr. 1133.

The court also refused leave to renew the application upon affidavits supplying sufficient cylidence of the handwriting. Tb.

An affidavit by A., stating that B. had brought him a challenge from C., and that B. had refused to make an affidavit that C. sent him with it, is not evidence in which the court will grant a rule nisi for a criminal information against C. for sending the challenge. Rew v. Willett, 6 Term Rep. 294.

Rule to shew cause for information for challenge, granted on producing only copies of the letters containing it. Rex v. Chappel, 1 Burr. 402.

An information was refused where the charge of giving a challenge was made under false and ambiguous colours; the words spoken admitting of a favourable interpretation, Prideaux v. Arthur, Lofft, 393.

Right to, forfeited.]—Where a person who was challenged to fight a duel applied for a criminal information, and in his affidavit, in support of the application, stated, "that the defendant had been dismissed from her majesty's service, under Notice of ]-A magistrate is catitled to circumstances which would, in the opinion of notice before an application is made for a officers and gentlemen, disentitle him to make criminal information, where he is charged any appeal to the laws of honour, in a case where no offence was given":—Held, that by easting of a parish for non-repair of a road, where it was these imputations on the defendant, the applicant deposed that a bill of indictment had been preof the court by criminal information. Reg. v. Doherty, 1 Arn, & H. 16.

The court will not grant a criminal informa-tion for sending a challenge, if, in the course of the transactions out of which it arose, the prosecutor has himself sent a challenge to a third person connected with the party against whom he moves. Rev v. Larrieu, 7 A. & E. 277.

And this, although the prosecutor's challenge was sent into a foreign country, and did not shew any intention to break the peace here. Ib.

4. FOR LIBEL.

The rule to be collected from the modern decisious is that a criminal information for libel is granted only on application of persons who are in some public office or position, and not at the suit of private persons. Reg. v. Labouchere, 53 L. J., Q. B., 862, 12 Q. B. D. 320, 50 L. T. 177, 32 W. R. 861; 12 Cox, C. C. 415; 48 J. P. 165. And see DEFAMATION.

5, IN OTHER CASES,

Against Parish Officers.]—If a parish officer makes an alteration in a poor-rate, after it has been allowed by two instices, but without the approbation of the justices, he cannot be punished by information. Rew v. Barrett, 2 Dougl. 465.

An information lies for a conspiracy by parish officers and others to marry persons settled in different parishes, if the delinquents are of good situation in life, but not if they are low and indigent. Rew v. Compton, Cald. 246.

Granted against overseers for procuring a marriage to change a settlement. Rew v. Herbert,

2 Ld. Ken. 466 Granted against an overseer for procuring a pamper to marry another pamper with child of a bastard. Itex v. Turrant, 4 Burr. 2106.

Granted against overseers for procuring a soldier to marry a poor idiot chargeable to the parish. Rew v. Watson, 1 Wils. 41.

The court refused a rule to shew cause why a criminal information should not be granted against overseers for endeavouring to induce paupers fraudulently to remove to another parish, the remedy being by indictment. Reg. v. Storwood Overseers, 9 Jur. 448. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Jennings, 2 D. & L. 741; 1 New Sess. Cas. 488; 14 L. J., Q. B. 104.

By the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 97, if any overseer shall purloin, embezzle, or wilfully waste or misapply any of the moneys belonging to any parish, every such offender shall, upon conviction before any two justices, forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 201.; an information against a parish officer under this statute for misapplying, without the word "wilfully," is bad. Carpenter v. Mason, 4 P. & D. 439; 12 A. & E. 629; 10 L. J., M. C. 1.

Against Members of Corporation.]-Court will not grant criminal information against members of corporation for misapplication of the corporation money. Rex v. Watson, 2 Term Rep. 199; had forfeited his right to obtain the interference ferred at the assizes, but thrown out by the grand jury; that two of the grand jurors were proprietors of land in the parish; that one of them who had acted on behalf of the parish at an earlier stage of the dispute had stated to the foreman that the road was useless, and that both had taken an active part in opposing the finding of the indictment, such deposition being contradicted only by general statements that the two had taken no undue or active part in opposing the finding. Rey. v. Upton St. Leonards, 10 Q. B. 827; 2 New Sess. Cas. 582; 16 L. J., M. C. 84; 11 Jur. 306.

> Against Theatre Proprietor for Stage Representation of Murder prejudicial to Person Committed for Trial for it. —Thurtell was committed for trial for murder of Weare. The proprietor of a theatre represented the supposed facts of the case in such a manner that when a stage mnrderer was seized, the andience expressed themselves as understanding that he represented Thurtell. The court granted a criminal information against the proprietor. Rex v. Williams, 2 L. J., K. B. (0.8.) 30; 26 R. R. 624.

Publication of Comments prejudicial to Prisoners-Publication of Criminal Proceedings.]—Pending a preliminary investigation into charge of treason felony, comments prejudicial to the prisoners were published in a newspaper -Held, that a conditional order for a criminal information should be granted against the newspaper proprietor. Reg. v. Gray, 10 Cox, C. C. 184.

The same newspaper afterwards published a report of the proceedings, part of which consisted of statements of counsel calculated to prejudice the public mind against the prisoners, who were eominited for trial. There was no suggestion that the report was not a fair one of what actually took place:—Held (Hayes, J., diss.), that the publication was privileged, and did not form a ground for granting a conditional order for a criminal information. Ib. See CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Against Person abusing Public Officer. -Criminal information will be granted against a person abusing a public officer in discharge of his duty. Rex v. Smith, 1 L. J., K. B. 31. And see CONTEMPT OF COURT, Refusal to serve as Sheriff. ]-An information refused against a man who refused to serve the office of one of the sheriffs of London. Rev v. Groscenor, 1 Wils. 18; 2 Str. 1193.

The court granted an information against a person refusing to take on himself the office of sheriff, because the vacancy of the office oceasioned the stop of public justice, and the year would be nearly expired before an indictment could be brought to trial. Rew v. Woodrow, 2 Term Rep. 731.

Election of Overseers. ]-An information was refused for endeavouring to procure the appointment of certain persons to be overseers of the Against Inhabitants of Parish.]—The court poor with a view to derive a private advantage granted an information against the inhabitants to the party. Here v. Joliffe, I East, 154, n.

Surveyor improperly spending Money. - The | defendant at an election, Rev v. Isherwood, 2 surveyor of a high road having improperly expended a large sum of money, borrowed by the trustees under an act of parliament, without the consent of the trustees, which the act required to sanction the expenditure, the court refused a criminal information, no corrupt motive being expressly alleged; and they will not convert a civil into a criminal injury. Reg v. Friar, 1

Commissioners exceeding Powers.]—An information was granted against commissioners for exceeding their powers, Rew v. Rogers, 1 Ld. Ken. 373.

But refused against twelve commissioners for pulling down a turnpike, on a suggestion of irregularity in the time and manner of the meeting. Anon., Lofft, 199.

Provoking Breach of the Peace. ]-Words spoken of a person, although they may contain serious imputations, are not sufficient ground for a criminal information, unless they are of such a nature as are likely to provoke a breach of the pence. Marlbornyh (Duke), Ex parte, 5 Q. B. 955; D. & M. 720; 1 New Sess. Cas. 195; 13 L. J., M. C. 105; 8 Jur. 664.

Conspiracy to Marry. ]-The court will grant a rule nisi for an information for a conspiracy in taking away from his father's house a young man of fortune under age, for the purpose of marrying him to one of the conspirators, though the young man is not heir-apparent to his father. Rew v. Green, 3 Dougl. 36.

For an Assault committed in Colony.]-To a criminal information by the attorney-general of New South Wales against a member of the legis-lative assembly of that colony for an assault on a member, committed within the precincts of the house while the assembly was sitting, which information averred that such assault was in contempt of the assembly, a general demurrer was allowed by the Supreme Court :- Held, that the information was good, as the alleged contempt of the legislative assembly was charged only as a matter of aggravation, and could be rejected as surplusage, and that the information was sustainable for an assault. Reg. or Att.-Gen. (New South Wales) v. Macpherson, 39 L. J., P. C. 59; L. R. 3 P. C. 268; 23 L. T. 101; 18 W. R. 1053.

Nuisance. ]-An information for a nuisance will be refused, if an application to the party is not shewn. Rew v. Green, 1 Ld. Ken. 379.

Riot. ]-An information does not lie for a riot. if the parties did not disperse, and are within the penalty of the Riot Act : otherwise it does. Anon., Lofft, 253.

Nor for pretending to rend the Riot Act. Rem v. Spriggins, 1 W. Bl. 2.

All persons by their presence countenancing a riot are liable to an information. Rew v. Hunt, 1 Ld. Ken. 108.

Bribery.]-An information was granted for attempting to bribe a privy councillor to procure a reversionary patent of an office grantable by the king under the great seal. Rew v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494.

An information was granted on the deposition of two persons, for the offering of a bribe by the remedy. Ib.

Ld. Ken. 202.

But granted for maliciously pressing. Rew v. Webb, 1 W. Bl. 19.

6. PRACTICE.

a. Application for.

Must be made by Innocent Party. ___ The party applying for an information must come with clean hands into court. Rev v. Eden, Lofft, 72.

Therefore an information will be refused to cheats and gamblers against others of the same description. Rev v. Reach, 1 Burr. 548. description.

So, an information for a challenge was denied to the first sender of it. Rew v. Hankey, 1 Burr.

In order to maintain an application for a criminal information the applicant must leave himself wholly in the hands of the court, and in no way whatever make libellous attacks on the other side. Reg. v. Nottingham Journal Pro-prietors, 9 D. P. C. 1042.

Although a party applying for a criminal in-formation must show himself to be an innocent party, yet the court made a rule absolute for such information against the publisher of a libel, which affected several parties, notwith-standing that the character of the person princhally attacked, and on whose affidavit the rule nisi had been obtained, was impeached on shewing cause. Reg. v. Gregory, 1 P. & D. 110; 8 A. & E. 901.

Second Application for. ]-The court will not permit a second application to be made for a criminal information unless leave was reserved for the purpose on the first application from very special circumstances, such as being met by affidavits which afterwards turned out to be based on perjury. Munster, Ex parte, 20 L. T. 612.

Before taking other Proceedings. ]-To obtain a criminal information, the applicant should apply to the court in the first instance, and before he has elected to take another course of proceeding. Reg. v. Marshatl, 4 El. & Bl. 475; 3 C. L. R. 676; 24 L. J., Q. B. 242; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 676 ; 3 W. R. 170.

Against County Court Judge. ]-A rule was obtained for a criminal information against a county court judge for alleged misconduct in his office. The affidavit in support stated, that the applicant had addressed a memorial to the Lord Chancellor, setting forth the facts. It appeared from affidavit in answer that the memorial to the Lord Chancellor contained general charges of misconduct, and specified the particular misconduct complained of, and prayed for an inquiry into the behaviour of the judge, and that the Lord Chancellor had declined to The court discharged the rule on interfere. the ground that the applicant had elected his his assailant into the custody of a policeman, and gave him in charge at the police-station, where-upon he was locked up till he gave bail for his appearance to answer the charge on the following day, but no further proceedings were taken, the court made a rule absolute for a criminal information for the assault. Reg. v. Gwilt, 3 P. & D. 176; 8 D. P. C. 476; 11 A. & E. 587; 9 L. J., Q. B. 148; 4 Jur. 316.

But the court refused a rule for a criminal information for an assault upon its appearing that the applicant had taken out a warrant against the other party; though the applicant offered that it should be part of the rule, that he should abandon the proceedings or the warrant. Anon.,

To be Made within what Time.]-Where a party had been aware of the facts on which the application for a criminal information against a magistrate would be founded early in Easter Term, and did not make the application till the last day but three of Trinty Term, the court refused a rule nisi. Heg. v. Harris, 13 L. J., M. C. 162 : 8 Jur. 516.

The court will not grant a rule for a criminal information in a case where a whole term has been allowed to intervene between the facts alleged and the application to the jurisdiction of the court. Reg. v. Heat, 4 Jur. 339. The court will not grant a rule nisi for a criminal information on the last day of term,

Tunner, Es parte, 3 Jur. 10.

Leave to file a criminal information for a libel should be applied for in a reasonable time, before the expiration of the second term, after the publication of it, if it comes to the knowledge of the prosecutor early enough to enable him to move within that period. Rew v. Jullie, 1 N. & M. 483; 4 B. & Ad. 867; 2 L. J., K. B.

By whom made, ]-The motion for a criminal information must be made by the law officers of the Crown, or by a barrister, and not by a private Rew v. Lancashire J.J., 1 Chit, 602 : 22 R. R. 823.

b. Affidavits.

Contents.]-An affidavit to found a motion for a criminal information must distinctly negative the charge; and it is usual to do so in the words of the charge. Rew v. Wright, 2 Chit. 162.

If circumstances of suspicion only are stated in affidavits in support of a rule for a criminal information:—Held, to be insufficient, unless the deponents add their belief that the party against whom it is moved acted from corrupt motives. Rew v. Williamson, 3 B. & Ald, 582,

An information on Hen. 5, c. 4, against a person for practising as an attorney whilst he was under-sheriff, was refused because the affidavit did not mention what particular acts he did as an attorney, of which the court should judge. Rew v. Bull, 1 Wils. 93.

If, in the affidavit to found a criminal information, slanderous words on the defendant be introduced, it will be a sufficient ground to introduced, it will be a summent ground to refuse the application. Rew v. Byrne, 2 N. & P. 152; 6 D. P. C. 36; 7 A. & E. 190.

In order to obtain leave to file a criminal information, the affidavits must connect the person complained of with the offence by legal evidence. Reg. v. Stanger, 40 L. J., Q. B. 96; L. R. 6 Q. B. 96; 24 L. T. 266; 19 W. R. 640.

When newspaper articles charged the relator with partiality from political motives, in the manner in which he discharged his duties as presiding officer at an election for members of a school board, and mentioned a specific instance where he had rejected the vote of a dulyqualified female voter, who was politically opposed to him, though the relator in his affidavit denied generally the truth of all the charges, and also that he refused any voter on political or improper or illegal considerations, or prevented directly or indirectly any voter who was legally qualified to vote and who observed the prescribed regulations for voting, or put any obstacles in the way, or did anything at any obstacles he way, or that mything at any time, calculated improperly to affect the election of any particular candidate, the court dis-charged a rule nisi for a criminal information which had been obtained against the publisher of the newspaper, because the relator had not negatived specifically the charge made against him as to the rejection of the female voter's vote. Reg. v. Aunger, 28 L. T. 630; 12 Cox, C. C. 407.

On Change of Venue. |- In a criminal information, filed by the attorney-general, the venue was changed at the instance of the traverser, was canniged to the instance of the averses, upon an affidavit by him referring to, but not setting out in detail, facts of such public notoriety as to be "matters of contemporaneous history." Reg. v. Duygen, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 94.

In Mitigation.]—Where a defendant was convicted of a libel, which purported to have been written in consequence of his having seen a written in consequence of his intring seen a statement of facts in different newspapers, an affidavit that he read those statements in such newspapers may be received in mitigation of punishment; but an affidavit that the facts contained in those statements were true, is not admissible. Rev v. Burdett, 4 B. & A. 314.

In Aggravation.]—When a defendant who has been convicted on an indictment comes up to receive judgment, the prosecutor may read affidavits in aggravation, though made by witnesses who were examined at the trial, and which affidavits he is at liberty to answer. v. Sharpness, 1 Term Rep. 228; 1 R. R. 427.

Where a defendant is brought up to receive judgment after conviction, an affidavit by the prosecutor in aggravation, stating that a third person, who refuses to join in the affidavit, had informed him that the defendant, after the trial, had repeated in his hearing the libellous matter for which he was indicted, is not admissible; at least, not without swearing that such third person was under the control or influence of the defendant, Res v. Pinkerton, 2 East, 357. And sec Rew v. Withers, 3 Term Rep. 428; and Rev v. Mawbey, 6 Term Rep. 619; 3 R. R. 282.

Affidavits allowed to be read on a defendant's eriminal information, stated that the applicant | being brought up for judgment, stating that the defendant had made use of expressions aggravating his guilt, in the presence of two persons not give an appeal on a motion for a new trial who related them to the persons making the of an information filed by the attorney-general. affidavits, and the prosecutor swearing that the legs v. R. 334. the influence of the defendant. Rew v. Archer, 2 Term Rep. 203, n.

Time to Answer.]—Where the party applied for time to send to Triuidad for an affidavit of the truth of certain matters in a libel, in order to shew cause against such a rule, the court would not grant further time. Affidavits abroad, before judges there, and verified, although receivable as attidavits of debt, are not to be received on rules to shew cause, in opposition to affidavits made in the court here. Rev v. Draper, 3 Smith, 391: 8 R. R. 727.

When a defendant who has suffered judgment by default in a criminal prosecution, is brought up for judgment, each party should come prepared with attidavits disclosing his own case (if he means to produce any affidavit at all); but, if in the course of the inquiry the court wishes to have any point further explained, they will give the defendant an opportunity of answering it on a future day. Rev v. Wilson, 4 Term Rep.

1. JURISDICTION GENERALLY.

At Common Law. ]-The right to a habeas corpus is by the common law, and is not created by statute. Besset, Is re, 1 New Sess. Cas. 337; 6 Q. B. 481; 14 L. J., M. C. 17; 9 Jnr. 66.

Record cannot be Contradicted.]—A prisoner was convicted at the Central Criminal Court of unlawfully wounding at Beulah Spa, stated in the indictment to be in Lambeth, which is within the jurisdiction of the court, whereas Beulah Spa is not within it. Affidavit of this being made, the court refused a motion for the writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that the affidavit was in contradiction of the record. Rey. v. Newton, 3 W. R. 419.

In Equity.] — The Court of Chancery, in England, had by its common-law jurisdiction, authority as general as the common law courts have, to issue a writ of habeas corpus. Belson, In rc. 7 Moore, P. C. 114; 14 Jur. 631.

The Court of Chancery had, by its common-law inrisdiction, authority to issue a writ of habeas corpus in the vacation.

The object of the control which the Court of Chancery has over the ecclesiastical courts by means of the writ of habeas corpus, is to keep those courts within the jurisdiction which the law has assigned to them, and not to correct any error into which they may fall in the exercise of it. Baines, In re, 1 Cr. & Ph. 31.

Rules of Equity.]—In proceedings by habeas corpus, in the Queen's Bench Division, in matters relating to the custody and education of infants, the equitable jurisdiction conferred by s. 28 sub-s. 10, of the Judicature (Ireland) Act, 1877 [which corresponds with the English Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 10], is ancillary to the legal jurisdiction of the court, and the applicant must still show that he prima facie possesses a legal right to the custody. Harper, In re, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 571.

Appeal.]-An order that a writ of habeas Appeal. j—An order time a wife order, corpus should issue is an "order" within s. 19 of the Judienture Act, 1873, and therefore an appeal lies from such order. The court will not encourage such appeals, or lightly interfere with Encourage such appeals or agatity interfere with the issue of the writ. Burnardo v. Ford, 61 L. J., Q. B. 728; [1892] A. C. 326; 67 L. T. 1; 56 J. P. 629—H. L. S. P. Burnardo v. McHugh, 61 L. J., Q. B. 721—H. L.

Excuse for Non-compliance with Writ — Custody no longer Existing.]—The appellant, without authority from the parent, who had placed her child in his institution, handed over the child to a gentleman to be taken to Canada. This had taken place before the application by the parent for a writ of habeas corpus, and the appellant alleged that it was impossible for him issue, so that the facts might be further inquired into. Ib.

Semble, the writ of habeas corpus is granted on account of the illegal detention of a person. and this remedy does not lie where such person was not, at the time it was issued, in the custody, power or control of the person upon whom it served. Reg. v. Burnardo, Tye's Case (23 5, infra) disapproved. Ib. Q. B. D. 305, infra) disapproved.

The mere fact that, at the time a writ of habeas corpus is applied for, the person against whom the application is made has not in his possession, custody or power the body of the person said to be detained, is no ground for not issuing the writ, if it appears that the person against whom the application is made has illegally parted with the custody of the person said to be detained. Reg. v. Barnardo (23 Q. B. D. 305) discussed. Reg. v. Barnardo (Gossage's Cuse), 59 L. J., Q. B. 345; 24 Q. B. D. 283; 38 W. R. 315—C. A. Affirming, 62 L. T.

Per Lord Esher, M.R.: - The writ of habeas corpus will not be issued where it appears to be absolutely impossible that it can be obeyede.g. where the person said to be detained is dead, even although there had been a wrongful detention before the death. Per Fry, L.J.:-The writ of habeas corpus will not be issued where obedience to it is absolutely impossible by reason of the person alleged to be detained being out of the eustody or control of the person against whom the writ is applied for, even though the latter has illegally parted with the custody of the person said to be detained, unless such custody was parted with in anticipation of the writ for the purpose of evading the exigence of it when issued. Ib.

To a writ of habeas corpus issued at the instance of the parent of a child, which had been wrongfully defained by the defendant, a return was made by the defendant to the effect that, as he had, before the issuing of the writ, parted with the custody of the child so detained by him to another person who had taken her out of the jurisdiction, it was impossible for him to obey the writ:—Held, that it was no excuse for noncompliance with the writ that the defendant had wrongfully handed over the child to another person, and, therefore, the return was bad, and an attachment must issue against the defendant for disobedience to the writ. Reg. v. Burnurdo (Tyo's Cuse), 58 L. J., Q. B. 553; 23 Q. B. D. 805; 61 L. T. 547; 37 W. R. 789; 54 J. P. 132—C. A.

2. TO COLONIES AND OTHER DOMINIONS OF THE CROWN.

Canada.] — Before the Habeas Corpus Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 20, the superior courts by England had a right to issue a habeas corpus into the colonies, to bring up persons illegally imprisoned, unless their jurisdiction was taken away by statute. The court therefore issued a habeas corpus to Canada, its jurisdiction to do so not being taken away by statute. Anderson, Exp parte, 3 El. & El. 487; 30 L. J., Q. B. 129; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 122; 3 L. Jersey.]—The writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum runs into Jersey. Curus Wilson, In re, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J., Q. B. 105, 201; 9 Jur. 393.

A habeas corpus, issued by the Lord Chancellor and sealed by the chief clerk of the records and writs with the official seal, will run into the island of Jersey; and the royal court there is bound to register such writ, and to aid and assist in its execution. Belson, In re, 7 Moore, P. C. 114: 14 Jur. 641.

Where an inhabitant of Jersey had been imprisoned there for serving upon another inhabitant process in an English action :- Held, that the imprisonment was unlawful, and that he was entitled to be discharged on a habeas corpus. Dodd's Case, 2 De G. & J. 510; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 291;

6 W. R. 207.

Another prisoner, who was detained in custody, not only for the above cause but also for debts under orders purporting to be made by the royal court of Jersey, obtained a habeas corpus on an affidavit stating that the orders were made when without affidavits of debt such as were required by the law of the island. It appeared, however, that he had taken proceedings after the irregularity had occurred :-Held, that the royal court was not shewn to have been insufficiently constituted, and must be assumed to be connectent to judge of its own law, and that the prisoner was not entitled to his discharge. Ib.

3 IN VACATION

Before Judge at Chambers. ] - A judge at chambers has power at common law to issue in vacation a habeas corpus, returnable before himvacation a laboral corpus, returnable before himself immediately. Alien Enemies.]—No habeas corpus lies for an alien enemy, a prisoner of war, however ill-used or deceived. Anon., 2 W. Bl. 1324; 2 Ld. Ken, 473.

Therefore, a habeas corpus for a prisoner of war, taken on board an enemy's privateer ship, was denied. Rew v. Schiever, 2 Burr, 765.

Other Aliens.]—The court, upon affidavit laid before them, suggesting probable cause to believe that a helpless and an ignorant foreigner was brought into this country and exhibited for money against her consent, by those in whose keeping she was, granted a rule upon her keepers, to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue to bring her before the court; and directed an examination to be taken of her in the meantime, before the coroner and attorney of the court, in the presence of proper persons deputed by the persons applying for the writ, and by those against whom it was prayed. Hottentot Venus's Case, 3 East, 195; 12 R. R. 320.

Solicitor. ]-A solicitor being in custody under an attachment, the court granted a writ of habeas corpus directed to the marshal to bring him before the taxing-master, to enable him to attend senger under an order of the secretary of state, for the purpose of being sent out of the kingdom by virtue of the repealed Alien Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 155, the court refused to issue a habeas corpus on the application of his bail to bring him up to be rendered, on account of the public inconvenience. and of the probable risk of losing his passage, which had been taken in a ship immediately about to sail to his destined port. Folkein v. Critico, 13 East, 437. S. P., Hodgson v. Temple, 15 R. R. 567, 593,

The court may discharge a foreigner from the custody of a gaoler, returning no legal warrant of detention. Besset, In re, 6 Q. B. 481; I New Sess. Cas. 337; 14 L. J., M. C. 17; 9 Jur. 66.

Lunatics. - See Reg. v. Peacock, 12 Cox. C. C. 21, and Greenwood, In re, 24 L. J., M. C. 137, and LUNATIC.

5. FOR WHAT PURPOSE.

Regularity of Commitment.]-The court will not grant a habeas corpus to discharge out of custody a person who has been convicted of libel, at the commission of over and terminer at the Central Criminal Court, on the ground that when the verdict was returned only one commissioner was present instead of two, as required by law.

New Y. Curlisle, 4 Car. & P. 415.

A. was charged with a felony before three magistrates, who, upon hearing evidence, admitted him to bail, and afterwards, upon additional control of the tional evidence, committed him to gaol :- Held, that A. was not entitled to a habeas corpus to be discharged out of custody. Allen, Ex purte,

3 N. & M. 35.

Before the spring assizes, 1840, A. was committed to take his trial at these assizes for shooting B. The trial was postponed to the summer assizes, on the ground of B.'s illness. Before the summer assizes B. died, and at those assizes a true bill for the murder of B, was found against A., and his trial was postponed at the instance of the prosecutor to the next spring assizes, on account of the illness of a material witness :-Held, that A, was not entitled to his discharge under the 7th section of the Habeas Corpus Act. Reg. v. Bowen, 9 Car. & P. 509.

The court has no power to grant a habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner who has been convicted at the Central Criminal Court, on the ground that the offence charged was committed at a place out of the jurisdiction of that court. Newton, In re, and Exparte, 16 C. B. 97; 24 L. J., C. P. 148; 3 C. L. R. 1122; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 591.

The court refused to grant a habeas corpus in order to discharge a defendant who was detained in custody on a warrant of a judge belonging to a court of competent jurisdiction, which set out an adjudication on which if erroneous a writ of error might be brought. Dunn, Ex parte, 5 D. & L. 345: 5 C. B. 215: 17 L. J., C. P. 105: 12 Jur. 99.

A habeas corpus is not grantable in general where the party is in execution on a criminal charge, after judgment on an indictment, according to the course of the common law. Lees, Ex parte, El. Bl. & El. 828; 27 L. J., Q. B. 403; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 333; 6 W. R. 660.

Where a defendant seeks to be discharged out of custody, on the ground that the warrant of commitment on which he is detained is illegal, he must be brought before the court by a habens corpus, although it is sworn that he is too poor to bear the expense, as the validity of the warrant will not be discussed in his absence. Martins, Exparte, 9 D. P. C. 194; 1 W. P. C. 6.

Where justices have a statutory power to convict summarily and to commit with or without hard labour, and in the warrant of commitment nothing is said about hard labour, it is to be taken that they did not mean to give hard labour, and the warrant is not objectionable for omitting to state whether the imprisonment is to be with or without hard labour, so as to entitle the prisoner to habeas corpus. Thompson, William, Exparte, 3 L. T. 318.

Where the commitment only is brought before the court upon the return to a habeas corpus, and that is bad, the prisoner is entitled to his discharge whether there was a good conviction or not. Timesu, Ex parts, 99 L. J. M. C. 129; L. R. 5 Ex. 257; 22 L. T. 614; 18 W. R. 849.

The court will grant a rule calling on a committing magistrate to show cause why a hadeas corpus should not issue to bring up a prisoner in order that the validity of the warrant of commitment may be discussed on shewing cause. Cross. Ex. parte, 2 H. & N. 854; 26 L. J., M. C. 201.

By Justices after Disagreement of Jury. ]-At the spring assizes for Shropshire, a prisoner was indicted for murder: the trial began on Wednesday, the 21st March, and was adjourned to the following day. Between one and two in the afternoon of Thursday the jury retired to consider their verdict; at eight in the morning of Friday, the 23rd, they were brought into court, and upon their stating that there was no likelihood of their agreeing, the judge discharged them, and remanded the prisoner. The rest of the business at Shrewsbury was finished, and the commission had been opened in the adjoining county. The prisoner was detained in the custody of the county gaoler under a warrant of commitment by justices of the county, which recited that she was charged with murder, and commanded him to keep her until she should be delivered by due coarse of law :-Held, upon au application for a habeas corpus, that the warrant of commitment remained in force, and therefore the prisoner was not cutitled to be discharged. Newton Ex parte, 13 Q. B. 716; 18 L. J., M. C. 201 ; 13 Jur. 606.

Adjournment to Amend.]—When a prisoner is brought up on a writ of habeas corpus, and the return shows a commitment bad on the face of it, the contribution in the one for the purpose of having the conviction brought up and amending the commitment by it. Timan. In re, 39 L. J., M. C. 120; L. R. 5 Ex. 257; 22 L. T. 614; 18 W. M. 849.

To bring up Prisoner—Appeal.]—When it becomes accessary to bring up a prisoner to be present at the argument of an appeal from the decision of the Queen's Bench Division on a writ of error, application for a writ of habeas corpus should be made to the Queen's Bench Division and not to the Court of Appeal. O'Brien v. Rep., 26 L. R., Ir. 451—O. A.

To conduct Cause.]—The court will not grant a habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner, in order that he may move in person for a new trial, in an action in which lie is a party. Binns v. Massley, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 116; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 694; 5 W. R. 583.

Habeas Corpus ad Testificandum.— Prisoner desiring to argue Case.]—Pending the argument of a case in the Court of Appeal, the appellant, who proposed to appear and argue in person, was sentenced to imprisonment in respect of a charge of Rhel — Hckl, that the court had no-power under the circumstances to award a writ of habeas corpus to bring the appellant before the court with a view to her arguing her appeal, as the provisions of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1804, 44 Geo. 3, c. 102, had no application to such a case. Weldon v. Veul, 54 L. J., Q. B. 399; 15 Q. B. D. 471; 33 W. R. 581.

The court will not grant a habeas corpus to enable the defendant in an information, who is confined in a county goal for a libel, under the sentence of another court, to attend at Westminster, to conduct his defence in person: the application should be made to the court by whom the defendant was sentenced. Att. Gen. v. Hont, 9 Price. 147.

The court will grant a habegs corpus to the warden of the Fleet, to take the body of a prisoner, confined there for delp, before a magistrate, to be examined from day to day respecting a charge of felony or mislemeanor. Griffiths, Expartr, 5 B. & Ald. 780.

It is entirely in the discretion of a judge to grant or refuse a habeas corpus to enable a prisoner to attend to shew cause against a sumnous. Ford v. Graham, 10 C. B. 369; 1 L. M. & P. 694.

Where a defendant, charged with selling unstamped papers, was in custody, the court grantest a habeas corpus for the purpose of embling him to defend in person. Att.-Gen. v. Cleare, 2-D. P. C. 668.

The court will not grant a habeas to bring up, a party in custody under an attachment, to cuable him to move in person to set it aside. First v. Aissaus, 9 M. & W. 793; 1 D. (N.S.) 631; 6 Jun. 374; 11 L. J., Kx. 287.

To entitle a prisoner to a habeas, to bring him mp to be present on the argument of a rale in which he is interested, he must satisfy the court that substantial justice cannot be done without his presence. Clark v. Smith, 3 C. B. 984.

The court will not grant a habeas corpus to bring up a defendant under sentence of imprisonment for a mischemenor, to enable him to shew cause in person against a rule for a criminal information. Rev v. Parkyns, 3 B. & Ald. 679, n.; 22 B. R. 519.

Where a plaintiff in an action is in lawful custody for debt, he is not entitled as of right to a habeas corpus to bring him up to conduct his own cause at the trial, though possibly the court would grant him one if a proper case were shewn. Cubbett, Ex purte, and In re, 3 H. & N. 155; 27 L. J., Rx. 199; ± Jur. (N.S.) 145; 6. W. R. 282.

— And give Evidence.]—But if his evidence is necessary at the trial of a cause, he is entitled to a haboas corpus ad testificandum for himself as much as for any other witness. Ib.

Where the plaintiff is thus brought up on a habeas corpus ad testificandum, he may conduct his own cause if he pleases. Ib.

not grant an application for a habeas corpus to remove a prisoner from gaol, where he is undergoing sentence, in order to take him before a magistrate in another county, to prefer another charge against him; but will grant a habens corpus to bring him up for trial on a true bill being found against him at the assizes on that charge. Reg. v. Day, 3 F. & F. 526. S. P., Hardwich, In re, W. W. & D. 167.

A prisoner in custody for contempt may be removed by habeas corpus to take his trial for perjury in another county. Wetton, In re, 1 Tyr.

385; 1 C. & J. 459.

The judges of the Central Criminal Court have no power, as such, to issue any habeas corpus, or other process, to bring in a party who is in custody of the sheriff of Middlesex on a civil suit, in order that he may be committed to Newgate, to be tried for a misdemeanor before that court ; and the Central Criminal Court Act, 1834, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 16, does not apply to such a case. Rev v. Maryan, 7 Car. & P. 642.

- To Appear before Coroner.] The Queen's Bench will not, on the mere instance of the coroner, and without a strong case of necessity being made out, issue a writ of habeas corpus to bring a prisoner who has been committed for trial on a charge of the murder of A. before a coroner's jury, who is sitting on the body of A. Wahley, Ex parte, 7 Q. B. 653; 14 L. J., M. C. 188; 9 Jur. 869.
- To Vote. -A habens corpus will not lie to bring up a prisoner in a county gaol, for the purpose of voting at the election of a member of parliament. Jones, Ex parte, 4 N. & M. 340; 2 A. & E. 436; 1 H. & W. 7; 4 L. J., K. B. 97.
- To Prove Identity.]—Where there is a question as to the identity of the person of a defendant to an information, who is in prison, the Court of Exchequer will grant a habeas corpus to bring him up, to be present at the trial, upon his paying the costs. Att.-Gen. v. Fudden, 1 Price, Lunatic.]-When a person was committed for trial by the magistrates to the assizes, but after committal was removed by them to the county huntic asylum, the judge of assize has power to issue a habeas corpus to bring him up for trial. Reg. v. Peacock, 12 Cox, C. C. 21.

If a person is detained under a medical certificate, in a private house licensed for the reception of lunatics, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 96, Schedule A. No. 2, which is bad in form, as an alleged lunatic, he will be discharged on habeas corpus, on the ground that the detention is illegal, unless it is shewn that it would be injurious to himself or others to set him at liberty. Greenwood, In re, 24 L. J., M. C. 137; 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 522.

Military Officer. ]—The Habeas Corpus Act, 1803, 43 Geo. 3, c. 140, s. 1, applies only to judicial inquiries, and does not authorise the court to grant a habeas corpus for the purpose of bringing a military officer, in prison for debt, before a medical board to report on his health. Galway, In re, 19 L. T. 262.

Improper Confinement. |-The court refused to grant a habeas corpus to a prisoner in custody corpus ad respondendum, to take a prisoner in under process out of the Court of Chancery,

Transfer to Other County, ] - The court will applied for on the ground that the keeper of the Queen's prison had improperly removed him to a part of the prison provided for prisoners of a particular class. Cobbett, Exparte, 5 C. B. 418. S. P., Rogers, Ex parte, 7 Jur. 992.

> Denial of Access.]-The court granted a rule nisi for a habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner (access to whom was denied by the gaoler), on the application of his father. Thompson, In re, 30 L. J., M. C. 19.

A habeas corpus was granted on the applica-tion of a sister of an orphan girl under fourteen to remove her from an asylum, where the applicant was denied access to her. Daley, In re, 2 F. & F. 258.

When under Military Arrest. ] - The court cannot grant a habeas corpus to bring up a debtor for the purpose of charging him in execution, who is in custody under military arrest. Jones v. Danvers, 5 M. & W. 234: 7 D. P. C. 394; 2 H. & H. 84; 8 L. J., Ex. 216.

6. How Applied for.

On Affidavit.]—The writ, whether at common law or under the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679, 31 Car. 2, c. 2, does not issue as a matter of conrse upon application in the first instance; but must be grounded on an affidavit, upon which the court is to exercise its discretion whether the writ shall issue or not. Rew v. Hobbouse, 2 Chit. 207; 3 B. & Ald. 420.

The court will not grant a habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner for the purpose of being discharged, on the ground that he is illegally in custody, imless there is an affidavit from himself, or it is shewn that he is so coerced as to be unable to make one. Parker, In re, 5 M. & W. 32; 7 D. P. C. 208; 2 H. & H. 45.

A rule having been obtained for a habeas corpus to bring up a lunatic confined in an asylum in this country under Irish medical certificates, the court discharged it with costs, there being no affidavit to shew that the party promoting the application was duly authorised by the lunatic. Child, Ex parte, 15 C. B. 238; 2 C. L. R. 1801.

A motion for a habeas corpus to bring up the body of a sheriff (on a return by a coroner of ecpi corpus to an attachment) before a judge at chambers, is of course, and without affidavit, Rew v. Whaley, 1 Chit. 249.

Precedence for Motion. ] - The practice of giving precedence to motions affecting the liberty of the subject holds good only where a person in custody is brought up by habeas corpus, and does not extend to shewing cause against a rule for a habeas corpus. Thompson In re, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1121.

By Counsel.]—The court declined to allow a motion for a habeas corpus to be made by the father of a prisoner in custody, but required it to be made by counsel. Newton, In re, 16 C. B. 97; 3 C. L. R. 1122; 24 L. J., C. P. 148.

By Married Woman.]—A wife may move for a habeas corpus on behalf of her husband. Cobbett v. Hudson, 15 Q. B. 988.

To whom. - An application for a habeas answer to another charge of felony, must be Bench, must issue from the Crown side of the made to a judge at chambers, and not to the court. Reg. v. Isaacs, 2 L. M. & P. 255; 20

L. J., Q. B. 395.

The proper mode of obtaining the discharge of a person privileged from arrest on process of the county court for non-attendance on a judgment summons of that court, under the repealed County Courts Act, 1846, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 99, held to be not by writ of privilege, but by habeas corpus from one of the superior courts (upon affidavits shewing bis privilege), or by cupin analysis slewing ins privace, i. i., application to the judge of the county court. Dakins, Ex parte, 16 C. B. 77; 3 C. L. E. 602; 24 L. J., C. P. 131; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 378; 3 W. R.

A prisoner who sues out a habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is not bound by the decision of any one court, but is entitled to take the opinion any one court, but is enclude to take the opinion of all the courts as to the propriety of his imprisonment. Partington, Ex parte, 2 D. & L. 650; 13 M. & W. 679; 14 L. J., Ex. 122; 9 Jur. 92.

Conditions on. ]-If a habeas corpus is granted, on the ground that the party has been illegally committed by a magistrate, the judge will not make it a part of the rule for issuing the writ, that the party shall not bring an action against the magistrate. Itill, Ex purte, 3 Car. & P. 225.

Order of Access.]-The physician, apothecary, attorney, relations, nurse and servants, were ordered to have access to a woman too weak in body and mind to be brought up by habeas corpus. Rea v. Wright, 2 Burr. 1099.

Deserter.]—Upon habeas corpus to discharge a prisoner out of custody, who has been committed by virtue of an order of magistrates, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 8, s. 25 (a Mutiny Act), for assisting to conceal a deserter, notice of the rule should be served upon the secretary at war. Gale, Ex parte, 3 D. & L. 114; 14 L. J., Q. B. 316 ; 10 Jur. 334.

Lawful Warrant after Rule. ]-Where, after a rule for a habeas corpus has been granted, a warrant is issued, which renders the enstody lawful, the court will discharge the rule. Danney, Ex parte, 8 Jur. 829.

Office Copy of Warrant Dispensed with.]-Where a rule is granted for a habeas corpus to bring up a bankrupt in custody, for not answering satisfactorily, the court will, if the warrant is very long, make it a part of the rule, that cause may be shewn without taking an office copy of the warrant. Ib.

Argument.]- Upon the argument of a rule nisi for a habeas corpus, the case is to be treated in the same manner as if the prisoner was brought up upon a habeas granted in the first instance; and the court will look to the whole cause appearing upon the return. Bull, Exparte, I B. C. Rep. 141; 15 L. J., Q. B. 235; 8 Jur. 827.

7. WRIT AND RETURN.

a. Writ.

Signature.]-The writ must be signed by a judge, or it need not be obeyed. Reav. Roddam, Cowp. 672.

Issue of ]-A writ of habeas corpus ad sub- 2 R. R. 546. jioicndum, granted by a judge of the Queen's court where the prisoner is in custody for a criminal matter. Eastern, In re, 4 P. & D. 558; 12 A. & E. 645; 9 D. P. C. 207; 1 W. P. C. 49; 10 L. J., Q. B. 16; 5 Jur. 116.

Waiving Irregularity.] — Where a party in custody in the Queen's Bench, under a habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum, had removed himself by habeas corpus into a different custody for the purpose of taking the benefit of the Insolvent Act :- Held, that he had thereby waived an irregularity in the first writ. Newton v. Rowe, 7 Scott (N.R.), 543; 13 L. J., C. P. 73; 7 Jur. 1135,

But if the writ is issued out of the plea side, it is irregular only, and the irregularity may be waived by neglect to object to it in due time. Ib.

Filing. — The court will not compel the mar-shal to file of record a writ of habeas corpus cum cansâ, by virtue of which a person is committed to his enstedy in execution. Conper v. Jones, 2 M. & S. 202; 14 R. R. 632.

Issue of Writ against Person who has no longer Custody of Person detained—Illegal Handing over of Person detained.]—On an application by the parent for a writ of habeas corpus in respect of a child, directed to the head of an institution for destitute children in which the child had been placed, it appeared that before the proceedings began he had, without anthority from the parent, handed over the child to another person to be taken to Canada, and he alleged that he did not know the address of such person, or where he or the child was :- Held, but without expressing any opinion as to the circumstances under which the child was sent to Canada), that the writ ought to issue on the ground that the applicant was entitled to require a return to be made to the writ, in order that the facts might be more to the wris, in order that the rates magne belinder fully investigated. Reg. v. Barnarda, Typ's Case (23 Q. B. D. 305), disapproved. Barnardo v. Ford, 61 L. J., Q. B. 728; [1892] A. C. 326; 67 L. T. 1; 56 J. P. 629—H. L. (E.)

b. Return.

Time for.]-A writ of habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum et recipiendum may be returnable immediately and before a judge. Bettesworth v. Bell, 3 Burr. 1875.

A habeas corpus issued in vacation, returnable immediately before a judge at chambers, does not expire by the commencement of the term. Rev v. Shebbeare, 1 Burr. 460.

A party may be brought into court in term time, upon a writ issued in the vacation. Rex v. Mead, 1 Barr. 542.

The court will not receive the return of a babeas corpus till the return-day. Mush's Case, 2 W. Bl. 805.

Sufficiency. ]—The return to a habeas corpus, must answer the taking as well as the detaining. Warman's Case, 2 W. Bl. 1204.

A return, in these words, "I had not at the time of receiving this writ, nor have I since had the body of A. B. detained in my custody, so that I could not have her," &c., is a bad return, and an attachment granted against the party who made it. Rew v. Winton, 5 Term Rep. 89;

It seems a sufficient return that the defendant is in custody under the sentence of a court of affidavits are admissible, raising objections not competent jurisdiction to inquire of the offence, and to pass such a sentence without setting forth the particular circumstances necessary to warrant such a sentence. Rew v. Suddis, 1 East, 306.

Upon a return to a habeas corpus, the court will not give any direction or advice to the gaoler as to the matter of which his return should consist. Flotcher, In re, 1 D. & L. 726; 13 L. J.,

M. C. 16; 8 Jur. 146.

As to the sufficiency of return of a gaoler having in his custody prisoners for the purpose of being conveyed to a penal settlement in pursuance of the terms of their sentence for treason in a colony, see Purker, In re, 5 M. & W. 32; 2 H. & H. 45; and Watson's Case, 9 A. & E. 731; 1 P. & D. 516; 8 L. J., Q. B. 129.

Truth of Impeaching. ]—A return prima facie imports verity, and until it is impeached, need authors versy, and after the imperconst, now not be supported by affidavits or otherwise. Reg. v. Butcheldor, 1 P. & D. 516; 2 W. W. & H. 19. S. C., nom. Watson's Case, 9 A. & E. 731; Reg. v. Wison, 8 L. J., Q. B. 129.

Where Ambiguous. ]-If a return, which on the face of it is ambiguous, is not fortified by affidavit, clearing up all doubt, it will be held evasive and bad. Reg. v. Roberts. 2 F. & F. 272.

Function of Court.]—All that the court can do on the return to a writ of habeas corpus is to see that the party is in custody under an order of some court having anthority to commit. Dimes, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 4.

Affidavits Controverting.]—On motion to discharge a party brought up by a habeas corpus, affidavits suggesting matters which, though not repugnant to the return, shew the custody to be illegal, are not admissible. Douglas, In re, 12 L. J., Q. B. 49; 7 Jnr. 39.

On a habeas corpus bringing up a party committed by justices for not finding sureties of the peace, the court will not hear affidavits controverting the facts alleged in the articles of the peace. Reg. v. Dunu, 12 A. & E. 599; 4 P. & D. 405. Habeas corpus ad subjiciendum. Retnra, a committal by order of the Vice-Chancellor of England for breach of an injunction ordered by the Lord Chancellor. The order was signed C. C., which, it was suggested, were the initials or Cottenham, chancellor. On motion on behalf of the prisoner for time to file affidavits for the purpose of shewing that Lord Cottenham had a personal interest in the cause, and therefore, as the prisoner contended, that his injunction was void :- Held, that the court will not grant time to file affidavits for the purpose of disclosing matters not apparent on the return to a habeas corpus, unless the nature of the facts to be sworn to is suggested; and it appears such affidavits might be available. Reg. v. Hulton, Dimes's Case, 14 Q. B. 554; 19 L. J., Q. B. 158; 14 Jur. 198.

Where the return to a habeas corpus stated that the prisoner was brought to the bar of the Court of Chaucery and committed for contempt, the court would not allow the prisoner to use affidavits to shew that he had not been brought to the bar of the court, and so was entitled to his discharge under the Contempt of Court Act, 1830, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15. Clarke, Ex parte, 2 G. & D. 780; 2 Q. B. 619.

Where a warrant of commitment, setting out a conviction, is good on the face of it, it is doubtful whether, on the return to a habeas corpus, the rule. Ib.

appearing upon the warrant; as, for instance, disclosing a former conviction for the same offence. Baker, Ex parte, 2 H. & N. 219; 26 L. J., M. C. 155; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 937; 5 W. R. 661.

Return-Excuse for Non-compliance with Writ-Contempt-Attachment. ]-To a writ of habeas corpus issued at the instance of the parent. of a child, which had been wrongfully detained by the defendant, a return was made by the defendant to the effect that, as he had, before the issuing of the writ, parted with the custody of the child so detained by him to another person, who had taken her out of the jurisdiction, it was impossible for him to obey the writ:—Held, that it was no excuse for non-compliance with the writ that the defendant had wrongfully handed over the child to another person, and, therefore, the return was bad, and an attachment must issue against the defendant for disobedience to the Writ. Reg. v. Barnardo, 58 L. J., Q. B. 553; 23
 Q. B. D. 305; 61 L. T. 547; 37 W. R. 789—C. A.

Adequacy of Adjournment.] - Semble, when the return to a writ of habeas corpus is produced, it should be received and filed; and if the applicant wishes to question the adequacy of the return he should apply for an adjournment, and though the return be filed, the adequacy of it may be questioned and an application for a writ of attachment may be applied for at such adjournment. Ib.

____ Illegality of Warrant.]—Where a return discloses a legal imprisonment of a person under civil process, it is competent to him to shew by affidavit that the detainer is illegal by reason of his privilege from such arrest. Dukins, Exparte, 16 C. B. 77; 3 C. L. R. 602: 24 L. J., C. P. 131; 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 378; 3 W. R. 369,

Where a return states that a prisoner is detained under civil process, it is competent to him to show by affidavit that he was originally arrested on a Sunday. Egyington, Ev puerte, 2 El. & Bl. 717; 2 C. L. R. 385; 23 L. J., M. C. 41; 18 Jnr. 224; 2 W. R. 10.

Upon a return to a habeas corpus affidavits are not admissible to shew that the offence was not committed within the jurisdiction of the justice. Smith, Ex parte, infra.

Second Warrant.]—A warrant of commitment being bad, a second warrant was allowed to be substituted for it as the return to a habeas corpus. Smith, Ex parte, 3 H. & N. 227; 27 L. J., M. C. 186; 6 W. R. 440.

A rule nisi having been obtained calling on the governor of a house of correction to shew cause why a habeas corpus should not issue to bring up a prisoner in his custody, on the ground that the warrant under which he was committed was not properly sealed, a second warrant was lodged with the governor similar in its terms to the first, and purporting to be signed by justices of the same name, but duly sealed:—Held, first, that if it was material, the court would assume from the facts stated that the second warrant was substituted by the same justices as an amendment of the first. Phipps, In re, 11 W. R. 730.

Held, secondly, that the second warrant, though made after the rule had been obtained. was a sufficient warrant to the governor for the detention of the prisoner, and was an answer to

Where a prisoner has been lodged in gaol under | - Held, first, that affidavits could not be received a bad warrant of commitment, even in the nature for the purpose of shewing that the royal court of a conviction, a good warrant of commitment subsequently delivered to the gaoler, but before a rule for a habeas corpus has been obtained, is a tine 10 if the tines collisions better obtained, is a good answer to the rule. Cross, Expurto, 2 H. & N. 354; 26 L. J., M. C. 201. And see Danacey, Expurte, 8 Jur. 829; Reg. v. Richards, 5 Q. B. 926; Dav. & M. 777; 1 New Sess. Cas. 182; 13 L. J., M. C. 147; 8 Jur. 752.

Hearing Counsel. ]-Objection having been made to the return on behalf of the prisoner, and counsel having been heard against the objection, one counsel was allowed to reply in support of it. Carus Wilson, In re, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J., Q. B. 105, 201 : 9 Jur. 393, Order on . - When the court decides that return is insufficient, the party making the return is thereby adjudged to be in contempt, and will be ordered to enter into recognizance, himself, and two sureties, to answer personal interrogatories. and to abide any further order the court may make. Mutthews, In re, 12 Ir. C. L. R. 272.

Evidence. - In an action against two, the plaintiff, in proof of the alleged acts of trespass. gave in evidence a return by one to a habcas corpus, in which he stated that he had committed the acts in question in obedience to certain orders made by his co-defendant. The defendants thereupon called in aid the evidence contained in that document in support of certain pleas of justification:-Held, that the return was evidence for the defendants in support of their pleas, and also against them in proof of the trespass. Coblett v. Gray, 4 Ex. 729.

- Law of Jersey. A habeas corpus, directed to the viscount and gaoler of Jersey, commanding them to bring up the body of W. Return, that the viscount and gaoler took and the guoler detained W. by virtue of a sentence of the royal court of Jersey, which was set out, and which stated, that, in a cause depending before them. W., when the court was about to deliver an interlocutory judgment, interrupted, by attering in the most unbecoming tone, a protest against the competency of the court ; and that the court, conformably with an article in the Jersey laws, ordering that all persons who shall have been wanting in respect to the bailiff should be imprisoned until they asked pardon and paid the fine imposed; and considering that the bailiff had, in the course of the cause, ordered W. to be more respectful, condemned W. to a fine of 101., and to ask pardon of the court; and W. having refused to comply, he was sent to prison until he should have obeyed; that the sentence was legal according to the law of Jersey : that by such law the viscount and gaoler were obliged to take and the gaoler detain; that they had not nor by such law could have any warrant other than the sentence; that the court was presided over by the bailiff, assisted by judges called jurats, and had the power of punishing such a contempt in the manner directed by the sentence; that there was such an article as mentioned in the sentence ; that the matters in the sentence were true; that the sentence was read aloud in the hearing of W., and was duly entered in a book, the book of criminal prosecutions, being the proper book for that purpose; and that the sentence was in due form, and a sufficient authority for the taking and detaining :

had acted inconsistently with the law of Jersey, or to impeach the legality of the sentence. Carux Wilson, In re, 7 Q. B. 984; 14 L. J., Q. B. 105, 201 : 9 Jur. 393.

Held, secondly, that the return was not objectionable for want of shewing a warrant for the caption or detainer. Ib.

The return of the governor of the Millbank penitentiary to a habeas corpus set forth a certificate of the greffier of the royal court of Jersey. that the prisoners had been convicted of burglary by that court, and sentenced to be transported, and alleged that it was a court of competent jurisdiction to try and punish for that crime; also an order in council directing the transportation of the convicts from Jersey to Van Diemen's Land; and a warrant of a secretary of state for removing them from Jersey to the prison in order to carry the sentence into effect :- Held. first, that the affidavits filed for the purpose of obtaining the writ were not admissible to contradict the return; and that the court could not enter into an inquiry what the law of Jersey is, Brenan, In re, 10 Q. B. 492; 16 L. J., Q. B. 289; 11 Jur. 775.

Held, secondly, that the court of Jersey having jurisdiction over the offence, the court must assume prima facie that the sentence being unreversed was correct, and could not require the authority of the court to pass the sentence to be set out mon the return.

— Isle of Man.]—The publisher of a newspaper in the Isle of Man was ordered to attend at a chancery court of the island, for publishing an article tending to defame the court; he attended accordingly, and tendered an apology, which the court did not accept, but committed him for contempt. Thereupon J. C. avowed himself to be the author of the article, and the court committed him also to gaol, without a warrant. After some hours the gaoler was furnished with the following warrant, signed by the lieutenant-governor: "At a chancery court, holden, &c. Whereas J. C. voluntarily appeared before the court, and avowed himself to be the author of an article, &c., and whereas the writing and publishing the article is a contempt of the court; it is ordered, that J. C. be, for such his contempt, committed a prisoner to the gaol of C. R., there to remain until further order.' habeas corpus ad subjiciendum having been obtained by J. C., a rule was granted for quashing it, upon affidavits that the lieutenantgovernor of the Isle of Man presided in the chancery court, which was a court of record, having power to punish for contempt, and that the warrant was in the form usually adopted by that court :- Held, first, that it sufficiently appeared that the warrant of commitment was an act of the chancery court. Crawford, In re, 13 Q. B. 613; 18 L. J., Q. B. 225; 13 Jun 955.

Held, secondly, that the chancery court having authority to commit for contempt, and having adjudged the publication to be a contempt, the court could not review that adjudication. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the warrant, being in the form used by the chancery court of the Isle of Man, was lawful, though the commitment was not for a certain time. Ib.

Service of Original Writ—Not making Return—Contempt—Attachment—Waiver.]—Attachment for disobedience in not making a return to a writ of habeas corpus will not be granted against the person to whom the writ is directed unless he has been personally served with the original writ, although he has appeared on several occasions and applied for further time to make the return without taking objection to the service. Reg. v. Rowe, 15 R. 119; 71 L. T. 578,

c. Amendment.

In what Cases.]—A writ of habeas corpus sued out by a prisoner, was amended by substituting out by a prisoner, was amended by substituting 7 Will. 4 for 1 Vict. Deview, Ex parts, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 17; 5 Scott, 241; 5 D. P. C. 181.

The court may, in its discretion, allow a return to be amended after it has been filed. Reg. v. Butchelder, 1 P. & D. 516; 2 W. W. & H. 19; S. C., nom. Watson's Case, 9 A. & E. 731. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Wiwon, 8 L. J., O. B. 129.

The warden of the Fleet might have amended his return by leave of the court, after it was filed, and without the consent of the prisoner. Clarke, In re, 2 Q. B. 619; 2 G. & D. 780; 5 Jur. 757.

d. Discharge of Prisoner.

Power of Court to Order Discharge, -Upon an application for a writ of habeas corpus, the court have power, if satisfied upon affidavit that the conviction, in pursuance of which the applicant was imprisoned, was made without jurisdiction, to order him to be discharged. Authors or Anthers, In rc, 58 L. J., M. C. 62; 22 Q. B. D. 345; 60 L. T. 454; 37 W. R. 320; 16 Cox, C. C. 588; 53 J. P. 116.

At what Time.]—It is not necessary to wait till the rising of the court to move the discharge of a prisoner out of custody, on a return to a habeas corpus, where no notice of any opposition to the motion has been given. The court will order him to be discharged forthwith. Howard, In re, 2 D. & L. 586.

Infant.]—Where a person, supposed to be improperly in custody, is brought up on habeas corpus, the court, if there appears no ground for restraint, will order that such person be at liberty to go where he pleases, and will, if necessary, give him the protection of an officer in going, But if the party is a legitimate child, too young to exercise a discretion, the legal custody is that of the father. Rew v. Greenhill, 4 A. & E. 624; 6 N. & M. 244.

Re-arrest, |--- An information at the suit of the attorney-general under 33 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 62, is in the nature of a criminal charge, and a capias under s. 141, in respect of it, is criminal process : no privilege, therefore, from arrest on such a charge exists to a person reducido, on his discharge exists to a person remendo, on his dis-charge upon habeas corpus from an illegal custody, as such privilege only exists in the case of civil process. Danglas, Ture, 12 L. J., Q. B. 49: By 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 6, it is provided that no person set at large upon any habeas corpus shall be again imprisoned or committed for the same offence by any person other than the legal process of the court having jurisdiction of the same :— Held, that this provision only applies when a second arrest is substantially for the same cause second arrest is substantially for the same cause lake v. Ferrers (Eurl), 1 Burr. 551. as the first. Att.-Gen. of Hong Kong v. Kuck-a-Sing, L. R. 5 P. C. 179; 42 L. J., P. C. 64; Service Abroad.]—Where a habcas corpus has 29 L. T. 114; 21 W. R. 825; 12 Cox, C. C. 565.

e. Costs and Fees.

Where a defendant already in custody is brought up to be charged in execution on a habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum, and tenders the amount of debt, interest and costs on the judgment against him, he cannot be detained for the court fees payable on the habeas corpus ad satisfaciendum. Delzill v. Cullen, 7 Jur. 979.

The warden of the Fleet could not demand an additional fee for expedition in returning a habeas corpus. Johnson v. Smith, 1 H. Bl. 105.

The Court of Chancery has authority to give to the functionary who brings up a prisoner, in obcdience to a habeas corpus at common law, the expenses of so doing, but not his general costs.

Dodd's Case, 2 De G. & J. 510: 4 Jur. (N.S.) 291: 6 W. R. 207.

Power to Order Costs-Proceedings on the Crown Side of the Queen's Bench Division.]-The court has jurisdiction, since the Judicature Act, 1890, to give costs to the successful party Act, 1530, to give costs to the successful party in proceedings for a writ of habeas corpus. Reg. v. Jones, 63 L. J., Q. B. 656; [1894] 2 Q. B. 382; 10 R. 287; 70 L. T. 845; 42 W. R. 607; 58

8. COPY OF COMMITMENT.

Service of Demand. ]-Service of demand of copy of the commitment on the turnkey of a a copy of the communent on the turnery of a prison is not sufficient to support an action against the gaoler for a penalty incurred by him under the Habeas Corpus Act, for not delivering the copy to the prisoner within due time after demand unde, if the gaoler himself was in the prison. Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 Bos. & P. 580; 5 R. R. 697, Prisoner from Ireland.]—A person sent over from Ireland under a warrant from the secretary of state for Ireland, charged with any offence, and committed to prison until he can be brought before a judge, is entitled to a copy of the warrant after it has been demanded. Sedley v. Arbouin, 3 Esp. 194.

Inspection.]-The court will compel the marshal of the court to permit the attorney of the plaintiff to inspect the writ and return, and committitur indersed thereon. For v. Jones, 7 B. & C. 782; 1 M. & Ry. 570.

Costs.]—A prisoner suing as a party grieved on the Habeas Corpus Act, and having been refused a copy of his warrant of commitment, is entitled to costs if he recovers a penalty. Ward v. Snell, 1 H. Bl. 10, #### 9. COMPELLING OBEDIENCE.

By Attachment.]—If disregard is shewn to a habeas corpus at common law, an attachment will be immediately granted. Bosen, Ex parte, 2 Ld. Ken. 289.

Peer.]-No peer or lord of parliament has privilege against being compelled by process in the courts of Westminster Hall to pay obedience to a habeas corpus directed to him, because such offence is a contempt; and an attachment may issue if the peer refuses obedience to the writ. Res v. Ferrers (Eurl), 1 Burr, 631, not been obeyed, the court will not grant a rule absolute in the first instance for an attachment on the ground of his disobedience, although the English proceeding has been recognised and ordered to be obeyed by the French tribunals; nor will the court grant its warrant to apprehend the defendant for his contempt, under 56 Geo. 3, c. 100, s. 2, it appearing that the person was confined in France. Wyatt, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 389; W. W. & D. 76.

In Case of Imprisonment. -To compel obedience to a habeas corpus to bring up an impressed man, the party must first search at the Crownoffice for the return, and, if not found, apply, upon affidavit thereof, for an attachment. Harrison, Ee parte, 2 Smith, 408.

Insufficient Return.]—An attachment may be granted for making an insufficient return to the first writ of habeas corpus, without issuing an alias and a pluries writ. Rew v. Winton, 5 Term Rep. 89; 2 R. R. 546.

A rule had been obtained calling upon the defendant, in whose custody the prisoner as a soldier of a regiment was, to shew cause why an attachment should not issue against him for a atmeanners should not issue against him for a contempt in not obeying a habeas corpus to bring him before the court. Upon service of the writ the defendant referred the matter to the Horse Guards, and received directions to discharge the plaintiff, which he obeyed. The affidavit of the defendant stated, that he had no intention of shewing disrespect to the court, but that he supposed that after the discharge of the party he could not make any return to the writ :-Held, that although a return ought to have been made that the defendant had discharged the party; yet, as there appeared to be some improper motive on the part of the applicant, the court refused to issne an attachment, Reg. v. Gavin, 15 Jur. 329, n.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

a. In respect of other Remedy.

When Indictment also lies. ] -It is no objection to granting a mandanus to do a particular act, that an indictment will also lie for the omission to do that act. Row v. Severn and Wye Ry., 2 B. & Ald. 646; 21 R. R. 433.

A mandamus will not be granted to enforce the general law of the land, if an action will lie, although in some cases it will be granted even where an indictment may be preferred. Robins, Ex parte, 7 D. P. C. 566; 1 W. W. & H. 578; 3

Jur. 103. A dock company was required to make and maintain a new channel, with equal depth and breadth at the bottom, and with equal inclination of the sides to the former channel :- Held, first, that a duty was cast upon the company to repair generally the banks of the new course. Bristol Dack Co., 1 G. & D. 286; 2 Q. B. 64; 2 Railw. Cas. 599; 6 Jur. 216.

Held, secondly, that a mandamus would lie to compel the company to repair, although there might be another remedy by indictment. Ib.

The court will not grant a mandamus to compel the repair of a turnpike road. Rew v. Oxford and Witney Turnpike Road Trustees, 12 A. & E. 427; 4 P. & D. 154; 6 Jur. 216, n.

Right to-Specific Legal Right. |- The applicant for a writ of mandamus must shew that he has a specific legal right to the performance of the duty which he asks the court to order to be performed. A sanitary authority has no such specific legal right to apply for a writ of man-damus directed to guardians calling upon them to enforce the Vaccination Acts. Reg. v. Levois-ham Union, 66 L. J., Q. B. 403; [1897] 1 Q. B. 498; 76 L. T. 324; 45 W. R. 346; 61 J. P. 151.

between.]—An action for a mandamus is not such an action wherein, under the Judicature Act or otherwise, a declaration of rights may be made, or a mandamús granted, as a declaration of rights is only made, or a mandamus granted, where the action is such that relief can be given. and the rights claimed, enforced in that action. Buxter v. London County Council, 63 L. T. 767; 55 J. P. 391.

Writ not granted when another Remedy by Action.]—A shareholder in a railway company made a real and absolute transfer of his shares for a nominal consideration to an insolvent person in order to avoid liability for future calls. The company refused to register the transfer. A rule nisi for a prerogative writ of mandamus to compel the company to register the transfer having been granted:—Held, that inasunch as the prosecutor had another specific and sufficient remedy, viz. by action of mandamus, the prerogative writ ought not to issue, and the rule must gative writ ought hot to issue, and Valley Ry,, be discharged. Rey, v. Lambourn Valley Ry,, 58 L. J., Q. B. 136; 22 Q. B. D. 463; 60 L. T. 54; 53 J. P. 248. S. P., Reg. v. East and West India Dock Co., 60 L. T. 232; 53 J. P. 277.

- Statutory Obligation.]—A rule for a prerogative writ of mandamus is not the proper mode for enforcing a statutory obligation which can be made the subject of an action. Reg. v. Lambourn Valley Ry. (58 L. J., Q. B. 136; 22 Q. B. D. 463) followed. Rey. v. L. & N. W. Ry. and G. W. Ry., 65 L. J., Q. B. 516; 74 L. T. 624.

To take up Award-Lands Clauses Act. ]-A prerogative writ of mandamus is the proper remedy for enforcing the taking up of awards rander of dendering the maning in a wards made under the Lands Chauses Act. Reg. v. Lambourn Valley Ry. (22 Q. B. D. 453) distinguished. Reg. v. L. J. N. W. Ry., 63 L. J., Q. 695; [1894] 2 Q. B. 512; 10 R. 359; 58 J. P. 719

Remedy under Local Act Inconvenient and Obsolete. —Where the procedure and remedy under a local act is uncertain, inconvenient and practically obsolete, the procedure by writ of mandamus is applicable and ought to be granted. Reg. v. St. George the Martyr, Southwark, 61 L. J., Q. B. 898; 67 L. T. 412; 56 J. P. 821.

- Case Stated more Convenient. ]- Justices dismissed an information on the ground that it was too late. No case was applied for within seven days. Upon an application for a mandamus :-Held, that an application for a case to be stated was a more convenient remedy, and a rule for a mandamus was refused. Reg. v. Wisbech JJ., 54 J. P. 743.

Maintaining existing Sewers-Complaint to Local Government Board. ]—The proper procedure to compel a local authority to carry out its duties under s. 15 of the Public Health Act. 1875, as to the maintenance of existing sewers is by complaint to the Local Government Board, under s. 299 of the Public Health Act, 1875, and not, as a general rule, by prerogative writ of mandamus. Rep. v. Hastings Corporation, 66 L. J., Q. B. 80; [1897] 1 Q. B. 46; 75 L. T. 377; 45 W. R. 109; 60 J. P. 759.

Alternative Remedy—Remedy equally Convenient and Effectual.]—The remedy of a writ rebuilt under the Building Act, but the paper and Action for, and Prerogative Writ-Difference of mandamus will not be granted where there is another remedy, equally convenient and effectual, open to the applicant at the time when it becomes necessary to resort to one or other of such remedies. Reg. v. Joint Stock Companies Registrar, 57 L. J., Q. B. 433; 21 Q. B. D. 131; 59-L. T. 67; 36 W. R. 695; 52 J. P. 710.

The court will not grant a prerogative writ of mandamus, commanding a local authority torepair and maintain a sewer vested in them, in a case where another remedy exists which is equally convenient and appropriate. Reg. v. St. Giles, Cumberwell, Vestry, 66 L. J., Q. B. 337; 45 W. R. 335; 61 J. P. 217.

Semble, that a mandamus may be issued against a party for a matter in respect of which he is liable to an action, or to a suit in equity. Reg. v. Southampton Harbour Commissioners, I B. & S. 5; 30 L. J., Q. B. 244; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 990; 9 W. R. 630.

In other Cases.]—A railway act enacted, that the company established by it should, in a given event, pay another company a sum not exceeding: a given amount, by way of compensation for the loss of tolls by the latter company. The given event having happened :-Held, that a mandamus was not the proper mode of compelling the payment of the compensation money, as an action, would lie on the statutory obligation. Reg. v. Hull and Selby Ry, 3 Railw. Cas. 705; 6 Q. B. 70; 13 L. J., Q. B. 257; 8 Jur. 491. S. P., Robins, Ex parte, supra.

A rule nisi having been obtained for a mandamus to a railway company to summon a jury to assess compensation for damage, the following: agreement was entered into by their agent and the claimant :- "We hereby agree to accept of the company, in discharge of our claim against them for injury, &c., 4231, and 81, per week for the future so long as the present damages continue. (Signed) W. E., T. E." This was also signed by the agent of the company. Upon this agreement the proceedings for the mandamus were discontinued. The company paid the 4251., and also the 81. per week for several weeks, and then ceased, whereupon an application was madefor a mandamus to them to pay the money according to the agreement, or to summon a jury to assess compensation, or to revive the former rule :- Held, that, as the agreement was not under the seal of the company, it could not be enforced by action, and the court granted the mandamus. Reg. v. Bristol and Excter Ry,... 3 Railw. Cas. 777.

A mandamus is always granted when there is no other specific legal remedy. Rev. Wyndham, Cowp. 378.

But not where a party has a specific legal remedy. Rex v. Chester (Bishop), 1 Term Rep. 396; 1 R. R. 237.

It is not a writ grantable of right, but by prerogative; and it is the absence or want of a specific legal remedy which gives the court jurisdiction. Rew v. Bristol Dock Co., 12 East, 429; 11 R. R. 440.

Two circumstances must concur to authorisethe issuing of a mandamus—a specific legal right and the absence of an effectual remedy. If it is doubtful whether there is a remedy, the court will issue a mandamus. Rev v. Nattingham Old Waterworks Ch., 1 N. & P. 480; 6 A. & E. 355; W. W. & D. 166; 6 L. J., K. B. 89.

Where a party-wall had been pulled down and decorations had not been replaced by the defen-dant:—Held, that a mandamus, at the instance of the tenant of the adjoining house, would not lie to replace the paper and decorations, but that the remedy must be by action. Reg. v. Ponsford,

1 D. & L. 116; 12 L. J., Q. B. 313; 7 Jur.

The advowson of a vicarage had been purchased by certain landowners, and conveyed to feoffees. in trust, upon every avoidance to present such person as should be nominated by the majority of the landowners. At a meeting of the landowners for the purpose of nominating a successor to a deceased vicar, a dispute arose as to which of two candidates had the legal majority of votes, and thereupon the trustees refused to concur in presenting:—Held, that a mandamus could not be granted to the landowners, inasmuch as their right, if legal and not equitable, could be enforced by quare impedit. Orton Vicarage, In rc, 14 Q. B. 139; 18 L. J., Q. B. 321; 13 Jur. 1049.

So when a mandamus was applied for against justices in a case in which an appeal lay to quarter sessions, the court refused a mandanns. Reg. v. Smith or Lancashire JJ., 42 L. J., M. C. 46; L. R. 8 Q. B. 146; 28 L. T. 129; 21 W. R.

b. To enforce Equitable Rights or Trusts.

In what Cases.]—Mandamus to churchwardens, to raise a rate to pay principal and interest of money borrowed on the credit of parish and church-rates, under the 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, and 59 Geo. 3, c, 134. A return, that since the security was given, the lender, who was the prosecutor, had become bankrupt. Plea, that the proscentor had lent the money, as a trustee for a party named, out of the money vested in him as trustee, in which he had no interest except as trustee. On demurrer, assigning for eause that the nature of the trust did not appear:—Held good. Rey. v. Brancaster Churchwardens, 7 A. & E. 458; 2 N. & P. 580.

In pursuance of the will of a private person, his executor, by deed, conveyed lands to trustees for the benefit of the poor of a parish. The deed provided that a chest, of which there should be three locks and three keys, should remain in the parish church, for keeping all writings, accounts, &c., and the trust moneys remaining unexpended. One of such keys to be kent by the receiver, the second by the parson, the third by the church-wardens:—Held, that a mandamus lay to the trustees to compel the delivery of one key to the churchwardens, although the application concerned a trust and a mere private endowment. Reg. v. Ottery St. Mary, Devon, 3 G. & D. 382; 4 Q. B. 157; 12 L. J., Q. B. 118; 7 Jur. 129. The advowson of a vicarage had been purchased by certain landowners, and conveyed to feoffees, in trust, upon every avoidance, to present such person as should be nominated by the majority of the landowners. At a meeting of the landowners for the purpose of nominating a successor to a deceased vicar, a dispute arose as to which of two candidates, A. and S., had the legal majority of votes, and thereupon the trustees refused to concur in presenting. Upon an application for a mandamus to the trustees to present A.:—Held, that it could not be made by A., because he had no legal right. Orton Viourage, In re, 14 Q. B. 139; 18 L. J., Q. B. 321; 13 Jur. 1049.

c. To Ministerial or Judicial Officers-Discretion.

Who are.]-The guardians of the poor under an act of parliament ordered the treasurer to pay a sum of money for a purpose different from that mentioned in the act, against which an appeal was entered at the sessions, where that sum was disallowed in the account, and the treasurer who had paid it was ordered to repay it to the succeeding treasurer. The court refused to grant a mandanus to compel the late treasurer to pay over the money according to the order of the sessions, because he was a ministerial officer, and bound to obey the order of the guardians. Rea v. Shaw, 5 Term Rep.

County Treasurer.]—A mandamus will not lie to a ministerial officer, as the treasurer of a county, to obey an order of the court of quarter sessions; the proper remedy in case of his refusal to obey such order is by indictment. Rew v. Bristow, 6 Term Rep. 168; 3 R. R. 144, S. P., Rex v. Surrey Treasurer, 1 Chit. 650. And see Rex v. Johnson, 4 M. & S. 515.

A mandamus will not lie to a treasurer of a borough to compel him to pay costs to witnesses under the order of a judge, founded on 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, the treasurer being a ministerial officer, and subject for his refusal to an indictment. Rev v. Juyes, 5 N. & M. 101; 3 A. & E. 416; 1 H. & W.

Archbishop confirming Election of Bishop. ]-Under 25 Hen. 8, c. 20, s. 5, after an election of a bishop by the dean and chapter of a cathedral, by virtue of a congé d'élire and letters missive, the person so elected is to be reputed and taken by the name of the lord elected of the see, and the king is thereupon to issue letters patent to the archbishop, commanding him to confirm the election, and to invest and consecrate him, and if he fails to do so for twenty days, he is to incur the penalties of a præmmire:—Held, by Lord Denman, C.J., and Erle, J., that the archbishop. acting merely ministerially, is bound to confirm the bishop elect, and that he has no anthority to hear any opposition advanced against the person so elected. Per Patteson, J., and Coleridge, J., that confirmation is a judicial act, which the archbishop is to conduct according to the prineiples of the canon law, and that parties opposing are entitled to appear in his court, and enter their objections. Reg. v. Canterbury (Archbishop), Hampden, In re, 11 Q. B. 483; 17 L. J., Q. B. 252; 12 Jur. 862.

Held, also, per Patteson, J., and Coleridge, J., that the opposers not having been allowed to appear and be heard, there was a declining of jurisdiction by the archbishop, for which a mandamus would lie. Ib.

Where only Nominal Party. ]-The general rule that an indictment, and not a mandanus, is the proper mode of enforcing obedience by a ministerial officer to an order of sessions, does not prevail where the court sees that the ministerial officer is put forward merely as a nominal party, and that other persons are those who are to be compelled to perform the duty. Heg. v. Wood Ditton Highway Surveyors, 18 L. J., M. C. 218.

Three persons were indicted, at the assizes for a county, for forging the will of D. D. died in a borough, and one of the prisoners took away the deeds, &c., of the deceased to his own house, | The Court of Chancery further expressed an which was in the county, but not in the borough; the forged signatures of the testator and of one of the witnesses were written in the borough, and the offence was completed in another county, where the forged signature of the second witness was written. The borough did not contribute to the county-rate, but had a borough fund of its own :- Held, that the order for payment of all costs and expenses of the prosecution was properly made on the treasurer of the borough, and a mandamus would lie to the treasurer to compel payment. Reg. v. Hayward, 17 L. J., Q. B. 223. S. C., nom, Reg. v. Opposite Research Transacture S. C., nom. Reg. v. Oswestry Borough Treasurer, 12 O. B. 239; 12 Jur. 744.

The court will issue a mandamus to a treasurer of a county, to deposit with the clerk of the peace, in pursuance of 12 Geo, 2, c. 29, ss, 7, 8, books containing entries of the county expenditure, although the receipts, tradesmen's bills, the gaoler's accounts, and copies of the county rate, had been already deposited with the clerk of the peace, and the books contain the discharges of the treasurer, and the discharges of the former treasurer by the justices in session. Rev v. Payne, 1 N. & P. 524; W. W. & D. 142; 6 A. & E. 392; 6 L. J., M. C. 62; 1 Jur. 54.

The rule that the court will not grant a mandamus to a ministerial officer to obey an order of quarter sessions, does not apply where the ministerial officer is a nominal party. Bottom, Ex parte, 13 Jur. 680.

Discretionary.]-By the Clergy Discipline Act, 1840, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 3, in every case of a elerk in holy orders who may be charged with any offence against the laws ecclesiastical, or concerning whom there may exist scandal or evil report, as having offended against the said laws, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese, on the application of any party complaining thereof, or, if he shall so think fit, of his own mere motion, to issue a commission of inquiry as to the grounds of such charge or report, bishop having refused to issue a commission to inquire into certain charges against a rector in his diocese, upon an application by a clerk in holy orders, who was a stranger to the parish and diocese, and he having obtained a rule for a mandamns to the bishop commanding him to issue a commission :-Held, by Wightman, J., that under s. 3 the power of the bishop to issue a commission was discretionary; Lord Campbell, C.J., and Erle, J., concurring; Hill, J., doubting as to the construction of s. 3, but holding that the court ought not to issue a mandamus npon the application of a party who was not shewn to be aggrieved, or to have some connection with the parish or diocese. Reg. v. Chichester (Bishop), 2 El. & El. 209; 29 L. J., Q. B. 23; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 120; 7 W. R. 629.

A party applied to the Insolvent Debtors' Court, for an order to vest a surplus in him, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 92, claiming under an alleged assignment to him by the insolvent. That court held that the assignment was invalid as against other claimants of the surplus, and refused to make the order. The court of Queen's Bench, holding that the functions of the Insolvent Debtors' Court were judicial and not merely opinion that this decree rendered the duty of the Insolvent Debtors' Court in the matter more simply ministerial. The latter court, however, refused, on a renewed application to it, to act upon that opinion and make the order. On a subsequent application by the claimant for a mandamus to the Insolvent Debtors' Court to make the order :--Held, that, after as before the proceedings in Chancery, and notwithstanding the opinion there expressed to the contrary, the Insolvent Debtors' Court retained a judicial discretion whether or not to make the order; and that therefore the mandamus could not issue. Cook, Ex parte, 2 El. & El. 586; 29 L. J., Q. B. 68; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 224; 1 L. T. 369.

The court refused to grant a mandamus requiring the visitors named in the charter of the College of Doctors' Commons to inquire into the mode in which the college, under the Court of Probate Act. 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, ss. 116. 117, had exercised their discretion as to the surrender of their charter and the disposition of their property. Lee, Ex parte, El. Bl. & El.

If the visitor of a college refuses to exercise his visitatorial power by hearing an appeal, the conrt will grant a mandamus to set him in motion, but cannot afterwards review his decision. Buller, Ex parte, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 709; 3 W. R. 447.

- Refusal to Issue Summonses.]-Upon an application to justices for summonses against certain persons to answer a charge of conspiracy to break the peace and do grievons bodily harm at a public meeting, evidence was given that a disturbance had arisen at the meeting in which the defendants took part, and that one or other of them had previously offered money to different persons if they would commit acts of violence at the meeting. The justices, after hearing the evidence, declined to issue the summonses, and a rule nisi for a mandamus having been obtained, they stated in their affidavit that upon the facts brought before them they did not feel justified in granting the application, but did not say that they thought the witnesses unworthy of credit :-Held, that the rule must be made absolute, for although under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42 (Jervis's Act), s. 9, the justices are to issue their summons "if they shall think fit," it was here evident that they had not exercised a discretion. Reg. v. Adamson, 45 L. J., M. C. 46; 1 Q. B. D. 201; 33 L. T. 840; 24 W. R.

Erroneous Belief of Judge that he has no Jurisdiction. - Where a county court judge, after hearing so much of a case as relates to the jurisdiction, declines to hear and determine it, erroneously believing that he has no inrisdiction, an order in the nature of a mandamus will lie to compel him to hear and determine it. Reg. v. Southampton County Court Judge, 65 L.T. 320.

Appearance of Judge to Shew Cause against Rule Nisi.]—Where a rule nisi has been granted calling on a county court judge to shew cause why he should not hear and determine a question ministerial, refused to issue a mandamus commanding that court to make the order. The shee cause against the rule. Reg. v. Conquer applicant then took proceedings in Chancery, or Croydon Doputy Consty Charles, which resulted in a decree in his favour, that the L. J., C. B. 26; 24 Q. B. D. 60; 62 L. T. 583; assignment to him by the insolvent was valid, 18 W. R. 207.

d. Actions for Acts done under Mandamus,

By Rules of Supreme Court, 1883. Ord, LHI.
r. 12, no action or proceeding shall be commenced or prosecuted against any person of any thing done in obedience to writ of mandamus issued by the Supreme Court or any judge thereof.
The court, if it doubted whether a mandamus

The cont, if it doubted whether a mandamus should or should not be granted, would not direct it to issue merely in order that justices might make a return and be protected by the repealed 6 & 7 Vict. c. 67, s. 8, if a peremptory mandamus should issue and be obeyed. Reg. v. Durtmenth (Eurt), 5 Q. B. 878; 1 D. & M. 126.

The court will not grant a mandamus commanding justices of the peace to do an act which may render them liable to an action. Rev v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 2 D. & R. 689; 5 B. & C. 485. S. P., Rev v. Buckinghamshire JJ., 3 N. & M. 68,

Therefore, the court refused a mandamus to compel a magistrate to enforce a conviction, where it was doubtful whether such conviction was good for want of setting out the evidence on which it was grounded. Rev v. Braderip, 7 D. & R. 861; 5 B. & C. 239; 29 R. R. 229.

Also, to summon a person for not paying poorrates. Anon., 2 Chit. 257; 3 Bos. & P. 220.

Also, to make a warrant of distress for the

Also, to make a warrant of distress for the poor-rate. St. Luke's Purish v. Middlesew JJ., I Wils, 133.

The court will not grant a mandamus to magistrates to order them to issue warrants of distress to levy a poor-rate on certain persons who have refused to pay, unless those persons have been previously summoned by the justices. Heav. J.Bon. 6 Term Ren. 198.

e. Granting is Discretionary.

A writ of mandamus is a prerogative writ, and not a writ of right, and the granting of it is, that sense, discretionary. Hey, v. All Saints, Wigan, Chwecheardens, 1 App. Cas. 611; 35 L. T. 381; 25 W. R. 128. S. P. Rep. v. Peterborough Curporation, 44 L. J., Q. B. 85; 23 W. R.

The exercise of this discretion cannot be questioned, but the grant of a peremptory mandamus is a decision upon a right declaring what is and what is not lawful to be done, and such decision is subject to review. In.

f. Refusal to do Act.

Always Necessary.]—A mandamus will not go, unless it is clear that there has been a direct refusal to do that which it is the object of the mandamus to enforce, either in terms or by circumstances, which districtly shew an intention in the party to withhold from doing the act required. Reav. Brechmoch and Aberqueening Chinal Co., 4 N. & M. 871; 3 A. & E. 217; 1 H. & W. 279.

The court directed a mandamus to go peremptorily in the first instance, commanding a gaoler to give up for burial the body of a debtor dead within the gaol, it being sworn that he refused to do so until a sum, claimed as a debt owing by the deceased for maintenance, was paid, Watheield (Bailiff), La re, 1 G. & D. 566; 5 Jur. 989. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Fisz, 2 Q. B. 246.

The court will not grant a mandamus unless does not lie to give effect to illegality. The it has been preceded by a distinct demand of court will not assist an illegal transaction in any the specific thing the performance of which is the object of the mandamus, and by a refusal of performance, or conduct equivalent thereto. Rey. v. Bristal and Exeter Ry., 4 Q. B. 162; 3 G. & D. 384; 3 Isailw. Cas. 438; 12 L. J., Q. B. 106; 7 Jur. 233.

It is no ground of objection to a mandamus that a requisition is made on parties in the alternative to do one of three things, if the duty enjoined by act of parliament forms one of them, and there has been a general refusal to comply with such requisition. Rep. v. St. Margaret's, Leicester, Select Veerly, 1 P. & D. 116; S. A., & E., 889; 1 W., W. & H. 673.

A colourable adjoinnment of a question before

A colourable adjuntiment of a question before a vestry, under the pretence of waiting until the churchwardens had furnished estimates of the sum required for the repair of the churches, held to be equivalent to a positive refusal to make a rate. Ib.

g. Other Points.

Jurisdiction of Queen's Bench Division. —A writ of mandamus under s. 25, sub-s. 8, of the Judicature Act, 1873, can only be obtained in a pending cause or matter; the prerogative write being preserved to the Queen's Bench Division by s. 34. Paris Skating Rink Ch., In vz. 46 L. J., Ch. 831, 6 Ch. D. 731, 25 W. R. 767. A local board, under the Public Health Act

A local board, under the Public Health Act 1875, causing a nuisance by any act which, independently of the statute, would have given a cause of action to any person, may be made liable in damages, or be restrained by injunction, unless they can show a justification under the powers of the statute. But if a local board do not act themselves to cause a nuisance, but neglect to perform their duty of providing a satisfactory and healthy system of drainage, it is no ground of action by an individual for damages or an injunction, but the remedy is by prerogative with of mandamus; and, semble, this jurisdiction, notwithstanding the 25th section of the Judicature Act, 1878, ought not to be excreized except by the Queen's Bench Division. (Bossop v. Reston Leads Bourd, 49 L. J., Ch. 89; 12 Ch. D. 102; 40 L. T. 781; 28 W. L. J., Ch. 885; 20 Ch. D. 595; 46 L. T. 573; 30 W. R. 579.

Second Application after Discharge of First—Fresh Materials.]—Where a rule for a mandamus to compel a corporation to perform a statutory duty has been discharged, on the ground that no demand and refusal have taken place, the court will not grant another rule for a mandamus for the same purpose, although a demand and refusal have taken place since the discharge of the former rule. Thompson, Exparte (§ Q. B. 721), followed. Reg. v. Badimis (Carporation, G. It. J., M. C. 151, [1893] 2 Q. B. 21; 66 L. T. 562; 40 W. R. 606; 56 J. P. 504.

Not Granted to Effect an Illegal Purpose.]—
The process of the court ought not to be made ancillary to a transaction which violates the law. The writ goes to inferior tribunals to oblige them to do such justice as the law enjoins. It is a writ emphatically in subsidium justitiae, and does not lie to give effect to illegality. The court will not assist an illegal transaction in any way. It punishes the parties to the illegality deputies should be objected to, and notice in by refusing its aid, Reg. v. Littledule, 10 L. R.,

New Right Created by Statute.]-When a new right has been created by act of parliament, the proper method of enforcing it is by mandamus at common law. Simpson v. Scottish Union Fire and Life Insurance Co., 1 H. & M. 618; 32 L. J., Ch. 329; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 711; 8 L. T. 112; 11 W. R. 459.

Under the Building Act, 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s, 83, a landlord may apply, by mandamus, to a court of common law, before the insurers have settled with the tenant, to have the money secured by a policy of insurance on a house within the bills of mortality, destroyed by fire, applied to the rebuilding of such house. Ib.

Where Option Given !- Where an act of parliament directs that, under certain circumstances, one or other of two things shall be done, the party to do the act has the option of doing which act he pleases; and a mandamus not giving such option, or not stating a sufficient reason why such option no longer exists, is bad in law. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 4 H. L. Cas, 471: 17 Jur. 901.

Not Granted where Opinion of Court Asked. ] -By agreement between parties, an application was made for a mandamus, merely with a view to obtain the opinion of the court, whether, on the construction of a private act, the proceeding by mandamus was proper; the court stopped the argument, and declined to give any decision, Reg. v. Blackwall Ru., 9 D. P. C. 558.

Extension of Remedy-Parties Waiving Objection.]—The court is not justified in extending the remedy by mandamus to cases to which it does not by law extend, though the parties waive the objection. Reg. v. Treasury (Lords), 16 Q. B. 357; 20 L. J., Q. B. 305; 15 Jur. 767.

Where Writ would be Inoperative and not Beneficial. |-The court will not grant a mandamus, where issuing the writ would necessarily be inoperative, and could not be followed by any beneficial result, although it appears that the parties against whom it is sought had, upon the facts and circumstances before them, wrongfully refused to do the act required; but, in order to induce the court to withhold assistance on this ground, it must be satisfied that no benefit could possibly result from issuing the writ. Reg. v. Bridgeman, 2 New Sess. Cas. 232; 15 L. J., M. C. 44; 10 Jur, 159.

Act Ordered must be Possible. ]-The writ supposes the required act to be possible, and if it is shewn that the party has not the power to do the act commanded, the writ is bad. Reg. v. L. & N. W. Ry., 6 Railw. Cas, 634.

Inability through Want of Funds. ]-The court will not issue a mandamus against a public body when it is clearly shewn that the performance of the duty sought to be enforced is impossible, by reason of want of funds not involving any default on the part of such body. Bristol and North Someract Hy., In re, 47 L. J., Q. B., 48; 3 Q. B. D. 10; 37 L. T. 527; 26 W. R. 236.

Mistake of Law-Declining Jurisdiction.]- writing should be given or delivered to the party objected to four days before the first meeting, it should be lawful for the deputies assembled at such meeting (exclusive of those objected to). and they were required to inquire into and determine the validity of such disputed election: Where proof was given, that notice of objection had been in due time served on the wife of the party objected to at his dwelling-house, and the meeting decided that personal service was essential, and refused to inquire into the election :-Held, that there had been a mistake of the law, and a declining of jurisdiction, and that consequently, a mandamus to inquire should be issued. Reg. v. Guodrich, 19 L. J., Q. B. 413; 14 Jur., 914; or Reg. v. Leicester Freemen, 15 O. B. 671.

Question of Fact.]—But where evidence was given of personal service of a notice upon the party objected to in due time, but the meeting disbelieved the witness, and decided that the disputed election was valid :-Held, that the deputies having decided upon a question of fact over which they had jurisdiction, their decision was final, and that the court could not interfere.

Application must be bona fide. ]-A general meeting of shareholders of a railway company resolved that the construction of the railway should be deferred, and that 14s, per share of the paid-up capital be returned to each shareholder. In pursuance of this resolution, 10s, per share were returned to and received by the shareholders, and the certificates of the shares were stamped with a statement to that effect. Subsequently, and after the powers of the company for the compulsory purchase of land had expired, A. purchased five shares from a shareholder who had assented to the resolution, and had received 10s, per share in respect of the shares. The father of A. had filed a bill in chancery against the company, to enforce the specific performance of an agreement for taking land for the purposes of the railway. Upon an application by A. for a mandamus for the secretary of the company to register the transfer deed of the shares:— Held, that he was not entitled to the writ. because he was not proceeding bona fide for the purpose of enforcing his rights as a shareholder; and as one of the public he had no interest in ascertaining how the funds of the company were distributed. Rog. v. Liverpool, Manchester and Newcastle-upon-Tyne Ry., 16 Jur. 949.

Order to do More than Statute Requires. ]-By a railway act, the company was required to make proper watering-places for cattle in all cases, where, by means of the railway, the cattle of any person occupying lands adjacent thereto should be deprived of access to their ancient watering-places, and to supply the same at all times with water. The railway was made through and intersected closes of M., in which there were ancient ponds or watering-places for cattle; and by means thereof the cattle, in portions of the closes, had been deprived of access to the ancient watering-places, and a mandamus issued, requiring the company to make proper watering-places in such portions of the closes respectively, which they refused to do:— Held, that the writ was erroneous, in ordering the company to do more than the act required, A statute provided that if the election of certain viz., to make a pond in each of the several was nothing on the face of the writ to shew that one watering-place would not have been sufficient and proper for the whole of the severed portions, York and North Midland Ry. v. Milner, 15 L. J., Q. B. 379-Ex. Ch.

Mandamus and not Injunction the Remedy for Neglect of Public Duty.]—A local board, under the Public Health Act. 1875, causing a nuisance. by any act which, independently of the statute, would have given a cause of action to any person, may be made liable in damages, or be restrained by injunction, unless they can shew a justification under the powers of the statute. But if a local board do not act themselves to cause a misance, but neglect to perform their daty of providing a satisfactory and healthy system of drainage, it is no ground of action by an individual for damages or an injunction, but the remedy is by prerogative writ of mandamus: and semble, this jurisdiction, notwithstanding the 25th section of the Judicature Act, 1873, ought not to be exercised except by the Queen's Bench Division, Glassop v. Heston Local Board, 49 L. J., Ch. 89; 12 Ch. D. 102; 40 L. T. 736; 28 W. R. 111—C. A.

2. In Particular Cases.

a. To the Privy Council.

A mandamus will not lie to the lords of the privy conneil, commanding them to receive a petition praying them to rehear a decision upon a case heard before and determined by them. upon an appeal from an ecclesiastical court to the judicial committee, instead of a court of delegates. Swith, Ex parte, 4 N. & M. 582; 1 H. & W. 282.

Where a case has been brought before the indicial committee of the privy council, on appeal from the Court of Arches, and the indicial committee has decided in favour of the appeal, at the same time retaining the principal cause, and ordering the unsuccessful party to appear absolutely, subject to the approbation of the king in council, which approbation has been afterwards given, the court cannot, on a suggestion of error in the decision, issue a mandamus to a privy council to receive a petition for a rehearing of the appeal. Ib. 3 A. & E. 719; 5 N. & M. 145; 1 H. & W. 417.

b. To Government Officers.

Servants of Crown merely or Superincumbent Duty. ]-A mandamus will not lie to the Crown, or its servants strictly as such, commanding it or them to pay over money, in its or their possession, in liquidation of claims on the Crown. De Bode, In re, 6 D. P. C. 776; 1 W. W. & H. 332.

Nor will a mandamns lie to the mere public depositaries of money, commanding the payment by them of a sum in gross. Ib.

In the half-year ending the 31st of December, 1870, certain prosecutions took place at the assizes and quarter sessions of a county, and the costs were taxed by the proper officers under the orders of the respective courts, and the treasurer of the county paid the bills, and returned the bills, with the usual vouchers, to the treasury. The lords of the treasury had appointed officers portions of the closes which had been cut off called the examiners of criminal law accounts, from the residue of such closes; and that there and these officers disallowed or reduced in amount and these officers disallowed or reduced in amount fifty-one of the items in the bills returned; and a rule nisi was then obtained for a mandamus to the lords of the treasury, commanding them to issue a treasury minute authorising the paymaster of civil contingencies to pay to the treasurer of the county the sums disallowed:—Held, that a mandamus would not lie, inasmuch as the lords of the treasury received the money, which was granted to her majesty, as servants of the Crown, and no duty was imposed upon them as between them and the persons to whom the money was payable. Reg. v. Treasury Commissioners, 41 L. J., Q. B. 178; L. R. 7 Q. B. 387; 26 L. T. 64; 20 W. R. 336; 12 Cox, C. C. 277.

The court will not grant a mandamus calling upon the lords commissioners of the treasury to pay a debt or claim unless they have admitted that they have received money granted by parliament for that specific purpose. Walmesley, Ex parte, 1 B. & S. 81; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1010; 4 L. T. 242; 9 W. B. 599.

The lords of the treasury recommended a retired allowance to a public officer, and obtained a vote of parliament for a particular sum, which was received from time to time under the Appropriation Act, by the proper officer. In several letters written by their secretary, these facts were stated, and directions given as to the mode of obtaining payment. The lords of the treasury refused to give an authority to him to pay it over to the individual to whom it was granted, unless upon conditions to which he would not agree :— Held, first, that he had a legal right to the amount so recommended. Row v. Treasury Com-missioners, 5 N. & M. 589; 4 A. & E. 286; 1. H. & W. 533 : 5 L. J., K. B. 20.

Held, secondly, that the court would enforce payment by mandamus, inasmuch as the claimant had no other remedy, and as the writ was demanded not against the king but against officers into whose hands money had been paid under an act of parliament for the use of an individual.

Duty Imposed by Royal Warrant-Secretary of State for War.]—A mandamus will not lie against the Secretary of State for War to compel him to carry out the terms of a royal warrant regulating the pay and retiring allowances of the officers and soldiers of the army, inasmuch as no legal duty in relation to such officers and soldiers is imposed upon the Secretary of State either by statute or by common law. Reg. v. Secretary of State for War, 60 L. J., Q. B. 457; [1891] 2 Q. B. 326; 61 L. T. 764; 40 W. R. 5; 56 J. P. 105-C. A.

Superannuation Allowance or Pension. ]-A party to whom a superannuation allowance had been granted in pursuance of a treasury minute according to 5 Geo. 3, c. 117, in respect of an office held during pleasure, had no vested interest in such allowance; but the minute might be revoked at will by the lords of the treasury. Rew v. Treasury (Lords), 4 A. & E. 976; 6 N. & M.

The lords of the treasury granted, under 3 Geo. 4, c. 113 [repealed], a pension for life to a person whose office had been abolished. They afterwards, thinking they had no power to grant such a pension, revoked their warrant. The amount once appeared in the parliamentary estimates, because the item could not be withdrawn in time.

It was afterwards withdrawn, and no money was assessing compensation to the prosecutor for ever received from parliament on account of the the lands. Rey. v. Woods and Ebrests Commis-pension, the sum which had been once in the sinners, 17 L. J., Q. B. 341; 12 Jur. 915. estimates having been applied to the ways and estimates having been applied to the ways and means:—Held, that no mandamus could go to 9 & 10 Viet. c. 38, s. 15, that they intended to Deductions having been made from a naval officer's half-pay, in parsuance of a general order from the admiralty, application was made on his behalf to have the amount of such deductious restored; and the lords of the admiralty stated, in answer, that they had given direction for restoring it. Afterwards they retracted their consent, giving as a reason, that it would subject them to many similar applications. After the officer's death, his administratrix moved for a mandamus to the lords of the admiralty to restore the deducted sums, on the ground that they had admitted the right to them, and the possession of applicable funds :- Fleld, that there was no vested right in the half-pay cutitling the administratrix to a mandamus. Ricketts, Ex parte, 6 N. & M. 523; 4 A. & E. 999.

The court will not grant a rule for a mandamus to the commissioners of excise, commanding them to assent to the appropriation of a part of an excise officer's pension, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 56. Reg. v. Excise Commissioners, Hayward, In re, 14 L. J., Q. B. 113: 9 Jur. 257. William the Fourth, in pursuance of 1 & 2

Will, 4, c. 11, granted to trustees for his consort Queen Adelaide an annuity of 100,000l., to commence on his decease, and continue during the life of her majesty, payable out of the Consolidated Fund, on the 13th March, 30th June, 30th September, and 31st December, by equal portions, His majesty died on 20th June, 1837. On 30th June the trustees received a full quarter's payment. This payment was made after consulting the law officers, who advised that the entire sum was due; and her majesty was informed of their advice. The quarterly payments were made up to and on the 30th September, 1849. Her majesty died on 2nd December, 1849. Her trustees applied for a proportionate part of the quarterly payment which would have become due on 31st December, 1849, if she had so long lived. On a rule nisi for a mandamus to the lords of the treasury to issue a warrant for this payment :- Held, that if the annuity had been apportionable and the sum due, mandanus was the proper remedy; and that the court would not, in the exercise of its discretion, make the refunding of what, on that supposition, would have been the overpayment on 30th June, 1837, a condition to the issning of the writ, there being no equity to require her majesty's representatives to restore a sum received under the bona fide belief that it was her own. Reg. v. Treasury Commissioners, 16 Q. B. 357; 20 L. J., Q. B. 305; 15 Jur. 767.

Order to Issue Warrant to Sheriff to Summon Jury.]-By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 38, the commissioners of woods were empowered to take lands for the purpose of forming Battersea Park, which were to be conveyed to the Queen, or to trustees on her behalf, and to form a royal park. The commissioners had given notice of their intention to take lands of the prosecutor, but had not taken them :- Held, that mandamus would lie to the commissioners, commanding them to issue their amounts certified by them to be overpaid. I, which, by the claims sent in, it appeared they could not) :-Held, that the commissioners, under the statute, were acting in a public capacity, and that the notice given by them did not constitute a quasi contract enforceable by a mandanus. Budge, En parte, 15 Q. B. 761; 19 L. J., Q. B. 497.

> Order to Pay Poor-rate. ]-The court will not grant a mandamus commanding the commissioners of woods to pay a poor-rate in respect of lands held by them under the Crown. Revee, Ex parte, 5 D. P. C. 668; W. W. & D. 64.

> Order to Customs to deliver up Goods. ]-The commissioners of customs refused to deliver up commissioners of designal retract to desire approximately and appearance of the contract of th damns to compel them to do so, as there was another remedy. ## c. To Commissioners, &c.

Commissioners of Inland Revenue. - Sect. 23 of 5 & 6 Viet. c. 79, provides for the return by the commissioners of stamps and taxes of probate duty, on proof by oath and proper vouchers to their satisfaction of the payment of debts of the deceased, whereby the amount of probate duty payable on the estate is reduced below the amount which has been paid. By a subsequent act the commissioners of inland revenue are substituted for the commissioners of stamps and taxes. On an application by an administrator for a mandamus to the commissioners to pay to the applicant the amount of duty overpaid by him, on the ground that he had supplied evidence of overpayment, and had no other legal remedy: -Held, that the mandainns ought not to issue, for the statute created no duty between the commissioners and the applicant, whose remedy, if the decision of the commissioners could be Treasury Commissioners (4 A. & E. 286) disapproved of. Nathan, In re, or Roy, v. Inland therence Commissioners, 53 L. J., Q. B. 229; 12 Q. B. D. 461; 51 L. T. 46; 32 W. R. 543; 48 J. P. 452-C. A.

Income Tax Commissioners.]—Mandamus lies to compel the commissioners for special purposes of income tax to issue orders for repayment of warrant to the sheriff to summon a jury for v. Income Tax Commissioners, 57 L. J., Q. B. 513; 21 Q. B. D. 313; 59 L. T. 455; 36 W. R. | under a local act, neither on the application of a 776-C. A.

Registrar of Joint Stock Companies.]—A writ of mandamus will lie against the registrar of joint stock companies, though an official of the Board of Trade, which is a committee of the privy council, if he refuse to perform a mere ministerial act which he is under a statutory obligation to perform—per Wills, J. Reg. v. Joint Stock Companies Registrar, 57 L. J., Q. B. 433; 21 Q. B. D. 131; 59 L. T. 67; 36 W. R. 185. 695 ; 52 J. P. 710.

To East India Company to Pay Officer.]—An officer commanding forces of the Queen and of the East India Company in India has no such legal right, by statute or otherwise, to his pay, as entitles him (in the absence of any specific undertaking or acknowledgment) to a mandamus calling upon the company to discharge arrears, though he has always received his pay from the company, and their practice has been to discharge it monthly. Appier, Exparte, 18 Q. B. 692; 21 L. J., Q. B. 332; 17 Jur. 380.

To Commissioners to Levy Rate. ]-A bill being introduced into parliament for the purpose of more effectually draining a particular district of level through another district, entirely within the jurisdiction of the commissioners of sewers for the county of Norfolk, acting under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, the commissioners, apprehending that the bill would, if passed, occasion an injury to the land within their jurisdiction, bona fide, and with discretion and prudenec, caused their clerk to take all reasonable and necessary steps for opposing the bill in parliament, and to prevent its passing, or to obtain the adoption of certain clauses, and thereby a considerable amount for costs and expenses had been incurred, and remained due to the clerk, who had since died: -Held, that his legal representatives were entitled to a mandamus directing the commissioners to levy a rate on the land within their jurisdietion, under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 45, and to pay off the amount due for such costs and expenses. Norfolk Sewers Commissioners, 20 L. J., Q. B. 121.

Where B. paid a special rate, erroneously and illegally imposed by a board of health, and five years afterwards, having discovered the mistake, commenced an action against the board for the recovery of the money so paid, obtained judgment, and afterwards sned the board upon the judgment, demanding a mandamus to them to make and levy a rate under the 11 & 12 Viet. c. 63, for the purpose of satisfying the judgment : -Held, that (assuming the sum recovered to be a charge within s. 89) B. was not entitled to a mandamus, masmuch as the action upon which the judgment proceeded was not commenced within six months from the date of the charge. Burland v. Kingston-upon-Hall Local Board, 3 B. & S. 371; 32 L. J., Q. B. 17; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 275; 7 L. T. 316; 11 W. R. 33.

To Execute Works.]—The court will not eompany, ordering them to perform a contract made with the company, nor on the application of certain ratepayers, ordering them to provide for the execution of the powers under the act, where no inconvenience is being suffered by the inhabitants. Reg. v. Cheltenham Commissioners of Paring, 4 Jur. 1060.

To Arbitrators.]—A mandamus lies to two arbitrators to appoint an ampire under a canal act. Rew v. Goodrich, 2 Smith, 388.

But not to execute first one particular part of a power granted by act of parliament. Rex v. Birmingham Canal Co., 2 W. Bl. 708.

To Trustees of Charity.]—Mandamus refused to the trustees of the Rugby charity to compel the payment of increased alms to claimants on the funds, although the applicants were at an advanced age, and would probably be dead before relief could be had in chancery. Rughy Charity Trustees, Ex parte, 9 D. & R. 214. And see next sub-head.

d. To Parish Officers.

To Make Rate.]—A mandamus will not be granted to overseers of the poor, to make a rate, without first appealing to the sessions. Rew v. Canterbury, 4 Bnrr. 2290; 1 W. Bl. 667.

Nor to collect a rate. Rew v. Norwich Overseers, Nolan, 28.

The court will grant a mandamus to commissioners, entrusted by act of parliament with the regulation of the expenditure of a parish, to compel them to levy a rate for the purpose of paying off a sum borrowed on the rates by paying on a sam borrowed on the races by former commissioners, without pledging their personal responsibility. Rew v. St. Paul, Shadwell, Commissioners, I M. & Ry. 591.

A local act required a select vestry from time to time to make rates for the relief of the poor, and also for the support and repair of churches, and ratepayers were empowered to appeal to the vestry and also to the quarter sessions. It was also provided, that nothing in the act contained should avoid any ecclesiastical law, or in any manner interfere with persons having ecclesiastical jurisdiction over the parish: -Held, 1. that notwithstanding this saving of ecclesiastical rights, the court had jurisdiction to issue a mandamus to compel the vestry to make such a rate for the repair of the churches. 2. That a general refusal to do any of two things, one of which the vestry was required to do by act of parliament, was sufficient to entitle the churchwardens to a mandamus. 3. That a eolourable adjournment of the question, under the pretence of waiting until the churchwardens had furnished estimates of the sum of money which would be required for the repair of the churches, was equivalent to a positive refusal to make a rate. Reg. v. St. Marguret's, Leicester, Select Vestry, 1 P. & D. 116; 8 A. & E. 889; 4 W. W. & H. 673.

To Inspect Accounts. ]-Where a party applies for a mandamus to compel churchwardens to allow him to inspect their accounts according to the direction of the 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, he must To Execute Works.]—The court will not | see the accounts. There is no general unqualified right on the from the churchwardens' books of accounts. To entitle a ratepayer to a mandamns to compel such inspection, some special and public ground must be shewn. Briggs, Ex. parte, 1 El. & El. 881; 28 L. J., Q. B. 272; 7 W. R. 445.

To Deliver over Documents.]-A mandamus will lie against the old overseers to compel them to deliver their public books and papers to their successors. Puse v. Clapham, 1 Wils. 305.

But not to churchwardens to deliver a vestry book to the vestry clerk. Anon., 2 Chit. 255.

An assistant overseer, after the expiration of his office, having refused to deliver up the parochial books to the existing overseers, they applied to two instices under the statute, but the justices refused to interfere. The court granted a mandamus to compel the assistant overseer to deliver up the books. Reg. v. Fox, 1 W. W. & H. 4.

To Make Sewer-Discretion of Vestry. ]-A vestry of a parish comprised within the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, 18 & 19 Vict, c. 120, having obtained the necessary approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works to the construction by them of such sewers as may be requisite for the drainage of the parish, has, under that section, a discretion with respect to the exigencies of one portion of the parish as compared with others, and is entitled to a reasonable time for the beginning and completion of the works; and a mandamus ordering the immediate construction of sewers in a particular part of the parish is defective, unless it shews on the part of the vestry a present duty, and a non-compliance therewith. Rey. v. St. Luke's, Chelsea, 1 B. & S. 903; 31 L. J., Q. B. 50; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 308; 5 L. T. 744; 10 W. R. 293.

To Receive Pauper. ]-The court will not grant a mandamus, requiring parish officers to receive a pauper, in obedience to an order of removal. The proper course is by indictment. Dawnton Overseers, Exparte, 8 El. & Bl. 856; 27 L. J., M. C. 281; 6 W. R. 224.

To fix Hours of Vestry Meetings. ]-The viear and churchwardens of a parish have power to fix the hour of holding vestry meetings, and the parishioners cannot by mandanus compel them to after it. Reg. v. Wilson or Tattenham (Teer), 49 L. J., Q. B. 870; 48 L. T. 560; 45 J. P. 140—C. A. Affirning 4 Q. B. D. 357; 27 W. R. 550.

e. To Companies.

To Pay Purchase Money into Bank. - Where a local improvement act enabled a company to purchase lands, and contained the usual clauses for a compensation jury; and also enacted, that, in case the person to whom the compensation should be awarded should not be able to make a good title to the premises, it should be lawful for the company to pay the money into the Bank of England in the name of the accountant-general: -Held, that when the company, after an award made (in consequence of a difference as to the purchase-money), had objected to the title of the purchaser, the purchaser was not entitled to a mandamus to the company to pay the purchasemoney into the bank, unless he distinctly shewed to the court that he could not make a good title, Reg. v Deptford Pier Co., 1 P. & D. 128; 8 A. & E. 910.

An award having been made of a sum of money part of ratepayers to inspect and take extracts to be paid to a claimant by a railway company under the Lands Clauses Act, a mandamus will be granted against the company to compel them to deposit the amount awarded into a bank, Barnett v. G. E. Ry., 18 L. T. 408; 16 W. R. 793,

> To Compel Company to Summon Jury to Assess Compensation. —Where a railway company took part of a person's land, and constructed part of a railway on it, and damaged the remainder of his property which adjoined, and then, two years afterwards, after an apparent delay on the part of the company in giving compensation, and summoning a jury to assess compensation, they stated that they were about to do more works, which would further injure the property, the court refused to grant a mandamus to compel the. company to summon a jury to assess compensation, it appearing that the company was acting bona fide, and that the additional works were in actual progress. Parkes, Expurte, 9 D. P. C. 614; 1 W. P. C. 158; 10 L. J., Q. B. 359; 5 Jur. 435, Where an inquisition has been duly held before > the sheriff to assess damages in pursuance of a precept issued by a railway company under their act, which provided that such verdict should be final, the court refused a mandamus to compel the issning of a new precept, though made on the ground of misdirection, of the improper rejection of evidence, of the verdiet being against evidence, and the damages grossly insufficient. Reg. v. and the damages grossly insumeent. May, V. Eustern Counties Ry, 3 Railw. Cas. 466; 2 D. (N.S.) 945; 12 L. J., Q. B. 271; 7 Jur. 628.

> Where an act constituting a company entitles > individuals to compensation for injury occasioned by the works of the company, the court will issue a mandamus to the company to cause a jury to be summoned to try the two questions-whether any, and what extent of damage has been done. Reg. v. Birmingham Canal Co., 4 Jur. 193. See Reg. v. North Union Ry., 1 Railw. Cas. 729.

> Where an act constituting a company entitles individuals to compensation for damages sustained by reason of the works anthorised by the act, the court will issue a mandamus to the company to cause a jury to be summoned; and the company may, in their return, deny that the damage has been caused by their works ; whereupon an issue will be directed, or they may contend that the injury is not one for which the act provides compensation. Reg. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 5 Jur. 365.

> Under a railway act, which gave power to divert rivers, watercourses, &c., a company had raised the level of a brook, into which the sough of a coal mine had been accustomed to empty itself, and thereby eaused the water of the brook to flow into the sough, and innudate and stop the coal works. Upon the owner of them applying for a mandamus for a jury to ascertain and compensate him for the injury done to his works by such diverting of the brook, which was opposed by the company on the ground that, on the claimant's remoustrance they had restored the brook to its former level, and that no damage had been done by the alteration, such stoppage having been frequently caused by floods before : -Held, that it was a question for a jury to ascertain whether any damage had been done to the claimant; and that his alleging that he was injured by the diverting (i.e. altering the level) of the brook, was sufficient to induce the court to grant a mandamus. Reg. v. North Midland Ru., 2 Railw. Cas. 1.

To Pay Compensation.]—Where under a com- of certain closes, parts of which, after the underpensation clause in a local act a jury had been summoned, and had assessed the compensation, but the company refused to pay the same or the costs :- Held, that a mandamus lay to enforce the performance, though the statute made the werdlet and judgment records of the quarter sessions. Rew v. Nottingham Old Waterworks Co., 6 A. & E. 355; 1 N. & P. 480; 6 L. J. K. B. See Reg. v. London and Blackwall Ry., 3 D. & L. 899; 4 Railw. Cas. 110; 15 L. J., Q. B. 42.

To do Works. - Where a railway was made under the authority of an act of parliament, by which the proprietors were incorporated, and by which it was provided that the public should have the beneficial enjoyment of the same; the company having afterwards taken up the railway :- Held, that a mandamns might issue to compel the company to reinstate and lay down again the railway. Rew v. Severn and Wye Ry., 2 B. & Ald, 646.

A mandamns will not lie to compel a railway company to construct a bridge in lien of a level crossing pursuant to an order of the Board of Trade where it appears that the company is wholly without funds, and has not the means of providing the money required for that purpose. Bristol and North Somerset Ry., In rc, 47 L.J., Q.B. 48; 3 Q.B. D. 10; 37 L.T. 527; 26 W.R. 236.

Where an act empowers a company to execute works, and prescribes the manner in which they shall be done, a party wishing to enforce the proper execution by mandamus must, after the work is completed, specifically require the company to perform these things which according to his view the act enjoins. Iley. v. Bristal and Exerter Eq., 4 Q. B. 162; 8 (s. E. 284; 8 Railw. Cas. 438; 12 J. J. Q. B. 106; 7 Jur. 233.

Unless such demand is made after completion of the work, and compliance is refused in terms or virtually, a mandamus will not be granted, though the statute has been probably disobeyed, and though it assigned a limited time for the performance, which time has elapsed. Ib.

To Reinstate Railway. |- Mandamus refused to compel railway company to reinstate railway let down by owner of subjacent minerals excavating the same, Reg. v. G. W. Rg., 62 L. J., Q. B. 572; 9 R. 127; 69 L. T. 572.

To Repair Works. ]-A dock company was required by statute to make and maintain a new course for a river, with equal depth and breadth at the bottom, and with equal inclination of the sides, to the former course. The company made the new channel accordingly: - Held, that the company was bound to repair the banks of it generally; and that a mandamus would lie to enforce such repair, although there might be a remedy by indictment. Reg. v. Bristol Dock Co., 2 Q. B. 64; 2 Railw. Cas. 599; 1 G. & D. 286; 6 Jur. 216.

A company was authorised by act of parliament to make, complete, and maintain a new course or channel for a river, the same to be of equal depth and breadth at the bottom, and of equal inclination at the sides, with the old course or channel. They were also required to make compensation to persons interested in any houses and lands injured by means of the execution of that it is a reasonable and proper of the powers thereby granted. The company, for London and St. Katherine Ducks (6) the purpose of their works, purchased the entirety | Q. B. 4; 31 L. T. 588; 23 W. R. 136.

taking was completed, they sold in lots. the conditions of sale was, that a strip of land, lying between the lots and the new channel of the river, should be for ever left open as a public road. This road was afterwards adopted and repaired by the parish; but a portion of it having given way, in consequence of the action of the tide causing a slip in the bank (whereby the inclination of the sides of the new channel became altered), the owners and occupiers of houses built upon the lots since the sale called npon the company to repair the bank, which they refused to do. On an application by the Corporation of Bristol, who are conservators of the river, on affidavits stating these facts, and also stating apprehensions of injury to the navigation, though not shewing any actual impediment caused thereto, the court granted a mandamus to compel the company to repair and maintain the bank. Reg. v. Bristol Dock Co. 1 Railw. Cas. 548.

To Produce Accounts. ]-A mandamus will not lie to a trading corporation, at the instance of one of its members, to compel them to produce their accounts, for the purpose of declaring a dividend of the profits. Rew v. Bank of England, 2 B. & Ald. 620.

To Transfer Stock. ]—Nor to the Bank of England to transfer stock, because there is a remedy by an action if they refuse. Rev v. Bank of England, 2 Doug. 524.

Nor to an insurance company to transfer shares standing in the name of a bankrupt into the names of his assignees. Rev v. London Ansurance Co., 1 D. & R. 510; 5 B. & Ald. 899.

To Company to Register Shareholders, -A prerogative writ of mandamus will not lie to compel a company to register as a holder of shares therein, a person to whom they have issued certificates in respect of such shares where the company have issued prior certificates in respect of such shares to someone else, without clear proof that the person to whom the last certificates were issued had a better title than the person to whom the earlier ones were issued, even though the person holding the earlier certificates has not been entered in the company's register as the holder of such shares. Reg. v. Charmwood Forest Ry., Cab. & E. 419.

To Register Married Woman's Shares. ]-Upon the application of a married woman under s. 4 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (repealed), that shares in a joint-stock company may be registered in her name as a married woman entitled to her separate use, it is the duty of the company to investigate and recognise hertitle, and a mandamus to enforce the performance of this duty will be granted by the court. Reg. v. Carnatic Ry., 42 L. J., Q. B. 169; L. R. 8 Q. B. 299; 28 L. T. 413; 21 W. R. 621.

To Inspect Books of Companies. When the inspection of the books of a company by a shareholder would cause inconvenience to the company, and might injure third parties, the court will not grant a mandamus to compel the production of the books, unless the applicant discloses his object in seeking inspection, and shews that it is a reasonable and proper one. Reg. v. London and St. Katherine Docks (b., 44 L. J.,

To Pay Judgment. ]-By a statute a company was established, with power to make calls and to sue and be sued in the name of their treasurer or any director. An action was brought against the treasurer, and judgment entered up against the company, who appeared to have no assets. The court refused to issue a mandamus commanding the company to pay the sum recovered and costs. Reg. v. Victoria Park Co., 4 P. & D. 639; 1 Q. B. 288.

A company was incorporated by act of parliament, which directed that all actions against the company should be prosecuted against the the company should be prosecuted against the treasurer or a director for the time being; but that the body or goods, lands, &c., of such treasurer or director should not, by reason of his being defendant in such action be liable to execution. An action having been brought by C. against the treasurer as such, and another by the company, in the name of the treasurer, against C., all matters in difference were referred to an arbitrator, who awarded that C. had cause of action against the defendant as such treasurer, for a certain sum, and directed that the treasurer should pay to C, that sum on demand; and as to the other suit, he awarded that the treasurer, as such, had no cause of action, and ordered him, as such treasurer, to pay C, the costs on demand :- Held, that a mandamus would lie to the treasurer and directors, commanding them to pay the sums awarded. Rev. v. St. Katherine Docks Co., 4 B. & Ad. 360; 1 N & M 121 not grant a mandanus commanding a railway company to take the seal off the register of shareholders, on a suggestion that it was affixed without authority, and contrary to the 8 & 9 Viet. c. 16 (the Companies Clauses Act), ss. 9, 66, 75, 90. Th. list in which the name of a claimant for that parish could be inserted :- Held, that this intermediate defect in his title to be on the general burgess roll, which was made up of the several parish lists, did not preclude the court from issuing a mandamus for the insertion of his name. Reg. v. Liehtfield Corporation, 1 G. & D. 28: 1 Q. B. 453: 10 L. J., Q. B. 171: 5 Jur. 889. Such a mandamus is not peremptory in the first instance. Ib.

> Onus of Proof. - Where a party, whose name has been expunged from the burgess roll by the mayor on revision, applies to the court for a mandamns to replace it, the court is bound to inquire into his title. It is not, therefore, sufficient for him to show that his name was inserted by the overseers, and was expunged by the mayor, on an objection which, for want of legal notice under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 17 (as the party alleges), ought not to have been heard. Reg. v. Harwish Corporation, 8 A. & E. 919; 1 P. & D. 134; 1 W. W. & H. 611.

> Return. ]-A householder of a borough had his name inserted by the overseers of a parish, within the borough, on the burgess list of the parish, which was signed by the overseers. The mayor struck off his name, without any objection having been made to it, but did not reject the list. A mandanus having issued, commanding the mayor to insert the name on the burgess roll, the return alleged that the burgess list was not signed by the churchwardens, or either of them :

ii. Other Matters.

User of Guildhall.]-The bailiffs of a borough To compel Company to Convey Goods.]-A had been time immemorial lords of the manor and owners of the guildhall within the borough, and by a charter of Philip & Mary power was granted to them to hold manor courts in the guildhall twice in every year, as of ancient time, and, until 1810, such courts had been immemorially held. In that year commissioners under an inclosure act awarded to Lord H, all the manor with the rights, courts, &c., excepting to the bailiffs and burgesses the guildhall :—Held, that this exception did not exclude the new lord's right to hold his manor courts in the guildhall. Ilew v. Ilchester, 4 D. & R. 324; 2 B. & C. 764; 2 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 147.

> To hold Court.]—If there are words of permission in a charter, to do an act which is clearly for the public benefit, they are obligatory ; therefore, where a charter declared that the mayor and jurats of an ancient town might hold a court of record for the holding of pleas, but which had been long disused, the court granted a mandamus to compel such court to be held, at the instance of an inhabitant of the town,

B. & Ald. 691; 24 R. R. 532.

Where a charter is granted to a corporation to hold a court for the trial of causes, the disuse of that court for 200 years, and the want of funds to hold it, are no answer to a rule for a mandamus commanding them to hold it. Rew v. Wells Corporation, 4 D. P. C. 562.

To Pay over Money.]-A controversy existing in a corporation between the freemen under an old charter, and the town council under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, as to the exclusive right of the former to some corporation property to their own private use, a public meeting of the freemen was held, and a resolution was carried at the instance of A., a freeman, that the rents should be paid into the hands of the defendant, to wait nutil the claim of the freemen should be The rents having been so paid, and a rule nisi having been obtained by A., as a freeman and a burgess and an inhabitant of the borough, liable to contribute to the borough rate, for a mandamus to the defendant to pay the money over into the hands of the treasurer of the borough, the court discharged the rule. Reg. v. Frust, 1 P. & D. 75; 8 A. & E. 822; 1 W. W. & H. 664; 2 Jur. 966.

The lords commissioners of the treasury were held to be entitled to a peremptory mandamus compelling a borough treasurer to repay to them the amount of remmeration and allowances out of the borough fund or rate, which had been paid to a barrister who had tried a municipal election petition, and compelling the corporation to order such amount to be levied by a borough rate. Reg. v. Maidenhead Corporation, 51 L. J., Q. B. 444; 9 Q. B. D. 494; 46 J. P. 724—C. A.

To Appoint Deputy.]—A mandamus will not lie to appoint a general deputy under a by-law, although it requires that the under-steward, or his sufficient deputy, shall be attendant at every court to discharge the duties of his office. Rev. v. Gravesend Carporation, 4 D. & R. 117; 2 B. & C. 602; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 94.

To Deliver up Mace.]—A serjeant of mace to a corporation being discharged from his office, refused to deliver up the mace to his successor : Held, that no mandanus would lie to compel him to do so. Reg. v. Todd, 2 Jur. 365.

To Pharmaceutical Society.]-Mandamus to Pharmaceutical Society to carry out the provisions of the Pharmacy Act, 1852, 15 & 16 Vict. Reg. v. The Pharmaceutical Society. 2 W. R. 220.

g. To Justices. i. Generally.

Declining Jurisdiction.]—A railway act en-acted that the company shall not be obliged, nor any justice allowed to receive or take notice of any complaint for any loss or injury sustained in consequence of the execution of the powers of the act, unless notice in writing shall have been given by the complainant to the company within six months after the time of such loss or injury. And that, in case of differences between the company and owners of property, as to the amount of damage done thereto by the company, the same shall (when the claim does not exceed 20%) be determined by two justices. R. 532. tained in like manner by the justices, whatever may be the amount claimed:—Held, that the notice required by the first act did not apply to cases before the justices. And, therefore, where a justice had dismissed a complaint for want of proof of such notice, the court granted a mandamus, calling upon him to hear and determine the complaint. Reg. v. Bingham, 4 Q. B. 877; 3 Railw. Cas. 390.

Mandamus commanding justices to hear and adjudicate on a complaint by overseers that a pauper was chargeable to and ought to be removed from their township. The return shewed that the justices had received and begun to hear the complaint, and that in the course of the investigation it appeared that the pauper was chargeable to the township, and resided continuously in the township for ten years before the application, and during six of these ten years (before the passing of the Poor Removal Act, 1846, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 66), had received parochial relief, and the justices thereupon decided that the pauper was irre-movable:—Held, that the return was a sufficient answer, as it showed that the justices had not declined to exercise their jurisdiction, but had exercised it, though erroneously. Rog. v. Blan-shard, 13 Q. B. 318; 18 L. J., M. C. 110.

Under the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. e. 44, s. 5, it is only when justices would need protection if they proceeded to do "any act relating to the daties of their office," that a rule, calling upon them to shew cause why such act should not be done, can be granted. Reg. v. Percy, 43 L. J., M. C. 45; L. R. 9 Q. B. 64; 22 W. R. 72.

Therefore, when justices had refused to hear a summons against a person for having a board over his door, stating that he was liceused to retail beer, he not being so licensed, contrary to the Licensing Act, 1872, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 74, s. 11, the court refused a rule against the justices under the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict.

c, 44, but granted a rule for a mandamus. Ib. Au information having been laid against P. under the 51st section of the Highway Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Viet. c. 101), for encroaching on a highway, the justices decided on evidence given that a claim of right set up by P. to the land alleged to have been encroached upon by him was bona fide, and thereupon refused to hear the case on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The complainant having applied under the 5th section of the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, for a rule for the justices to shew cause why they should not hear and determine the case :-Held, that the application was properly made, the statute not being limited to cases in which the justices need protection in the performance of their duties. Reg. v. Phillimore, or Pilling, 51 L. T. 205; 14 Q. B. D. 474, n.; 32 W. R. 593; 48 J. P. 774.

Forcible Entry. ]-The court refused to grant a mandamns to compel the magistrates to hear a complaint and act summarily under the statutes relating to forcible entry and detainer. Dury, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 24.

Refusal to Issue Summons.]—Where a magistrate has refused a summons on the ground that the information does not disclose an indictable offence, the High Court of Justice has no jurisquent act, in all cases of land occupied by the diction to review his decision, either as to law or as to fact, and therefore in such a case a rule, considered the question one of fact :- Held, Vict. c. 44, s. 5, calling upon the magistrate to shave cause why he should not hear and determine the ambilication for a small control whether the lane was a "street". mine the application for a summons will not be granted. Leads, En parts 57 L.J., M. C. 108; magistrate could not be compelled to state a 21 Q. B. D. 192; 59 L. 7. 388; 37 W. R. 18; 59 cess. Rey. v. Shell, 50 L. T. 590; 49 J. P. 68 J. P. 773.

Where justices entertain an application for a summons for a criminal offence, and have considered the materials on which the application is based, and refused to hear more, or to grant the summons, the High Court will not interfere by mandamus to order them to hear it again. MucMuhon, Ex Parte, 48 J. P. O. If on application to justices for a summons for an indictable offence, they have heard and determined the application, and, on the merits, have declined to grant it, the court will not grant a mandamus to compel them to review their decision. Seens, if they have refused to hear the application, or if, after hearing, have refused to grant it from a mistaken view of their duty, amounting to a declining of jurisdiction. Rey. v. Fawcett, 11 Cox. C. C. 305.

- Discretion—Vexatious Indictments Act.] -A mandamus will not be granted to interfere with the discretion of a magistrate who has refused to issue a summons for perjury on an information setting forth facts upon which no jury could convict. The provisions of a 2 of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, s. 2, requiring a magistrate to bind over the prosecutor to prosecute, only apply where a charge or complaint has been made, and the person charged has been before the magistrate. Reid, Ex parts, 49 J. P. 600.

Refusal to take Recognizance under Vexatious Indictments Act.]—If a justice hear an applica-tion under the Vexatious Indictments Act, and dismiss it for want of evidence, this is equivalent to a refusal to commit the defendant, and a mandamus will be directed, Reg. v. London Corporation, 54 L. T. 646; 50 J. P. 711; 16 Cox.

After Adjudication-Rejection of Admissible Evidence.]—The court will not direct a mandamus to issue to compel justices to hear and determine a case upon which after hearing evidence they have adjudicated, though at the hearing they had rejected certain evidence which was properly admissible. Reg. v. Yorkshire JJ., Gill, Ex parte, 53 L. T. 728; 34 W. R. 108.

Rule or Mandamus.]—A rule under s. 5 of the Justices Protection Act, 1848, and a rule for a mandamns, calling upon justices to shew cause why they should not proceed to hear and determine the matter of an application for a summons are concurrent remedies. A rule under the 5th section of the act is not confined to cases where the justices need protection in doing any act relating to their duties. Reg. v. Biron, 54 L. J., M. C. 77; 14 Q. B. D. 474; 51 L. T. 429; 49 J. P. 68.

To State Case—Question of Fact.]—In pro-ceedings taken by the Fulham Board of Works for the paving of a lane as a "new street," within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Acts, the magistrate held that the lane was not a "street" within the meaning of the acts, and refused to state a case under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, as he rule calling upon justices to shew cause why a

ii. To Issue Distress Warrants.

It is the constant practice to call upon magistrates by mandamus to grant a distress warrant for levying a poor rate. Reg. v. Cheek. 11 Jur. 86, n.

Refusal to Issue Warrants for Recovery of Rates. - Where an application for a distress warrant for nonpayment of rates is refused by the magistrate on the ground that an appeal is pending from the assessment:-Held, that the application for a mandamus was properly made under the Justices Protection Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5, the issue of the warrant being a merely ministerial and not a judicial act. Reg. v. Marsham, 50 L. T. 142; 32 W. R. 157; 48 J. P. 308—C. A.

It is no objection to a rule for a mandamus to justices, to issue their warrant of distress for the levy of poor rates, that it includes two separate and distinct rates. Reg. v. Ellis, 2 D. (N.S.) 361: 12 L. J., M. C. 20: 7 Jur. 108.

Where there is no appeal given against an order of justices for expenses of a pauper, the justices are bound to enforce it, and in the event of their refusing, the court will grant a mandamus for a distress warrant. Reg. v. North Riding of Yorkshire JJ., 31 L. J., M. C. 189; 6 L. T. 351.

Indemnity. - Where, in an answer to an application for a mandamus against magistrates, commanding them to issue distress warrants to levy a poor rate, it was suggested that the warrants would have to be executed within Hampton Court Palace, and that the officers of the Crown claimed that the property was exempt from the operation of such warrants, and threatened proceedings if they were executed; the court nevertheless granted the writ, and refused to call upon the applicant parish to give the magistrates an indemnity against the consequences of any proceedings which might be taken. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 D. (N.S.) 385.

So, where the court had decided that certain property was rateable, and the justices nevertheless refused to issue a warrant of distress unless an indemnity was offered, the court granted a mandamus. Rey. v. Middlesev JJ., 12 L. J., mandamus. Reg. v. M. C. 36: 7 Jur. 259.

Discretion of Court. ]-The court has a discretion as to granting a mandamus to justices to issue a warrant of distress or commitment against a person summarily convicted by them.

Thomas, Ex parte, 9 Q. B. 976; 2 New Sess.
Cas. 570; 16 L. J., M. C. 57; 11 Jun. 107.

Legal Act-No other Remedy. |-On motion for a mandamus to justices to issue a warrant to distrain for a poor rate, it must appear clearly to the court that the warrant would be legal, and that the parties applying have no other remedy to enforce the rate. **Rew v. **Hall*, 1 H. & W. 83.

iii. Practice.

Rule to what Court. ]-An application for a

Jurisdiction Act, 1857, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, should be made to the Court of Queen's Bench Division. and not to the Divisional Court of Appeal. Ellershaw, In re. Longbottom, Ex parte, 45 L. J., M. C. 163; 1 Q. B. D. 481.

Whether absolute in First Instance. -The rule for a mandamus to justices to bear a charge against a person brought before them is not a rule absolute in the first instance. Reg. v. Inghum, 3 New Sess, Cas. 689.

But a rule for a mandamus to justices to allow a poor rate is absolute in the first instance. Reg. v. Godolphin (Lord), 1 D. & L. 830: 13 L. J., M. C. 57; 8 Jur. 574.

What Justices should be Parties. ]-If certain magistrates, attending at special sessions, do not take part in a decision of the sessions, they ought not to be brought before the court on an application for a mandamus in respect of that decision. Reg. v. Wiltshire JJ., 8 D. P. C. 717; 4 Jur. 460.

Although there are more than two magistrates at petty sessions, all of whom take part in a decision, by which the issuing of a distress warrant to levy poor rates is refused, it is not necessary that upon an application for a mandamus all who were present and took part in the decision, should be included in the rule; but if the court saw that any two had been selected, or that any of the justices so acting had been omitted for any improper purpose, all would be required to be joined. ** Hoy. v. Ellis, 2 D. (N.S.) 361: 12 L. J., M. C. 20: 7 Jur. 108.

Where upon an application for a mandamns to justices, to issue their warrant of distress to levy a poor rate, it appeared that the property, in re-spect of which the rate was sought to be obtained. was trust property, left by a testator for the purpose of a free school, and that one of the justices refusing to grant his warrant was a trustee of the estate :- Held, that, notwithstanding his character as such trustee, he was liable to the mandamus. Ib.

Return. - Where a mandamns is directed to justices, they ought not to make a return instead of obeying the writ, merely to gain the protection of the statute. Roy, v. Dartmouth (Earl), 5 Q. B. 878.

h. To Quarter Sessions.

i. When Granted.

Point of Practice or of Law.]-Where the sessions decide, on a point preliminary to the whole case or to the reception of a particular piece of evidence, that they will not hear the case further, this is conclusive of the point involving matter of fact only : otherwise if it raises a point of practice which the court can perceive to be matter of law. In the latter case the court will grant a mandamns to enter contimanics and hear the appeal. Rg, v. Kesteven JJ, D. & M. 118: 3 Q. B. 810; 1 New Sess. Cas. 151; 13 L. J., M. C. 78. S. P., Reg. v. Flint-skipe JJ, 1 B. C. Rep. 331; 2 New Sess. Cas. 572; 16 La J., M. C. 55; 11 Jur. 185.

Where, on an appeal against a poor rate to the sessions, the justices allow the appellant to act upon the practice which then prevailed, but by which the appeal was put off till the next sessions, and the justices at those sessions, on an objection made to such practice, refuse to hear case should not be stated under the Summary | the appeal the court will issue a mandamus to them to do so. Row v. Wiltshire JJ., 2 M. & Ry. 401; 8 B. & C. 380; 6 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 97.

> Next Practicable Sessions. ]—A mandamus to-enter continuances and hear an appeal will not be granted if it clearly appears that the sessions preceding those at which the appeal is entered were the next practicable sessions. Re. Derbushire JJ, 25 L, T, 161: 19 W, R, 876. Reg. v.

> Variance between Notice of Appeal and Conviction. |-Three persons who had been summoned before a magistrate, for unlawful fishing, had been convicted, after a joint hearing, each in a separate penalty, and gave a joint notice of appeal to the sessions, describing the conviction as a joint conviction. Separate convictions were returned to the sessions:—Held, that the variance between the notice of appeal and the conviction was immaterial, because it could not mislead, and the court made a rule absolute for a mandamus to the sessions to hear the appeal. Reg. v. Oxfordshire JJ., 3 G. & D. 348; 4 Q. B. 177; 12 L. J., M. C. 40.

> Case Granted.]—Where the sessions on determining an appeal have granted a case, but none has been stated, the court will, under some eircumstances, direct a mandamus to the instices, who heard the appeal to state a case. But not where it is clear that such a proceeding could lead to no result, as where the chairman, in consequence of his own opinion and that of the court upon the facts, refused to sign any statement but one which would have excluded the point of law relied upon by the party demanding a case. Rew v. Pembrokeshire J.J., 2 B, & Ad. 391; 1 L. J., M. C. 92. S. P., Jarvain, Exparte. 9 D. P. C. 120.

Where the court of quarter sessions dismisses an appeal subject to a case, the court will not grant a mandamus to enter continuances, and hear the appeal. Rev v. Suffolk JJ., 1 N. & P. 306; 6 A. & E. 109; W. W. & D. 7; 6 I. J., M. C. 37.

Grounds of Appeal. ]-The court will issue a mandamus to hear an appeal, if the sessions have refused to hear upon on an erroneous decision as to the sufficiency of the grounds of appeal. Reg. v. Curnaryon JJ., 1 G. & D. 423.

Appeal against Theatre Licence-Mandamus Refused on Ground that Licence would have Expired before Rule could be Argued.]-An appeal against a theatre licence under the Theatres Act, 1843, having been dismissed by the recorder, a mandamus to him to hear the appeal was refused on the ground that the period for which the licence was granted had expired before the rule for the mandanus was applied for. Reg. v. Birmingham Recorder, 3 W. R. 236.

Onus of Proof. ]-So, where the justices were divided, and the sessions, thinking it lay on the respondent parish to establish their case to the satisfaction of a majority of the court, quashed the order of removal, a mandamus was refused, Rex v. Monmouthshire J.J., 7 D. & R. 334; 4 B. & C. 844; 28 R. R. 478.

Not Hearing One Side's Reasons. |-- Where justices at sessions had heard witnesses in an appeal on the one side, and refused to hear those on the other, on the ground that their testimony had been prefaced by observations on the part of the advocate, contrary to their usual practice, the court refused to grant a mandamus to re-hear the appeal. Rev v. Curnarvon JJ., 4 B. & Ald. 86: 22 R.R. 636.

Evidence, Admissibility of .]—A party having been convicted of forcibly passing a tumplice gate without paying toll, the sessions, on append, rejected evidence to shew that the gate had been unlawfully erected; and the court refused a mandamus to compet the sessions to receive such evidence, the admissibility of it being exclusively a question for the justices. Here y. Cambridgeshire JJ., 1 D. & R. 325.

Who to Begin.]—On appeal against a poornre, on the ground that the appellant was overnred, the practice at the sessions requiring the appellant to begin by proving his case, which the appellant refusing to do, the appeal was disnissed; the court refused a mandamus to the sessions to re-hear the appeal on this objection.

Heav. Setfolk JJ., 6 M. & S. 57.

Postponing Hearing.]—An appellant against an order of adfiliation moved the court of quarter sessions for a pastponement of the appeal, on account of the absence of material witnesses, They rejected the application; upon which the appellant declined going into his case, and the order was confirmed. On motion for a unandamus to the justices to hear the appeal, and affidavits tending to show that they had acted unjustly in not granting the postponement, the court refused to interfere, the matter being one peculiarly within the discretion of the sessions. Backe, Exputre, 3 B. & Al. I.44.

Decision on Merits.]—A mandamus to the instress in sessous, to allow an item of clarge in a coroner's account, refused; because the justices were of opinion, under the circumstances, that there was no ground to suppose that the deceased had died any other thun a natural, though a sudden death; and therefore that the inquisition had not been duly taken; and the court saw no reason to interfere with that judgment. Rev. Kort J.J., II Sast, 229; 10 R. R. 484.

When on an appeal against a convertion coming on for hearing at the sessions, objection was taken to the conviction by reason of the omission of certain words alleged to be material, and the justices, after discussion, quashed such conviction, declining either to amend or hear the cythence, the court has no power to interfere by mandamus, there having been a decision on the legal metric. Leg. v. Middlewar JJ., Stade, Lu ret, 46 L. J., M. G. 225; 2 Q. B. D. 516; 36 L. T. 40; 25 W. R. 610.

Reasons for Judgment.]—The court will not issue a maintamax to compel the quarter sessions to give their reasons for their judgments, or make special entries thereof on their records. Rec v. Devon JJ., 1 Chit. 34, 12 R. R. 789.

Judgment Entered by Mistake.]—Or grant a mandamus to the justices at sessions to rehear an appeal against an order of removal, after judgment given by them, and entered by the clerk of the peace for quashing the order; upon the ground that the justices at sessions were divided in opinion, and that the judgment was entered by mistake, instead of an adjournment of the appeal. Here v. Leicestershire JJ<sub>2</sub>, 1 M. & S. 442; 14 R. R. 494.

Erasing Entry in Record —The court of quarter sessions has no power of its own authority to crase an entry from the records of a past sessions. Reg. v. West Riding of Yorkshire JJ., 3 G. & D. 170; 12 L. J., M. C. 148.

But a mandamus will go directing it to be so, where an entry has been made which is manifestly false, and made without invisdiction. Th.

false, and made without jurisdiction. *Ib.*S. was convieted by a metropolitan police magistrate under the Vagrancy Act, 1824, 5 Geo. 4, c. 83, s. 4, which makes punishable as a rogue and vagaboad "every person...ning any subtle craft, means or device, by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive and impose on any of his majesty's subjects." The conviction described the offence as "undawfully using certain subtle craft, means and device." (omitting the words by pulmistry or otherwise."). Upon appeal to the Middlesex Sessions, the proceedings commenced with an objection from S. that the ordision of the words made the conviction bad. The justices, after hearing the point argued, retired, and on their return the assistant judge gave what purported to be the decision of the sessions, quashing the conviction on the objection taken to

ii. Upon application for a mandaums to the sessions to hear the appeal on the merits, it was proposed to show by affidavits from the justices that the decision given by the assistant judge was contrary to the opinion of the majority of the justices forming the cent, and that after such opinion had been communicated to him, he persisted in giving his decision as that of the sessions:—Held, that the order of sessions having been duly recorded; it was too late to inquire whether it did or did not represent the opinion of the majority of the justices. Heg. v. Middlewer M., Sladde, In re, 44 L. J., M. G. 225; 2 Q. B. D. 516; 36 L. T. 462; 2 5 W. R. 1, 610.

At sessions, the jury gave a special vertilet of not guilty, and it was entered in a book of the clerk of the peace. Afterwards, the chairman told the jury to reconsider their vertilet, and they gave a verilet of guilty generally, but recommended the defendant to mercy on account of his not doing the act with a maliclous intent; and the vertilet was then altered in the book of the clerk of the peace. The court vertueed to interfere by mandamus to cancel the alterations, How. N. Seifull. J.J., 5 N. & M. 130; 1 H. & W. 313; 5 L.J., M. C. 34.

Where quarter sessions, having jurisdiction over an appeal, have directed an entry to be made, that an order of removal has been "quashed not on the merits," the court will not grant a mandamus commanding an crasure of that entry, although it appears that the order in point of fact, was quashed on the merits. Court cannot compel Sessions to Decide in Particular Way.]—On an appeal against a rate under the Middlesex County Act, 3 Goo. 4, c. cvil., the justices confirmed the rate, subject to the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench on a case. The certicard directed the justices to send up an order of sessions. "with all things tonehing the same;" and the court quashed the order of sessions. The sessions, after such order, were applied to to quash the rate, but refused, as the rate had not been removed into the court, and there was no longer any appeal against it. The court-refused to grant a manchama to compel them to enter continuances, and quash the rate; first, because, by so doing, the parties who had been proceeding; but, when it has acted, its judgment engaged in collecting the rate might be exposed to an action; secondly, because the court could not compel the sessions to decide in a particular way. Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 1 P. & D. 402; 9 A. & E. 540; 2 W. W. & H. 100; 8 L. J., M. C. 85.

To Issue Process. ]—The court refused to grant a mandamus to the chairman of the Middlesex sessions, requiring him to issue process for the apprehension of two persons against whom a bill of indictment had been found at those sessions a year previously for keeping a common gaming-house, upon the ground that an applica-tion for such process had been rejected at sessions. Reg. v. Russell, 1 D. (N.S.) 544; 6 Jur. 221.

ii. Practice.

When Application made. ]-Any application for a writ of mandamns to justices, to enter con-tinuances, and hear an appeal, shall be made not later than in the term following the sessions at which the refusal was made, unless special -circumstances appear by affidavit to account for the delay to the satisfaction of the court. Reg. v. Richmond Recorder, El. Bl. & El. 253; 27 L. J., M. C. 197; 4 Jnr. (N.S.) 456; 6 W. R. 521.

The general rule that an application for a writ of mandanus to the quarter sessions to enter continuances and hear an appeal must be made not later than the term following the sessions at which the refusal was made, does not apply to an application to remove an order of sessions for the purpose of getting it quashed. Rey. v. Breek-workshire JJ., 42 L. J., M. C. 135.

A mandamus to the sessions to hear an appeal must be applied for promptly. Reg. v. West Riding JJ., 1 G. & D. 706; 2 Q. B. 505; 11 L. J., M. C. 80; 6 Jur. 506.

Where, at a sessions, held in January, the court confirmed an order in bastardy, subject to a case for the opinion of the court, or to a mandamus to hear the appeal, at the option of the appellant, who decided upon not bringing up the case, but applied for a mandamus in Easter Term :—Held. that the application was not made too late. Reg. v. Cheshire J.J., 1 B. C. Rep. 164; 2 New Sess, Cas. 420; 4 D. & L. 94; 15 L. J., M. C. 114; 10 Jur. 808.

Affidavits.]-The affidavits on motion for a mandamus to sessions to hear an appeal should state all the material facts that occurred at the sessions. Reg. v. West Itiding J.J., 2 New Sess. Cas. 1.

To Central Criminal Court. ]-Mandamus does not lie to the judges and justices of the Central Criminal Court, which is a superior court. Reg. v. Central Criminal Court JJ., 52 L. J., M. C. 121; 11 Q. B. D. 479; 15 Cox, C. C. 324.

i. To Inferior Courts.

When Mandamus, not Rule, Granted. Where an inferior court has a special jurisdiction given to it by some local act and refuses to exercise that jurisdiction, a mandamus is the proper course to be pursued; a rule or order under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 43, is only employed where the matter is within the ordinary jurisdiction of the court. Brighton Sewers Act. In re. 9 Q. B. D. 723,

When Granted.]-Where an inferior court declines to exercise a jurisdiction imposed on it can only be reversed in that court on a case stated for its opinion. Reg. v. W. R. JJ., 1 New Sess. Cas. 247.

No Certiorari Possible.]-Where a statute does not allow a removal of proceedings by certiorari, the court will not indirectly bring them under review by a mandamus. Rew v. Yorkshire (W. R.) J.J., I A. & E. 563; 3 N. & M. 802.

Court-leet and Court-baron. -A mandamus will go to a lord to hold a court-baron, and to the homage to present conveyances of burgage tenures, whether those conveyances are legal or not. Rew v. Montacute (Lord), 1 W. Bl. 60. S. P., Rew v. Midhurst, 1 Wils. 283.

So, to permit a court-lect and a court-baron to be held in the accustomed place. Rew v. Granthum Corporation, 2 W. Bl. 716, and Rex

v. Colebrooke, 2 Ld. Ken. 163.

But a mandamus to the mayor of Wigan to give the key of the town hall to the lord of the manor to hold his leet there was refused, although the leet had been usually held in that place. Rev v. Wigan Corporation, 1 Wils. 76. And see Rev v. Ilchester, 2 D. & R. 724; 4 D. & R. 324; 2 B. & C. 764.

A mandamus was granted commanding the lord of the manor to hold a court-leet for the purpose of appointing a high constable of a hundred, though the day on which the court had been usually held for sixty years past had gone by, it not being distinctly sworn that the court was v. Milverton (Lord), 3 A. & E. 284; 1 H. & W. 282; 4 L. J., M. C. 88.

A mandamus to summon specific jurors upon a court-leet was refused. Rew v. Bunkes, 1 W. Bl.

452: 3 Burr, 1452.

- To Inrol Instrument.]-The court will never grant a mandamus commanding the involment in an inferior court of an instrument which, though in part valid, would, in its terms, give power to commit unlawful acts. Reg. v. Convers. 8 Q. B. 981; 15 L. J., Q. B. 300; 10 Jur. 899.
- To Enforce Process.]-Nor will the court by mandamus enforce the process of an inferior court, the judge of which has power to compel obedience to its process. Ib.

County Court.]—Where, before 19 & 20 Viet. c. 108, s. 43, the judge of a county court, upon an interpleader summons, erroneously decided against a claimant, on the ground that the notice of claim was insufficient, the court issued a mandamus to him to adjudicate upon the claim. Reg. v. Richards, 2 L. M. & P. 263; 20 L. J., Q. B. 351.

But when a judge of a county court entered upon the hearing of a plaint, and from the evidence adduced before him decided that he had no jurisdiction to adjudicate between the parties, a mandamas would not lie commanding him to hear and determine it, even although he might be wrong in point of law. Milner, Ex parte, 15 Jur. 1037.

Rule for mandamus to hear after non-suit refused. Vernot v. Bailey, 4 W. R. 608. And see COUNTY COURT.

i. To Lords and Stewards of Manors.

A mandamus will not be granted commanding by law, the court will, by mandamus, enforce its the steward of a manor to accept a surrender custom, unless the lord is made party to the rule. Rey. v. Erans. I Q. B. 355. S. C., nom. Reg. v. Witchford, 7 D. P. C. 709.

A mandamus will not lie to compel the admission of a customary tenant to a royal manor. Reg. v. Powell, 4 P. & D. 719; 1 Q. B. 352; 10

L. J., Q. B. 148; 5 Jur. 605. A mandamus to admit to a copyhold tenement must not be directed to the steward only, the lord must be joined. Ib.

A mandamus was granted to the steward of the manor of Midhurst and to the homage, to hold a court, and present certain conveyances to purchasers of burgage tenements, whereby they were cutitled to be sworn in burgesses of the corporation, and to vote for members of parliament. Rev v. Midhurst, 1 Wils. 283.

In applying for a mandamus to the steward of a manor to inrol a deed of disposition, pursuant to the Fines and Recoveries Act, 1833, 3 & 4 Will, 4, c. 74, s. 53, it is not necessary to annex a copy of the deed itself, if the contents are stated in an affidavit, Crosby v. Fortescue, 5 D. P. C. 273. S. P., Rev v. Lunn, 2 H. & W. 314, ## k. To Admit, Elect, or Restore to Offices.

i What Othices

Permanent Interest.]—A magistrate's clerk has no permanent interest in his office, and if he is dismissed without cause no mandamus lies to restore him. Sandys, Ex parte, 1 N. & M. 591; 4 B. & Ad. 863.

As a mandamus to reinstate a person in an office only lies where the office, and its tenure, are of a permanent nature, it is not an available remedy for the secretary of a benefit society, who has been dismissed by a resolution of a meeting of the society. Evans v. Hearts of Oak Benefit Society, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 163.

A mandamus to the Lord Mayor of London to admit a person to the office of auditor of the chamberlain's and bridgemaster's accounts, who had served them three years successively, and been elected again the fourth by the livery, refused; because the custom of the city appeared to be, that no person should be elected to or serve the office for more than two years successively.

Rev v. London Corporation, 1 Term Rep. 423.

A mandamus will not lie to compel the high steward of a corporation to admit a commoner, unless the person claiming to be so admitted shews that he has a good title in omnibus. Reg. v. Malmesbury High Steward, 4 Jur. 222.

A mandamus will not lie to the vicar, churchwardens, and inhabitants of a parish to elect an organist to the parish church, though there has always been such an office beyond the time of living memory, and a yearly salary has been in-variably paid him out of the church rates, as it is optional with the parishioners whether the organ should be played. Reg. v. St. Stephen's, Chleman Street (Vicer, Sa., 2 D. & L. 571; 14 L. J., Q. B. 34; 9 Jur. 255.

A mandamus does not lie to admit a vestry clerk. Rew v. Croydon Churchwardens, 5 Term Rep. 713; 2 R. R. 688.

Nor to restore the clerk and treasurer of the guardians of the poor of St. Nicholas, Rochester. Rew v. St. Nicholas, Rochester, 4 M. & S. 324.

A mandamus will not lie to admit an inhabitant of a borough by prescription to be a free full, a mandamus did not lie. Hill v. Reg., burgess, unless it appears, first, that he had an 8 Moore, P. C. 139.

into the hands of the lord according to the inchante right to be a free burgess; and secondly, that such office is a corporate office by prescrip tion. Rew v. West Loov Corporation, 2 D. & R. 178; 5 D. & R. 590; 3 B. & C. 677; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 44.

A mandamus lies to restore a man to the office of master of a free school. Anon., Lofft, 148.

Inspection of Corporation Documents. - Where a corporator claims to be elected to an office in the corporation on the ground of an invariable custom to elect the person who, at the time of a vacancy, fills the position which he then occupies, and the corporation admits the general prestice, but says that it is not invariable, the court, at the instance of the corporator, will grant a mandamus to allow him to inspect the minutes of the corporation as to former elections, to assist him in stating his case, even though the court entertains great doubt whether the custom, if proved, could contradict the charter, which prescribes that there is to be a free election. Burton and Saddlers' Co., In re, 31 L. J., Q. B. 62; 10 W. R. 87.

The court will not grant an application by members of a corporate body for a mandamus to inspect the documents of the corporation, unless it is shewn that such inspection is necessary with reference to some specific dispute or question depending, in which the parties applying are interested; and the inspection will then only be granted to such extent as may be necessary for the particular occasion. Rex v. Merchant Tuylors' Co., 2 B. & Ad. 115; 9 L. J. (0.s.) K. B., 146.

ii. In what Cases Granted.

Jurisdiction, whether Excluded ]-The claim of cognizance as to the election of aldermen by the court of mayor and aldermen of London does not exclude the jurisdiction of the court to issue a mandamus. Rew v. London Corporation, 4 M. & Ry. 36,

Where Office Full. - A mandamus lies after an election merely colonrable and clearly void, Rew v. Cumbridge Corporation, 4 Burr. 2008.

The court will not in general grant a mandamus to elect another upon non-residence, unless the non-resident party has been previously removed. Rex v. Truro Corporation, 3 B. & Ald. 590; 2 Chit. 257.

When a corporate office is full, the title theretocannot be tried by mandamus, but it must be questioned by quo warranto. Reg. v. Chester questioned by quo warranto. Reg. v. Chester Corporation, 5 El. & Bl. 531; 25 L. J., Q. B. 61; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 114.

The court refused a mandamus to a board of guardians to admit a person as their clerk, who complained that the person filling the office had been unduly elected by the votes of guardians been untuly elected by the votes of guardians, who were themselves not properly elected. Reg. v. Dolgelly Union Guardians, 3 N. & P. 542; 8 A. & 5. 561; 1 W. W. & H. 513; 7 I. J., M. C. 99. S. P., Reg. v. Derby Connecillors, 2 N. & P. 589; 7 A. & E. 419; W. W. & D. 671, Rez. v. Where, by a custom of a parish, one church-warden was elected annually by the parishioners. and the other annually by the rector, and the latter appointed as his churchwarden a person who was not a parishioner, or an inhabitant of or occupier of property in the parish :- Held, that a mandamus to the rector to appoint a churchwarden is the proper process by which to question the validity of the appointment. Burlow, In re, 30 L. J., Q. B. 271; 5 L. T. 289.

At an election of churchwardens the votes of tenants of small tenements, the owners of which were rated to the poor and highway rates, by virtue of the repealed Small Tenements Act, 13 & 14 Vict., e. 99, tendered on behalf of one of the candidates, were rejected :-Held, that a mandamus to convene a vestry for the election of churchwardens would not lie to try the question whether such tenants were entitled to vote, it not being shown that the result of the election would have been different if their votes had been received. Jagee, En parte, 3 El. & Bl. 718; 23 L. J., M. C. 153; 18 Jur. 906; 2 W. R. 473. See also Ecclesiastical Law, Church-WARDENS.

If it appeared with sufficient certainty to the court, that a person had been elected mayor of a borough on the day appointed by the usage, who was not qualified to accept the office, by reason of his not having previously taken the sacrament within the time limited by law, they would grant a mandamus to the electors to proceed to a new election under 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 2, as if no election had in fact been made. Res v. Bedford Corporation, 1 East, 79.

The court, however, expressed great doubt whether they could with propriety grant the writ in this case. Ib.

Where Office Void. ]-Where an election to the office of mayor became void within the year, the court had power, under the repealed 7 Will. 4 & I Vict, c. 78, s. 26, to issue a mandamus commanding a new election. Reg. v. Pembroke Corporation, 8 D. P. C. 302; 4 Jur. 317.

Quo Warranto Pending.] - Where, on disputed immicipal election, two of the candidates obtain a rule nisi for a mandamus to admit, and afterwards a rule nisi for a quo warranto against the parties admitted, the rule for the mandamus will not be, as a matter of course, discharged. Rew v. Winchester Corpora-tion, 2 N. & P. 274; 7 A. & E. 215; W. W. & D. 525; 6 L. J., K. B. 213; 1 Jur. 738.

Where other Remedy.]-Upon an application for a mandamus to restore to an office, a prima facie title must be shewn, the party having, if properly admitted, another remedy; secus on a mandamus to admit. Rev v. Jotham, 3 Term the first was admitted and sworn into the office;

Where an office is full by the appointment of the person who prima facie has the right of appointment, and where there are means of tryappointed under the Foor Law Amendment Act, its properties of the court will not grant 1834, 4 & 5 Will, 4 & 76, 8, 46, is a public office a mandanus against the party filling the office. in order to try the title. When a person was appointed sexton of a parish by the minister, in whom the right to appoint prima facie was, and the clinrehwardens refused to call a vestry meeting of the parishioners (who also claimed the appointment) to elect one, and it appeared that there was another method of trying the right; the court refused to grant a mandamus to the minister and churchwardens to call the vestry meeting. Ib.

A mandamus commanding the dean and chapter of a cathedral to restore a chorister, alleged that the office was a freehold in their gift, paid by salary out of their land revenues, and conferring a right to vote on the election of members of parliament, and that the chorister had been wrongfully amoved. Return, that by ordinances of the founder for the government of the enthe-dral, it was provided that if any of the officers of the cathedral, including choristers, commit a small fault, he may be punished by the dean, but that " if his crime be of a blacker dye (if it be judged equitable), he may be expelled by whom he was admitted"; and that the bishop of the diocese should be the visitor of the cathedral, to take special care that all its ordinances should be inviolably preserved, to punish and correct all offences committed by officers of the cathedral, and to do all things that are judged lawfully to appertain to the office of visitor; and that the chorister had not appealed to the bishop :-Held, that a mandamns did not lie, as the remedy for the wrongful amotion complained of was by application to the visitor, who had sufficient exclusive jurisdiction, although the foundation was spiritual and not eleemosynary, and the office was a freehold office; and that it was not necessary to return the cause of amotion. Rey. v. Chester (Dean and Chapter), 15 Q. B. 513; 19 L. J., Q. B. 485; 15 Jur. 10. S. P., Reg. v. Rochester (Dean and Chapter), 17 Q. B. 1.

Where a charter of Hen. 7 granted to the citizens and commonalty in these words: "Quod ipsi, et successores sui, in perpetuum, singulis annis successivis, 24 concives civitatis in aldermannos, ucenon 40 alios cives ejusdem civitatis pro communi concilio civitatis illius, eligere, facere, et creare possint"; and it appeared that, in 1693, and the two following years, successive elections of the forty common councilmen had been made, since which time the usage had been not to elect the aldermen or common conneilmen annually; the court refused a mandamus, which was applied for in order to raise the question against the usage, whether the election of those officers ought to be annual, there being another remedy open to the parties making the application. Res v. Chester Corporation, 1 M. & S. 101.

No other Mode of Trying Right so Convenient, Upon athidavit that one of two candidates for an office had a majority only by means of illegal votes, the court granted a mandamus to the corporation to admit and swear in the other, who appeared upon the attidavits to have had the greater number of legal votes; and this, although there being no other specific, or, at least, no other such convenient mode of trying the right, merely colourable, a mandamus will go to permit Rev v. Where Jurisdiction Exercised. ]-A fellow of King's College, Cambridge, had been expelled the college and deprived of his fellowship, by the provost and fellows, upon a charge of fraud and perjury, the proceedings being conducted partly in the absence of the accused, and the charge being alone supported by a comparison of his letters with an answer which he had filed in a suit in Chancery. Upon appeal to the visitor, the decision of the provost and fellows was affirmed :-Held, that the court had no power to grant a mandamus to restore to the fellowship. Buller, Ex parte, 1 Jur. Where the founder of an eleemosynary corporation directed that the bishop, dean, and archdeacon of Worcester should be visitors, and should correct, punish, and reform all abuses and offences to be committed by the master and brethren, and see that his ordinance was truly executed according to its meaning; and afterwards the heir of the founder, upon a vacancy of one of the brethren, appointed a person to succeed, who was a soldier, not belonging to either of the towns or lordships, to the inhabitants of which a preference was to be given, against which appointment three persons appealed to the visitors, on the ground that the appointee was incligible, and that there were others, besides themselves, who were eligible:-Held, that such an appeal lay, and therefore the court granted a mandamus to the visitors, who had heard the evidence in such appeal, but declined to act therein to proceed and determine the appeal Rex v. Worvester (Bishop), 4 M. & S. 415; 16 R. R. 512.

The registrars of a diocese were authorised by their patent of office (under the bishop's hand and seal) to appoint a deputy, to be "approved of and allowed by the bishop": who, if he should not approve of and allow the deputy named and proposed to him, was empowered to nominate another, with a salary payable out of the profits of the registrarship. The registrars appointed a deputy, subject to the approbation and consent of the bishop, who on being informed of it, answered that "for good and sufficient reasons" he disapproved of the party nominated, but declined specifying his reasons. The court refused a rule nisi for a mandamus to the bishop to admit the deputy. Rev v. Glucester (Bishap), 2 B. & Ad. 158; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 228.

By the Medical Act, 1858, 21 & 22 Viet. c. 98,

- Other Remedy.]-Where a corporator, who was entitled to divide a certain share of the profits of a fishery, which the corporators worked and enjoyed in partnership, was suspended from the perception of his profits until he paid a certain fine imposed by a by-law, with the breach of which he was charged, the court refused a mandamus to restore him to his office; he being still an officer, and having a remedy by an action for the tort against any who disturbed him in the lawful perception of his profits (if the bylaw was illegal, or he was not guilty of a breach of it, or had been unlawfully suspended), or, considering the corporators as partners in the considering the corporators as partners in the fishery, he having a remedy in equity for his share of the partnership funds unjustly withheld from him. To whom Writ Directed. ]-A local statute, after providing for the appointment of governors and guardians of the poor of a parish, and for the filling up of vacancies by the remaining governors and gnardians, enacted, that after the first year "the inhabitants of the parish in vestry assembled" are to nominate and choose twelve persons in lieu of those retiring each year — Held, that the meeting was to be called by the governors and guardians, and, therefore, the writ governors and guardinas, and therefore, the whould be directed to them; notwithstanding 58 Geo. 3, e. 69, s. 1, and 1 Vict. c. 45, s. 3, Heg. v. 88, Mary, Navington, Guernors, Se., 6 D. & L. 162; 2 B. C. Rep. 303; 17 L. J., Q. B. 220 ; 12 Jur. 918.

Return.]-To a mandamus to a mayor to convene a meeting to proceed to an election, in order to fill up five vacancies in a select body, consisting of fifteen chief burgesses, he returned (after stating objections to the title of several of the remaining burgesses), that there were not then within the borough eight legally elected chief burgesses, by whom the election of others could be made, and that, for the several seasons before mentioned, he could not proceed to such elec-tion:—Held, an insufficient return. Rew v. Monmonth Corporation, 4 B. & Ald. 496.

A return stating generally that the body was duly assembled to amove, is sufficient. Rex v. Doncaster Corporation, 2 Ld. Ken. 391; 2 Burr. 738.

In a return by a corporation to restore a member, who has been removed, it should appear If a councillor of a corporation is ousted, and that the body removing had proved the charge another elected in his stead, and such election is for which the member was removed: it is not sufficient to state merely that he was present writ for any defect in substance. Ground for Refusing-Similar Mandamus not Granted.]-It is no ground for refusing a mandamus to admit a party to an office to which he has been elected, that to a similar mandamus granted in respect of a former election of the same party a return was made, shewing an excuse, valid in point of law for not admitting him. Rew v. London Corporation, 1 N. & M. 285; 3 B. & Ad. 255,

3. PRACTICE GENERALLY.

a. When and How Application Made

Application to Q. B. D.]-The proper remedy where there is a neglect of a public duty is to apply for a mandamus, and the application for such a mandamus, being the prerogative writ of mandamus, should still, notwithstanding the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8, be made to the Queen's Bench Division. Delay in Application-Crown Office Rules. -The transfer of a licence was refused, and on appeal the quarter sessions, on 16th October, refused to hear the appeal on the ground that the appellant was not aggrieved. A rule nisi for mandamus was moved for and obtained on 20th February, no special eircumstances being stated for the delay :- Held, on the objection being taken, that the application was too late, not having been made within the time limited by r. 79 of the Crown Office Rules, 1886. Reg. v. Glouecstershire JJ., 54 J. P. 519.

b. Form of Writ.

Objection to, when Taken.]-After a return has been made, the defendant cannot make any objection to the writ itself. Rew v. York Corporation, 5 Term Rep. 66.

After a return to a writ which is set down in the Crown paper to be argued upon a concilium, it is competent to the defendant to object to the then ordered them to produce the accounts which

A mandamus directed to a corporation, commanding them to pay a poor-rate to the over-seers, omitted to state that the corporation had no effects on which a distress could be levied :-Held, a fatal objection in substance to the writ, and might be taken after the return, or at any time before a peremptory mandamus issued. Rex v. Margate Pier Co., 3 B. & Ald. 220: 2 Chit. 256; 22 R. R. 356.

The court had given judgment for a defendant upon a demurrer to a return to a mandamus :-Held, that an objection to the sufficiency of the writ might be taken at any time before issuing the peremptory mandanus. Clarkev Leicestershire and Northamptonshire Canal Co., 6 Q. B. 898: 3 Railw. Cas. 730; 9 Jur. 215—Ex. Ch.

Curing Defect, by Return.]—A writ, which omits a necessary fact, cannot be cured by the return. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 4 H. L. Cas. 471; 17 Jur. 901.

Attorneys of the superior courts are entitled, by virtue of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 27, to be admitted to inferior courts of law. Where, therefore, a writ of mandamus was directed to the presiding officers of the Lord Mayor's Court to admit A., and described it as an inferior court, without stating it to be a court of law :-Held, that such writ was bad, and that the defect was not oured by such court being described in the return as a court of law. London Corporation v. Reg., 13 Q. B. 30; 17 L. J., Q. B. 330; 13 Jur. 33—Ex. Ch.

A mandamus commanded a person to deliver up to the clerk of a court of requests papers relating to the office. The writ did not shew any claim by the person detaining to hold them under any right :- Held, that the writ was therefore bad, and that the defect could not be supplied by the return, on which it appeared that he claimed to be the lawful clerk of the court, and to retain the papers as such. Reg. v. Hapkins, 4 P. & D. 550; 1 Q. B. 160; 10 L. J., Q. B. 63.

- By Verdict.]-If there is in a writ of mandamus a defective statement of a valid claim, but that statement renders it necessary to establish facts which, if established, would support the claim in the writ, the defectiveness, though the eanin in the writ the deficiences, though it might be fatal on demurrer, is circl by the verdict. Delamere (Lord) v. Reg., 36 L. J., Q. B. 313; L. R. 2 H. L. ±19; 17 L. T. 1.

No Specific Alteration in Works asked for. A mandamus commanded "the directors of the Bristol Dock Company to make such alterations and amendments in the sewers as were necessary in consequence of the floating of the harbour" -Held, that this was in the proper form, and that it was neither requisite nor proper to call upon the company to make any specific alteration, the mode of remedying the evil being left to their discretion by the act of parliament. Hex v. Bristol Dock Co., 6 B. & C. 181; 9 D. & R. 309; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 51; 30 R. R. 280.

More Comprehensive than Warrantable.]---A mandamns recited that it was the duty of the church trustees of St. Paneras parish, who had been required to produce accounts (in the terms of the Vestries Act, 1831, 1 and 2 Will. 4, c. 60, s. 35), and that they had refused to do so, and they were ordered to keep by the local acts :- | office in respect of which the claims arise. Scott, Held, that the mandamus was bad, in ordering Expurte, 8 D. P. C. 328; 4 Jur. 579. more than was warranted, either by the grievance recited or by the General Vestry Act. Rew v. St. Pancrus Church Trustees, 1 N. & P. 507; 6 A. & E. 314.

Construction. ]—A direction in a mandamus to take measures for "obtaining and recovering payment" does not necessarily mean to bring an action, and such a direction therefore, though not accompanied by a tender of indemnity, does not make the mandanus invalid. Reg. v. Southamp-ton Harbour Commissioners, 39 L. J., Q. B. 253; L. R. 4 H. L. 449; 23 L. T. 111; 18 W. R. 1171.

Necessity of Rate. ]-A mandamus to churchwardens and overseers to make a poor-rate recited that no rate had been made for the necessary relief of the poor, pursuing the form given by the Crown office:—Held, that the writ was good, and that it sufficiently appeared that a rate had become necessary. Row v. Edlaston Occaseov. 1 N. & P. 20; W. W. & D. 163; 6 L. J., M. C. 36; I Jur. 53. S. P., Rox v. Gadsby, 1 N. & P. 572.

Bad in Part. ]-A writ which is bad in respect of one of the matters commanded is bad in toto. and a peremptory mandamus cannot be awarded. Reg. v. Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales, 19 L. J., Q. B. 177; 14 Jur. 290.

Where a company had given notice of requiring a part of premises, and a mandamus had been obtained, commanding the company to issue a precept for summoning a jury to assess compensation for the whole, the writ cannot go for part. Interest of Applicant for Writ. |-The court in the exercise of its discretion as to issuing of a mandamus requires that the application should be made by one who has a real interest in requiring the duties to be performed. Reg. v. Peterborough Corporation, 44 L. J., Q. B. 85; 23 W. R. 343.

When commissioners are, by an act of parliament, authorised to receive certain moneys, and at the same time directed to pay a portion of those moneys to another body of persons, the gross snin received is to be deemed the income of the commissioners, and the persons to whom the payment is to be made have an interest in that portion, and are entitled to enforce payment. Reg. v. Southampton Harbour Commissioners, 39 L. J., Q. B. 253; L. R. 4 H. L. 449; 23 L. T. 111; 18 W. R. 1171.

By and against Whom. ]-If one parish officer applies for a mandamus against another to concur in a rate, the writ must be as well against the applicant as the other. Anon., 2 Chit. 254.

In a rule for a mandamus to cleet a mayor, a subsisting mayor de facto must always be a party. Rev v. Bankes, 3 Burr. 1452; 1 W. Bl. 445. A mandamus against churchwardens and overseers may be sued out by one of their own body. Rea v. Edlaston Overscers, 1 N. & P. 20; W. W. & D. 163; 6 L. J., M. C. 36; 1 Jur. 53. One writ cannot issue at the instance of two persons, for the enforcement of separate claims, although they have been successors in the same

A company gave notice to B., G. & D., trading in co-partnership, of their intention to take the premises occupied by them for the purposes of their railway under the powers of their special act. A mandamus having been granted to the company commanding them to issue their precept for summoning a jury to assess the amount of compensation to be paid to B., G. & D., the court refused to quash the writ, although it was alleged to have been obtained without the knowledge or consent of D., one of the co-partners, but left the company to make a return of the facts, if they should think

. Reg. v L. & S. W. Ry., 13 Jur. 10. Mandamus to churchwardens and overseers to produce the parish rate books at a scrutiny of the polls taken at the election of churchwardens and overseers. The writ stated the refusal of the defendants to be to the damage of the parishioners, and the complaint to be by them. The return denied facts stated in the inducement respecting the polls. Two parishioners, for themselves and the other parishioners, traversed these denials, on which issues were joined, and found for the Crown :- Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the two parishioners were the prosecutors of the mandamus. Successors in Office.]-The 19th section of the repealed Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, had to be read with reference to the power of the court of Queen's Bench to compel the performance of a public duty by public officers, although the time prescribed by statute for the performance of it had passed; so that if the public officer to whom belonged the per-formance of the duty had in the meantime quitted his office, and had been succeeded by another, it became the duty of the successor to obey the writ, and to do the acts, when required, which his predecessor omitted to perform. ## d. Argument and Rule.

Argument.]-After the determination of the court upon a rule nisi for a mandamus, the question decided cannot be again discussed, as a special case, until there is a return made to the writ. Rex v. Leicester JJ., 7 D. & R. 708. And see 7 D. & R. 370; 4 B. & C. 891.

When eause is shewn against a rule for a mandamus, the objection that no sufficient demand and refusal appear must be taken before the merits are discussed. Reg. v. Eustern Counties Ry., 10 A. & E. 531; 2 P. & D. 648; I Railw. Cas. 509; 8 L. J., Q. B. 340.

Effect of Misrepresentations in Affidavits. ]-The court will make a rule for a mandamus absolute, although the affidavits on which the rule nisi was obtained contain misrepresentations and suppress facts, if sufficient remains unanswered to warrant the court in issuing the writ. Rex v Payn, 1 N. & P. 524; 6 A. & E. 392 ; W. W. & D. 142.

Rule Form of .] The court will not grant a rule in the alternative for a mandamus or a quo warranto. Reg. v. Leeds Corporation, 11 A. & E. | grant a provisional licence for a railway refresh-512 : 5 Jur. 548.

A rule to shew cause why one or more writs of mandamus should not issue is an improper form of vule. Reg. v. Bridgnorth Corporation, 2 P. & D. 317; 10 A. & E. 66; 8 L. J., M. C. 86; 3 Jur. 384.

Amendment of Rule. ]-A mandamus to a company to summon a jury was obtained on affidavits, shewing that the applicant had a claim for the value of land in his occupation taken by the company, and likewise for damage done to his remaining land by severance. By mistake, the rule was drawn up for a mandamus to summon a jury who should assess the value of the laud, and omitted to mention damages for severance. mandamus was drawn including both, and was quashed, as varying from the rule. The court refused to amend the rule, so as to make it agree with the writ; but afterwards, on the original affidavits, and on counsel's statement of the mistake, granted a mandamus, including both objects. Reg. v. East Lancashire Ry., 9 Q. B. 980 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 127 ; 11 Jur. 169.

On an application to quash a mandamus for not being drawn up in conformity with the rule, the court will not amend the rule to support the mandamus : the party ought, if there is a mistake, to apply to amend his rule before the mandamus Rew v. Water Eaton Corporation, 2 Smith, 54. And see Rev v. Tucker, 5 D. & R.

434 : 3 B. & C. 545.

Previous Demand and Refusal.]-When no demand has been made on the officer of a corporation to do an act, the performance of which is sought to be enforced by mandamus, the court will not allow the writ to go, as a previous demand and refusal are necessary. Reg. v. Sealey, 8 Jur. 496.

A rule for a mandamus was discharged, upon a preliminary objection that there had been no demand upon and refusal by the party against whom it was prayed to do that which the mandamus directed; the court refused a second rule for the mandamus, founded on affidavits shewing a demand and a refusal subsequently to the discharge of the former rule. If a local board of health, upon a claim being made against them for compensation, denies all liability, the claimant will be immediately entitled to a mandamus to enjoin them in general terms to cause compensation to be made; and it will not be necessary for him to claim any specific amount before applying for the writ. Reg. v. Burstem Local Board, 1 El. & El. 1077; 29 L. J., Q. B. 242; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 696; 8 W. R. 584 —Ex. Ch.

Special Case-Agreement that Mandamus may Issue. - When a special case is stated for the opinion of the court, and the parties agree that, in the event of the court giving judgment for the plaintiff, a mandamus may issue against the defendant :- Held, that this must be understood to mean, if the court thinks fit that it shall do so. At the application for the final order the eight justices were equally divided. No adjournment was granted or asked for. A rule nisi for a mandamus being granted, the instices thereafter met again and agreed by a majority to make the final order :- Held, that the rule for a mandamus might be made absolute, but without costs, and was not to be drawn up till further application. Reg. v. Cox, 48 J. P. 441.

e. Rule Absolute in the First Instance.

In what Cases. ]-A rule for a mandamus to an archdeacon to administer the oath of office to a churchwarden was absolute in the first instance, where there was no rival candidate, and no reason assigned for the refusal to administer the oath.

Rew v. Lichfield and Coventry (Archdeacon), 5 N. & M. 42; 1 H. & W. 463.

The rule is absolute in the first instance for a mandamus to swear in a chapelwarden, where, on the vacancy of a living, there is a dispute between the curate and the sequestrator who should appoint, and each has appointed one. Penruddock, Expurte, 1 H. & W. 347.

A rule for a mandamus to churchwardens to wear in overseers of the poor, was granted absolute in the first instance. Reg. v. Manchester Churchwardens, 7 D. P. C. 707.

Where a rule to pay the costs of a mandamus has been discharged, on the ground that an affidavit on which it was moved is defectively intitled, the court will hear a fresh application, but not where the defect of form is in the body of the affidavit. Reg. v. G. W. Ry, D. & M. 471; 5 Q. B. 597; 1 D. & L. 742; 13 L. J., Q. B. 129; 8 Jur. 107.

Fresh Affidavits.]-When a rule for a mandamus, obtained by churchwardens, had been discharged, with costs, on the ground that their affidavits were imperfect, and a subsequent rule was obtained by the same parties, on the same ground, on amended affidavits, the court refused to hear the second application upon the merits, and discharged the second rule also, with costs. Reg. v. Pichles, 12 L. J., Q. B. 40.

g. Service of Bule.

Upon Whom. - Service of a rule nisi for a mandamus to the sessions to hear an appeal against the determination of the petty sessions need not be upon the clerk of the peace; it is sufficient if it is served on the justices whose decision is complained against. #### h. Amendment of Writ.

When Allowed. ]-A mandamus to a company incorporated by the name of "The D., S. and W Junction Railway," was directed to them as "The D., S. and W. Junction Railway Company." Upon return, the court amended the writ by Reg. v. striking out the word "company." Derhyshire, Staffordshire, and Warcestershire Junction Ry., 2 C. L. R. 1653; 23 L. J., Q. B. 333; 18 Jur. 1054.

A mandamus cannot be amended after a return has been made to it. Rer v. Stafford Corporation, 4 Term Rep. 689.

Where a mandanus had, under the direction of a special pleader, been drawn with a teste out of term, and so issued, and a return had been made and demurred to, wherenpon the defendant objected that the writ was wrongly tested, the court, by its general authority, may amend; for the mistake was that of the officer, not the party, the officer being bound to see that a proper teste was affixed and not to adopt an irregular one given by the prosecutor. Reg. v. Conyers, 8 Q. B. 981; 15 L. J., Q. B. 300; 10 Jur. 899.

i. Quashing or Superseding Writ.

Grounds for.]-After a mandamus has been granted, a return made, and an issue thereon tried, the court will not quash the writ on grounds which were or might have been diseassed on shewing cause against the application for it : as, that a suggestion on which the motion was made is untrue. Reg. v. Stamford Corporation, 6 Q. B. 433.

A college may interpose to stop a mandamus to a visitor. Rev v. Ely (Bishop), 1 W. Bl. 52.
Where a writ has been obtained for a mandamus to issue, and the mandamus taken out in other terms than are warranted by the rule, and differing not merely by adding things incidental to a mandamus, but materially enlarging the terms, the court will quash the mandamus; notwithstanding, perhaps, they would have granted a rule as large if it had been applied for upon the same affidavits; and they will not, upon a motion to quash it, amend the rule to support the mandamns: the party ought, if there is a mistake, to apply to amend his rule before the mandanns issues. Rew v. Water Euton Corporation, 2 Smith, 54. And see Rew v. Tucker, 5 D. & R. 484 : 3 B. & C. 545.

Practice.]-A notice of a motion to quash or supersede a mandanus or any other writ whatever must always be given. Anon., 1 Wils. 30.

The mandamus required the corporation, by its corporate style, to assess compensation (instead of requiring the counsel to assess compensation, and the corporation to execute a bond) after return and issue in fact tried :- Held, that assuming the writ to be materially defective in form, the court ought not to quash it on motion. Reg. v. Stamford Corporation, 6 Q. B. 433.

By a mandamus, reciting this clause. and that the money had been paid to the commissioners, they were ordered to proceed to put the banks forthwith in a permanent state of stability and security, and to construct the forelands and slopes of the banks, as far as practicable, upon one uniform system. Return, that the commissioners had from time to time, at all times from the passing of the act, hitherto proceeded to execute all such works as should be or were from time to time deemed necessary, proper or expedient for putting the banks in a permanent state of stability and security, and for constructing the forelands and slopes of the banks, as far as practicable, upon one uniform system:—Held, an insufficient return, and a peremptory mandamus awarded. Return, that the supposed gnardians were not nor were any of them duly appointed under the provisions of the act, and that at the issuing of the writ guardians therein mentioned were not, nor were any of them, guardians of the poor of the union:— Held, that the return was insufficient for not distinctly setting forth any defect in the appointment. Rey. v. St. Andrew and St. George's (Governors), 10 A. & E. 736.

Expiration of Time Limited for Recovery of Penalty.]-A statute provided for the recovery of penalties within three months of the com-mission of an offence against it. To a mandamus directing justices to hear and determine an information for a penalty under the statute, the justices returned that they had heard the information and dismissed it on the ground that more than three months had elapsed :- Held, that the return shewed that they had obeyed the writ, and was therefore good. > Return to Mandamus—Evidence of Pretended Rehearing.]-Licensing justices were ordered by mandamus to hear an application to renew a beer-house licence and made a return that they duly heard and determined it. The prosecutor pleaded to the return by traversing the return, and after issue a jury found that it was a mere pretended rehearing and gave a verdict for the prosecutor. The justices had decided the case on the question whether the applicant was the real resident occupier, and the jury acted chiefly on evidence that one of the justices was overheard to say he would hear but would decide against the applicant :--Held, that there was no evidence to justify the finding of the jury that the justices did not hear and decide the case, and verdict set aside accordingly, and judgment entered for the justices. Reg. v. Pirehill JJ., Amendment of.]—The court would not allow the defendants in a traverse to amend the return to a mandamus by setting forth a different constitution, where the application was after verdict. Rev. v. Grampound Corporation, 7 Term Rep. 699.

A clerical mistake may be amended in the return after the return has been filed. Rew v. Lyme Regis Corporation, 1 Dougl. 125.

The court will not direct in what manner justices shall make their return to a mandamus ; but if the return made to it is insufficient to raise the question intended to be agitated, the court will, at the instance of the party interested, make a rule, giving the justices liberty to amend in the manner required, if they wish to do so. Res v. Marriott, 1 D. & R. 166.

A rule for a mandamus to a magistrate commanding him to issue a warrant of distress upon the goods of A., who shewed cause against the rule, was made absolute, and a return was subsequently made. The court allowed A, to amend the return, no loss of time or other injury being occasioned thereby, but not to file a separate return. Reg. v. Paynter, 14 L. J., M. C. 182; 9

Withdrawing.]—Leave may be given to with-draw a return by consent. Rew v. Burker, 3 Burr. 1379.

Inspection of Documents referred to.] - A. mandamus, the object of which is to enforce a civil right, is a proceeding, in aid of which, under the Evidence Act, 1851, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 6. a judge may grant an order for the inspection of documents by either of the litigant parties, when the return to such writ is traversed. Reg. v. Ambergate Ry., 17 Q. B. 957; 16 Jur. 777.

False Return.]—An action will lie for a suppressio veri in a return as well as for an allegatio pressio veri in a return as well falsi. Rev v. Lyme Regis Corporation, 1 Dougl.

Though by 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 2, the prosecutor other grounds contrary to the statute :-Held, of a mandamus, to which there is a return, and issue taken on the facts therein, had an option; course had in those parts thereof which had not he might have brought an action for a false county, though he might originally have alleged the facts there and have there brought his action for a false return. Rev v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Corporation, 1 East, 114.

ii. Pleadings.

Sufficiency of . To a mandamus, suggesting that trustees of a turnpike-road had carried the road over the private grounds of C., but had not (as directed by the Turnpike Act, 1823, 4 Geo. 4. c. 95, s. 66) fenced them on cach side, and commanded them to do so, a return was made:

1. Denying that the land belonged to C. 2. Alleging that the trustees had made satisfaction to C. (under the Turupike Act, 1822, 3 Geo. 4 c. 126, s. 83) for the damage done by so carrying the road, which satisfaction C, had accepted. had taken security for the amount, and had pro-ceeded to enforce the security. 3. Alleging that the trustees had no funds enabling them to execute the required work. C. pleaded, tendering issue on the denial of property, and leaving the other allegations unanswered. Issue was joined, and a verdict found for the Crown :-Held, that the unanswered allegations were no valid return; that the want of funds was no excuse after the road had been made; and that the prosecutor, having succeeded on the plea, was entitled to a peremptory mandamus. Reg. v. Luton Roads Trustees, 1 Q. B. 860; 10 L. J., Q. B. 263.

Mandamus to the defendant, as vicar of a parish, to restore the prosecutor to the office of clerk and sexton of the parish. The return, after alleging the right of the defendant, as vicar, to remove for lawful cause, and upon any vacancy legally arising to nominate, appoint and admit a legal and discreet person, stated the dismissal of the prosecutor by the defendant for various acts of misconduct, alleging them to have been done by the prosecutor in the presence and hearing of the defendant, and also the appointment of another person by the defendant in his place. The prosecutor in his first plea admitted the right, as alleged by the vicar, and the appointment of another person as clerk in his place, but pleaded de injuria as to the residue of the return; and pleaded, secondly, that he was not, before the removal from his office, summoned by the defendant to answer or explain the charges and cause of dismissal :- Held, first, that the return was bad, for not shewing that the prosecutor had had an opportunity of answering the charges made against him before dismissal. Rea. Smith, D. & M. 564; 5 Q. B. 614; 13 L. J., Q. B. 166.

Held, secondly, that the second plea only admitted the truth of the charges for the purpose of that plea, and that the whole record shewed no such admission, as the truth of the charge was put in issue by de injuriâ. Ib.

Traversing Matter of Law. ]-By a dock act persons were formed into a company for improvto try the question in the same county in which been excavated or embanked, or as near as circamstances would admit, except in such parts of return : vet, if all the material facts are alleged the new course as should be cut through rock or in one county, and issue taken thereon there, he atom. A mandamus issued to the company, cannot issue the venire facias into another stating in the inducement that the company had made and completed a new channel, but that parts of the south bank or side not cut through rock or stone had since become and were broken down and out of repair, and the inclination of the side was thereby greatly altered, to the danger of obstruction of the navigation. And the company was commanded to repair and maintain the parts of the south bank. Heturn, that the company was not required by the statute, nor otherwise liable, to repair and maintain the said parts ; and that, as near as circumstances had admitted or did admit, they had maintained the new course of equal depth and breadth at the bottom, and with equal inclination of the sides as the river course at the time of the act passing had in those parts which had not been excavated or embanked, and except such parts of the new course as had been cut through rock or stone :-Held, that the first part of the return was bad, as traversing matter of law, and also because a legal liability appeared. Reg. v. Bristol Dock Co., 2 Q. B. 64; 2 Railw, Cas, 599; 6 Jur. 216.

Held, also, that the second part was also bad, as not answering the mandatory part of the writ, but applying only to matter stated in the writ as a consequence of the omission to repair. Ib. Although the return may be in the nature of a demurrer, the counsel for the Crown is entitled to demurrer, the counsel for the Crown is entitled to begin. Rev v. St. Paneras Church Trustees, 1 N. & P. 507; 6 A. & E. 314. The party demurring to a return is entitled to be first heard as in an ordinary demurrer. Reg. v. Smith, D. & M. 564; 5 Q. B. 614; 13 L. J., Q. B. 166.

k. When Return Quashed.

On what Grounds. ]-The court will not quash a return to a mandamus (which directed an inferior court to give judgment on an indictment) merely because it states an erroneous judgment given below; but a writ of error must be brought to reverse that jndgment. Rev. v. Yorkshire (W. R.) JJ., 7 Term Rep. 467.

Practice.]—A rule for quashing a return to a mandamus need not go into the Crown paper. Rex v. St. Katherine's Dock Co., 1 N. & M. 121; 4 B. & Ad. 360.

It is discretionary in the court either to determine the validity of a return to a mandamus on motion or to order the cause to be set down in the Crown paper for argument. Ib.

In shewing cause against a rule for quashing a return, the defendant may object that the writ was improperly issued. Ib.

When a return is not frivolous on the face of it, its validity must be urged on a concilium and not on a rule for quashing the return. Reg. v. St. Saviour's, Southwark, Wardens, &c., 3 N. & P. 126.

As to Part. ]- If a return consists of several independent matters, not inconsistent with each persons were formed into a company for improving a port, and made proprietors of the works, and were authorised and required to make, complete and maintain a new course or channel for a river, the same to be of equal depth and breadth at the bottom, and with equal inclinations of the sides, as the them present river [Comparation, 2 Term Rep. 456; 4 Bur. 2008. S. P., Rev. Y. Ork Corporation, 5 Term Rep. 65.

1. Judgment.

Under 9 Anne, c. 20, and 1 Will. 4, c. 21, s. 3, judgment non obstante veredicto may be given for the party making return to a mandamus. Reg. v. Darlington School Governors, 6 Q. B. 682; 14 L. J., Q. B. 67.

When a mandamus had been issued, which ought not to have issued, against a railway company for making a road, and the return merely traversed a part, and the issue then raised had been found against the company and a peremptory mandamus had been awarded :-Held, that on a writ of error, the court being satisfied that the mandamus itself ought not to have issued, had properly reversed the whole judgment, Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 4 H. L. Cas. 471; 17 Jur. 931.

4. PEREMPTORY MANDAMUS.

By Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LIII. r. 6, the court or a judge may, if they or he think fit, order that any writ of mandamus shall be peremptory in the first instance.

In what Cases.]—When a mandamus is addressed to churchwardens during their year of office, and disobeyed by them during that period, it is no reason for refusing a peremptory writ that their year of office has expired. Allen, 42 L. J., Q. B. 37; L. R. 8 Q. B. 69; 27 L. T. 707; 21 W. R. 190.

A party, whose right to an office has been established by a verdict, cannot have a peremptory mandamus to restore him to his office until he has signed judgment in the action. Neale v. Bowles, 1 H. & W. 584.

A peremptory mandamus will not be awarded until the proceedings on the first mandamns are complete. Reg. v. Baldwin, 8 A. & E. 947; 3 P. & D. 124; 1 W. W. & H. 681.

The court will not grant a peremptory man-Ames to reinstate a person in a corporate office dams to reinstate a person in a corporate office though the return made may be objectionable or defective in point of form, if the fact's stated on that return justify the court in refusing the mandamus as matter of discretion, such as to compel the corporation to restore an officer whom they would be bound immediately to remove in a more would be count influentately to remove it a more formal manner. Rese v. Bristol Corporation, 1 D. & R. 389. S. C. 1001. Rese v. Griffiths, 5 B. & Ald, 731. And see Rese v. Bank of England, 2 B. & Ald. 620.

It is established law that if there be a writ of mandamus commanding several things, the prosecutor is not entitled thereto in the peremptory form unless he prove that he is entitled to the whole. Reg. v. East and West India Docks the whole. Arey. v. Law and west Incut Locks and Birmingham Junction Ry., 2 E. & B. 466; 22 L. J., Q. B. 380; 17 Jur. 1181; 1 W. R. 409.

Return, inadmissible.]-A return stating an excuse for non-compliance with a peremptory writ, is inadmissible. Reg. v. Poole Corporation, 1 G. & D. 728. S. C. nom. Reg. v. Ledgard, 1 Q. B. 616.

There cannot be a return to a peremptory mandamus. Reg. v. Hudson, 9 Jur. 345.

Quashing when Unnecessary.]—After judgment for the Crown on a return to a mandamus, the defendants having voluntarily, and with the court will quash a peremptory writ of mandamus them. Ib.

as unnecessary and an abuse of the process of the court. Reg. v. Saddlers' Co., 4 B. & S. 570; 33 L. J., O. B. 68.

Error on. |- Upon the award of a peremptory mandamus error will not lie, there being no plea to it, and therefore not in the nature of a judgment. Dublin (Dean, &c.) v. Rex, 1 Bro. P. C. 73.

The grant of a peremptory mandamus is not a matter of discretion but is a decision upon a right, declaring what is or what is not lawful to be done; and such decision is subject to review.

Reg. v. All Saints (Wigon), I App. Cass 611; 35

Attachment.] — An attachment cannot be granted against the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of a borough, for disobedience to a peremptory writ requiring them to pay a sum of money secured by a compensation bond under the corporation seal, but the particular indi-viduals who had been concerned in disobeying the writ must be named in the rule for the attachment. Reg. v. Poole Corporation, 1 G. & D. 728. S. C. nom. Reg. v. Ledgard, 1 Q. B. 616.

An attachment was ordered against the mayor of a corporation, for not making a return to a peremptory mandamus within the time prescribed by the writ, though there was no personal service. Res v. Forcey Corporation, 5 D. & R. 614; 2 B. & C. 584.

5. Damages,

Who Entitled to I—All prosecutors of a mandanns are, by 1 Will. 4, c. 21, entitled to damages and costs, whether an action for a false return can be sustained by them or not. Reg. v. Fall, 1 Q. B. 636; 2 G. & D. 803; 13 L. J., Q. B. 187-Ex. Ch.

6. Costs.

Against Whom. ]-Where a return to a mainlamus, shewing cause for disobedience to the writ, is made by the inhabitants of a parish, if the return is quashed, the court, in granting costs, will ascertain which of the inhabitants joined in making the return, and make the rule for costs alsolute against them. Reg. v. St. Saximor's, Southwark, 3 N. & P. 845; 7 A. & E. 925; 1 W. W. & H. 244; 7 L. J., M. C. 59; 2 Jur. 565.
Where magistrates are present, but take no part in the proceedings, the application against them will be discharged with costs. Reg. v. Radnor (Earl), 8 D. P. C. 717; 4 Jur. 460,

In what Cases Granted. ]-The rule that a party who unsuccessfully opposes a rule for a mandanus to set right the decision of an inferior court, must pay the costs occasioned by the mandamus, applies to a party shewing cause in the first instance. Reg. v. Derby Reworder, 2 L. M.

The court, in the exercise of its discretion, will grant costs to the prosecutors, although there may have been doubtful questions of law raised and have been doubted questions of new raised on the return. Reg. v. St. Sarionr's, Southwark, 3 N. & P. 345; 7 A. & E. 925; 1 W. W. & H. 234; 7 L. J., M. C. 59; 2 Jur. 565.

Where public functionaries, such as a clergyman or a schoolmaster, endowed under an act of parliament, are obliged to come before the court prosecutor's consent, done the act enjoined, the act of parliament, the court will award costs to

When a party required by law to pronounce a The court, in the exercise of its discretion, will decision on certain points is brought before the generally order that the costs of a mandamus application fails. Rev v. Bridgmoth Corporation, 10 A. & E. 66; 2 P. & D. 317; 8 L. J., M. C. 86.

After argument and judgment on return to a manuataus, the court will give costs to the party succeeding, unless a very strong ground of exemption is shewn on the other side, Reg. v. Newbury Corporation, 1 Q. B. 751; 2 G. & D. 109; 11 L. J., Q. B. 149; 6 Jur. 821. S. P., Rey. v. Eastern Counties Ry., 3 Railw. Cas. 186.

Upon a rule for mandamus to inspect the register of a company by one of its proprietors, the company opposed on the ground that the applicant was prompted by improper motives.
Although the majority made the rule absolute, one of the court expressed his opinion that the object of the application was not justifiable and dissented from the decision :- Held, that this was no ground for setting aside the ordinary rule, was acground for secting using the ordinary Fide, by which costs are given to the successful party, Rey, v. Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation, 30 L.T. 408. When a writ of mandanus is opposed, the court will in all cases grant costs against the party so opposing it, even when the opposition is withdrawn before the time for argument of the rule arrives. Ludlow Union v. Birmingham Union, 44 L. J., M. C. 48; 31 L. T. 587.

When no cause is shewn, a different rule may be adopted. Ib.

Judgment of ouster having been given in a quo warranto against a person exercising the office of an alderman of a borough, and the town council having failed to fill up the vacancy within ten days, and having subsequently declined to do so, the relator obtained a mandamus commanding them to hold an election for that purpose, which was obeyed. The court ordered the defendants to pay the cost of the mandamus to the prosecutor. Reg. v. Cumbridge Corporation, 4 Q. B. 801; 14 L. J., Q. B. 82; 9 Jur. 11.

Although the costs of obtaining a writ of mandamas, where cause is shewn, are in the discretion of the court, yet they ought to be given to the or the court, yet they ought to be given to the successful party, unless there are strong grounds to the contrary. Rog. v. Harden, 1 B. O. C. 214; 23 L. J., Q. B. 127; 18 Jur. 147; 2 W. R. 164.

Where cause is shewn against a rule for a mandanus, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, will in general order costs to be paid by that party to the application who ultimately fails to that party who ultimately succeeds, but the rule is not invariable. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 9 Q. B. 37; 15 L. J., M. C. 117; 10 Jur. 432.

Where a mandamus has been applied for to justices at sessions, to compel them to perform an act they erroneously supposed they had no power to do, if the party, in whose favour such decision is given, opposes the application for the writunsuccessfully, the general rule, that an unsuccossful party must pay all the costs, is applicable. Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., and Reg. v. Luneashire JJ., 3 New Sess. Cas. 202; 2 B. C. Rep. 287; 5 D. & L. 430; 17 L. J., M. C. 133; 12 Jur. 1048.

The rule is, that where an application for a mandamus is made and opposed, the unsuccessful party pays costs, except under very particular circumstances. Reg. v. Surrey JJ., 14 Q. B. 684; 2 New Sess. Cas. 377; 19 L. J., M. C. 171; 14

Jur. 457,

The court, in the exercise of its discretion, will court by a motion impugning such decision, the shall be paid to the successful party. This rule general rule is that he shall have costs if the applies when, on the one hand, there has been a wrongful refusal to do the act which the court afterwards compels the party to do; or when, on the other hand, the party applying for the writ fails on a discussion of the merits. In either case, however, it is essential that no blame should have attached to the successful party. Reg. v. Langridge, 3 C. L. R. 361; 24 L. J., Q. B. 73; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 64; 3 W. R. 165.

A rule had been obtained calling upon B. and certain justices of the county of Suffolk to shew cause why the justices should not issue a distress warrant against B, to levy the amount of a poorrate. B. shewed cause against the rule, upon the ground that the premises in respect of which he refused to pay the rate were not within the juris-diction of the magistrates, as they were in the county of Norfolk and not in the county of Suffolk. The rule was made absolute in order that the fact might be determined in some other way. A warrant was accordingly issued, and a levy made mon B.'s goods, which he repleyed. and the cause went down for trial at the assizes, the issue being whether or not the premises were in the county of Suffolk. The jury found in favour of B., and thereupon he applied for the costs incurred in resisting the original rule — Held, that he was entitled to such costs. Reg. v. Great Yarmouth JJ., 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 476; 3 W. R.

Where through delay of plaintiff defendants had become obliged to have the authority of a mandamus to justify them in paying a sum of money, the court refused to make absolute a rule calling on them to pay the costs of the manda-mus. Reg. v. Burleigh Bourd of Health, I.L. T. 92.

The right to the costs of a mandamus to sessious to hear an appeal does not depend upon whether or not cause has been vexatiously shewn against the rule for the writ, but whether cause has been unsuccessfully shewn. Rea. v. Middlesew J.J., 20 L. J., M. C. 42; 15 Jur. 907.

A sheriff, on a compensation case under a railway act, directed the jury that the claimant's case was not within the act, and they so found. A rule was afterwards made absolute for a mandamus to the sheriff to execute the inquiry, upon the ground that he was mistaken:—Held, that the parties opposing a rule for a mandamus should not pay the costs of the other side in moving and making that rule absolute, as the necessity for the rule arose from the mistake of the judge. Rey. v. Middlesex Sheriff, 5 Q. B. 365; 3 Railw. Cas. 396; 13 L. J., Q. B. 14.

Where a party unsuccessfully opposes a rule for a mandamus to set right the sessions, who have wrongly decided a matter in his favour, he will in general be made to pay the costs of the mandamus, unless, perhaps, the matter is wrongly decided by the court itself, uninfluenced by any improper objection on his part. Reg. v. Cheshire. JJ, 5 D. & L. 426; 2 B. C. Rep. 186; 12 Jur. 161.

It is a general rule that unsuccessful applications against magistrates are discharged with costs. Reg. v. Rudner (Earl), 8 D. P. C. 717; 4 Jur. 460.

The court had power, under the repealed The court had power, that we have a like it will 4, c 21, s 6, to give the costs to the defendant as well as to the prosecutor of a mandamus. Reg. v. Dartmonth Corporation, 2 D. (N.S.) 980; 12 L. J., M. C. 83; 7 Jur. 629.

Where the prosecutor omitted to proceed with will be made for costs at the time the rule is a mandamus after a return had been made, the made absolute, the court will make it absolute court compelled him to elect either to proceed or pay the costs of the mandamus. Ib.

What Costs Included. !- The costs of a writ of mandamus, whether such writ shall be granted or refused, and also if the writ is issued or obeyed, are not alone the costs in applying for and of the writ itself, but also include the costs of the return and subsequent proceedings. Reg. v. St. Punerus Churchwardens, 2 D. (N.S.) 955; 7 Jnr. 1060. S. P., Reg. v. Scott, 1 D. & L. 212: 7 Jur. 993.

By a drainage act commissioners were ordered to administer an oath to new commissioners elected. On a mandamus requiring a commissioner to swear in a person alleged to be elected, the defendant returned that the party was not elected; and on a traverse taken on the return, the defendant had the verdict and judgment :-Held, that the defendant was entitled to costs of shewing cause upon the rule as part of costs of snewing cause upon the rule as part of the general costs, without special application and order under I Will. 4, c, 21, s, 6. **Reg. v. **Kelk*, I Q. B. 660; 4 P. & D. 185; 10 L. J., Q. B. 188.

Fees for Entering Rule.]-Schedule 52 of the Order as to Supreme Court Fees, 1884, which provides for the payment of a fee of 2l. on entering or setting down " a cause or matter for trial or hearing in any court in London or Middlesex or at any assizes," is not confined to cases where the matter for hearing arises in an action. Such fee is therefore payable to the Crown office on entering a rule nisi against a police magistrate ordering him to hear an application for a summons. Husker, Ex parte, 54 L. J., M. C. 94; 14 Q. B. D. 82.

Upon Award of a Peremptory Mandamus.]-Upon a judgment awarding a peremptory mandamus, the costs are not those awarded at the discretion of the court, under the repealed 1 Will, 4, e. 21, s. 6, but are the general costs, under s. 4. Reg. v. S. E. Ry., 4 H. L. Cas. 471; 17 Jur. 901.

Application—When and How Made.]—Application for costs of a mandamus shall be made within two terms of the obeying of the writ. Reg. v. Keat JJ., 36 L. J., M. C. 130; 16 L. T.

The general practice npon making absolute a rule for a mandamus is not to give costs, but to require a separate motion to be made for them; yet where, upon making such rule absolute, it appears that the litigation is at an eud, the appears that the Haganton is at the end, the court will not require a separate motion to be made for the costs, but will give them as a part of the rule. Reg. v. L. B. S. S. C. Ry., 10 L. T.

Where no cause was shewn against a rule for a mandamus, and it appeared from affidavits that the litigation was substantially at an end, the court made the rule absolute, with costs, and did not require a separate application for costs. Reg. v. East Anglian Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 475; 18

- Materials on which Made. ]-The court will not grant costs on making a rule for a mandamus absolute upon a mere affidavit of service, but on affidavits shewing ground for believing with costs. Reg. v. East Anglian Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 475; 18 Jur. 69.

A rule nisi was obtained for a mandamus commanding a magistrate to hear a claim against a maining a magnetate to near a caum against a milway company for compensation under their milway act, which rule was opposed by the company only and made absolute. A mandamus issued thereon. Afterwards the prosecutor applied for the costs of his application for the mandamus and of the writ, but did not shew what had been done since the mandamus issued, or account for not stating the proceedings further, and costs were refused. Reg. v. Bingham, 4 Q. B. 877; 3 Railw. Cas. 390.

Upon a motion by the prosecutor of a mandamus for his costs under 1 Will. 4, c, 21, s, 6, the rule should be drawn up on reading all the affi-dayits upon which he obtained the mandamus, dayts upon winen ne optained the manatana, and which he intends to use; unless so drawn up, the court will not refer for the gaidance of their discretion to the affidavits filed in support of the application for the mandamus. Reg. v. Peterhouse (Muster), 1 Q. B. 314; 5 Jur. 408.

Security for Costs.]-The court will not compel a relator to give security for costs, he being interested in the matter in question, on the ground of his poverty, or that other persons had induced him to apply for the writ. Reg. v. Malmeshury Corporation, 9 D. P. C. 359; 10 L. J., Q. B. 129; 5 Jur. 366.

On an application by ratepayers of a borough for a mandamus to the corporation to obtain payment of moneys due to them under certain local acts, the rule was discharged, upon the terms that the applicants should be at liberty to take legal proceedings in the name of the corporation, on giving them an indemnity to the satisfaction of the coroner and attorney of the court, who fixed the amount at 200%. A mandamus having issued accordingly on the prosecution of the corporation, and judgment having been given for the Crown, which was reversed in the Exchequer Chamber, and a writ of error to the House of Lords being pending, and the expenses of the mandamus having exceeded 2001, the court made a rule absolute to increase the security to such sum as the coroner and attorney of the court should think reasonable. Reg. v. Southampton Hurbour Commissioners, 6 B. & S. 407; 34 L. J., O. B. 164

If a prohibition has from the court ecclesiastical so as to correct any been granted, the court will grant a supersedeas from the court ecclesiastical so as to correct any irregularity or even injustice which may have been done by the ecclesiastical court, if done in the exercise of their jurisdiction. Muckonochie v. Penzauce (Lord), 50 L. J., Q. B. 611; 6 App. Cas. 443; 44 L. T. 479; 29 W. R. 633; 45 J. P. 584-H. L. (E.)

Where an inferior court proceeds in a cause properly within its jurisdiction, no prohibition ann be awarded till the pleadings raise some issue which the court is incompetent to try. London Corporation v. Cox, 36 L. J., Ex. 225; L. R. 2 H. L. 239; 16 W. R. 44.

But where the foundation for the jurisdiction is itself defective, a prohibition may be applied for at once, Ib.

My view of the power of prohibition at the present day is that the court should not be charv of exercising it, and that wherever the legislature entrusts to any body of persons other than to the superior courts the power of imposing an obligation upon individuals the courts ought to exercise as widely as they can the power of controlling those bodies of persons, if those persons admittedly attempt to exercise powers beyond the powers given to them by act of parliament. Reg. v. Local Government Board, 52 L. J., M. C. 4; 10 Q. B. D. 321; 48 L. T. 181-per Brett, L.J.

Appearance of Prohibited Judge-Costs.]judge is entitled to appear when it is attempted to obtain a prohibition to his court, and the superior court cannot refuse to allow his costs if successful. Combe v. De lu Bere, 22 Ch. D. 348; 48 L. T. 303.

Want of Jurisdiction apparent on Face of Proceedings—Acquiescence by Applicant—Discretion.]—Where total absence of jurisdiction is apparent on the face of the proceedings in an inferior court, the High Court is bound to grant a prohibition although the applicant has acqui-esced in the proceedings of such inferior court. Farquharson v. Margan, 63 L. J., Q. B. 474; [1894] 1 Q. B. 552; 9 R. 202; 70 L. T. 152; 42 W. R. 306; 58 J. P. 495-C. A.

Acquiescence - Effect of.]-Except on the application of the Crown, the court will refuse to grant a writ of prohibition where the defect in jurisdiction depends upon some fact in the knowledge of the applicant, which he has neglected without excuse to bring forward in the court below, since the writ, though of right, is not of course. Broad v. Perkins, 57 L. J. Q. B. 638; 21 Q. B. D. 533; 60 L. T. 8; 37 W. R. 44: 53 J. P. 39—C. A.
Waiver of objection to jurisdiction by taking step in cause. Jones v. James, In re, 19 L. J., Q. B. 257.

Action Commenced in Mayor's Court-Want of Jurisdiction-Appearance by Defendant-Waiver. ]-Where an action has been commenced in the Mayor's Court, the defendant does not, by entering appearance, not under protest, and taking other steps, waive his right to object to if there is an affidavit that the cause arose within the jurisdiction. Anon., 1 Vern. 301.

Part within and Part without Jurisdiction. —Where part of a decision of the court sought to be prohibited is within its jurisdiction and part not, a prohibition is awarded against doing what is in excess of jurisdiction and a consultation as to the rest. Mackenochie v. Penzance (Lord), col. 209, supra.

Where the subject of a suit in an inferior court is within its jurisdiction, though in the proceed-ings a matter is stated which is out of its jurisdiction, yet unless it is going on to try such matter, a prohibition will not lie. Dutens v. Robson, I H. Bl. 100. See Gould v. Gapper, 7 R. R. 766.

It is no objection to a rule for a prohibition before verdict that a part of the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the inferior court.

William V. Allan, 44 L. J., C. P. 351; L. R. 10 C. P. 607; 32 L. T. 830; 23 W. R. 703. Where the inferior court has only jurisdiction over part of the matter, and not of the rest, the Queen's Bench has a discretion after judgment delivered Carslake v. Mapledoram, 2 Term Rep. 473.

Severable Claims - Part Good.] - Where a plaint contains two claims, one of which is within and the other without the jurisdiction of the county court, a prohibition may be granted as to one only. Reg. v. Westmoreland County Court Judge, 58 L. T. 417; 36 W. R. 477.

To Government Department-Local Government Board. ]-The court will not grant prohibition to a tribunal like the Local Government Board on the ground that in an appeal to them they will perhaps take into consideration upon that appeal matters which do not properly arise before them. Rey. v. Local Government Board, 52 L. J., M. C. 4; 10 Q. B. D. 300; 48 L. T. 173; 31 W. R. 72; 47 J. P. 228—C. A.

Semble, the Local Government Board in exercising its functions as to provisional orders is not a "court," nor are purely legislative powers, or powers of promoting legislation on principle, subject to prohibition; but a usurpation of jurisdiction of a judicial character by the board might be prohibited. Kingstown Commissioners, Ex parte, 18 L. R. Ir. 509-C. A.

Woods, Commissioners of ]—Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 38, empowering the Commissioners of Woods and Forests to form a royal park in woods and Forests to form a royal park in Battersea-fields, a jury was impannelled before the sheriff of Surrey to ascertain what recom-pense should be made to a claimant for the value of lands required for the purposes of the act, and found a verdict for 750/l, which the sheriff gave judgment for and ordered to be paid to the claimant. Thereupon the claimant applied for a prohibition to prohibit the shcriff and the commissioners from entering and recording the ver-dict and judgment, and further acting upon or Catching disperamec, not under protest, and the protest stating other steps, ware his right to object to the parisdiction so soon as he ascerdain search what the instance of the plantiffs calain is Zeev.Chen, 71.L.T.824-O.A. and the production of the plantiffs calain is Zeev.Chen, 71.L.T.824-O.A. and the production is soon to an inferior court, after the defendant has pleaded there, for, by plending, but at least the recording of them, nor the proceeding which the commissioners were embedded that a purisdiction. But at powered to take, were acts in respect of which the prohibition could be granted. Chalmt v. (54 L. J., Q. B. 896; 14 Q. B. D. 855; 52 L. T. Morpeth (Lord), 15 Q. B. 446; 19 L. J., Q. Whether Prohibition or Appeal the Proper Remedy. - It is no objection to a motion for a prohibition that the party moving has appealed to the court to which prohibition is to issue. Chesterton v. Farlar, 7 Ad. & E. 713. See Barker v. Palmer, 51 L. J., Q. B. 110, tit. COUNTY

What constitutes a Judicial Proceeding. ]-The governing body of a university may lawfully issue a decree that every tradesman, with whom a person in statu pupillari within the university contracts a debt exceeding 51., shall make the same known to the tutor of such person's college, on pain of being discommuned if he omits doing so; and, in case of disobedience, they may enforce such decree by ordering that no person in stata pupillari shall deal with the tradesman for a given period. If the vicechancellor, attended, on summons, by the heads of collèges, makes an order to discommune in pursuance of such decree this is not a judicial proceeding which the superior courts can restrain by prohibition. Death, Ex parte, 18 Q. B. 647; 21 L. J., Q. B. 337; 17 Jur. 112.

After Sentence. ]—After sentence, prohibition will not go unless want of jurisdiction below appears upon the face of the proceedings. Buggin v. Bennet, 4 Burr. 2035.

glie V. Beinert, 4 Burr. 2035.

Where a matter is properly triable at common law, prelibition lies before sentence, but if a party salanit to trial it is afterwards too late, Full V. Hatchins, Cowp. 424, 432, And see Stainbank V. Braitsbare, 10 East, 449, n.

When the want of jurisdiction of an inferior court appears on the face of the process, the court will grant a prohibition after sentence. Roberts v. Humby, 3 M. & W. 120; M. & H. 331; 6 D. P. C. 82.

After Appeal.]—Though, semble, that a prohibition can be moved for though an appeal be pending. Hurrington (Earl) v. Rumsay, 8 Ex. 879; 22 L. J., Ex. 826; 1 W. R. 456.

When it may be Applied for Before Execution completed. Where in an action in an inferior court, upon the facts disclosed at the trial and relied on by the plaintiff, a clear want of jurisdiction over the cause is for the first time made apparent, the defendant has a right, at any time before execution has been completed, to claim a prohibition to restrain all further proceedings and to prohibit any further excess of jurisdiction. Prohibition will not go to an inferior court if such court had in fact jurisdiction over the cause, although the facts in evidence at the trial in the inferior court were not such as to give that court jurisdiction. Heyworth v. London Corporation, Cab. & E. 312. Affirmed

After Judgment, —A defendant in an action in the Salford Hundred Court who has not commissioners acting under a local act from ground of want of jurisdiction. Oran v. Brearey where the alleged of (col. 213, infra) overruled. Chadwick v. Balt, In re, 15 O. B. 743.

A prohibition will not be granted after judgment, unless it is perfectly clear that there has been an excess of jurisdiction. Rivardo v. Maidenhead Local Board, 2 H. & N. 257; 27 L. J., M. C. 73 : 5 W. R. 691.

Against Judgment.]-Prohibition will not begranted against a judgment merely because of a lefect. Enrught v. Penzance (Lord), 51 L. J., defect. Q. B. 506; 7 App. Cas. 240; 46 L. T. 779; 30 W. B. 753; 46 J. P. 644—H. L. (E.)

Point need not have been taken in Court below. ]-Where an inferior court has no jurisdiction to entertain a cause, it is not necessary, to entitle a party to a prohibition, that the objection to the want of jurisdiction should have objection to the want of juristiction should interested in the inferior court and overraled. Haber v. Portugal (Queen), 17 Q. B. 171; 20 L. J., Q. B. 488; 16 Jur. 164.

Must be Material. ]-A prohibition will not be granted where it is not material. Butterworth v. Walker, 3 Burr. 1689.

For Non-reception of Evidence. - Where justices had convicted a party of unlawfully taking fish in a private fishery, the court refused to issue a prohibition against their proceeding to enforce it, on the ground that the defendant claimed a right of fishing before the justices; and they refused to require the informant to produce his title-deeds. Higgins, Ex parte, 10 Jur. 838.

Winding up of Building Society—Compulsory Reference—Discharging a Final Order—Judge functus officio.]—In the winding-up of a building society under the Building Societies Act, 1874, under the supervision of the City of London Court, the judge, without the consent and against the wishes of both parties to the application before him, ordered the reference of an issue to a layman, imposed terms as a condition precedent to the hearing of such reference, and subsequently discharged his own order of reference altogether, owing to the refusal of either party to comply with the condition :- Held, that, inasmuch as the judge of the City of London Court, acting under the Building Societies Act, 1874, had no power to order a reference without the consent of parties, and also that, as he could not of his own motion vary or discharge any final order of his own, the judge had acted in excess of jurisdiction, and that a writ of prohibition ought to issue. To Courts of Appeal. ]-A prohibition will be granted to a court of appeal, where it appears that they have no jurisdiction over the subjectmatter, even after they have remitted the suit to the court below, and awarded costs against the appellant, and though the party applying for a prohibition appealed to that court. Durby v. Cosens, 1 Term Rep. 552.

Semble, that the courts of common law have power to issue a writ of prohibition to the judicial committee of the privy council, if it exceeds its jurisdiction; but it cannot issue for that which is a subject of appeal. Smyth, Reparte, 2 C. M. & R. 748; 1 Gale, 274. S. P. and S. C., 3 A. & E. 719.

To Coroner.]—A prohibition lies to a coroner to prevent him from holding an inquest. Reg. v. Herford, 3 El. & El. 115; 29 L. J., Q. B. 249; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 750; 2 L. T. 459; 8 W. R. 579.

To Mayor's Court of London-Not Grantable where Claim does not exceed £50.]-The effect of the 12th section of the Mayor's Court of London Procedure Act, 1857, by which no plea to the jurisdiction is allowed in certain cases where the claim does not exceed 50%, and of the 15th section of the same act, by which no defendant may object to the jurisdiction except by plea, is that no prohibition can issue to prohibit an action in the Mayor's Court in those cases for less than 50l. To Ecclesiastical Courts.]—A representation under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), against a clergymau, was sent to the Bishop of Rochester, and was by him duly transmitted to the Archbishop of Canterbury. The archbishop thereupon, by his requisition, required the judge to hear the matters of the required the judge to near the matters of the representation, "at any place in Loudon or West-minster, or within the diocese of Rochester, as you may think fit." The judge heard the case in their public library int Lambeth Palace, which, though in the province of Canterbury, is neither in London nor in Westminster, nor in the diocese of Rochester, and gave indement against the clergyman, who did not appear, although he had notice of the proceedings. A monition issued against him, and, on his non-compliance therewith, he was pronounced guilty of contempt and imprisoned. On his applying for a prohibition to the Arches Court on the ground that the judge had no jurisdiction:—Held, that a prohibition must issue, for that the judge had no power to hear the case at any place outside, the limits defined by the requisition, and that by hearing the case at Lumbeth he had exceeded his authority, and the whole proceedings were on that account void and coram non judice. Hudson v. Tooth, 47 L. J., Q. B. 18; 3 Q. B. D. 46; 37 L. T. 462; 26 W. R. 95.

A prohibition will not be granted to restrain a petition in the Ecclesiastical Court where it is within the jurisdiction of the court to grant some of the privileges prayed for, especially where the applicant has no special interest in the proceedings. Reg. v. Twiss, 10 B. & S. 208; 38 L. J., Q. B. 228; L. R. 4 Q. B. 407; 20 L. T. 522; 17 W. R. 765. See also cases under ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

2. PRACTICE, PLEADINGS AND COSTS.

Application for Writ.]—A prohibition may be moved for by a defendant himself, where the court is satisfied that an inferior court is prodefendant pleaded that the plaintiff had already coding without jurisdiction. Bridge v. Branch, taken the opinion of the Queen's Bench on a 1 C. P. D. 633; 34 L. T. 905. ton, the court is coming to interfere by prohibi-tion upon the application of a stranger, as well as of the defendant himself, Haber v. Portugal (Queen), 17 Q. B. 171; 20 L. J., Q. B. 488; 16 Jun. 164.

The court is bound to grant a prohibition where a court has no jurisdiction, upon the application of a stranger, as well as of a party to the proceedings. Ib.

The granting of a prohibition on the application of a stranger is discretionary. Reg. v. Treiss, 10 B. & S. 298; 38 L. J., Q. B. 228; L. R. 4 Q. B. 407; 20 L. T. 522; 17 W. R. 765.
When a superior court is clearly of opinion, both with reference to the facts and the law, that an inferior court is exceeding its jurisdiction, it is bound to grant a writ of prohibition, whether the applicant is the defendant or a stranger. Worthington v. Jeffries, 44 L. J., C. P. 200; L. R. 10 C. P. 379; 32 L. T. 606; 23 W. R. 750.

In such a case neither the smallness of the claim in the suit nor delay on the part of the applicant is a reason for refusing the writ. Ib.

The plaintiff in the inferior court has in no case an absolute right to have the plaintiff in prohibition put to declare in prohibition, Ib.

When it is clear on the facts and the law that an inferior court is exceeding its inrisdiction, the granting a prohibition is in the discretion of the superior court, where the applicant for the pro-hibition is a stranger. Chambers v. Green, 44 L. J., Ch. 600; L. R. 20 Eq. 552.

Decision as to Jurisdiction Reviewable on Rule.]—The decision of a court on facts going to its jurisdiction is reviewable on a rule for a writ of prohibition: Liverpool United Cas Light Co. V. Everlon Correservs, 40 L. J., M. C. 104; L. R. 6 C. P. 414; 23 L. T. 813; 19 W. R. 412.

Abandonment of Part of Claim. - When a plaintiff's claim, in an action in the Mayor's Court, London, is composed of several items, some whereof relate to business done within, and others to business done without, the city of Loudon, a superior court, upon an application for a prohibition, has a discretion to allow the plaintiff finally to abandon the causes of action Mayor's Court for those accruing within the city, and to proceed in the Mayor's Court for those accruing within the city, Ellis v. Fleming, 45 L. J., C. P. 512; 1 C. P. D.

When Injunction granted instead of Prohibition.]—Where the legislature has pointed out a special tribunal for determining a question, as a general rule no other court ought to restrain the proceedings before it; but where the question has come before another court in an independent proceeding in which it is necessary to decide the whole matter between the parties, the court may restrain the proceedings elsewhere by injunction in order to save expense. Stannard v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 51 L. J., Ch. 629; 20 Ch. D. 190; 46 L. T. 243; 30 W. R. 693—C. A.

A dispute having arisen between the defendants, who were a local authority and the plaintiff about a drain which the plaintiff had interfered with, the defendants gave notice to the plaintiff that they would enter on his land and reinstate the drain; but they afterwards abandoned their intention, and instead took pro-ceedings against him before the magistrate. The

Where an inferior court exceeds its jurisdic-plaintiff then sued the defendants, and claimed tion, the court is bound to interfere by prohibi- an injunction to restrain them from trespassing on his land, and from proceeding against him before the magistrate. In the statement of claim the plaintiff did not in terms allege that the defendants threatened and intended to trespass on the land :-Held, that as no intention to commit a trespass was proved or alleged, the plaintiff had not made out his case for an injunction against the trespass; and that being so, the court had no jurisdiction to restrain the proeeedings before the magistrate. Ib.

The jurisdiction to grant prohibition is now conferred by the Judicature Act upon every judge of the High Court; but, inasmuch as one plange of the right court; but, insaminen is one of the main objects of the acts (Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 7) is to enable the court to decide, if possible, in one proceeding, all the questions in dispute, in the same matter and between the same parties, and (Judicature Act. 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8) to grant an injunction in all cases in which it shall appear to the court "just and convenient" so to do, the court may, in any ease in which it has power to grant prohibition grant an injunction to restrain the proceedings in the inferior court. Hedley v. Butes, 49 L. J., Ch. 170; 13 Ch. D. 498; 42 L. T. 41; 28 W. R. 365.

Prohibition or Appeal—County Court. ]—In an action of ejectment properly brought in the the bailiff forty clear days at least before the return day under Ord, VIII, r. 7 of the County Court Rules, 1875, and the judge of the county court has no power to waive this condition even where, though the bailiff has not received the summons forty days, he has yet served it on the defendant thirty-five days before the return day as required by the latter part of the same rule. If under such circumstances the judge proceeds to hear the case, the defendant not consenting, the High Court, on appeal by the defendant, will set aside the judgment. Semble, such a case is not matter of prohibition. Burker v. Pulmer, 51 L. J., Q. B. 110; 8 Q. B. D. 9; 45 L. T. 480; 30 W. R. 59.

____ Divorce Court.]—A petitioner filed a petition, in the court for divorce, for dissolution of the marriage between him and his wife, celebrated in the East Indies, according to the rites of the Church of England, on the ground of her adultery with the co-respondent, and claiming damages against him; to which the respondent and co-respondent entered an absolute appearance, but afterwards applied to be allowed to appear under protest, on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction, by reason of the petitioner and respondent never having been domiciled within its jurisdiction; which application was refused. On the trial of the issues the jury found that the adultery was proved, and assessed the damages to be paid by the co-respondent at 5,000%; and thereupon the judge ordinary pronounced a decree nisi for the dissolution of the nonlegal it degree has nor any ensumment of the marriage, and ordered him to pay all the costs of and incident to the petition. Upon application by the co-respondent for a prohibition to the judge ordinary:—Held, that the co-respondent was only aggrieved by the order for payment of the cost of the costs, which, if wrong, was ground for appeal, and therefore a prohibition ought not to issue.

Rodney. defendant appears at the trial, and makes no objection to the jurisdiction of the court whilst the case is proceeding, but suffers the court to act without protest or objection as if it had jurisdiction, down to actual payment of damages and costs, it is too late to apply for a prohibition. even though the party had no opportunity of applying earlier to the superior court, unless the want of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the proceedings. Yates v. Palmer, 6 D. & L. 283

Material delay will be a bar to the writ. Denton, In re, 1 H. & C. 654; 32 L. J., Ex. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 L. T. 689; 11 W. R. 268.

Affidavit, Form of.]—It is no objection to an affidavit for a rule nisi in prohibition that it is stated to be "In the matter of an action commenced" in the inferior court. Wallace v. Allan, 44 L. J., C. P. 351; L. R. 10 C. P. 607; 32 L. T. 830 : 23 W. R. 703.

Affidavits in support of an application for a prohibition must be entitled simply in the court, and not in any cause. Evans, Ex parte, 2 D. (N.S.) 410; 12 L. J., Q. B. 68; 7 Jur. 281.

But when it was objected to affidavits in answer to a rule nisi that they were entitled "In the Queen's Bench, between M. A. B., plain-"In the Queen's Benich, bowers as A. D., paratiff, and W. P., defendant, in problibition," and not in the Queen's Bench only, the court allowed them to be read. Breedon v. Capp, 9 Jur. 781. When a rule nist for a prohibition has been discharged, the court will not allow the motion to be renewed, upon affidavits stating matter not before presented to the court, but existing at the time of the original application. Bodenham v. Richetts, 6 N. & M. 537.

Affidavits used in support of an application on the Crown side for a prohibition must be intituled "In the High Court of Justice, Queen's Bench Division," as directed by r. 7 of the Crown Office Rules, 1886, and if they are not so intituled the court may refuse to hear the application. Pleas. 1—Defendant allowed to plead several pleas. Hall v. Maule, 5 N. & M. 455; 4 A. & E. 283; 5 L. J., K. B. 6.

Restitution.]—The court will not award restitution in prohibition when the subject-matter of a suit is no longer within the control of the inferior court. Denton, In re, 1 H. & C. 654; 32 L. J., Ex. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 L. T. 689; 11 W. B. 268.

Costs-Jurisdiction to Grant. ] - Where the Queen's Beuch Division grants a writ of prohibition on motion, it has jurisdiction to grant it with costs. Reg. v. County of London JJ. and London County Council, 63 L. J., Q. B. 801; [1894] I Q. B. 453; 9 R. 148; 70 L. T. 148; 42: W. R. 225: 58 J. P. 380-C. A.

Taxation of Costs-Certificate of Judge-Mayor's Court. |-- Where the judge of the Mayor's Court has granted a certificate for the taxation of the costs of an action in that court upon a higher scale than the scale which would otherwise be applicable, without stating any ground for granting such a certificate, it is a mere irregularity, and no prohibition will lie. Reg. v. London Corporation and Stock, 62 L. J., Q. B. 589; 5 R. 544; 69 L. T. 721.

Costs Generally.]—Where a rule is made absolute for issuing a prohibition, the costs of the rule could not be granted to the successful party under s. 1 of the repealed 1 Will. 4, c. 21; that statute only applying to cases where there have been pleadings in prohibition. Rev v. Kealing, 1 D. P. C. 440.

1 Will. 4, c. 21, did not enable the court, where a party has declared in prohibition and succeeded, to grant him his costs incurred in the ceclesiastical court. Tessimond v. Yurdley, 5 B. & Ad. 458.

I Will. 4, c. 21, s. 1, did not entitle an applicant for a prohibition to his costs where the rule is made absolute in the first instance without pleadings, as in such ease there is no judgment within the meaning of the section. Everton Overseers, Ex parte, 40 L. J., C. P. 201; L. R. 6 C. P. 245; 24 L. T. 361; 19 W. R. 927.

Where a rule for a prohibition was enlarged on condition that the party applying should declare, and he did declare, and the defendant, instead of pleading, obtained a judge's order staying the precedings upon payment of costs incurred since the rule to declare. Upon motion to set aside that order:—Held, that the plaintiff in prohibi-tion was not entitled to any further costs. Peo-tress v. Harvey, 1 B. & Ad. 154; 8 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 375.

The rule that where a new trial is granted without any mention of costs in the rule, the costs of the first trial shall not be allowed to the successful party, though he succeeds on the second, applies to issues in prohibition. Craren

v. Sanderson, 7 A. & E. 897, n.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES,

Discretion. - It is discretionary in the court to grant or withhold a quo warranto information, person was appointed under s. 21 of the repealed even where a good objection to the title is shewn. Public Health Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, to Heav. Parry, 6 A, & E. 810; 2 N. & P. 414. It is in the discretion of the court to grant a que warrante information er not. Res v. Tre-venen, 2 B. & Ald., 479; 21 R. R. 364. S. P., Reg. v. Cousins, 42 L. J., Q. B. 124; 28 L. T. 116.

To Try Collateral Matter. ] — The court will not rant it against an officer of a corporation estaare not recoverable as damages. White v. Steel, c. 78, s. 49, if it appears that the object in prosecting the information is to try the legality of (n.s.) 648; 7 L. T. 275; 11 W. R. 8.

Court, in making rule absolute for prohibition P. & D. 652.

Where a quo warranto was moved for on the ground of a disputed mode of election, which alone was in controversy at the time of the defendant's election, and which ground was afterwards answered on shewing cause, the court would not, in its discretion, make the rule absolute to try another incidental and secondary question, as to whether there was a sufficient interval of time allowed between the nomination and election of the defendant: no person's right having been set aside by means of such acceleration of the election, if it was accelerated. Res v. Osbourne, 4 East. 327.

Friendly Proceeding. ]-It is no objection that it is a friendly proceeding, in order that the party may disclaim. Rea v. Marshall, 2 Chit. 370.

No Civil Right in Controversy. ]-Where a corporation was dissolved, and no corporate body existed in fact at the time, the court refused to grant it against an individual for an importinent claim to be returning officer at an election of members to serve in parliment, by virtue of his having been elected an alderman while the corporation existed in fact; there being no civil right in controversy, but it being rather the ground of a proceeding in poenam by the attorney-general. Ree v. Saunders, 3 East, 119.

Doubtful Questions.]—It will be granted where the right depends upon a matter of doubtful law. in order to its being finally determined. Rew v.

Carter, Cowp. 58; Lofft, 516.

The court will not decide on the validity of the election of a corporate officer, if the question is new or doubtful, on a rule for a quo warranto. Res v. Godwin, 1 Dougl. 397.

Where Result of Election unaffected. I-A rule for a quo warranto, in respect of an annual office of guardians of the poor, the election to which was on the 14th of May, on the ground that the mode of election adopted was not a proper one, was not applied for till the 18th of January following, and it was then not shewn that any ratepayer had been prevented from voting, or that the result of the election was affected by the mode adopted. In the exercise of its discretion the court discharged the rule. I 42 L. J., Q. B. 124; 28 L. T. 116, Reg. v. Cousins.

The court will not allow a quo warranto to be filed to try the title to an office merely because there has been an irregularity in the election, in the absence of bad faith, and where the result of the election has not been affected. Reg. v. Ward, 42 L. J., Q. B. 126; L. R. 8 Q. B. 210; 28 L. T. 118; 21 W. R. 652.

At the election of a local board of health, the chairman being about to go out of office, another act as returning officer in case of the chairman being nominated for re-election. Nomination papers were sent in due course to the chairman, and amongst them one nominating him as a candidate. He nevertheless continued to receive the nomination papers, and when all had been delivered prepared the voting papers, inserting grant it against an officer of a corporation esta-blished by charter, pursuant to 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. required by s. 24. He did not further act as returning officer; and was returned as re-cleeted. a quo warranto relied upon an alleged usage and There was nothing to shew that the names were inserted in the voting papers otherwise than in their proper order, or that the result of the election had been in any way affected by the voting papers having been prepared by the chairman instead of by the person appointed to act as returning officer :- Held, that, assuming the chairman's conduct to have been an irregularity, the court in its discretion ought not to allow an information to be filed against his election, no mischief having been done. Ib.

Office Held during Pleasure.]—On an application for a quo warranto against the clerk to a school board, on the ground that he was improperly elected according to 33 & 34 Vict. c. 75, s. 35, the court refused a rule, considering that the majority of the board might, without assistance, remedy the impropriety itself, the office being held during the pleasure of the board.

Brudley v. Sylvester, 25 L. T. 459.

A clerk to justices of a borough, appointed under s. 102 of the repealed Municipal Corpora-tions Act, 1835, 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 76, s. 102, holds only during the pleasure of the justices, and therefore a quo warranto will not lie for his office. Reg. v. Fox., 8 El. & Bl. 939; 27 L. J., Q. B. 151; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 410; 6 W. R. 282.

When Granting Useless. |-The court refused to grant a rule for a quo warranto information applied for by the former occupant of an office, on the ground that his dismissal from office had been illegal, when they were satisfied that if reinstated he might legally, and would be dismissed again immediately. Richards, Exparte, 47 L. J., Q. B. 498; 3 Q. B. D. 368; 38 L. T. 684; 26 W. R. 695.

Office Determined.]-A party who had been appointed to, and was discharging the office of town clerk of a borough when the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, passed, was afterwards removed by the town council, and claimed compensation under s. 66. A motion was then made, at the instance of the corporation, for a one warranto against him for exercising the office, on the alleged grounds that he was not a burgess at the time, was not sworn in, and did not make the declaration required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 17 :-Held, that it ought not to be granted for trying the title to an office which was determined, Harris, In re, 6 A. & E. 475; 1 N. & P. 576; 6 L. J., K. B. 161.

A que warrante was issued for holding an annual office, after its close, to try a civil right. Res v. New Radner, 2 Ld. Ken. 498.

Election to Offices. ]-To entitle a party to a quo warranto, on the ground that the person filling the office has not been elected by a majority of the class entitled to vote, the relator must shew who the class is that is entitled to vote, and that another person had a majority of such votes. Rev. v. Mashiter, 1 N. & P. 314; 6 A. & E. 153; W. W. & D. 173; 6 L. J., K. B. 121.

The charter of the Saddlers' Company provides, in case of vacancy in the office of assistants, that it shall be lawful for the wardens and assistants at their pleasure to elect one other of the commonalty, and that the wardens and assistants in all things appertaining to the good rule and government of the company should be 1 Ld. Ken. I. subject and obedient to the lord mayor and court of aldermen of London. An applicant for presided at a vestry meeting convened for the practice of the company to elect by seniority. The court refused to make the rule absolute. as the evidence would not warrant a jury in finding the existence of a by-law to that effect. Reg.

v. Fisher, 5 B. & S. 575, n.
Held, also, that the mayor and court of aldermen could not control the court in the exercise of its jurisdiction over the corporate rights of the company. Ib.

Resignation of Office.]—A quo warranto was granted against a person for exercising an office in a corporation after he had resigned by writing, but without deed. Rer v. Paune, 2 Chit, 367.

The court will make the rule absolute, although the party has, since the rule obtained, resigned his office, and his resignation has been accepted. Rex v. Warlow, 2 M. & S. 75: 14 R. R. 592.

When a person wrongfully elected to a corporate office and admitted into it resigns, and his resignation is accepted, another candidate who claims to have been duly elected and to be admitted into the office is entitled to a quo warranto. Rep. v. Blizard, 7 B. & S. 922; 36 L. J., Q. B. 18; L. B., 2 Q. B. 55; 15 L. T. 242; 15 W. R. 105.

User of Franchise. |-There must be a user as well as a claim of a franchise, in order to found an application for a quo warranto : stating that the defendant, who was elected to an office, had tendered himself to be sworn in is not sufficient. Re.v v. Whitwell 5 Term Rep. 85; 2 R. R. 545,

But a swearing in though defective in law, yet being such whereby the party claimed at the time to be a free burgess of a corporation, is a sufficient user of the office to warrant a quo warranto against him, and not like a mere claim of the office. Rer v. Tate, 4 East, 337.

The affidavit of a relator, that he "has been informed and believes" that the defendant exercises the office which he is charged with nsurping, is sufficient. Rev v. Slythe, 9 D. & R. 226; 6 B. & C. 240; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 41; 30 R. R. 312.

A mere statement in an attidavit for a quo warranto against a town councillor, that he has accepted the office, is insufficient, under 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 76. The acts constituting acceptance should be also stated. Reg. v. Slutter, 3 P. & D. 263: 11 A. & E. 505; 4 Jur. 316.

A statement that he has acted in the office, is sufficient. Reg. v. Quayle, 11 A. & E. 508; 4 P. & D. 442; 10 L. J., Q. B. 99; 5 Jur. 368.

The court will not institute a scrutiny and determine upon affidavits which of two candidates has been elected town councillor. Ib.

Where sufficient appears by the affidavits to draw the merits of an election to a corporate office into question, the court will grant a quo warranto, though the fact of the defendant's nsurpation no otherwise appeared than by the deponents' swearing to their information and belief that the defendant was admitted a freeman, and sworn and curolled accordingly, the defendant not denying the fact when called upon by a rule to shew cause. Rev v. Harwood, 2 East, 177.

A quo warranto for usurping the office of free burgess, does not lie against the mere claim of one who, though elected, never was admitted. Rew v. Ponsonby, 1 Ves. jun. 1; 2 Bro. P. C. 311;

Where it appeared that the defendant had purpose of electing a member of a burial board, the exercise of a franchise, Rew v. Marrden, 1 under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 12; that he and W. Bl. 579; 3 Burr. 1812.

It was granted for exercising the office of a franchise. to the clerk of the burial board informing him of his election; and that at the next vestry meeting, when he again presided, the minutes of the previous meeting, one of which was a memorandum of his election, were unanimously confirmed. The defendant stated that he had declined to attend any of the meetings of the board, and he had not at any time acted or claimed the right to act as a member of the board :-Held, that this was not a sufficient user of the office to found an application for a quo warranto. Reg. v. Jones, 28 L. T. 270.

Acceptance of Incompatible Office-Non-corporate Office-Necessity for User.]-In order to make the remedy by quo warranto applicable in the case of a non-corporate office there must be something more than mere acceptance of the office. Defendant, while holding the office of churchwarden, was proposed for the office of vestry clerk and declared elected. He published a letter thanking the electors, but never acted as On an application for a quo warranto, on the ground that the office of vestry clerk was incompatible with that of church-warden:—Held, that what defendant had done was not such an exercise of the office of vestry clerk as to reuder the remedy by quo warranto applicable. Reg. v. Tidy, 61 L. J., Q. B. 791; [1892] 2 G. B. 179; 67 L. T. 319; 41 W. R. 128; 56 J. P. 650.

2. AGAINST WHOM AND FOR WHAT OFFICES.

a. Generally.

A quo warranto will lie for usurping any office, whether created by charter of the Crown alone, or by the Crown with the consent of parliament, provided the office is of a public nature, and a substantive office, and not merely the function or employment of a deputy or a servant, held at the will or pleasure of others. Darley v. Reg. 12 Cl. & F. 520.

The office of treasurer of the public money of the county of the city of Dublin, is an office for which an information in the nature of a quo warranto will lie. Ib.

A que warrante will not lie against a county treasurer to shew by what authority he holds the treasurer to show by what authority he had a confider if he has been de facto elected by the justices in quarter sessions. Rew v. Hereford JJ., I Chit. 700; 22 R. R. 830.

Treasurer to District Council ]—The office of treasurer to a district council is not one with respect to which the remedy of quo warranto will apply. Reg. v. Wells, 43 W. R. 576.

A quo warranto will not lie for encouraging procedure by quo warranto is applicable to

W. R. 8

Office of Vestry Clerk. ]-A writ of quo warranto will lie to inquire into the election of a clerk to a vestry. Heg. v. Burrows, 61 L. J., Q. B. 88: [1892] 1 Q. B. 399; 66 L. T. 25; 40 W. R. 207.

Office in Institution Privately Founded, but Incorporated by Statute. ]—A private individual founded an hospital for the relief of the poor (providing the building but no endowment), which was afterwards incorporated by an act of parliament, which enacted that it was to be under the management of governors, with provision for the appointment of medical and surgical officers. The hospital was subsequently endowed by another act with a sum of 1007, per annum, payable out of the public funds, such sum being stated to be for the purpose of providing "for the payment of surgeous and physicians, or the other necessaries of the hosnital":—Held. that the office of surgeon or physician to such an institution was not an office, the right to hold which could be inquired into by an information in the nature of a quo warranto. Reg. v. Anchinleck, 28 L. R., Ir. 404.

Office under Local Act.]-15 Car. 2, e. 17, creating the corporation of the Bedford Level, directs that they shall appoint a registrar and other officers at their pleasure, the duty of which registrar is to register titles to land within the Level; and he takes an oath of office :-Held, that a quo warranto does not lie against such an officer; he being a mere servant of the corporation, and his office not affecting any franchise or other authority holden under the Crown. v. Bedford Level Corporation, 6 East, 356: 2 Smith, 535.

A local act created a corporation, consisting of sworn commissioners, with summary power of seizure of goods, and imprisonment of the person, and of preventing and removing obstructions and misances in the streets; powers for paving, cleaning, and lighting; powers of appointing and paying officers, of determining the number of watchmen, of regulating them, and dismissing, paying, or pensioning them; of possessing property in materials required under the act, of instituting prosecutions, of imposing rates, of appointing and removing treasurers, to whom penalties, imposed by the act, were to be paid for the purposes of the act; and of hearing appeals by parties complaining of things done under the act :-Held, that a quo warrante would lie against persons claiming to be commissioners. Res v. Beedle, 3 A. & E. 467.

But it does not lie for the office of trustees under a public local act, elected as vacancies occur, by occupiers in the parish, and taking an oath of office, with power to appoint salaried treasurers, collectors, &c., of moneys raised under the act, accountable to themselves; to pass bylaws with penalties; to impose rates in case of certain other functionaries not so doing; to supply omissions in the rates, and to relieve parties aggrieved or incompetent to pay; to appoint salaried watchmen; to purchase, hold and manage property for the purposes of the act; to question the validity of the election of a vestry- misances and apprehend for certain specified man elected under the provisions of the Metro- nuisances; to maintain the highways, and prepolis Local Management Act, 1855. Heg. v. vent encroachments thereon; to superintend the Soutter, [1891] 1 Q. B. 57; 63 L. T. 279; 39 lighting, paving, watching and cleansing of the streets; to remove dangerous buildings, on complaint upon oath (which they were to administer), and to sue in the name of their clerk, or one of themselves. Rex v. Henley, 3 A. & E. 463. n.

b. Parochial Offices.

A quo warranto does not lie for exercising the office of guardian of the poor for a union, under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, 4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 76. Aston Union, In ve. 6 A. & E. 784; W. W. & D. 329; 6 L. J., M. C. 135. S. C., uom. Bez v. Carpenter, 1 N. & P. 773. But see contra, Reg. v. Hampton, 6 B. & S. 923; 12 Jur. (N.s.) 583; 13 L. T. 431; 15 W. R. 43.

The office of clerk to the board of guardians of a union appointed under the Poor Law Amendment Acr, 1884, s. 46, is an office created by statute, and of a public nature, in respect of which a quo warranto will lie. Reg. v. St. Martin-in-the-Fields Guardians, 17 Q. B. 149; 20 L. J., Q. B. 423: 15 Jur. 800. S. P., IEU v. Reg., 8 Moore, P. C. 139,

It does not lie against overseers. Rew v. Dauberry, I Bott's P. L. 324.

It lies for the office of constable. Reg. v. Booth, 12 Q. B. 884; 18 L. J., M. C. 25; 13 Jur. 6.

But it does not for the office of churchwarden. Rew v. Shepherd, 4 Term Rep. 381; 2 R. R. 416; S. P., Barlow, In re, 30 L. J., Q. B. 271; 5 L. T.

The court will not grant a quo warranto to inquire into the election of an assistant overseer, Reg. v. Simpson, 19 W. R. 73.

Election of Vestryman - Metropolis. ] procedure by quo warranto is applicable to question the validity of the election of a vestryman elected under the provisions of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855. Reg. v. Soutter, 60 L. J., Q. B. 71; [1891] 1 Q. B. 57; 63 L. T. 279; 39 W. R. 8; 55 J. P. 229.

c. Corporate Offices

Only against Individuals. ]-No quo warranto can be granted against a corporation acting as such, but only against individual members. v. Carmarthen Corporation, 1 W. Bl. 187; 2 Burr, 869.

The court will not grant a quo warranto against an individual to try the legality of a charter of municipal incorporation. Reg. v. Jones, 8 L. T. 502.

Municipal Election-Statute providing Proedure. ]—Sect. 87 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, provides that an election shall not be questioned on any of certain specified grounds except by an election petition:—Held, that when an election is questioned on any of these grounds. quo warranto will not lie. Reg. v: Morton, 61 L. J., Q. B. 39; [1892] 1 Q. B. 39; 65 L. T. 611: 40 W. R. 109; 56 J. P. 105.

Quo Warranto generally.]—A quo warranto does not lie against a freeman of a borough who does not appear to possess any corporate property, manage property for the purposes of the act; to and who has been struck off the roll of electors contract for the supply of the poor, remove for members of parliament by the revising free burgess of a borough :-Held, that his title could not be impeached because he was sworn in before officers who were so de facto but not de jure. Rex v. Slythe, 6 B. & C. 240: 9 D. & R. 226; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 41; 30 R. R. 312.

Right of Claimant to be put on Roll though no Burgess List. ]-On the revision of the burgess lists for a borough, the revision court erroneously treated the largess list for one of the parishes in it as void (though in fact good) and made out a new burgess list for that parish of the claimants who proved their claims. The defendant was one of these claimants, and was fully qualified to be a burgess. The town-clerk, adopting this new list as the burgess list for the parish, inserted the defendant's name in the burgess roll :- Held, that the defendant's name was improperly inserted in the burgess roll, and that he might be removed by a quo warranto, as the mayor and assessors had no power to make out such a list. Scal v. Reg., 8 El. & Bl. 22; 27 L. J., Q. B. 139; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1244—Ex. Ch.

It is an inflexible rule of law, that where a person has been de facto elected to a corporate office, and has accepted and acted in the office, the validity of the election and the title to the office can only be tried by proceeding on a quo warranto information. Reg. v. Chester Corporation, 5 El. & Bl. 531; 25 L. J., Q. B. 61; 2 Jur.

(N.S.) 114: 4 W. R. 14.

The court will not grant a quo warranto against a burgess for being illegally upon the burgess roll, unless it is shewn that he has de facto exercised the office. Reg. v. Armstrong, 25

L. J., Q. B. 238; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 211.

A person's name was on the burgess list unobjected to at the revision in October, 1867, and he was elected town councillor on the 1st November following. His father received parochial relief in December, 1866 :- Held, that the court would inquire by quo warranto into his title to be on the burges list. Reg. v. Ireland, 9 B. & S. 19: 37 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 3 Q. B. 130; 17 L. T. 466; 16 W. R. 358.

d. Incompatible Offices.

A que warrante lies against a person who had held the incompatible office of capital burgess and town-clerk, before and since 32 Geo. 3, c. 58. without interruption. Rev v. Bond, 6 D. & R. 333.

So, where there is a continuing incompatibility, though the party held the offices of capital burgess and town-clerk for more than six years.

Reg v. Lawrence, 2 Chit, 371.

On a motion for a quo warranto against a corporator, on the ground of the acceptance of an incompatible office, the relator must shew a legal appointment to the second office. Rew v. Day, 4 Man, & Ry. 54I; 9 B, & C. 702; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 308.

3. WHETHER REMEDY BY QUO WARRANTO OR MANDAMUS.

The court will not grant a rule in the alternative for a quo warranto or a mandamus. Reg. v. Leeds Corporation, 11 A. & E. 512.

Where a person had an incheate right to be a Term Rep. 259; 1 R. R. 480.

If a party has been ousted from an office by the election of another person to that office (the election not being merely colourable), his remedy is not by mandamus but by a quo warranto, Rew v. Oxford Corporation, 1 N. & P. 474; 6 A. & E. 349; 6 L. J., K. B. 103.

A party having a majority of votes for the office of councillor of a borough, and having been declared elected according to the form prescribed by 5 & 6 Will, 4, c, 76, s, 35, and having also been admitted, the office is full in fact, and the remedy to try whether it is full of right is by quo warranto. Reg. v. Derby Conneillors, 2 N. & P. 589: 7 A. & E. 419; W. W. & D. 671.

Where a councillor's name has been expunged from the burgess roll, a quo warranto is the proper mode to try his title to the office, and not a mandamns to the mayor to hold a fresh election. Heg. v. Ricketts, 3 N. & P. 151; 7 1, J., Q. B. 71.

On shewing cause against a mandamus commanding commissioners to administer the oath of office as commissioners to a person who, it was alleged had been elected by a majority votes under a statute, in opposition to another person whom the commissioners had sworn in as having a majority of legal votes:—Held, that a mandamus would lie, on the ground that it was an office for which a quo warranto would not lie, and therefore there was no other remedy. Reg. v. Keyningham Level Commissioners, 11 Jar. 58, 11.

Ne also Mandamus, ante, col. 185.

4. ON WHOSE APPLICATION.

Generally.]—A quo warranto against persons for claiming to act as a corporation must be filed by and in the name of the attorney-general. Rev. v. Oyden, 10 B. & C. 230,

It cannot be filed at the instance of an individual against persons for usurping a franchise of a private nature, not connected with public government. Ib.

The court will judge from all the eirenmstances who are the real prosecutors. Rew v. Cudlipp, 6

Term Rep. 503.

And will not permit a corporator to file an information against another, for a defect of title which equally applies to his own, or to the title of those under whom he claims. Ib.

For the circumstance of the relator's standing in the same situation with the defendant, or its appearing that the corporation must necessarily be dissolved by impeaching the defendant's title, and those who claim under him will govern the discretion of the court in refusing such an application. Res v. Bond, 2 Term Rep. 767; see Res v. Clarke, 5 R. R. 508, 509,

Even though the relator has enjoyed his office many years minterruptedly. Rea v. Cowell, 6

D. & R. 336,

A burgess is a good relator, although the effect of the information would be to dissolve the corporation. Reg. v. Parry, 2 N. & P. 414; 6 A. & E. 810.

On motion for a quo warranto against a town councillor, founded on a defect in the burgess roll, it is not a valid objection to the relator that he is not a burgess; his interest is sufficient, if A mandanus to admit a recorder refused, he is subject to the government of the councillors because there was a recorder de facto, and the as an inhabitant. If the motion is made on the party had a remedy by quo warranto, though affidavit of three persons, two of whom are not anobjectionable as a relator though his affidavit cognisant of the contents of his own charter, and alone does not shew sufficient ground for the information. Ib.

An inhabitant of a borough may be a relator on an application against a town councillor, though he is not a burgess. Reg. v. Quayle, 11 A. & E.

508; 5 Jur. 386.

The court will grant leave to a private relator to exhibit an information against individual corporators, although the affidavits on which the rule is moved disclose matter tending to dissolve the corporation. Rev. v. White, 1 N. & P. 84; 5 A. & E. 613; 2 H. & W. 403; 6 L. J., K. B. 23.

A town conneillor is disqualified to be a relator to question the validity of the election of another town conneillor, he having been cognisant of the objection before the election, being present at the election, and having afterwards administered to him, without protest, the declaration required by 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 76, s. 50. Reg. v. Greene, 2 G. & D. 24; 2 Q. B. 460; 6 Jur. 777.

Where, upon a rule for a quo warranto against A., for exercising the office of a town commissioner, to which he had been elected by ratepayers, the relator was (as it was alleged) not entitled to vote ; yet, as he was an owner of rated property in the town :-Held, that he had sufficient interest to be a good relator. Reg. v. Briggs.

11 L. T. 372.

Where a relator has twice obtained rules nisi for informations calling upon a party to shew why he exercised the office of mayor of a borough, which rules had been discharged on cause shewn; the court will not allow the same relator, on an application against the succeeding mayor, to raise the same questions as to the title of the former mayor to exercise the office. Rev v. Lunghern, 2 N. & M. 618. See Rex v. Orde, 8 A. & E. 420, u.

Motive of Relator. |-- Under circumstances tending to throw suspicion on the motives of the relator, the court will not grant the application where the consequence will be to dissolve a corporation. Rea v. Trevenen, 2 B. & Ald. 479; 21

The court made a rule absolute, though it was shewn that the relator and other persons with whom he acted were influenced by a strong party pirit, and had, during three or four years, withdrawn themselves from corporation business, to the inconvenience of the borough, Rev v. Benney, 1 B. & Ad. 684; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 104. It is no objection that the person applying is in low and indigent circumstances, and that there is strong ground of suspicion that he is applying not on his own account, or at his own expense, but in collusion with a stranger. The court, however, in a case of this kind, will require security for costs. Rew v. Wakelin, 1 B. & Ad. 50 : 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 366.

The court discharged the rule where the relator was the legal adviser of the defendant, and advised him that he had been duly elected. Rew

v. Payne, 2 Chit. 369.

The court refused to grant a quo warranto, because the party applying for it had agreed not to enforce a by-law, upon which he now grounded his attempt to impeach the defendant's title. Reg v. Mortlock, 3 Term Rep. 300, Acquiescence and Concurrence. ]-It is a valid objection to a relator that he was present and concurred at the time of the objectionable elec- and ante, CORPORATION.

qualified to be relators, the information may, tion, even although he was then ignorant of the nevertheless, be granted if the third party is objection; for a corporator must be taken to be of the law arising therefrom. Rese v. Trerenen, 2 B. & Ald. 330; 20 R. R. 461. S.P., Reg. v. Greene, 2 G. & D. 24; 2 Q. B. 460; 7 Jur. 777.

It is a valid objection to a relator applying for a quo warranto information for usurping the office of burgess that he was formerly present at and concurred in the election of another burgess, when the objection he sought by the application to avail himself of was taken and overruled, and he voted for the party then elected. Rew v. Parhyn, 1 B. & Ad. 690: 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 104.

A relator, who has acquiesced in, and himself adopted, the mode of voting he objects to, is disqualified from applying for a rule. Reg. v. Loft-house, 7 B. & S. 447; 35 L. J., Q. B. 145; L. R. 1 Q. B. 433; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 14 L. T. 359; 14

W. R. 649.

It is no objection to relators applying against a party for exercising the office of an alderman (his election to which they had opposed), that they afterwards made no opposition to his election to the principal office of magistracy (to which the other was a necessary qualification); or that they afterwards attended at and concurred in corporate meetings whereat he presided, or where he attended in his official character, such application being made within the time limited by law, viz., in four years after his election as an alderman. Rec v. Clarke, I East, 38; 5 R. R. 505.

An application made on the affidavits of several persons, of whom all but one have consented to the election proposed to be impeached, may be granted on the affidavit of that one, if he avows himself to be the relator. Rea v.

Symmous, 4 Term Rep. 223.

A corporator who has voted at an election of corporate officers is not a competent relator to impeach that election on the ground of an objection to a presiding officer, at least, without shewing that he was ignorant of the objection when he voted at the election. Rew v. Slythe, 9 D. & R. 181; 6 B. & C. 240; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 41: 30 R. R. 312.

On a motion for a quo warranto against a capital bargess, on the ground of irregularity in his election, it is no answer that the relator frequently acted with the party against whom he applies in corporation basiness, during two years following such party's election, the relator not being shewn to have concurred in the election, nor is the relator disqualified by the mere circumstance of lawing formerly taken part in other elections, when the same irregularity existed as that complained of, but was not noticed. Rew v. Benney, 1 B. & Ad. 684; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 104,

It is no objection to the persons applying for a quo warranto which would operate in its effect to dissolve the corporation, that they attended the meeting at which the mayor was elected, whose election they impeach on the ground that the corporation was then dissolved by the loss of an integral part, and that they voted for another candidate, and afterwards attended other corporate meetings at which such mayor pre-sided. Rev v. Morris, 3 East, 213.

5. WITHIN WHAT TIME.

a. Municipal Offices.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 225,

b. In other Cases.

32 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. I. means six years before making the rule absolute for the information, and not six years before obtaining the rule nisi; and therefore the court refused to make the rule absolute where the six years had then elapsed, though they had not clapsed before the rule nisi. Rer v. Stokes, 2 M. & S. 71.

Where a corporator de facto had exercised his office more than six years, the court, in its discretion without entering upon the question of title, refused to grant a quo warranto against him. Hex v. Braoks, 2 Man. & Ry. 389; 8 B. & C. 321; 6 L. J. (0.s.) K. B. 322.

Where a rule nisi for a quo warranto was granted at the end of Easter Term, calling on the defendant to shew cause on the first day of the ensuing term, and it appeared that two days before Trinity Term commenced he had completed six years' enjoyment of the franchise :-Hekl, that the application was barred. Reg. v. Harris, 3 P. & D. 266; 11 A. & E. 518; 8 D. P. C. 499; 9 L. J., Q. B. 114; 4 Jur. 459. Before the 32 Geo. 3, c. 58, the court refused an information against a person who had been in the peaceable possession of his franchise six years. Res. v. Dickin, 4 Term Rep. 282.

So, the court refused to grant an information to impeach a derivative title where the person claiming the original title had been in the undisturbed possession of his office six years. Rev v. Pencock, 4 Term Rep. 684.

6. PRACTICE.

a. Generally

No Control Exercised after Information. Where a proper case has been laid before the court to induce them to grant the information, they have never exercised any control over it afterwards as to the manner in which it is to be conducted. Her v. Brown, 4 Term Rep. 276.

Argument.]-If any points, besides the principal one are stated for argument on a quo warranto, they should be stated distinctly, otherwise the court will not take notice of them. Reg. v. Alderson, 1 G. & D. 429; 1 Q. B. 878; 10 L. J., Q. B. 277; 6 Jur. 321.

Venue.]—Venue changed on the ground that the trial of the issue can be more conveniently had in the county of the substituted venue. Clerk v. Reg., 9 H. L. Cas. 184; 31 L. J., Q. B. 175; 5 L. T. 66.

Trial, ]-On the trial of quo warranto informations, if the affirmative is on the defendant his counsel may begin; but it is otherwise if it is on the relator. Rer v. Tates. I Car. & P. 323.

New Trial, -A new trial may be granted on an information in nature of a quo warranto.

Rew v. Francis, 2 Term Rep. 484.

Bringing Error on.]—Sect. 146 et seq. of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, which prescribed a new mode of proceeding to error in any cause, did not extend to informations in the nature of a quo warranto, in respect of which the flat of the attorney-general had to be obtained, and a writ of error sued out according to the former practice. Reg. v. Seale, 5 El. & Bl. 1; 24 L. J., Q. B. 221; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 593; 3 W. R. 414.

If the attorney-general has granted his fiat for a writ of error to issue, the court will not interfere, the flat being conclusive. Rey. v. Clarke, 7 W. R. 601.

b. Affidavits.

Upon an application for a quo warranto information, suggesting that the defendants were elected contrary to the provisions of a particular charter, the affidavit must state that the charter was accepted, or that the usage had been in conformity to the charter ; and the court, after determining that the affidavit was ill for omitting so to state, refused leave to amend it. Rev v. Barrey, 4 M. & S. 253; 16 R. R. 453.

The affidavit in support of the motion must state at whose instance the application is made. It is not enough for a party to depose that, if the court grants the information, it is his intention contro grants in mornando, i.e. is nearthern to become really and bona fide the relator. Hey. v. Hedges, 11 A. & E. 163; 9 D. P. C. 493; 1 W. P. C. 63; 10 L. J., Q. B. 6; 5 Jur. 290.
Affidavits in support of a que warrante should state any usage there may be which differs from what might be held to be the construction of what might be about a local and the charter of the incorporation of the borough.

Rev. v. Hendley, 7 B. & C. 496; 1 Man. & Ry.

345; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 53.

The relator is bound by the day on which, in his affidavit (though founded on information and belief), the election is alleged to have taken place; and if that day is mistaken, the defendant is not bound to shew a regular election on another day. **Rulfe*, 1 N. & M. 773.

The rule was dismissed with costs, where the affidavits in support suppressed several material facts. Rev v. Hughes, 7 B. & C. 719; 1 Man. & Ry. 625; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 190; 31 R. R. 288.

The court will receive the affidavit of a person who is himself estopped from being a relator, if the motion is made by a relator properly qualified, although the complete ground of the applinea, anthong the complete ground of the appli-cation appears only from the affidavit of the party estopped. Rox v. Blanne, 4.A. & E. 664. An affidavit should shew that the relator is a properly qualified person. Reg. v. Thirlusina, 38, L. J., Q. B. 17; 10 Jun. (N.S.) 206; 9 L. T. 781; 12 W. R. 384.

A rule had been granted upon an affidavit, which described the relator merely as "of B., tailor" :- Held, that the description was not sufficient, and the rule was discharged. Ib.

c. Statement of Objections to Title.

Where there are several informations pending against the aldermen of a borough founded on the same objection of title, the court has not power to make a rule binding either party to submit to the result of the first information tried.

Rev v. Cozens. 2 N. & P. 164; 7 A. & E. 285; 6. D. P. C. 3.

It is not sufficient to state in the rule that the defendant was not entitled to be appointed, and that the relator was. Reg. v. Edye, 12 Q. B. 936; that the relator was. Reg. v. Edge, 12 Q. 15. 1930; 18 L. J., Q. B. 6; 13 Jur. 8.

Rule held applicable to pleadings only, and not to prevent relator at trial of information going into objections not specified in the rule. Reg. v. Tugwell, 9 B. & S. 367; 38 L. J., Q. B. 12: L. R. 3 Q. B. 704.

A rule nisi was obtained on the ground of an undue removal of one person from, and of an undue election of the defendant to the office of town clerk of a borough. The rule did not mention, and the affidavit did not distinctly disclose, the objection that the removal and clercion had taken place at a meeting without due notice that such was the business of the meeting—Held, that the objection of the want of such notice could not be taken in support of the rule. Reg. v. Thumas, 3 N. & P. 288; 8 A. & E. 183; 7 L. J., Q. B. 141.

d. Quashing Information.

A quo warranto cannot be quashed on motion, though both parties consent. Rex v. Edgan, 4 Burr. 2297.

e. Costs of Rule.

A prosecutor shall pay costs where he makes a groundless and frivolous application for a quo warranto, knowing it to be so. Rex v. Lewis, 2 Burr. 780; 2 Ld, Km. 497.

But if circumstances are very strong in favour of a corporate franchise, and against the application, the rule nist will be discharged with costs, Mar v. Wardroper, 4 Burr. 1963: 1 East, 41, n.

Where a rule nisi is discharged, and it appears that the party making the affidavit as relator is indigent, and unable to pay cests and was procured to make the application by another, who is the real presentor, the court will order the costs to be paid by the party sa promoting the application. Boy. v. Greene, 4 Q. B. 646; 11 L. J., Q. B. 281; 6 Jur. 896.

It makes no difference that such party was employed on the motion as an attorney. *Th.*But if the facts rendering him liable appear only by the affidavits in opposition to the rale, the payment of costs by him must be the subject of a distinct motion. It.

Where the court has discharged the onle, it will, in its dispertion, on a subsequent application, order payment of costs by the party who was virtually relator. Such application having been made upon reading new affiliavits, which did not state any fresh circumstances beyond those in the affidavits filed in opposition to the original rule, the card grammed it, but without costs. Reg. v. Green, 12 L. J., Q. B. 239; 7 Jm. costs. Reg. v. Green, 12 L. J., Q. B. 239; 7 Jm.

It is not necessary to demand the costs of such third party, before obtaining the second rule, where he is the attorney of the nominal relation, and has joined in the affidavits for the quo warranto, Ib,

f. Change of Relator or Solicitor.

After the rule has been made absolute, the court will change the relator, on motion on his behalf, if, by reason of his necessary absonce from England in the conduct of his own private affairs, he is mable to enter into the recognizance required by  $4 \times 5$  WIL & M. c. 18, s. 2, Rey. v. If the relator and the defeudant employ the same attorney, the court will make a rule absolute to change the attorney for the prosecution, although there is no collosion between the parties, and the attorney intended to proceed bona fide to obtain the judgment of the court. Hey. v. Anderson, S. P. & D. 2; 11 A. & E. 3.

g. Consolidation of Informations.

The court will not consolidate several informations against several persons for distinct offices, for there must be an information against each to cnable each to disclaim. Hex v. Warlow, 2 M. & S. 75: 14 R. R. 592.

But four informations were consolidated into one, where the several rights were properly determinable in one information. Rev v. Collingwood, 1 Burr. 573.

Where there were several quo warranto informations pending against the aldermen of a borough, founded on the same objection of title, the court held that it had not the power to make a rule binding either party to sabnit to the result of the first information tried. **Rees v. Chzens, 7 A. & E. 285; 2 N. & P. 164; 6 D. P. C. 3.

h. Costs on Disclaimer or Resignation.

Under particular circumstances, the court allowed a disclaimer to be entered without costs. Rev v. Holt, 2 Chit, 366.

The court will make a rule for a quo warranto information absolute, although the defendant has resigned the office and his resignation has been resigned the office and his resignation has been object of the relator is, not only to cause the object of the relator is, not only to cause the defendant to vacate the office, but to substitute another candidate at once in the office, as in such a case the relator is entitled to have judgment of oustor or a dischainer outered on the record. In making the rule absolute, the court will excreise a discretion as to costs. Reg. v. Blizard, 7 B. & S. 922; L. R. 2 Q. B. 55: 15 I. T. 242.

Where a person has been elected to the office of conneillor of a borough for which he was a candidate, and has acted in such office, and afterwards, upon a rule nisi for a quo warranto being obtained against him, declined to shew cause, and submitted to resign, and, if necessary, formally to disclaim, the court will make the rule absolute, without imposing any terms upon the relator as to the costs of any subsequent, proceedings. Reg. v. Enrashen, 22 L. J. O. R. 174.

proceedings. Rey. v. Eurushawe, 22 L. J., Q. B. 174. An unqualified person was elected a town conneillor of a borough, without having taken any part in the election; but on being informed by the town clerk, that if he did not accept the office he would be hable to a fine, he signed the usual declaration. Upon application for a quo warranto, he sent in a written resignation to the town clerk, which was accepted:—Held, that the relator was not entitled to the costs of the application. Rey. v. May, 2 L. M. & P. 144; 20 L. J., Q. B. 208: 15 Jur. 122.

Though a person whose election to the office of town conneillor is void by reason of a mistake of the presiding officer is willing to disclaim, and consents to a rule for a quo warento feig made absolute, the court will not order that the relationshould bear the expense of the information should bear the expense of the information disclaimer. Heyv. Hartley, 3 El & Bl. 144; Jur. 623; 2 W. R. 159. Coultra, Rey. v. Marcley, 4 Q. B. 146; 3 G. & D. 400; 12 L. J., Q. B. 123; 7 Jur. 85, 7 Jur. 85.

Where a rule for a quo warranto for the usurpation of an office has been obtained and served upon the defendant, who thereupon resigns and does not show cause against the rule, it will be made absolute, but without costs, Reg. v. Newcombe, 15 W. R. 108.

A quo warranto was moved for against an officer elected by ballot, on the ground that a large proportion of the persons who voted were not qualified; but it was not skewn for whom the votes of those persons were given:—Held, that on his application the officer could not be required to prove his election valid, but it lay on the opposing parties to show (if that was practicable) that his majority was obtained by bad votes. How, Afferson, 5 B. & Ad. 855.

7. WHAT TITLE PUT IN ISSUE.

Quere, whether a derivative title can be impeached when the person from whom it was derived died in the undisturbed possession of it. Rev. v. Stacey. 1 Term Rep. 1.

Such title cannot be impeached by those who have acquiesced and acted under it. Ih.

After the death of a mayor, his capability to election cannot be disputed. Rew v. Spearing, 1 Term Rep. 4. u.

The court admitted a party to defend the defendant's title. Rex v. Marshall, 2 Chit, 370.

A title to one office which is a qualification to hold another office, held not to be within the repealed 32 Geo. 3. e. 58, s. 3; and, therefore, although the party hale exercised the tirts for six years, the court made the rule absolute for an information for exercising the second office upon a defect of title to the first. Here v. Ntokes, 2 M, & S, 71.

8. JUDGMENT AND COSTS.

Judgment.]—If a defendant fails in the titles he sets up, judgment must be for the Crown. Rex.v. Yarmouth Corporation, 4 Burn. 2143.

There may be a judgment of onster, though the usurpation is not continued to the trial, Rev v. Williams, 1 W. Bl. 98.

A judgment of onster against a mayor by default was set aside. Rer v. Winchelsen Corporation, 4 Burr. 2277.

Upon a quo warranto against one for claiming the office of alderman, if he disclaims, and judgment of ouster is given against him, he is concluded from shewing to a second information, for excreising the same office, that he was duly elected before such first information and judgment of ouster, and that he was afterwants swom in by virtue of a peremptory mandamus from the court. Rev. Clarke, 2 East, 75; 6 B. R. 874.

In a upo warranto information against a mayor, he dained under an election and swearing purposant to 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, and shewed an election accordingly, and that he was sworn agreeably to that statute: then specified a swearing according to the charter, but not to the direction of the 11 Geo. 1, c. 4; the replication took issue on this swearing, which, with eleven others, were found for the king without evidence (though admitted to have been rightly founded); the court considering the defendant's whole title as one entire title was unanimous in setting aside the verdict, upon his payment of cests, and giving him liberty to amend his plea. Roe v. Philips, 1 Burr. 292; 1 Ld. Ken. 331.

If a judgment is entered without costs, where 26 L. T. 790. costs ought to have been given it can only be amended in the same term. Rev. Amery, 1 Anst. 178; 1 R. 18, 383.

So, in the House of Lords, no amendment can be in such a case after the session. Ib.

Costs.]—Costs are not given, unless in usurpation of offices or freedoms in corporations. Rev. Williams, 1 W. Bl. 93.

A defendant in a quo warranto information against him, to shew by what authority he held the office of registrar and clerk of the court of requests of the city of Bristol, was not entitled to costs. Resv., Hall. 2 D. & R. 341: 1 B. & C. 327: 1 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 88.

On a judgment for the relator, he is cutitled to costs. Rev v. Amery, 1 Aust. 178; I R. R.

Where any one of several issues is found for the presecutor, on which judgment of onster is given, he is entitled to costs on all the issues. Res. v. Downes, 1 Term Rep. 453.

The prosecutor of a quo warranto information against a constable of Birmingham is not entitled to costs. Rev v. Wallis, 5 Term Rep. 375.

The returning officer in an incorporated borough sending members to parliament, is not liable to costs within the operation of 9 Anne, c. 10, in the event of judgment against him on a quo warranto information. Rev. v. M·Kay, 8 D. & R. 893; 5 B. & C. 640.

A private relator who has obtained judgment in a quo warranto is cutified as of course to the costs of the prosecution, as well as the costs of an interlocutory motion in which he failed.

1 Rey. v. Dudley, 4 Jun. 915.
Previously to the repended Municipal Corporations Act, 1885, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the mayor for the time being of a brough corporate, named in schedule (A), also held and exercised the office of corner for the borough. Subsequently to that act, the borough petitioned for and obtained a separate court of quarter sessions, and appointed a coroner under s. 62 — Held, that it was not an office within the meaning of 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 5, so as to entitle the relator to costs, on judgment for the Crown. Reg. v. Grimshare, 5.
D. & L. 249; 2 B. C. Rep. 146; 17 L. J., Q. B. 19; 12 Jun. 134.

An office, to come within the meaning of the 9 Anne, c. 20, ss. 1, 4 and 5, must be a corporate

A quo warranto alleged that the defendant, within the town of B., in the county of M., exercised, without legal warrant, the office of mayor; and, together with R. and J., the powers and privileges of a boly corporate, by the name and description of the mayor and bniliffs of the brough of B. The defendant suffered judgment by default:—Held, that the relator was entitled to cests under 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 5. Lapay v. Hey, (in error), 2 B. & S. 656; 31 L. J., Q. B. 209: 6 L. T. 610; 10 W. R. 623.

Upon the trial of a quo warranto for exercising the office of a member of a local board of health, the defendant did not appear, and a verdict passed for the relator. The 9 Anne, c. 20, gives costs upon informations concerning the offices of mayors, buildfs, portreeves and other offices within etics, towns corporate, boroughs and other places:—Held, that, notwithstanding the incorporation of local boards by the repealed Sanitary Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 20), s. 46, the relator was not entitled to costs. Reg. v. Morgan, 26 L. T. 700.

Abandonment—Costs.]—A person giving notice of an application for information in the nature of a que warranto against a person claiming to hold a corporate office is responsible for costs incurred thereby, even though the application is abandoned before it can be heard. Ballard v. Hallined, 6. 5. 1. J., Q. B. 382.

Security for Costs. ]-The court will not stay | B. Customs of Manors. proceedings until the prosecutor give security for costs, on the ground that the relator is in insolvent circumstances, where it appear that he is a corporator, and no fraud is suggested. Heav v. II game, 2 M. & S. 346; 15 R. R. 273.

Where the person applying is very poor, and there is strong ground of suspicion that he is applying not on his own account or at his own expense but in collusion with a stranger, the court will require security for costs. Row v. Wakelin, 1 B. & Ad. 50; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 366.

Costs in Error.]—On a writ of error to the Exchequer Chamber upon judgment upon a quo warranto information, the party in whose favour the court of error decides is not thereby, and by the Law Terms Act, 1830, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will, 4, c. 70, s. 8, entitled to enter up a judgment of that court for his costs in error. # A. VALIDITY AND REASONABLENESS.

1. GENERAL RULES.

A custom is void which is unreasonable, uncertain, savours too much of arbitrary power, and tends to make a lord of a manor a judge in his own cause. Wilkes v. Broadbeat, 1 Wils. 63. It is no objection to a custom that it is not conformable to the common law of the land.

Horton v. Beckman, 6 Term Rep. 760, 764. There can be no prescriptive right, in the nature of a servitude or an easement, so large as to preclude the ordinary uses of property by the owner of the land affected. Duce v. Hau. 1 Macq. H. L. 305.

Semble, that where a claim, in the nature of a servitude or an easement, is incapable of judicial control and restriction, it cannot be sustained by prescription. Ih.

It does not follow that rights sustainable by grant are necessarily sustainable by prescription. Ih.

A prescription for taking three bushels of barley out of every ship's cargo brought to a certain quay to be exported, is reasonable and good. Serjeant v. Read, 1 Wils. 91.

A custom that every pound of butter sold in a particular market town should weigh eighteen ounces, is bad. Noble v. Durell, 3 Term Rep. 271.

Presumption of Legal Origin.]-Where an onerous liability has been asserted and submitted to for a long series of years, although the evidence begins well within modern times, anything not manifestly absurd which will support and give a legal origin to such a custom will be presumed. Therefore, a liability to repair a seawall submitted to since 1818 ought to be presumed to have a legal origin. L. & N. W. Ry., v. Fobbing Lexels Commissioners, 66 L. J., Q. B. 127; 75 L. T. 629.

The owners of an oyster-fishery had, since the reign of Elizabeth, held courts, and granted, for a reasonable fee, licenees to fish to all persons Frewen, 35 L. J., Ch. 692; L. R. 2 Eq. 634; inhabiting certain parishes, who had been appren- 12 Jur. (N.S.) 879; 14 L. T. 846, ticed for seven years to a duly-licensed fisherman. In an action by a person so qualified against the owners of the fishery for not granting him a licence to fish on payment of the usual fee :- Held, that the fishing, having always been by licence, had not been as of right, and therefore could not give rise to a custom, however general and long continued. Mills v. Colchester Corporation, 36 L. J., C. P. 210: L. R. 2 C. P. 476; 16 L. T. 626; 15 W. R. 955. L. R. 3 C. P. 575, infra. Affirmed Held also, that it was no objection to the custom, if otherwise good, that the fee alleged to have been paid for the licences was not a fixed fee, but a fee of reasonable amount. 1b.

Immemorial User - Possibility of Legal Origin.]—There can be a legal origin for a custom to moor vessels in a navigable tidal estnary of the river Thames, forming part of the Port of London, by means of beams buried in the soil of the foreshore and attached to a chain and buoy to which the same vessel from time to time returns, and such an origin will be presamed on proof of immemorial user. Such a right is incidental to navigation, and, apart from any grant or dedication, any of Her Majesty's subjects navigating navigable tidal waters is entitled to enjoy it. Att.-Gen. v. Wright, 66 L. J., Q. B. 834 : [1897] 2 Q. B. 318 ; 77 L. T. 295 ; 46 W. R. 85—C. A.

A custom that the rector shall occupy in severalty forty acres, part of a common of 1,200 acres, in discharge and satisfaction of all the tithes of hay and folder on the whole common, may have a legal origin. Anon., 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 199.

The owners of an anchorage-ground at Whitstable had received dues from all ressels anchoring there time out of mind and were also the owners of an oyster-fishery adjoining the anchorage-ground, and maintained buoys and beacons which served to mark the limits between the oyster-ground and the anchorage-ground, and also to indicate the channel by which vessels might enter the anchorage-ground. In an action to recover dues from the owner of a vessel which had been anchored on this ground :-Held, that they had an immemorial right to the dues; the consideration being the services rendered to the navigation by the maintenance of the buoys and beacons. Whitstable Free Fishers v. Foreman, 36 L. J., C. P. 273; L. R. 2 C. P. 688; 16 L. T. 747; 15 W. R. 1133, Affirmed 37 L. J., C. P. 305; L. R. 3 C. P. 578: 18 L. T. 734; 16 W. R. 1019 —Ex. Ch.; and in Dom. Proc. nom. Foreman v. Whitstable Free Fishers, L. R. 4 H. L. 266; 21 L. T. 804; 18 W. R. 1046.

Upon a bill in equity to establish a right to a chancel as part of a parish church, against the lord of a manor, who claimed it as appendant to the manor or manor house, it appearing that the chancel was an ancient chapel coeval with the church, and that it was a private chapel creeted by the lord of the manor :- Held, that the immemorial use and occupation, coupled with reparation, entitled the lord of the manor by prescription to the perpetual and exclusive use of the chancel, and that this right might exist, notwithstanding that the freehold might not be in

Who within—Tenement in Parish. ]—A person who rents a tenement within a parish, which he uses occasionally, but does not actually reside there, is within a custom for all the inhabitants of a parish. Fitch v. Fitch, 2 Esp. 543; 5 R. R.

Fees-Reasonable Charges. ]-The mere circumstance of the owners of an oyster-fishery having for a period of 150 years received a fee of 21. 2s. for a licence for four dredges, will not, in the absence of all evidence on the subject, warrant the assumption that 37. 3s, is an unreasonable sum to demand for such a licence. Mills v. Colchester Corporation, 37 L. J., C. P. 278; L. R. B C. P. 575; 16 W. R. 987-Ex. Ch.

Marriage Fees, ]-A marriage fee cannot be claimed of common right, but if it is of a Bryant v. Foot, 9 B. & S. 444; 37 L. J., Q. B. 217; L. R. 3 Q. B. 497; 18 L. T. 587; 16 W. R. 808-Ex. Ch.

When a fee has been received for a great length of time, the right to which could have had a legal origin, it may and ought to be assumed that it was received as of right during the whole period of legal memory to the present time, unless the contrary is proved. Ib.

The right to a payment claimed as immemorial may be disproved by proof of its being rank; i.e. so large that it could not possibly have existed at the commencement of the time of legal memory. Ib.

The court will take judicial notice of the difference in the value of money at the time of Richard I, and the present day. Ib.

The parson of an agricultural parish claimed a fee of 13s, on every marriage solemnised in his parish church. A special case found that from 1808 down to 1854 the sum of 13s, or 13s, 6d, had always been paid:—Held, that the claim could not be supported. Ib.

of an archdeaconry court, to be valid, must be of an architecteonry court, to be valid, must be founded upon immemorial usage. Sheppared v. Payne, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 414; 31 L. J. G. P. 297; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 354; 6 L. T. 716. Affirmed, on appeal, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 182; 33 L. J. G. P. 158; 19 Jur. (N.S.) 540; 10 L. T. 193; 12 W. R. 581.— Ex. Ch.

The office of registrar of an archdeaconry court, being a freehold office, with duties of a continuous and presumably perpetual character, and one whose existence is essential to the due exercise of the functions of the archdeacon, is an office to which fees may be annexed by immemorial usage. Ib.

The fact of such fees having been paid and received from 1727 down to 1862 is evidence from which the immemorial receipt of them ought to be presumed, if they could have had a legal origin; and the fact of their amount having from time to time been varied does not necessarily affect their validity. Ib.

In considering the reasonableness of such fees regard may be had to the amounts established water and the person preserbing, and although the estate of louse to which the chancel was appendint complete not be situate in the parish. Charton v. It is only in respect of services rendered, or by statute for similar services rendered by other which the officer is ready and willing to perform, that such a claim can be substantiated. Ib.

— Irish Attorney-General.]—The Irish attorney-general refused to entertain a writ of error, for the purpose of determining whether or not he should grant his flat thereto, without the eastonary fee of fifteen guiness, on the ground that it was the immemorial practice of the office of the clebed of the clebed of the clebed of the through the state of the clebed of the transfer of the state of the flat of the state of the transfer of the state of the transfer of the state of the stat

2. In Mines.

The Act of Settlement of the Isle of Man, 1708, confirmed to the tomats their customary estates of inheritance, "saving always all mines and minerals of what kind and unture seever, oursries and delfs of flag, slate or stone".— Held, that a enstann by the tenants to dig for clay and sand did not contravene the saving clause, and that such tenants were cutified to dig for clay and sand. Att. Gen. (See of Man) v. Mylehreed, 48 L. J., P. C. 36; 4 App. Cas. 294; 40 L. T. 764—P. C.

A custom that any timer within Cornwall may nequire a right to the tim within certain limits, taking proceedings in the stammy court, of which the landowner has notice, and completing his title in that court, and in case of minerals being found, rendering a portion of the produce to the lord or owner of the soil; and that the right so acquired may be preserved by an ammericancy of the bounds; and that it is not necessary for its preservation that the minerals (if any) within the limits should be sought after, and the land worked for mineral purposes by the boundowner, or on his behalf, is bad for unreasonableness, Ragora v. Breatma. 10 Q. B. 26; 17 L. J., Q. B. 34; 12 Jun. 263.

In an action for working mines under ground near to the plaintiff's house, so that the housewas injured and in danger of fulling for want of support, the defendant claimed as lessee of the manor in while the house was situate, and of the infines therein, a prescriptive right to work the infines therein any houses parcel of the manor, paying to the occupiers of the surface a reasonable compensation for the use of the surface, but without making compensation on any other account, and justified under that right:—Held, first, that such a prescription was bad, as being aurreasonable. Hilton v. Grannille (Eurl), D. & M. 614; 5 Q. B. 701; 18 L. J., Q. B. 193; 8 Jur. 319.

Held, secondly, that such a right could not exist by custom. Ib.

3. IN HIGHWAYS.

A person was charged under 5 & 6 Will, 4, c. 50, s. 72, with obstructing a public footway. He had put up a stall for the sale of refreshments at a statute sessions for the hirting of servants; this had been done for more than fifty years, and the statute sessions had been held before 5 Eliz. c. 4. He, thereupon, contended that he had a right by custom to creet his stall in the same way as at a fair, or, at all cevents, that he bona fide channed such a right, and the justices jurisdiction was therefore onsted. The justices having convicted him:—Held, that the justices were right; for that as the statute sessions were introduced by the Statutes of Labourens, the first of which was in the reign of Edw. 3, there could be no such custom by immemorial usage as was chained. Simpson v. Wells, 4 L. J., M. C. 105; J. R. 7, Q. B. 214; 26 L. T.

But a custom to creet a booth or stall, during the period of a fair or market, on any part of a public street or highway (sufficient space being left for the public to pass) is a good custom, Elecond v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383; 13 L. J., Q. B. 330

4. IN CONTRACTS.

Variation of Documents.]—A custom cannot vary or after the construction of written documents. Meazies v. Lightfont, 40 L J., Ch. 561; L. R. 11 Eq. 459; 24 L. T. 695; 19 W. R.

A custom to control the words of a covenant in a deed must be one which both parties to the covenant can know, and must be certain and invariable. Abbut v. Butes, 43 L. J., C. P. 150; 30 L. T. 99; 22 W. R. 488. Affirmed 45 L. J., C. P. 117; 33 L. T. 491; 24 W. R. 101.

Inconsistent with Charter-party.] Where a vessel is chartered to proceed with cargo to a "safe port . . . as ordered, or as near thereunto as she can safely get, and always lay and discharge afloat," the master is not bound to discharge at a port where she cannot, by reason of her draught of water, "always lie and discharge affoat" without being lightened, even if she can be lightened with reasonable dispatch and safety in the immediate vicinity of the port or in the port itself. A vessel was chartered to proceed with a engo of grain from Baltimore to Falmouth for orders, "thence to a safe port in the United Kingdom as ordered, or as near thereunto as she could safely get, and always lay and discharge affoat." The vessel was lay and discharge affoat." ordered to Lowestoft. Her draught of water, when loaded, was such that she could not lie afloat in Lowestoft Harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo, but the discharge of cargo might have been carried on with reasonable safety in Lowestoft Roads. The consignee offered at his own expense to lighten the vessel in the roads, but the master refused to proceed to Lowestoft to discharge, and went to Harwich as the nearest safe port, and there discharged the cargo :- Hekl, that the consignee could not recover damages against the shipowner for the refusal of the master to discharge at Lowestoft. The Alhambra, 50 L. J., P. 36; 6 P. D. 68; 43 L. T. 636; 29 W. R. 655—C. A.

Held, also, that evidence that it was the custom of the port of Lowestoff for vessels to be lightened in the roads before proceeding into the harbour was not admissible. Ib.

By a charter-party the vessel was to deliver at 50, H., "or so near thereto as she could safely get"; He to discharge as customary; the cargo to be merchant's risk and expense. The draught of water of the vessel with the cargo on board was too great to allow her to reach H. The nearest point to which she could safely get was S., where the merchant refused to accept delivery of any part of the cargo. In order to lighten the vessel. part of her cargo was discharged into lighters at S, and sent in them to H. Her owner having sued the charterer to recover the lighterage expenses :- Held, that a defence alleging that by the custom of the port of H, the defendant was not bound to take delivery elsewhere than at H. was bad on demurrer, inasmuch as it sought to set up a enstom inconsistent with the written contract, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the lighterage expenses. Hayton v. Irucio, 5 C. P. D. 130: 41 L. T. 666: 28 W. R. 665-C. A.

5. RESPECTING PARISHES AND TOWNS.

Rates, Making of. ]-Where a parish contained within itself a borough not co-exreusive with it, and the mayor of the borough, on a return to a mandamus for allowing a poor-rate made by the churchwardens and overseers of the whole parish, stated a custom, which had existed since 43 Eliz. c. 2, of appointing separate churchwardens and overseers, and of making separate rates for the borough, and for those parts of the parish which lay without the borough :- Held, that such custom was invalid. Rea v. Gordon, 1 B. & Ald. 524: 19 R. R. 376.

Appointment of Churchwardens.]-Down to 1848 a parish consisted of six townships, and by custom the churchwardens were chosen as follows:—In one township the outgoing churchwarden presented two names to the rector to choose from, in four other townships the parishioners presented two names to the rector to choose from, and in the sixth two names were similarly presented to the rector; and the six persons chosen by the rector became the parish churchwardens. In 1848, by an order in conneil, approving of a scheme prepared by the ecclesiastical commissioners under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, the last-mentioned township was constituted a separate rectory, and from that time in the old parish the five remaining townships only presented names to the rector, and there were only five churchwardens elected for the parish :-Hekl, that the separation of the one township did not affect the custom in the remaining five. and that the five persons chosen thereunder were lawfully churchwardens of the parish. Bremner v. Hull, 35 L. J., C. P. 332; L. R. 1 C. P. 748; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 15 L. T. 352; 14 W. R. 964; 1 H & R 800

Sale of Beer.]—The Beer Act (11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 64) does not abrogate a custom in a borough that no one shall sell beer within the borough except a freeman licensed by the mayor and aldermen. Leicester v. Burgess, 2 N. & M. 131; 5 B. & Ad. 246.

Sales by Auction.]—A custom that the town crier of a corporate town shall have the exclusive Sales by Anction.]—A custom that the rown within 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 2. Perambulation of Boundaries. - Evidence of a custom to perambulate the boundaries of a parish is not sufficient to support an allegation to perambulate the boundaries of a liberty. Grant v. Kearnen, 12 Price, 773.

A custom for parishioners on the perambulation of the boundaries to go through a particular house situated within the parish, but not upon Taylor v. Derey, 7 A. & E. 409; 2 N. & P. 469; W. W. & D. 646; 7 L. J., M. C. 11; 1 Jur. 892.

Inhabitants of "District." -A custom laid in all the inhabitants for the time being of three adjoining and contiguous parishes to a right of recreation over land situated in one of such parishes is bad in law. The word "dis-trict," when a custom is laid in the inhabitants of a district, means no more than that particular division known to the law in which the par-Trickler property is situate, such, for instance, as a parish or a manor. Edwards v. Jenkins, 65 L. J., Ch. 222; [1896] I Ch. 308; 73 L. T. 574; 44 W. R. 407; 80 J. P. 167.

6. Public Sports and Games.

On Private Close.]—A custom for all the inhabitants of a parish to play at all kinds of lawful games, sports and pastimes in the close of A., at all seasonable times of the year, at their free will and pleasure, is good; but a similar custom for all persons for the time being being in the parish is bad. Fitch v. Rawling, 2 H. Bl. 393; 3 R, R, 425.

A custom for the inhabitants of a parish to erect a maypole on the ground of a landowner within the parish, and dance round and about it, and otherwise enjoy any lawful and innocent and onerwise enjoy any fawrat and indecent recreation at any time in the year on the ground is reasonable and lawful. Hall v. Nottingham, 45 L. J., Ex. 50; 1 Ex. D. 1; 33 L. T. 697; 24 W. R. 58.

Village Greens.]-The law of Scotland agrees with the law of England in holding that the with the law of England in loading that the right to village greens and playgrounds stands upon a principle of original dedication to the use of the public. Dyce v. Hay, 1 Macq. H. L.

305 Where new inventions come into use, they may have the benefit of servitudes and easements, the law accommodating its practical operation to the varying circumstances of mankind. Ib.

Horse-racing.] — A custom for the freemen and citizens of a town, on a particular day in the year, to enter upon a close for the purpose of holding horse-racing thereon is a good custom, noding noise-racing thereon is a good custom, and, in pleading it, it is not necessary to aver that the particular day was a seasonable time. Monkey v. Lemay. 1 H. & C. 729; 32 L. J., Ex. 94; 9 Jur. (x.s.) 306; 7 L. T. 717; 11 W. R. 270.

A claim, by custom, for the freemen and citizens of a town, on a particular day in the year, to enter upon a close for the purpose of holding horse-races is not a claim to an easement to bring the right within the term easement in 153; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 704. that section, it must be one analogous to that of a right of way or a right of watercourse, and must be a right of utility and benefit, and not one of mere recreation and amusement. Ib.

Horse Training. - A custom for the inhabitants of a parish to exercise and train horses, at all seasonable times of the year, in land beyond the limits of the parish is bad. Sowerby v. Coleman, 36 L. J., Ex. 57; L. R. 2 Ex. 96; 15 L. T. 667: 15 W. R. 451.

7. PROFITS A PRENDRE.

Custom Invalid. ]-A custom for the inhabitants of a particular place to take a profit in alieno solo is bad; a right to take such a profit can be claimed by prescription only. Grimstead v. Marlowe, 4 Term Rep. 717: 2 R. R. 512.

A profit à prendre in another's soil cannot be claimed by custom, however ancient, uniform, and clear the exercises of that custom may be. Att.-Gen. v. Mathias, 4 Kay & J. 579; 27 L. J., Ch. 761; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 6 W. R. 780.

A right to carry away the soil of another without stint cannot be claimed by prescription, nor can the claim be sustained by evidence of a lost grant. Ib.

Right in a Class.]-The dwellers in a parish or manor cannot acquire any right to a profit à prendre : and if in laying a custom to a profit à prendre the dwellers are included in the class alleged to have the right, the custom so laid is bad. Allyond v. Gibson, 34 L. T. 883; 25 W. R. 60—C. A.

To an action for entering the plaintiff's clo the defendant pleaded that there is a public footpath into, through, and over the close, for the Queen's subjects to go and pass on foot at all times at their will and pleasure, and that there has been from time immemorial an ancient and laudable enston used and approved of, within the parish in which the close is situate, that the inhabitants for the time being have always used to have, and of right ought to have, the liberty and privilege of going along and using the footpath for the purpose of angling with rods and lines for fish from the footpath, at all seasonable times in the daytime, for recreation only, and not for profit, and so justified the trespass :- Held. that plea was bad, as it set up a right by enstom to take a profit à prendre in alieno solo. Bland v. Lipscombe, 4 El. & Bl. 712, n. : 3 C. L. R. 261; 24 L. J., Q. B. 155, n.; I Jur. (N.S.) 707, n.; 3 W. R. 57.

There can be no public right of fishing in nontilal waters, even where they are to some extent "navigable rivers." Pearce v. Scotcher, 9 Q. B. D. 162: 46 L. T. 342; 46 J. P. 248.

To take Water. ]-A right in the inhabitants of a township to enter upon the land of a private individual, and take water from a well therein persons, such as freemen or citizens, claiming a properly claimed by custom. Ruce v. Ward, 4 right in gross, wholly irrespective of land; and El. & Bl. 702; 3 C. L. R. 744; 24 L. J., Q. B.

To take Clay. ]-In an action for breaking the plaintiff's close, and digging and carrying away clay, the defendant justified as owner of a brickkiln, and pleaded that all occupiers thereof for thirty years had enjoyed, as of right, to dig, take and carry away from the close so much clay as was at any time required by him and them for making bricks at the brick-kiln, in every year, and at all times of the year :- Held, that the claim was unreasonable and bad. Clayton v. Corby, 5 Q. B. 415; D. & M. 449; 14 L. J., Q. B. 364; 8 Jur. 212.

Involving Right to Land, |- The right to the whole of a given substratum of coal lying under a close is a right to land, and cannot be claimed by prescription; a right to take coal is different. Wilkinson v. Proud, 11 M. & W. 33; 12 L. J., Ex. 227: 7 Jur. 284.

To take Shingle.]—A special custom for the inhabitants of a purish to take shingle for the repair of the highways in the parish from a portion of the beach above high water mark, being private property, is bad, being a claim of a profit a prendre in alieno solo. Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board, 25 L. T. 195; 19 W. R. 884.

To an action for breaking and entering land of the plaintiff, being part of the seashore, between high and low water-mark, in or adjoining the township of Owthorne, and taking gravel, stones, sand, and seaweed, the defendant pleaded pleas of justification, some setting up a right in the inhabitants of the township of Owthorne to take the gravel, &c., to be used for the cultivation and improvement of their land; others claiming it for To take Fish.]—A custom for all the inhabitants of a parish, as such, to enter the close of the plaintiff, and take fish there without limit, is bad. Lingt v. Janes, 6 C. B. 81; 17 L. J., C. P. 206; 12 Jur. 637. that the pleas were had; for that, so far as they were capable of being construed as justifying under a custom, such custom would be void. being a claim of a profit a prendre in alieno solo, which can only exist by grant or prescription; and that if the claim was founded on prescription it would be equally bad, inasmuch as it was a claim by persons who, not being a corporation, were incapable of taking by grant, and not being claimed in a que estate. Constable v. Nicholson, 14 C. B. (N.s.) 230; 32 L. J., C. P. 240; 11 W. R.

> To Glean,]—No person has at common law a right to glean in a harvest field: neither have the poor of the parish, leadly settled (as such), any such right. Steel v. Houghton, 1 H. Bl. 51; 2 R. R. 715. And see Warlledge v. Manning, 1 H. Bl. 53, n.

> To carry away Boughs. ]-A custom for poor and indigent householders living in A. to cut and earry away rotten boughs and branches in a chase in A. cannot be supported; the description of the persons entitled being too vague. Selby v. Robinson, 2 Term Rep. 758; 1 R. R. 615.

To Cut Wood. ]-A right claimed by the infor domestic purposes, is a mere essement, and habitants of a pi sit to cut and carry away for not a profit a prendre, and may therefore be use as fuel in the lown houses fagots or baskets of the underwood growing upon a common manor, in consideration of repairing n wharf belonging to the lord of the manor, is a right to a within the manor, not confining it to the wharf, profit à prendre in the soil of another. Such a right, therefore, cannot exist by custom, Rivers (Lird) v. Adams, 48 L. J., Ex. 47; 3 Ex. D. 361; 39 L. T. 39; 27 W. R. 381.

A right of lopwood, lying within a manor, that is, a right of the inhabitants of a parish at certain periods of the year to lop for fuel the branches of trees growing upon the waste lands of the manor, cannot be created by custom. Chilton v. London Corporation, 47 L. J., Ch. 433; 7 Ch. D. 735; 38 L. T. 498; 26 W. R. 474.

B. CUSTOMS OF MANORS

1. VALIDITY.

Nomination of Jury.]—An immemorial custom, for the steward of a manor to nominate the jury to serve on the court-leet at the election of July to serve on the controller at the caccombination of a burough, is good in law. Rear v. Jolliffe, 3 D. & R. 244; 2 B. & C. 54; 1 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 282; 26 R. R. 214.

Twenty years' regular usage, uncontradicted and mexplained, is cogent evidence for a jury to presume that a custom for the steward of a manor to nominate the jury to serve on the court-leet, at the election of the mayor of a borough, is an immemorial custom. Ib.

Swearing of Jurors.]-A custom, to swear the inrors at one court-leet to inquire and return their presentments at the next court, is bad in law. Davidson v. Moserop, 2 East, 56.

A court-leet, holden on the 28th of April, was adjourned, after the jury had been swom in, till the 15th of December, which day was given them to make their presentments :- Held, that an adjournment of such duration (which was admitted to be according to the custom of the manor) was not unnecessarily unrensonable. Wilrock v. Windsor, 3 B. & Ad. 43.

Breaking False Measures. ]-A custom in a manor, for the leet jury to break and destroy measures found by them to be false is lawful.

In an action for seizing weights and measures, four defendants pleaded that they were sworn, with divers, to wit, twenty others, as a leet jury, according to the custom of the manor of Stepney and that it was the custom of the jury so sworn to examine weights and measures within the manor, and seize them if defective; and they alleged that they, the defendants, being on such jury so sworn as aforesaid, examined and seized the plaintiff's weights and measures, which they found defective. There was evidence at the trial that only five of the leet jurors were actually in the plaintiff's shop when the defendants made the seizure there, though the rest were close at hand; but the judge refused to let any question go to the jury on this part of the case, being of opinion that the objection was on the record :-Held, that the objection was on the record, and was valid; it not appearing by the plea that the examination and seizure were made by the jury sworn at the court-leet, according to custom. Sheppard v. Hall, 3 B. & Ad. 433; 1 L. J., K. B.

is good. Colton v. Smith, Cowp. 47; Lofft, 463.

Descent of Lands.]—A custom within a manor that lands shall descend to the eldest sister, where there is neither a son nor a daughter, does not extend to an eldest niece; but the lands must descend according to the rules of the common law, in default of such son, daughter, and sister. Denn d. Goodwin v. Spray, 1 Term Rep. 466; I R. R. 250.

The custom of descent in a manor was, in the nature of borongh English, the youngest son of the person last seised inheriting in preference to the eldest; and if the youngest son were dead without issue, then the next youngest son; and if no son, the daughters as co-parceners; and if no issue, then the youngest brother of the person last seised, and the youngest son of the youngest brother, if such youngest brother were dead, or if such youngest brother were dead without issue, the next youngest brother; and if no brother, the sisters taking as parceners. There was also one entry of descent and admission in favour of the youngest son of the uncle of the person last seised, and one entry of descent and admission shewing the descent to the youngest sons respectively of two sisters, who were heirs parceners to the person last seised :- Held, that there was no evidence to authorise an extension of the custom of descent in favour of so remote a collateral relative as the youngest son of the youngest brother of the great-grandfather, ex parte materna, of the person seised. Muggleton v. Barnett 1 H. & N. 282; 26 L. J., Ex. 47; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1026. Affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber,
 2 H. & N. 653; 27 L. J., Ex. 125; 4 Jur. (N.S.)
 139; 6 W. R. 182.

The word descent in the presentment of the custom of a manor is to be construed in its popular sense as a taking by any mode of succession, not in its technical sense as a taking by-inheritance as opposed to a taking by purchase; and, therefore, a person taking by devise takes by descent within the meaning of the custom. Bickley v. Bickley, 36 L. J., Ch. 817; L. R. 4 Eq. 216.

Use of Mill. ]-A custom that all the inhabitants of a manor shall grind all their corn, grain and malt, which by them or any of them shall be used or spent on the ground within a manor, at a certain mill, is good. Cart v. Birkbeck, 1 Dongl, 218.

A custom that all the tenants, resiants and inhabitants within a manor, should grind at the lord's mill all their corn and grain, as well growing within the manor as brought from other places, and spent or consumed in a ground state in their respective houses, within the manor, may be a good custom; but it does not extend to restrain the inhabitants who do not grow corn and grain, or who have no corn and grain of their own, from buying or using in such houses, ground corn or flour, though it may not have been ground or grown within the manor, but produced from corn ground at other mills. Richardson v. Walker, 4 D. & R. 498; 2 B. & C. 827; 2 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 180.

· Suspension of Custom. ]-And where by the custom of a manor all the tenants, resiants and inhabitants within the manor were bound Tells at a Wharf.]—A prescription as lord of to grind all their corn, grain and mait, as well a manor for toll of all goods landed within the growing within the manor as brought from other places, and which, after the grinding thereof, and the trustees, for the purpose of cutting down their houses, at two aucient mills belonging to the lord having pulled down one of the mills, so Copyhold Enfranchisement Acts (4 & 5 Vict. as to deprive the tenants of their option:—Held, c. 35, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 51, s. 8, and 21 & 22 Vict. that the custom was suspended. Richardson v. Capes, 4 D. & R. 512; 2 B. & C. 841; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 182.

- Toll for. In an action upon a custom for not grinding at the plaintiff's mills, the plaintiff may declare generally upon a custom for a certain toll, without specifying the particular toll, or the consideration for it, or that it is a reasonable toll; and a continuance of uniform payment and acquiescence is evidence of its reasonableness, and the court will judge under all circumstances what is reasonable. Gard v. Callard, 6 M, & S. 69; 18 R, R, 310.

Erection of Booths.]—A custom for all victuallers to creet booths on a common, being parcel of the waste of a manor (selected by the lord for holding fairs yearly, every fortnight), and to place posts and tables there, a reasonable time before the Monday next after the Feast of Pentecost, and to continue them so erected until the Feast of All Souls, each paying therefor to the lord a compensation of 2d., is good. Smith v. Tyson, 1 P. & D. 307; W. W. & D. 749; 9 A. & E.

Profits à Prendre.]-A custom may be good for copyholders to carry away the entire soil of their copyhold teuements. Hanner v. Chance, 4 De G., J. & S. 626; 34 L. J., Ch. 413; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 397; 12 L. T. 163; 13 W. R. 556.

The dwellers in a parish or manor cannot acquire any right to a profit a prendre ; and if in laying a custom to a profit a prendre, the dwellers are included in the class alleged to have the right, the custom so laid is bad. Allgood v. Gibson, 34 L. T. 883; 25 W. R. 60— C. A.

The first section of the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71), which relates to profits a prendre, applies only to cases where one man claims by custom, prescription, or grant, some profit or benefit to be taken or enjoyed from or upon the land of another, and has no application to the case of a right claimed by a copyholder in his own tenenient, according to the custom of the manor. Hanner v. Chance, supra.

A custom in a manor that copyholders of inheritance may break the surface and dig and get clay, without stint, out of their copyhold tenements, for the purpose of making bricks to the ments, to the purpose of maxing briess to be sold off the manor, is good in law. Salisbury (Marquis) v. Gladstone, 9 H. L. Cas. 692; 34 L. J., C. P. 222; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 625; 4 L. T. 849; 9 W. R. 930.

2. Enfranchisement.

Effect of Award.]-By the custom of a manor the lord, with the assent of the homage, could make copyhold grants of part of the manor waste. The lord granted a portion of the waste to C., reserving the trees, and subject to a restriction against building on any part of the ground. In the grant was a power of entry for the lord, the trustees of a charity and the copyhold tenants of the land adjoining, for the purpose of pulling down houses thereafter creeted on the soil down houses thereafter creeted on the soil for and get sand, sandstone, gravel, and clay granted; and also a power of entry for the lord from their respective tenements, and to curt and should be spent or consumed in a ground state in trees or shrubs obstructing the prospect from the charity waste. C.'s interest vested by purchase the lord, or one of them, at their own option, and in B., who gave notice to the lord, under the c, 94, s, 10), of his desire to have the land enfranchised :- Held, that the award of enfranchisement put an end to the restrictions above mentioned, and that the land must be valued ashaving been discharged from them. Brabant v. Wilson, 6 B. & S. 979; 35 L. J., Q. B. 49; L. R. 1 Q. B. 44; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 24; 13 L. T. 319; 14 W. R. 28. See also COPYHOLD.

3. EVIDENCE.

Of Similar Customs. ]-On the question as to the existence of a custom in a particular manor, evidence of a like custom in an adjoining manor, though within the same parish and leet, is not admissible. Anglesey (Marquis) v. Hatherton (Lord), 10 M. & W. 218; 12 L. J., Ex. 57.

A custom in a manor may be proved by one instance. Hanner v. Chance, supra,

In a suit by a lord to restrain a copyholder from digging vitreous sand on his own tenement, evidence of a custom to dig vitreous sand for twenty-seven years, and of a custom to dig sand generally for a long period, was adduced:—Held, that the evidence of the custom was sufficient. Ib.

In Face of Written Documents.]-Evidence sufficient in itself to establish a enstom in a manor will be insufficient to establish such enstom in the face of ancient documents made within the time of legal memory, and which negative the existence of any such custom. Partland (Duke) v. Hill, 35 L. J., Ch. 439; L. R. 2 Eq. 765; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 15 W. R. 88.

Presumption.]—The meaning of s. 6 of the Prescription Act is, that no presumption or interference in support of the claim shall be derived from the bare fact of user or enjoyment for lessthan the prescribed number of years. Hanner v. Chance, 4 De G., J. & S. 626; 34 L. J., Ch 413; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 397; 12 L. T. 163; 13 W. R.

But where there are circumstances in addition, the statute does not take away from the fact of enjoyment for a shorter period its natural weight as evidence, so as to preclude a jury from taking it, along with other circumstances, into consideration as evidence of a grant. Ib.

Customary or Prescriptive Rights.]—Customary rights of copyhold tenements differ from prescriptive rights; the former are usages which apply to a number of persons in a certain district or locality, but prescriptive rights are claimed by one or more person or persons as existing in themselves or their ancestors, or as attached to a particular estate. Ib.

The law has laid down no rule as to the extent of evidence which is required to establish a custom, or from which the presumption or inference of the fact of a custom may be rightly drawn. It is the province of a jury to draw these conclusions of fact. Ib.

Circumstances under which the court, sitting as a jury, found the existence of a custom in a copyhold manor authorising the tenants to dig carry away the same on to other lands, and to use or sell the same, either on or off the manor, without licence from the lord. Ib.

Loss by Negligence.]—There must be one rule applicable to ecclesinstical persons as well as to lay, when the question is whether rights belonging to them have or have not been lost by negligence. Ib.

Leases without Enjoyment.]—Leases without proof of enjoyment under them, are admissible to prove a particular custom of a manor. Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 Term Rep. 412, u. 3 Dougl. 180.

Frequent Grant of Lioences.]—The court discharged a rule for a mandamus to the lord of the manor, to compel him to grant a licence for a tonant to dig brick earth for the purpose of making bricks, there being no evidence of any castom to grant such licences, except that they had frequently been granted since 1729, on payment of 21l. for each aere. Rep., v. Hall, 1 P. & D. 293; 9 A. & E. 339; 1 W. W. & H. 741; 8 L. J., Q. B. 8 & E. 339; 1 W. W. & H. 741;

By the custom of a manor, the tenant had a right to demise for any period not longer than three years without a licence; and for every licence to demise for a longer period the load was entitled to 4d for every year of the term granted. Several licences were shewn, the carilest in 1729, under which various terms of years, not exceeding forty-seven, had been granted. Under these circumstances the court discharged a rule for a mandanus to the load to grant a licence to demise for two several terms of forty and twenty-one years. Ih.

Depositions in Ancient Suit. ]—In an action by a copyholder against the lord of the manor for a false return to a mandamus, in which mandamus a custom was set forth, in respect of copyholds granted for two lives, that the surviving life should renew, paying to the lord such fine as should be set by the homage, to be equal to two years' improved value, and not guilty pleaded; depositions ande in an ancient suit, instituted against a former lord of the manor by a person who claimed to be admitted to a copyhold for lives, upon a custom for any copyhold tenant for life or lives to change or fill up his lives, paying to the lord a reasonable fine, to be set by the lord or his steward, and which depositions were made by witnesses on behalf of the said copyholder, were held to be admissible evidence for the lord, as depositions of persons called on behalf of a person standing in pari jure with the new copyholder, although it was not proved that the persons making such depositions were copy-holders, but it appeared only from the depositions themselves that they were such or were persons acquainted with the customs of the manor; and their depositions, supposing them to be only admissible as declarations of persons deceased, were not inadmissible on account of their being made post litem motam, because the same custom was not in controversy in the former suit as in the present. Freeman v. Phillipps, 4 M. & S. 486; 16 R. R. 524. See also EASEMENT.

C. AS TO LANDLORD AND TENANT,

Away-Going Grop. ]—A custom that tenants, whether by parol or deed, shall have the away-going crop after the expiration of their terms is good. Wiglesworth v. Dallison. 1 Dongl. 201.

So, a custom that a tenant may leave his away-going crop in the barn of the farm, after he has quitted the premises, is good. Beavan v. Delahay, 1 H. Rl. 5; 2 R. R. 696. S. P., Lewis v. Harris, 1 H. Rl. 7, n.; 2 R. R. 698, n.

Applicable to all Tenancies.]—Where a custom of the country is proved to exist, it is to be considered applicable to all tenancies in whatever way created, whether verbal or in writing unless expressly or impliedly excheled by the written terms themselves. Wilhins v. Wood, 17 L. J., Q. B. 319; 1.2 Jur., 583.

Traversing General Custom.]—Where, to an action, a defendant plended n custom applicable to all farms within the parish, which were not exempted by special agreement or otherwise.—Held, that to avail himself of the fact that his particular farm was exempted, the plaintiff ought not to traverse the custom generally, but to confess it, and avoid it by shewing that the exception applied to his farm. Econs v. Ogities, 2 X v. J. 79.

Agricultural Tenancy - Selling Flints - Reservation of Mines and Minerals.] - By an agreement for a lease the tenant agreed to cultivate the land according to the most approved vare the mint according to the alone applicational system of husbandry and to use it for agricultural purposes only, and to commit no waste. The lessor reserved "all nines and minerals, sand, lessor reserved "all nines and minerals, sand, and applications are supported to the state of the s quarries of stone, brick-earth and gravel pits. The farm was in a district where large numbers of flints came to the surface in the ordinary course of ploughing, and it was necessary to remove them in order to cultivate the land effectually. The tenant removed the flints which came to the surface in the ordinary course of agricultural operations and sold them, and there was no evidence that it was the custom of the country for tenants to do so, when not prohibited by their leases :-Held, that such a custom was reasonable and good. Tucher v. Linger, 52 L. J. Ch. 941; 8 App. Cas. 508; 49 L. T. 373; 32 W. R. 40; 48 J. P. 4—H. L. (E.).

Held, further, that the reservation of minerals in the agreement did not indicate an intention to exclude the custom so as to deprive the tenant of the right. Ib.

Proof of Gustom.]—In ascertaining the nature of an agricultural custom regard is to be had not so much to what the witnesses state to be their opinion as to the extent of the custom, as to what they prove to have been publicly done throughout the district. Ib.

D. CUSTOMS OF TRADE.

Custom of Merchants.]—The custom of merchants is the general established law, not any special local custom. But it must be controlled by adjudged cases. Edin v. East India Co., 1 W. Bl. 299; 2 Burr. 1216.

Contravening Express Contract.]—A usage of trude cannot be set up in contravention of an express contract interfore, on a warranty of prime singed to therefore, on a warranty of prime singed to a practice in the back, evidence is not admissible of a practice in the back as prime singed bacon; nor of a practice to the prime singed bacon; nor of a practice to each of the open contraction of the prime singed bacon and remedy, if he to practice the purchase from all remedy, if he open contractions of the defect by an early day. Tates v. Pyps, 6

General Lien.]-In an action the defendants justified the retaining of the goods under an ancient custom, from time immemorial, used in the trade of public warehouse-keepers in London, for all such public warehouse-keepers to have a general lien upon all goods, from time to time housed or remaining in their warehouses, for and in the name of the merchants or other persons by whom such public warehouse-keepers are retained or employed, for all moneys or any balance thereof due from such merchants or other persons to such warehouse-keepers, for or on account of advances or expenses which such public warehouse-keepers should have made or been put to, in or about the payment of duties. or of customs on goods consigned to them from abroad, or the payment of freight and other charges, for the conveyance of such goods to the port of London, or the entering, landing, and warehousing such goods:-Held, that such custom was unreasonable and unjust, and could not be supported in law. Leuckart v. Coper. 3 Scott, 521; 2 Hodges, 150; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 99; 6 L. J., C. P. 131.

Dealings-When Uncertain. -If there is a general usage applicable to a particular trade or profession, persons employing one in such trade profession will be taken to have dealt with him according to that usage, but a usage for a veterinary surgeon to charge for his attendance when there was not much medicine required is too uncertaiu. Sewell v. Cerp, I Car. & P. 392.

As to Sale of Corn. ]-A custom of the Liverpool corn market, that when corn is sold by sample. if the buyer does not on the day the corn is sold examine the bulk and reject it, he cannot afterwards reject or refuse to pay the whole price, is a reasonable custom. Sanders v. Jameson, 2 Car. & K, 557.

Printers.]-By the custom of trade, a printer is not entitled to recover for printing a work until the whole is completed and delivered. Gillett v. Mawman, 1 Taunt. 137.

There is no general custom of trade by which printers are bound to insure for the booksellers the paper of the works which they print. Mawman v. Gillett, 2 Taunt. 325.

Machinery—Fixtures.]—Machinery affixed to the freehold of ironworks is considered to be within the order and disposition of the bankrupt trader, where, by the custom of the country, when ironworks are let, such articles are furnished by and continue to be the property of the lessor. Rufford v. Bishop, 5 Russ. 346; 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 108.

Purchase on Hire System—Property in Goods.] -C. & Co., upholsterers, lent furniture on hire to the defendants (who were hotel-keepers) to be ment of the full price agreed upon it was to become the property of the defendants. Until this had been done it was to remain the property of C. & Co. Upon one instalment being unpaid C. & Co. put a man in possession of the furniture, and the defendants executed an assignment of the lease of the hotel, and of all their personal chattels and effects including the hired furniture, written agreement, R. hired furniture of the

The custom of hiring furniture for the purposes of hotels is so notorious that no person giving credit to an hotel-keeper is entitled to assume that the furniture of which he is in possession is his own property. The foundation of the doctrine of "reputed ownership" is that a man has been permitted to obtain false credit; this custom is so common, and so well known, that a man cannot gain false credit by the possession of furniture. Ib. The custom of letting a piano out on hire under an agreement by which upon the payment of the price fixed for the purchase by monthly instalments extending over a period of three years the hirer becomes the owner of the piano, and which is known as "the three years' hire system," is a well-established and good custom, and will therefore prevail to take a piano, hired under such an agreement, out of the order and disposition of the hirer on his becoming bankrupt. Hattersley, Ex parte, Blanchard, In re, 47 L. J., Bk. 113; 8 Ch. D. 601; 38 L. T. 619; 26 W. R. 636.

Furniture.] — The fact that it is the custom of furniture dealers to let out furniture on a three years' hiring and purchase agreement does not disentitle the general public to assume that an ordinary householder is the real owner of the furniture which is in his house. Brooks, Ex parte, or Pickering, Ex parte, Fowler, In re, 23 Ch. D. 261; 48 L. T. 453; 31 W. R. 833; 47 J. P. 470—C. A.

The furniture in the dwelling-house of a trader having been seized under an execution, a friend of his bought it from the sheriff at a valuation, and then verbally agreed that the debtor should continue in possession of it and use it as before, paying, by way of rent, interest at 5 per cent. per annum on the purchase-money, until he should be able to repurchase it at the price given for it. This arrangement was carried out, given for it. This arrangement was carried out, and the debtor remained in possession of the furniture as before until he filed a liquidation petition. He had not repurchased it. The trustee in the liquidation claimed it under the reputed ownership clause. It was admitted that paid for by monthly instalments, and on pay- there is a custom for furniture dealers to let out furniture on a three years' hiring and purchase agreement, but there was no other evidence as to the existence of any custom of hiring furniture : -Held, that the trustee was entitled to the furniture. - When Purchase Complete.] - By a to C. & Co., and afterwards became bankrupts. value of 631 from L. & Co. R. was to pay for payment of any instalment, L. & Co. might seize and remove the furniture and retake possession of it. On payment of all the instalments the furniture was to become his property, but until such payment it was to remain the sole property of L. & Co. This agreement was not registered as a bill of sale. The furniture comprised in the agreement was in the possession of R. at the commencement of his bankruptcy: -Held, that the property in the furniture did not pass to him until all the instalments had been paid; that neither the agreement nor the licence to seize the furniture amounted to a bill of sale by R., and therefore that registration was minecessary. - Option of Purchase Distress by Lessor.]
-Agreement for the hire of railway waggons for the term of five years at a yearly rent of 101. apiece, with power to the lessors, when the rent should be in arrear for seven days, to distrain goods on the lessee's premises, and sell, &c., as landlords may on distress for rent, the lessee at the end of the term to have the option of purchasing the waggous for 5s. each. The lessee having gone into liquidation, the lessors dis-trained under the agreement. The agreement being admitted to be of a usual character having regard to the subject-matter, a motion in an action by the debtor and the receiver under his petition to restrain proceedings upon the distress was refused. The agreement and the distress thereunder were held not to be in fraud of the general creditors in the lessee's bankruptey, power to distrain will not by itself in an ordinary case render such an agreement fraudulent against ereditors in bankruptcy. Lemany. Yorkshire Rail-way Waggon Co., 50 L. J., Ch. 293; 29 W. R. 466.

Proof of. |- Evidence of the general opinion of merchants is allowed to be given to prove the custom of merchants. Camden v. Cowley, 1 W. Bl. 417.

The opinion of merchants is not the custom of merchants. Edin v. East India Co., supra. To prove the manner of conducting a particular branch of trade at one place, evidence may be given to shew the manner in which the same branch is carried on at another place. Noble v. Kenneway, 2 Dougl. 510.

Usage of trade is a general and prevailing course of business, and witnesses who are called to prove it should cause their minds to revolve over instances known to them of its having been acted on. Hall v. Benson, 7 Car. & P. 911. A usage of trade must be proved by instances, and cannot be supported by evidence of opinion merely. Canningham v. Fonblanque, 6 Car. & P. 44.

Semble, that a plea of a custom of trade in London may be supported by proof of a custom evailing in London and other English ports. Milward v. Hibbert, 3 Q. B. 120.

A long-continued practice of average adjusters, who prepared their statements according to the law as laid down by the courts, is no evidence of such a custom or usage of trade as can be impliedly incorporated in a contract between a shipowner and owner of cargo. The defendants, who were the owners of cargo, in an action penses caused by the ship putting into a port of 3 P. W. 12.

it by monthly instalments. In the event of non-refuge, landing, storing and re-shipping the eargo, payment of any instalment, L. & Co. might and leaving the port, alleged a custom of trade that seize and remove the farniture and retake pos- in such a case the expenses incurred in and about warehousing the cargo were apportioned among the owners of the cargo alone, and the expenses of reshipping the cargo, port dues, &c., were borne by the owners of the ship and freight. Several witnesses were called who gave evidence to the effect that for sixty or seventy years the practice of average adjusters had been as stated by the defendants, but that, in consequence of the decision in Atwood v. Sellar (5 Q. B. D. 286), some average adjusters had altered their mode of adjustment in such a case :- Held, that this was not evidence of a enstom of trade which could be Srendson v. Wallace, 46 L. T.

> Implied Contract. -On the sale of goods by a manufacturer of such goods, who is not otherwise a dealer in them, there is, in the absence of any usage in the particular trade or as regards the particular goods to supply goods of other makers, an implied contract that the goods shall be those of the manufacturer's own make. The plaintiffs, who were manufacturers but not dealers in iron. by a written contract, on the margin of which was their trade-mark (a crown with their initials). contracted to sell to the defendants, who thereby contracted to buy of the plaintiffs, 2,000 tons of ship-plates of the quality known as "crowu," to pass Lloyd's survey, to be delivered monthly at the defendants' shipyard. The contract contained a strike clause by which the supply of the iron contracted for might be suspended during the continuance of any strike of workmen; but it had no express stipulation that the plates should be of the plaintiffs' manufacture. Before the contract was completed the plaintiffs closed their works, and proposed to complete the con-tract by delivery of ship-plates of the quality mentioned in the contract made by another firm. The defendants having refused to accept these, the plaintiffs sued them for breach of contract. At the trial the defendants tendered evidence to shew that in the iron trade there is a custom that, under a contract between a manufacturer of iron plates and a customer for the supply of them, the seller must, in the absence of stipulation to the contrary, supply plates of his own make, and that the purchaser is entitled to reject other plates if tendered, though of the quality contracted for. The learned judge at the trial rejected this evidence, and gave judgment for the plaintiffs :- Held, that such evidence was improperly rejected. Johnson v. Regiton, 50 L. J., Q. B. 753; 7 Q. B. # E. CUSTOMS OF LONDON.

1. WHAT ARE

In General.]-A citizen of London cannot under the custom devise land out of London in mortmain. The residue of a mixed fund so given results to the heir-at-law and next of kin in proportions. Middleton v. Cuter, 4 Bro. C. C. 409.

If money be devised to an infant daughter, who marries, the court may refuse helping the husband to the money, unless he makes a suitable settle-ment; though if the portion be small, and the against them by the shipowner to recover a husband a freeman of London, the custom of general average contribution in respect of ex- London is a suitable provision. Adams v. Pierce, If a loss happens to a freeman of London's estate, by the insolvency of the executors, such loss shall be borne out of the testamentary part of his estate only, and not out of the whole personal estate. Head v. Duck, Pre. Ch. 409.

Where an obligee is sued by the custom of London, his co-scennities shall contribute; so by the custom of London, when a surety pays a debt, he shall maintain an action against the principal, though the has no counter bond. Layer v. Nelson, 1 Vern. 436.

The custom of London shall not prevent the artendance of a term on the inheritance. Tiffin v. Tiffin, 1 Vern. 2; 2 Ch. Cas. 49. S. P., Dowse v. Pernical, id. 104.

Ancient Lights.]—The custom of London which authorised the reising of a building on an old foundation, so as to obstruct the passage of light and air through the ancient windows of a neighbour's house, is abrogated by 2 & 3 Will 4, c. 71, s. 3. Merchant Teptores' (b. v. Trascart, 11 Ex. 855; 25 L. J., Ex. 173; 2 Jur. (X.S.) 355; 4 W. R. 295–Ex. Ch. S. P., Katters' (b. v. Loy, 2 G. & D. 414; 3 Q. B. 109; 11 L. J., Q. B. 173; 6 Jur. 803.

The presumption of a right, for twenty years' undisturbed enjoyment of light, is excluded by the custom of London. Wyustunley v. Lee, 2 Swan, 333.

Apprentice.]—If an apprentice in London marries without his master s consent, the master cannot turn him away for that reason, but must sue his covenant. Stephenson v. Houlditch, 2 Vern. 492

One apprentice gives a boul to another apprentice for 504, won at play. Bond decreed to be delivered up, gaming among apprentices being of the worst consequences. By the custom of London, a master may justify turning away his apprentice if he frequents gaming. Woodroffev. Harnham, 2 Veru. 291.

Election of Members of Corporation.]—The common conneil of London has not any jurisdiction to inquire concerning the election of any person to be one of the common conneilmen of the city, for, by the immemorial custom of the city, the cognizance and examination of such elections belong to the court of record, held before the lord mayor and aldermen. Belton v. Jeffer, 2 Bro. P. C. 1463.

A custom of the city of London for the Court of Mayor and Aldermen to examine and determine whether or not a person elected alderman of a ward, and returned to the court as such aldeman, is, according to their discretion and sound consciences, a fit and proper person and duly qualified, is a valid custom. Hew v. Johnson, 6 Cl. & F. 41; 1 Robinson, 1.

So a custom, that when the inhabitants of any ward shall three times return to the court the same person to be alderman, who shall be by the court, according to the former custom, adjudged on such three returns, according to the discretion and sound consciences of the mayor and aldermen unay, for remedy the dignity and discharge the duties of the office, the mayor and aldermen may, for remedy thereof, nominate, elect, and admit a fit person, being a freeman, out of the whole body of the citizens, to be alderman of such ward. Ib.

The latter custom is not abrogated by 11 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 7; nor by the by-law of the city, 13 Anne. Ib.

VOL. V.

Porterage of Aliens' Goods.]—The rights of the city of London, and of the parties appointed by them, to the unshipping and porterage of aliens' goods imported into London, are wholly abolished by 8 & 4 Will. 4, c. 66, whether these goods are consigned to British merchants or to aliens resident there. Callyer. Steamet, 5 Scott (X.B.) 34; 4 Man. & G. 676; 12 L. J., C. P. 73.

Employment of Foreigner.]—A custom in the city of London, that a freeman of the city shall not set on work in the manual occupation of a butcher one who is a foreigner to the liberties of the city, is good. Shaw v. Puyuter, 4 N. & M. 290; 2 A. & E. 312; 4 L. J., K. B. 16.

Obstruction of Highway.]—A custom within the city of London, that if any person has occasion to erect or pull down any building near to any public way within the city, and has occasion for that purpose to erect, place and continue any hoarding in such a manner as thereby to obstruct or enclose any part of any public way, and has applied to the lord mayor of the city for his licence to erect, place and continue the same, the lord mayor has full power and authority to authorise, license and permit such person to erect such hoarding, of such dimensions and in such manner and for such time as he thinks proper for such purpose, is a reasonable custom, and a party may justify under it in erecting a hoarding on a public footpath. Bradbee x. Christ's Hospital, 2 D. (S.S.) [64: 5 Scott (N.R.) 79; 4 Man. & G. 714; 11 L. J., C. P. 209.

Foreign Attachment.]—To an action for money due on an award, the defendant plended a recovery by attachment, at the suit of a creditor of the plaintiff, in the Mayor's Court, and that a custom existed in the city of London, that if, in a plaint in the Mayor's Court, the defendant in such plaint made default, and it appeared that any person owed such defendant any sum of money, such defendant should be attacked by such sum of money, so being in the hands or enstody of such other person (as granishee). The plea did not allege the custom to be, that the granishee must be resident within the city. Upon verum to a writ of certiforari, requiring the mayor and alderment to eurify the custom :—Held, that no such custom existed as alleged in the defendant's plea. Crosby v. Hetherington, 5 Scott (X.E.) 637; + Man. & G. 933, 12 L.J., C. P. 261.

In order to render a recovery by foreign attachment, according to the custom of London, answer to an action in the superior courts, there must have been execution excented. Mayrath v, Hardy, 6 Scott, 627; 4 Bing, (N.C.) 782; 6 D. P. C. 749; 1 Arn. 352; 7 L. J., C. P. 299; 2 Jirr. 594.

Appointment of Solicitor.]—No municipal corporation but that of London can appoint an attorney, except under the corporate seal. Arnold v. Powle Corporation, 4 Man. & G. 860; 5 Scott (N.R.) 761; 2 D. (N.S.) 574; 12 L. J., C. P. 97; 7 Jun. 653.

Cutting Fishing Nets.]—There is no custom in London giving the water-bailiff power to cut Landing of Oysters.]—The deputy day-meters of the city of London are entitled, by immemorial custom, to the exclusive right, by themselves and their servants, of measuring, shovelling, unloading and delivering all oysters brought in any boat or vessel for sale, along the compensation for so doing; and a jury found that 8s, for every score for the first 100 bushels, and 4s, for every score of bushels of the remainder of a cargo, was a reasonable recompense to them for the labour of shovelling, unloading and delivering out the oysters, exclusive of the sums paid to the corporation of London for metage, under 11 Will. 3, c. 24, s. 7. The meters are not therefore bound to perform in their own persons the manual labour of shovelling, &c., but are bound to provide sufficient men for the purpose, and are liable to an action in default of doing so. Laybourne v. Crisp, 4 M. & W. 320; 8 Car. & P. 397; 8 L. J., Ex. 118.

Upon a bill by the deputy meters of oysters at Billingsgate, appointed by the city of London (the allowance claimed for metage, &c., of the cargoes brought to market being established as reasonable by the verdict upon an issue), an account and payment of the arrears were decreed. Lewes v. Sutton, 5 Ves. 683.

A decree by some against the others of the deputy day oyster-meters having the exclusive right of shovelling, unloading and delivering oysters within the port of London, for an account and equal apportionment amongst the meters of the scorage dues received by them, such decree being founded on the immemorial existence of the body of meters, which was held to be proved, notwithstanding the meters were originally labourers, and that they habitually described London. Theopeous v. Daviel, 10 Hare, 296; 22 L. J., Ch. 507; 17 Jur. 778; 1 W. R. 532.

The correspondence of the corporation of the body of meters. 2b.

The correspondence of the corporation of the cor

The corporation of L. had from time immemorial exercised the functions of superintending the measuring and unloading oysters at the market of L. This they did by their officers, "the yeomen of the waterside," who appointed eighteen "deputy day oyster-meters," who by custom were entitled to the monopoly of this employment. There was no immemorial fec; but in 1760, Ss. per twenty bushels for the first hundred bushels, and 4s. per twenty bushels for all additional quantities loaded, were, on a trial for quantum meruit, found by the jury to be reasonable charges. In addition to this, purchasers of oysters usually paid to the holdsmen, justified in refusing it when proffered. Ib. or persons actually performing the work, a gratuity of 1d. per peck. The offices were saleable; but if a deputy day oyster-meter died without having sold his office it reverted to the corporation of L. Between 1836 and 1850 two offices thus fell vacant, and were kept by the corporation in their own hands, they conforming to the usages of the body of deputy day oystermeters. Those usages were mainly such as directed the rotation of employment, and the throwing all payments (except the 1d. per peck, which went to the holdsmen) into a common stock, which was equally divided amongst them.

unlawful nets or seize fish. Bulbroke v. Goodece, upon the express agreement that they would 1 W. Bl. 569.

Regard the rota, and not put their earnings their earnings the regard the rota, and not put their earnings the second of the regard the rota and not put their earnings the common fund, but retain every man his own. On a bill filed by the other sixteen deputy day ovster-meters to restrain these two new members of their body from working, except upon the same terms as all the rest, and from disregarding the by-laws and regulations of the body of river Thames, to any place within the limits of deputy day syster-meters:—Held, that it was the port of London, and to receive a reasonable necessary for the plaintiffs to make out the immemorial existence of the body of which they formed part, otherwise they would have stood in no better position than deputies appointed by persons who were themselves deputies. Ib.

Proof that there had been an equal division of the scorage dues received by the deputy day oyster-meters for the last sixty years, a former decree in a suit in which the common right of the meters was in question, and earlier evidence that the meters were employed by turns :- Held, to be sufficient to show that they were entitled to an equal division among themselves of the scorage dues which they received. Ih.

It being proved that for at least sixty years past the affairs of the deputy day ovster-meters had been regulated by themselves, and there being no evidence of any interference with the body, either by the yeomen of the waterside or the corporation, it was held that the deputy day oystermeters had the right of making by-laws and regulations binding on their body, as to the manner in which their duties should be performed. Ib.

Held, also, that however it might be competent to the corporation of London, in such corporate character, or as representing the veomen of the waterside, to alter the rights and duties of the office of the deputy day oystermeters, yet it was not competent to the corporation, in exercising the mere power of appointing meters, to appoint one who should hold his office upon terms inconsistent with those dants with default in declining to receive an additional payment per peck for the services of the holdsmen, which many buyers would voluntarily pay, but to which the meters were not lawfully entitled; and would, on the other hand, allow the defendants such reasonable payments as they had made for the labour of the holdsmen, by whom the duty of shovelling, unloading and delivering the oysters was performed. 1b.

Semble, that a payment which cannot be legally demanded, and which is even in itself improper, may yet be so legalised by custom as that one of several interested parties is not

Market Overt. ]-A wholesale warehouse in the city of London, used as a shop, and having glazed windows, in which articles are exhibited for sale towards the street, is a market overt by the custom of London, for goods commonly sold there. The custom is not confined to shops which are literally open to the street. Lyons v. Depass, 3 P. & D. 177; 11 A. & E. 326; 9 Car. & P. 68; 9 L. J., Q. B. 51; 4 Jur. 505.

2. How PROVED.

Recorder's Certificate.]—The courts cannot take notice of a custom of London, unless it has stock, which was equally divided amongst them. The corporation of L, which go to the common this monopoly, appointed two of the common holdsmen to the two offices then in abeyance, 1 Wils. 8; 2 Stra. 1187. But the courts take notice of such of the customs of London as appear to have been certified by the recorder. Bluequiere v. Hunchins, 1 Dougl 378.

If the lovel mayor and addermen have once certified as to the custom of London, the certificate is conclusive, and the court never refers the same question a second time. Brain v. Kuat, 12 Sim. 453; 9 Jur. 979.

— By Parol.]—If a custom of London is properly triable by the mayor and aldermen, certified at the bar of the court in term, by the month of the recorder. Plummer v. Benthum, 1 Burr. 24.8.

A rule to enter a suggestion that it is an ancient custom that, where a custom of the city of London is put in issue in any of the superior courts, the mayor and aldermen should be required by writ to return that custom by their recorder orally, and for a writ commanding them so to return it, is absolute in the first instance. Cur v. London Corporation, 4 L. T. 476.

— Gertiorari.]—Where a custom of the city is put in issue, a certiorari goes to the mayor and addermen, commanding them to certify, by the mouth of the recorder, whether or not there is such easton as alleged; and upon such certificate by the recorder in open court, the judgment is entered accordingly. Crowby v. Hetherington, 5 Scott (N.R.) 687; ± Man. & G. 938; 12 L. J., (C. P. 261).

Judicial Notice, —Where a custom of the distribution of record, that court notices the custom for ever after: but other courts of record, to which it has not been certified, cannot take notice of it. Piper v. Chappell, 14 M. & W. 624: 9 Jur. 601. S. P., Bruin v. Knot. 12 Sim. 436: 9 Jur. 370.

The courts will not take judicial notice of the custom in London to cart whores: it must be proved. Stainton v. Jones, 2 Selw. N. P. 1225.

F. EVIDENCE.

Form of Question.]—At the trial of an action for not accepting goods, described in a colonial broker's catalogue, the defendant's counsel put the catalogue that to the hands of a witness, and, without laying foundation for the question by asking whether there was any usage, asked at once whether, from the catalogue, it would be inferred by custom that the goods were sound and in their original packages:—Held, that the question in that form was unadmissible. Curtis v. Peeh, 18 W. R. 230—Ex. Ch.

Present Existence.]—A custom, proved to have existed from time immemorial till 1689, must be taken to exist still, if there is no further evidence proving or disproving its existence. Scales v. Key, 11 A. & E. 819: 3 P. & D. 505.

— Immemoriality.]—The general law as to a custom is, that if its existence at a distant time is shown, and there is no evidence that at any certain time it did not exist, a jury may infer that it went back as far as the reign of Richard the First, which is the time of legal memory. Leuchkart v. Copper, Car. & P. 119.

Non-user.]—Long-continued non-user is strong evidence of the custom never having existed. Hammerton v. Haney, 24 W. R. 603.

Against whom.]—Evidence of usage can only be relied on against those who have been themselves, or whose predecessors have been, parties to the facts constituting the second of the facts of the facts constituting the second of the second of the facts of the facts constitutingly. In a suit for rates against each energies in a partish, within a portion of such complets which had been americal to a borought.—Held, that previous payments of such trates by the magistrates of the borough to the authorities of the parish afforded no evidence of usage against the individual occupiers. Evelog v. Burns, Macl. & B. 435.

Inconsistent Customs.]—A juvy cannot, from the same evidence, find a customary right in all the inhabitant occupiers of land within a district, and a prescriptive right to the same subjectmatter, in respect of a particular estate within the district. Bluent v. Troponning, 5 N. & M. 308; 3 A. & E. 54; 1 H. & W. 432; 4 L. J., & E. 234.

Lost Grant—Profit à prendre, ]—Enjoyment of a profit à prendre by the owners and occupiers of a particular estate, during living memory, without any evidence of user or non-user at any autrecelent period, is evidence of a prescriptive right, but will not support a plea of a lost grant. ID.

In order to support such plea of a lost grant, some evidence tending to point the user, as regards its commencement, to the period of the supposed grant must be given. Ib.

Exceptions.]—If a custom is set forth generally, and it is proved that there are exceptions, it is a variance. Griffin v. Blandford, Cowp. 62. And see Peter v. Kendall, 6 B. & C. 703; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 282.

Meaning of Words.]—A general dictionary of the English language is no authority to shew on a trial the meaning of a word, which is relied on, as deriving a peculiar meaning from mercantile usage. Houghton v. Gilbart, 7 Car. & P. 701.

Abolition of Custom.]—As a custom is local law, it cannot be got rid of except by statute. Hammerton v. Haney, 24 W. R. 603.

A. WHAT ARE NATURAL CONSEQUENCES OF WRONGFUL ACT.

1. Physical Damage.

Contract to provide Stabling-Depreciation. The plaintiff sent some horses to stables with which the defendant had contracted to supply him during a fair. Another person to whom the defendant had subsequently let the same stables, with the assistance of the defendant's servants. turned the plaintiff's horses out of the stables without their clothing, and while they were standing in the defendant's yard until other stables could be procured, some of them caught cold and became depreciated in value. The jury found that the depreciation in value was the result of the breach of contract by the defendant : -Held, that the defendant was liable for the depreciation thus caused, and that the damage deprecention thus caused, and that the damage was not too remote. Passengers put into Wrong Train-Inconvenience-Illness. |-- A husband took tickets at Wimbledon for himself, wife, and two children, of five and seven years of age respectively, to go to Hampton Court station by the last train at night ; by the negligence of the porters they were put into the wrong train and carried to Esher ; being unable to obtain accommodation for the night at Esher or a conveyance, they walked home, a distance of between four and five miles, and the night being wet the wife caught cold and medical expenses were incurred :- Held, that the husband was entitled to recover damages in respect of the inconvenience suffered by being compelled to walk home, but that the illness of the wife was a consequence too remote from the breach of contract for damages to be recoverable for it. Hobbs v. L. & S. W. Ry., 44 L. J., Q. B. 49; L. R. 10 Q. B. 111; 32 L. T. 352; 23 W. R. 520. See preceding case.

Railway — Negligence — Theft by Fellow-Passengers. ]—The plaintiff, by his statement of claim, alleged that he had suffered damage through being robbed while a passenger on the defendants' railway, and that through the refusal of the defendants' servants to afford him facilities. for arresting the persons who had robbed him, he was prevented from recovering the property stolen :--Held, that the statement of claim disclosed no cause of action. He also claimed to recover the amount of the money stolen from him as damages for the negligent overcrowding of the carriage:—Held, too remote. Cobb v. G. W. Ry., 62 L. J., Q. B. 335; [1893] 1 Q. B. 459: 4 R. 283; 68 L. T. 483; 41 W. R. 275; 57 J. P. 437-C. A.

Caused by Railway Accidents. ]—Considera-tion of the directions proper to be given to a jury as to the damages to be awarded to the plaintiff for the bodily suffering arising from personal injuries, and the damages to be awarded to him for loss of professional income arising from those injuries. Phillips v. L. & S. W. Ry, 5 Q. B. D. 78; 41 L. T. 121; 28 W. R. 10—C. A. See S. C., 49 L. J., C. P. 233; 5 C. P. D. 280; 42 L. T. 6; 44 L. T. 217—C. A.

When a jury is called upon to assess damages for personal injuries occasioned by negligence, they should take into consideration two matters —first, the pecuniary loss occasioned by the accident; and secondly, the injury the party sustains in his person, or in his physical capacity of enjoying life; and, as regards the first, they should take into account, not only his present the should take into account, not only his present loss, but his incapacity to earn a future improved income. Fair v. L.  $\S$  N. W. Rg, 21 L. T. 326; the remaining carriages (including that in which S W. R. 68. A was scated) followed down the incline, also at

A declaration in an action for negligence, after alleging that the plaintiff was limit withe being carried as a passenger, concluded by stating as slaminge that she was greatly hurt, maimed, wounded, and permanently injured. At the trial, it was proved that the plaintiff was accustomed to the numagement of a restaurant, and the judge directed the jury in assessing the damages to ask themselves, "what salary would a lady of experience in the trade be able to command for managing a public-louse in London at a fair salary"."—Held, that the question was justified by the form of the count, although no special damage was laid. Potter v. Metropolitan Ru. 28 I. T. 735.

—On Insurances against.]—A. effected with a railway assume company a contract, which stated that he was thereby assured by the company in 1,000t, to be payable to his legal representatives in the event of death happening to the assured from railway accident whilst travelling in any class carriage on any line of railway in Great Britain or Ireland, or a proportionate part of the 1,000t, to be paid to the assured himself in the event of his sustaining any personal injury by reason of such accident. The assured was travelling in a railway carriage, and on the arrival of the train at a station, and after it had stopped, he, in stepping out of the carriage, without any negligence on his part, shipped off the fron step, whereby he sustained an injury :—Held, that this was a railway accident, and that the damages could not be estimated by the proportion which the injury bore to the amount payable on loss of life. The obtails V. Railacay Passonyiers Assurance Co., 10 Ex. 45; 2 C. L. It. 1034; 23 L. J., Ex. 249; 18 Jur. 583; 2 W. R. 528.

Held, also, that the assured was entitled to recover damages for the expenses and suffering occasioned by the injury, but not for loss of time or loss of profit. Ib.

Negligence—Nervous Shock.]—Damages in a case of negligent collision must be the natural and reasonable result of the defendants' act; damages for a nervous shock or mental injury caused by fright at an impending collision are too remote. The Notting Itill (9 P. D. 105) approved. Victorina Rulliway Commissioners v. Conditos, 57 L. J., P. C. 69; 13 App. Cas. 222; 58 L. T. 309; 37 W. R. 129; 52 J. P. 500—P. C. Where n gate-keeper of a milway company

Where a gate-keeper of a railway company negligently invited the plaintiffs to drive over a level crossing when it was dangerous to do so, and the jury, although an actual collision with a train was avoided, herertheless assessed damages for physical and mental injuries occasioned by the fright:—Held, that the verdict could not be sustained, and that judgment must be entered for the defendants. Quere, whether proof of "impact" was necessary to maintain the action. 2h.

While A was travelling as a passenger in an the fence, and the horse by bitting and kicking starts for the derivative through the fence injured the mare. The horse line of railway, the train, which was too heavy did not trespass upon the plaintiffs field by occupied by A., with certain others, remaining attached to the engine. The hinder part of the train having thereupon descended the incline with great velocity, the engine was reversed, and with the remaining carriages (including that in which A. was seated) followed down the incline, also at a high rate of speed, until stopped with a violent jerk. In an action for injuries sustained by A., it was proved that A. was put in great fright by the occurrence, and that she suffered from nervous shock in consequence of such fright, She was incapacitated from performing her ordinary avocations; and medical witnesses were of opinion that her symptoms might result in paralysis:—Held, that if great fright was, in the opinion of the jury, a reasonable and natural consequence of the circumstances in which the defendants had placed A., and she was actually put in great fright by these circumstances, and if injury to her health was, in their opinion, a reasonable and natural consequence of such great fright, and was actually occasioned thereby, damages for such injury would not be too remote, and might be given for them. Victorian Railway Commissioners v. Coultas (13 App. Cas. 222) not followed. Bell v. G. N. Ru., 26 L. R. Ir. 428.

Mismanagement of Railway.]—A railway engine fell over from the line into the garden of a private party. This happened through the negligence of the company's servants. Damage was done to flowers in the garden by a crowd that assembled there. In an action against the company by the occupier of the garden:—Held, that the damage done by the crowd was too remote. Scholes v. North London Ry., 21 L. T. 835.

A herd of beasts was being driven at II p.m. along an occupation road to some fields. road crossed a siding of a railway on a level, and while the cattle were crossing the siding the servants of the railway company negligently sent some trucks down an incline into the siding, which separated the cattle from the drovers and frightened them, and they rushed away. Six of them were ultimately found at between 3 and 4 a.m. lying dead or dying on another part of the railway; and they had gone along the occupation road up to a garden and orchard about a quarter of a mile from the level crossing, had got into the garden through defect in the fences, and so on to the line:-Held, that as the railway company had been guilty of negligence which caused the drovers to lose control over the cattle and caused the cattle to become infuriated, it was no answer that if the fence of the garden had not been defective the accident would not have happened; and that consequently the damages were not too remote. Sneesby v. Lun-cashire and Yorkshire Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 1; 1 Q. B. D. 42; 33 L. T. 372; 24 W. R. 99—C. A. And see CARRIERS.

Horse Kicking through Wire Fence. —The defendants were occupiers of a plot of land, which was separated from a field of the plaintiffs by a wire fence. They turned into their plot of land an entire horse; and the plaintiff put into his field a mare. The defendants horse and the plaintiffs mare got together upon either side of the fence, and the horse by bitting and kicking through the fence injured the mare. The horse did not treaves upon the plaintiff field by crossing the fence. Upon previous occasions he [1895] 2 Q. B. 640; 14 R. 767; 73 L. T. 459; had been watched, and the plaintiff had warned 44 W. R. 49; 59 J. P. 804—C. A. the defendants to keep him away from the mare. The plaintiff having sued for the injury to the mare, the county court judge held that there was no case to go to a jury :-Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment : for there was evidence that a trespass had been committed and the damage was not too remote. Ellis v. Lottus Iron Cb., 44 L. J., C. P. 24; L. R. 10 C. P. 10; 31 L. T. 483; 23 W. R. 246.

Agistment—Negligence.]—The plaintiff sent his more to the defendant to be agisted. The mare was put into a part of a field which was separated from a cricket ground by a wire fence. Through the defendant's negligence the gate between the two parts of the field was left open. whereby the mure strayed on to the cricket-ground. The cricketers attempted to drive the mare back, but instead of passing through the gateway she ran against the wire fence and was injured : + Held, that the damage was the natural consequence of leaving the gate open, and that the defendant was liable. Halestrap v. Gregory, 64 L. J., Q. B. 415: [1895] 1 Q. B. 561; 15 R. 306; 72 L. T. 292; 43 W. R. 507.

Weak Carriage Pole. |-The plaintiff bought a pole for his carriage from the defendant, a coachbuilder. The pole broke in use and the horses became frightened and were injured. In an action for the damage, the jury found that the pole was not reasonably fit for the carriage, but that the defendant had been guilty of no negligence :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the value of the pole, and also for damage to the horses, if the jury on a second trial should be of opinion that the injury to the horses was the natural consequence of the defect in the pole. Randall v. Newson, 46 L. J., Q. B. 259; 2 Q. B. D. 102; 36 L. T. 164; 25 W. R. 313—C. A.

Breach of Warranty—Remoteness.]—A ship-owner, in contracting with a stevedore with regard to the unloading of a ship, promised to supply all the necessary gearing reasonably fit for the purpose. One of the chains supplied was defective, the defect being of a kind which might have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable care on the part of the stevedore. In the course of the unloading the chain broke, and one of the stevedore's workmen was injured in consequence. The workman brought an action against the stevedore under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880; the stevedore did not contest the action. and paid the workman in settlement of his claim, which sum he now sought to recover from the shipowner as damages for breach of warranty. It was admitted that 125l. was a reasonable sum :- Hekl, that the accident to the workman was a natural consequence of the shipowner's breach of contract, and such as might reasonably be supposed to have been within the contemplation of the parties to the contract between the shipowner and the stevedore; that the want of diligence on the part of the stevedore towards his workman in not discovering the defect afforded no defence to the stevedore's action against the shipowner, and that the stevedore was entitled to recover from the shipowner, as damages for the breach of his warranty as to Natural Consequence of Original Negligence. A steamship, whilst getting up her anchors in a gale of wind to proceed to a safer anchorage, negligently failed to obtain the assistance of a tug so as to enable her to perform the manceuvre safely. She was in consequence driven against a pier, where she again negligently abstained for a considerable time from taking the assistance of a tug, which was offered to her. Having ultimately taken such assistance, she was towed in the only direction then possible, when, coming into a heavy seaway and the full force of a strong gale, the towing hawser parted and she was driven ashore, doing damage to the plaintiff's property. There was no negligence on the part of the ship after she took the assistance of the tug. Trinity masters having advised the court that the breaking of the tow rope was a thing that would "very probably" happen, considering the direction in which it was necessary to tow the ship after she had collided with the pier, and considering the wind and weather she would meet whilst being towed, it was held, that the damage.

Collision—Contract for Future Voyage—Remoteness.]—The loss to a shipowner of profit which he would, but for a collision, have derived under a contract previously entered into for a future voyage of his ship, must be taken into account in assessing the damages caused by the collision. The Argentino, 59 L. J., P. 17; 14 App. Cas. 519; 61 L. T. 706; 6 Asp. M. C. 433 -H. L. (E.)

following upon such breaking of the tow rope was a natural consequence of the defendants' original negligence, and that the owners of the ship were liable for such damage. The Gortor, 70-L. T. 703; 7 Asp. M. C. 472.

—— One Ship Solely to Blame—Subsequent. Loss of Injured Ship.]—The defendants' ship, which was admitted to have been solely to blame, collided with the plaintiff's barque, cutting off her starboard quarter, the captain of the barque losing his usual means of navigating his shipnamely, his steering compass, log-line, and charts -and being left with an inefficient compass and chart. The captain, in order to save his ship, made for the Thames, and, without any want of care or skill in navigating his ship, mistook a certain lightship which he saw, and, the course of his ship being altered, she almost immediately afterwards stranded:—Held, that the defendants were liable for the ultimate loss of the plaintiff's ship, and that the damages claimed in respect thereof were not too remote, as the stranding was the natural and reasonable result of the defendant's wrongful act, and was such a consequence as, in the ordinary course of things, would flow from their act. The City of Lincoln, 59 L. J., P. 1; 15 P. D. 15; 62 L. T. 49; 88 W. R. 345; 6 Asp. M. C. 475—C. A.

Explosion of Gas. ]-A gas company, having contracted to supply the plaintiff with a service pine from their main to the meter on his premises, laid down a defective pipe, from which the gas escaped. A workman, in the employ of a gas fitter engaged by the plaintiff to lay down the pipes leading from the meter over the prethe lines of the genting, the amount which he had paid in settlement of the workman's claim, Morebray 7. Merryacather, 95 L J., Q. B. 50; [ceeded. An explosion then took place, whereby damage was occasioned to the plaintiff's pre- unless such loss or injury would have occurred in miss. to recover compensation for which he whichever way the property had been dealt with. brought an action against the company:—Held, Ib. that the damage was not too remote, and that the plaintiff, not being the master of the workman, could not be considered as contributing to the damage by reason of his act, and was therefore entitled to recover. Burrows v. March Gas and Che Co., 41 L. J., Ex. 46; L. R. 7 Ex. 96; 26 L. T. 318; 20 W. R. 493—Ex. Ch.

Horse Slipping on Ice in Road. ]-A servant (in breach of the Metropolitan Police Act, 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 54) washed a van in a public street, and allowed the waste water to run down the gutter towards a grating leading to the sewer, about twenty-five yards off. In consequence of the extreme severity of the weather, the grating was obstructed by ice, and the water flowed over a portion of the causeway, which was ill paved and uneven, and there froze. There was no evidence that the master knew of the grating being obstructed. A horse, while being led past the spot, slipped upon the ice and broke its leg :-Held, that this was a consequence too remote to be attributed to the wrongful act of the servant. Sharp v. Powell, 41 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 7 C. P. 253; 26 L. T. 436; 20 W. R. 584.

Trespass to Coal Mine. ]-A defendant trespassed on the plaintiff's coal mine and worked part of the coal, leaving large pillars of coal unworked. Evidence having been brought to shew that the coal left unworked was rendered practically worthless :-Held, that damages in respect of the coal so left were not too remote. Williams v. Raggett, 46 L. J., Ch. 849; 37 L. T. 96; 25 W. R. 874.

Deterioration of Lighters by Seizure.]-In August, 1868, a company brought an action against the defendant, and obtained a warrant of seizure against certain lighters which belonged to him. The seizure remained in force till May, 1864, when it was released, the company failing in the action. In 1867 a creditor of the defendant seized the lighters under an execution, and they were sold. The defendant then commenced an action against the company to recover the difference between the cost price of the lighters and the price at which they had been sold, alleging that they had been deteriorated by the previous seizure :- Held, that the damages were too remote, and could not reasonably have been foreseen as the consequences of the seizure, and that the defendant could not recover. Nicosia v. Vallone, 37 L. T. 106-P. C.

Contract to Warehouse Goods in Particular Ib. Place. ]-The defendant contracted to warehouse certain goods for the plaintiff at a particular place, but he warehoused a part of them at the slander was false, the fact that it was false another place where, without any negligence on his part, they were destroyed. In an action to as an objection to the husband appearing on the recover as damages the value of the goods :-Held, that the damage was not too remote, and that the defendant, by his breach of contract, had rendered himself liable for the loss of the goods. Lilley v. Doubleday, 7 Q. B. D. 510; 44 L. T. 814.

If the owner of property gives another person authority to deal with it in a particular way, the bank the waters of a tidal river overflowed and such person chooses to deal with it in the low lands lying west of the cut. The plainanother way, he must take the risk of the con-sequences, and is liable for its loss or injury, the cut, the water from which land used to drain to

Refusal to Admit Ship into Dock. |-- In an action for a breach of contract, in not admitting the plaintiff's ship into the defendant's dock whereby she grounded when the tide ebbed, and was damaged, it appeared that the ship left in ballast a dry dock, where she had been repaired, and, in charge of a pilot, was towed by a steamtug to the dock, where she arrived about high water. In consequence of the chain of the dock gate being broken, she could not be admitted. The captain was unacquainted with the navigation, and, considering that the ship was not sufficiently ballasted to go to sea, directed her to be anchored where she was. At the ebb of the tide she grounded and was damaged. There was conflicting evidence as to the state of the weather. The jury was asked first, whether there was a place of safety to which the ship could have been taken before the tide ebbed; and, secondly, whose fault it was that she was not taken there. Upon the first question they returned no answer, being unable to agree, but replied to the second, that neither the captain nor the pilot was to blame :- Held, per Martin, B., that the damages were not too remote to be recovered by the plaintiff. Per Pollock, C.B., Channell, B., and Pigott, B., that the finding of the jury was not sufficient to enable them to come to a conclusion, and that there must be a new trial. Wilson v. Newport Dock Co., 4 H. & C. 232; 35 L. J., Ex. 97; L. R. 1 Ex. 177; 12 Jur. (N.s.) 233; 14 L. T. 230; 14 W. R. 558.

Defamation-Special Damage.]-Where a wife (her husband being joined for conformity) brought an action to recover damages from A., for slander uttered by him to her hasband, imputing to her that she had been almost seduced by B. before her marriage, and that her husband ought not to let B. visit at his house; and the ground of special damage alleged was, that in consequence of the slander the husband forced her to leave his house, and return to her father, whereby she lost the consortium of her husband :- Held, that the cause of complaint would not sustain the action, for that the special damage did not show, in the conduct of the husband, a natural and reasonable consequence of the slander. Lynch v. Knight, 9 H. L. Cas. 577; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 724; 5 L. T. 291.

The loss by the wife of her maintenance by the husband, occasioned by slander uttered by a third person, may be made the subject of a claim for damages; but such loss cannot be presumed to have so arisen, it must be distinctly averred.

In such a case, though the act of the husband in sending away his wife was wrongful, because cannot be taken advantage of by the slanderer record as a plaintiff. Ib.

Flooding Lands. ]-In consequence of the negligence of commissioners under an act of parliament for improving the drainage of fen lands, the western bank of a cut made by them under their act gave way, and through the breach in the west side through a culvert of the com- recover damages where the injury to the property missioners, which by their act of parliament they were to maintain open for a free passage of such water. After the bank had given way, but be-fore the waters of the flood had reached the culvert, the plaintiff stopped up the culvert, but the occupiers of lands on the west side of the cut. considering that the stopping of the culvert would be injurious to their lands, by preventing the great body of advancing water from finding an outlet there, removed the stoppage, and the result was that the flood waters passed through the culvert from the western to the eastern side of the cut, and reached and inundated the plaintiff's land. In an action by him for the damage sustained by his land being so inundated :— Held, that he was entitled to recover such damage, notwithstanding it arose in part by the opening of the culvert after he had stopped it up, as such damage was the natural result of the negligence of the commissioners. Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners, 38 L. J., C. P. 236; L. R. 4 C. P. 279; 20 L. T. 442; 17 W. R. 929.

In consequence of a railway embankment, the food waters of a river were pent back and flowed over land of the plaintiff, doing injury to a certain amount; had the embankment not been constructed, the waters would have flowed a different way, but would have reached the plaintiff's land, and would have done damage to a lesser amount:-Held, that the measure of damages recoverable by the plaintiff against the railway company was the difference only between the two amounts. Workman v. G. N. Ry., 32 L. J., Q. B. 279.

- Injury to Reversion. - Owing to the negligence of the defendants a building estate belonging to the plaintiff was overflowed by a flood. Part of the land was covered with houses (A) which were in the plaintiff's possession.
Another part was covered with houses (B) creeted by builders under building leases. Other parts were the subject of building agreements under which houses (C) were in course of erection, and the plaintiff was bound to make and had made advances to the builders on the security of the property. The remainder of the land (D) was vacant, and in the plaintiff's possession. The amount of damages to which the plaintiff was entitled was referred to a special referce. In respect of (A) the referee allowed as damages (1) the expense of repairing the honses, and the rent during the period of repairs; (2) the loss arising from the reduced reutal for four years in consequence of the prejudice against the neighbourhood caused by the flood. As to (B), he found that there was no injury which would last to the end of the leases, but he allowed a sum for depreciation of the selling value of the landlord's interest, in consequence of the houses being worth less to let. As to (C), he deducted the value of the houses when repaired and completed, less the expense of repairing and completing them, from the amount advanced, and awarded this difference to the plaintiff for depreciation of mortgage seenrities. As to (D), he gave three mouths of an estimated rent for delay in letting .—Held, that (A) (2) must be disallowed, for the loss of rental arising from the prejudice against the neighbourhood caused by the flood was not the natural result of or directly caused by the flood, and was not a legitimate ground for giving damages: That the sum allowed in respect of (B) must also That the sum allowed in respect of (B) must also

2. Personal Inconvenience,

Generally. - In an action of tort for injury to the plaintiff personally, damage for loss of profit on contracts which might have been entered into by him, is too remote. Priestley v. Maclean, 2 F. & F. 288. See Hobbs v. London & S. W. Ry., ante, col. 264.

On False Imprisonment.]—A defendant caused the plaintiff to be apprehended upon an unfounded charge, and to be detained from half-past one until two o'clock. In support of a claim for special damage in an action for false imprisonment, the plaintiff proved that he would have been engaged as a journeyman if he had presented himself at the factory at two o'clock on the day in question; but that, being unwell from the treatment he had received, he went home and did not go to the factory until the next morning, when he found that his intended employer had engaged another man :- Held. that this damage was too remote, Hoey v. Felton, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 142; 31 L. J., C. P. 105; 8 Jnr. (N.S.) 764; 5 L. T. 354; 10 W. R. 78.

In estimating damages in an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, the jury must consider not only the sufferings and loss of the plaintiff, but also the necessity which exists for the occasional prosecution of innocent persons in order to prevent the escape of criminals from justice. Tulley v. Corrie, 16 L. T. 796.

An equity barrister of eminence was arrested by the officers of the sheriff of Surrey, in mistake for another person of the same name, the officers acting bona fide, on information given them by the clerk of the attorney who had sued out the writ. Under such circumstances and without any special damage, the party is entitled to substantial and liberal compensation. But where there is no special damage, 250 guineas are sufficiently in excess of what is required, as to be ground for granting a rule absolute for reducing the damages, or for a new trial. Davidson v. Molyneur, 17 L. T. 289.

recover, as special damage, additional passage money paid for returning in another ship, to which he had removed unless proof is given either that the imprisonment continued until the time of removal, or that the passenger had a reasonable fear of his personal safety. Boyce v.

Bauliffe, 1 Camp. 58.

The plaintiff shipped as a seaman, at a certain rate of wages per month, on board the vessel of the defendant at London, under articles for a commercial voyage not to exceed twelve calendar months to Rio de Janeiro, and different ports in the Atlantic and Pacific, and to terminate by his being brought back to some port in the United Kingdom or Continent of Europe between the Elbe and Brest. On arriving at Rio, the defendant proposed to employ his vessel as a ship of war in the service of the Pernylan government in the hostilities then being carried on between Pern and Spain. The plaintiff thereupon refused to proceed any further with the voyage, on the ground that it was illegal, and exposed him to risks and dangers not contemplated by his agreement with the defendant, and he accordingly left the slip, without leave, and went on shore at Rio, where he was arrested by the Pernvian authorities as a deserter from a Pernvian vessel of war, and committed to prison, where he remained some eight or ten days. Upon coming out of prison he found that his vessel had sailed away, and that his clothes and other articles belonging to him, which he had left on board, were gone. In an action to recover damages for the breach of the contract, the jury found a verdiet for the plaintiff, and assessed the damages resulting from such breach under three headsnamely, first, 12l. 10s. for the loss of wages which the plaintiff would have carned under the coutract had it been continued; and secondly, 201. for the loss of the clothes; and thirdly, 30%, for general damages for the imprisonment and otherwise by reason of the defendant's breach of contract :- Held, that the damages given under the second and third heads-viz, for the clothes and the imprisonment, were too remote to be made the subject of an action. Burton v. Pinkerton, 36 L. J., Ex. 137; L. R. 2 Ex. 340; 17 L. T. 15; 15 W. R. 1139.

Forcible Removal. ]-A passenger by railway was ordered to leave the carriage by the company's servants under circumstances which did not justify them in what they were doing. Upon leaving the carriage he placed a pair of raceglasses upon the seat, which, as the train proceeded, was lost :- Held, that the loss of these glasses was not the natural result of the wrongful act, and that the passenger could not recover their value. Glover v. L. & S. W. Ry., 37 L. J., Q. B. 57; L. R. 3 Q. B. 25; 17 L. T. 139.

Railway-Delay-Hotel Expenses. |-- A commercial traveller delivered a parcel of samples to a carrier to be carried to A., but did not state the contents of the parcel, or the purpose for which it was required. By the negligence of the carrier the parcel was delayed, and the traveller spent three days at A. unemployed, waiting for it. In an action against the carrier for negligence, in which the hotel expenses of the traveller during the time he was waiting for the parcel were claimed as damages :- Held, that such damages were too remote, and could not be recovered. Woodger v. G. W. Ry., 36 L. J., C. P. 177; L. R. 2 C. P. 318; 15 L. T. 579; 15 W. R. 383.

- Special Train.]—If a passenger on the railway of a company who has contracted to pay every attention to cusnre punctuality, takes a special train in order to avoid a delay that has arisen through the negligence of the company, the question whether he can recover the cost of the special train from the company will depend on whether the taking it was a reasonable thing to do having regard to all the circumstances. One mode of determining what would be reasonable is to consider whether under the circumstances a prudent person would have taken a special train at his own expense to avoid a delay that had arisen through his own fault. Le Blanche v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., C. P. 521; 1 C. P. D. 286; 34 L. T. 667; 24 W. R. 808—C. A.

Contract to appoint Captain-Loss of Voyage. ] Where a defendant having purchased certain shares of an East India ship commanded by the plaintiff, and chartered by the company for four voyages, proposed to the plaintiff to resign the command in favour of the plaintiff's nephew, on receiving in exchange the command of another ship, and two voyages only were performed at the time of the commencement of an action against the defendant for a breach of the agreement, in not appointing the plaintiff to succeed him :-Held, that the jury might give damages for the loss of the two remaining voyages. Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bing. 229; 9 Moore, 435; 1 Car. & P. 241; R. & M. 66; 3 L. J. (0.8.)

Loss of Credit.]—In an action by a principal against his agent in a particular branch for abandoning his agency, the jury having given damages for losses sustained by the principal in collateral branches of his business, by reason of the injury done to his credit by the agent's abandonment of his agency, the court refused to interfere with the verdiet, or to consider the damage too remote. Boyd v. Fitt. 14 Ir. C. L. R. 43: 11 L. T. 280.

3. MEASURE OF VALUE AND LOSS.

a. General Principles.

Contract. |- The rule of the common law is. that where a party sustains a loss by reason of a breach of contract, he is, so far as money can do it, to be placed in the same situation, with respect to damages, as if the contract had been performed. Robinson v. Harman, 1 Ex. 855.

In actions of breach of contract, no damages ean be in general recovered that are incapable of being specifically stated and appreciated with certainty, and which depend merely on the feelings or inclination of the jury to give. Humlin v. G. N. Ry., 1 H. & N. 408; 26 L. J., Ex. 20; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1122; 5 W. R. 76.

Solicitor's Negligence.]-An attorney had been employed to complete a purchase of a leasehold property, which his client had made at an auction, on conditions which stipulated that he should take an under-lease, and not demand an abstract of the vendor's title, nor inquire into the title of the lessor. He made no inquiries. but simply got a pretended lease executed by the seller, who had sold fraudulently, without any title whatever, the lease itself not even reciting any title, and the pretended seller giving actual possession, and not having any deed or document in his possession, to adduce as any evidence of the purchaser was evicted by the real owner :-Held, that there was evidence of negligence on the part of the attorney; and that the proper measure of damage was the sum the client had to pay to obtain a title, with interest, and withont any deduction for rent, as he was liable over to the true owner for mesne profits during the time he occupied as owner. Allen v. Clark, 7 L. T. 781: 11 W. R. 304.

Conduct conducing to Damage. Timber was consigned by the plaintiff's ship "Johan" to the defendant, and landed and delivered to him in a harbour, by a statute for the regulation of which certain dues were payable thereon by him. The defendant failing to pay these dues, the ship was detained for nine days by the harbour authorities, at the expiration of which time the master obtained her release by paying the demand himself :- Held, that, assuming that the defendant was by the statute liable to pay the dues, and that the detention of the vessel was justifiable, the plaintiff was only entitled to recover the amount which he had paid for the dues, but not damages for the time the vessel was detained; inasmuch as he might at once have procured her release by payment of the money. Müller v. Jecks, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 332.

Agreement to Lend Money, !-- On a contract to take debentures in a company, no action will lie for the money agreed to be lent. An action will only lie for breach of the contract. measure of the damages is the loss sustained by the company through the breach. South African Territories v. Wallington, 66 L. J., Q. B. 551; [1897] 1 Q. B. 692; 76 L. T. 520; 45 W. R. 467

Where there is an agreement to lend money, and special damage results from the breach of that agreement, and a party is deprived of the opportunity of getting money clsewhere, sub-stantial, and not merely nominal, damages ought to be awarded. Manchester and Oldham Bank v. Cook, 49 L. T. 674.

b. Where no Market.

Non-Acceptance-Buty of Party Injured. ]-The damages for the breach of a forward contract to accept goods for which there is no market, is the full amount of the damage actually sustained, the person who broke the contract not being put to additional cost by reason of the other party not doing what he ought to do, as a reasonable man, and he, on the other hand, not being bound to do otherwise than is the ordinary course of his business. The plaintiffs contracted to sell to the defendant 15,000 tons of cannel coal in weekly quantities, the deliveries not to commence before June, at 26s. per ton, payable by monthly instalments, the defendant not to sell in certain specified places. The defendant repudiated the contract in July, but the plaintiffs attempted to come to terms with him, and did not treat it as broken until September, when, there being no regular market far cannel coal, they tried without advertising to find another purchaser according to the ordinary course of their own business. After several failures, the coal was sold at 19s. per ton .—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to title, had he been asked for such evidence, and Lever v. Dunkirk Colliery Co., 43 L. T. 706-H. L. (E.)

> Non-Delivery. ]-Where goods are not delivered at the time specified in a contract for delivery, and their place can be supplied in the market, the measure of damages is the difference between the contract price and the market price, when they ought to have been delivered. If their place cannot be supplied in the market, and the vendee has done all that a person with reasonable care and skill could do to diminish the loss, the measure of damages is the difference between the value of the goods when they were delivered, and when they should have been delivered. Borries v. Hutchinson, 18 C. B. (x.s.) 445; 34 L. J., G. P. 169; 11 Jur. (x.s.) 267; 11 L. T. 771; 13 W. R. 386.

When goods, which cannot be procured in the market, are sold to be delivered on a day certain, the purchaser is entitled to recover, in an action for breach of contract to deliver, the amount which he has reasonably expended to avert the loss which he would otherwise have sustained from non-delivery. Hinde v. Liddell, 44 L. J. O. B. 105; L. R. 10 O. B. 265; 32 L. T. 449; 23

In an action against a railway company for the non-delivery of drapery goods, the measure of damages is the price at which the goods can be obtained in the market, if there is one at the place and time at which the goods ought to have been delivered; if not, the damages must be ascertaized by taking into consideration, in addition to the cost price and expense of transit, the reasonable profit of the importer. O'Hunlan v. G. W. Ry., 6 B. & S. 484; 34 L. J., Q. B. 154; 11 Jun. (N.S.) 797; 12 L. T. 490; 13 W. R. 741.

Where goods are delivered to a carrier to be carried from A. to B., and are lost, the owner isentitled to recover the value of the goods at B.; and that value is the price for which they can begot to, not at, B. Rice v. Barendale, 7 H. & N.

96; 30 L. J., Ex. 371.

—— Sub-Sale.]—In an action for damages for non-delivery of goods, where the same class of goods is not obtainable in the market at the place of delivery, the price on a sub-sale by a purchaser is evidence of the value of the goods, and the amount by which such price on sub-sale exceeds the contract price may be recovered asdamages, although the seller at the time of the contract had no notice of the sub-sale. Strond v. Austin, 1 Cab. & E. 119.

A purchaser bought champagne lying at a wharf at 14s. per dozen, and resold it at 24s. tothe captain of a ship about to leave England, The wharfinger refused to deliver the wine, and the purchaser was mable to fulfil his contract, champagne of a similar quality not being pro-curable in the market. The wharfinger had no-knowledge of the sale, or of the purpose for which the purchaser required delivery of the champagne. In an action for the conversion: -Held, that he was entitled, as damages, to the price at which he had sold the champagne.

c. Market Value.

Subsequent Fall in Price.]-In an action the full amount of the difference between the against a collector of customs, for refusing to contract price and that which they obtained, sign a bill of entry for landing a cargo of foreign wheat, on which no duty was payable, the proper compelled by their mortgagor to replace the measure of damages is the amount of loss sus-tained by the plaintiff, by reason of a subsequent fall in the price of wheat. Barrow v. Arnaud, 8 Q. B. 595; 10 Jur. 313—Ex. Ch.

At what Time-Delay in Delivery by Request.]—When a vendor of goods, by contract in writing, at the request of the purchaser, who is at the time fixed for delivery unable to take and pay for the goods, withholds delivery till a later date on a parol promise to the purchaser to that effect:—Held, that, if at the expiration of the later date so fixed the purchaser refuses to accept delivery, the vendor may sue for damages as for a breach at the time fixed for delivery by the original contract, and is entitled to damages according to the market price at the later date verbally fixed for the purchaser's convenience. Hirkman v. Haynes, 44 L. J., C. P. 358; L. R. 10 C. P. 598; 32 L. T. 873; 23 W. R. 872.

Delay in Purchasing at Request.]-After the breach of an agreement to deliver goods, the buyer, at the seller's request, waited several months before bnying other goods in the place of those contracted for :- Held, that the true measure of damages was the difference between the contract price and the price of the substituted goods, though this price was greater than that of such goods when the contract was first broken. Ogle v. Vane (Lord), 9 B. & S. 182; 37 L. J., Q. B. 77; L. R. 3 Q. B. 272; 16 W. R. 463 -Ex. Ch.

- At Time of Breach. ]-A defendant sold a quantity of naphtha to the plaintiff at 2s. 2d. a gallon by sample; on the faith of this contract the plaintiff next day resold the naphtha, by sample, to H, at 2s. 6d. a gallon. The defendant failed to deliver the naphtha according to his agreement. The market price of naphtha rose to 5s. 9d. a gallon, so that the plaintiff was unable to perform his sub-contract with H. except at a greatly increased price. On a writ of inquiry to assess damages, the jary found a verdict for the plaintiff for 437l. 10s., being the full difference between 2s. 2d. and 5s. 9d. a gallon:—Held, that the damages were rightly assessed, and that the proper measure of damage is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time of the breach. Josling v. Irvine, 6 H. & N. 512; 30 L. J., Ex. 78; 4 L. T. 251.

An officer in the army, employed in the civil service of the government of Australia, received a promise from the governor of the colony of a grant of certain land, upon condition that he settled in the colony. He retired from the army, and settled in the colony. His claim having been from time to time deferred, he took proceedings under a local act, enabling him, against the government of the colony, to obtain compensation :- Held, that he was cutitled to compensation, measured by the value of the specific land at the time of the commencement of the suit.

Robertson v. Dumarcsq, 10 L. T. 110; 13 W. R. 280.

A banking company who were mortgagees of Spanish bonds, employed the defendant to raise money upon them by deposit in his own name : the party with whom the defendant deposited them called on the defendant for repayment, and, on default, sold the bonds, with the concurrence of the defendant, without the knowledge of the was answerable to the company for the market price of the bonds at the time of the actual sale, and that he was not answerable for the value of the bonds at any other time. Gordon v. Pum. 3 Hare, 223.

Carrier's Liability, though no Notice. |-- In an action against a carrier for non-delivery, according to contract, of goods of a marketable kind intended for sale, the jury may give as damages the difference between the market value on the day the goods ought to have been brought to market, and the day on which they are afterwards brought to market, although no notice is given to the carrier that the goods were intended for market; for such damages are the natural and immediate consequence of the act. Collurd v. S. E. Ry., 7 H. & N. 79; 30 L. J., Ex. 393; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 950; 4 L. T. 410; 9 W. R. 697. A. sent hops in bags from Kent to London by a railway, for the purpose of delivering to the vendee, a hop dealer. The hops were detained by the company several days, and received some damage from water, and the vendee refused to accept them. A. dried the hops, and when fit for sale the price had fallen in value. Independently of that, the stained portion of the hops deteriorated the marketable value of the whole, although for the purpose of brewing the value of the bulk was unaffected :- Held, that A, was entitled to recover, as damages from the company, the difference in price of the amount of deterioration in the market value, and was not confined to the value of the parts actually damaged, although the company had no notice that the hops were sent for the purpose of sale, and not for use. Ib.

The damages recoverable for breach of a contract to carry goods must be such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties at the time they made the contract, as what would be the probable result of a breach of it. Hurne v. Midland Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 59; L. R. 8 C. P. 131; 28 L. T. 312; 21 W. R. 481-Ex. Ch.

Where goods are being earried by sea, and owing to delay in delivery the market has fallen before their arrival, damages for such depreciation cannot be recovered. The Parana, 2 P. D. 118; 36 L. T. 388; 25 W. R. 596-C. A.

- Loss of Market. ]-The defendants advertised that they would convey fish from London to Bonlogne at certain through rates by their special tidal train and passenger boat, "wind, weather and tide permitting." A consignment of fish intended for the Paris market (of which fact the defendants had notice) was delivered by the plaintiffs in London to the defendants, to be forwarded to Boulogue. Owing to rough weather, it was not put on board the passenger boat at Folkestone, but was sent on by a cargo boat, which arrived at Boulogne too late for the train to Paris. It was delayed at Boulogue for twenty-four hours, and deteriorated, and was put up for sale in the Paris market a day late :-Held, that there was no absolute undertaking to carry the fish by any particular train and boat, and that, if the defendants under the circumstances had used all reasonable care to deliver the fish company, and paid the balance of the proceeds with the utmost possible despatch, they had disto the defendant. The company was afterwards charged their obligation, and that damages could

Hawes v. S. E. Ry., 54 L. J., Q. B. 174; 52 L. T. 5 Tyr. 697; 4 L. J., Ex. 218. .514.

A ship having been damaged by collision with another ship, the owners of cargo on the former claimed damages from the owners of the latter ship. The cargo-owners claimed, inter alia, for damages in respect of the loss of market in consequence of a portion of the cargo having been delayed in its arrival at the port of destination : -Held, that loss of market was too remote a consequence to be considered as an element of damage, and that there was no difference in the principles as to remoteness of damage, whether the damages are claimed in contract or in tort. The Notting Hill, 53 L. J., P. 56; 9 P. D. 105; 51 L. T. 66; 32 W. R. 764; 5 Asp. M. C. 241-C. A.

The defendant, the master of the steamer "Carbis Bay," lying at Wilmington, signed bills of lading for 400 bales of cotton "shipped on board the 'Carbis Bay'" for Liverpool. In consequence of insufficient room only 165 bales could be shipped, and the defendant directed the remaining 235 bales to be shipped on board the steamer "Wylo," then lying in the same port, bound for Liverpool. The "Carbis Bay" arrived at Liverpool on the 26th of October, and the "Wylo" on the 29th of October, and both cargoes were delivered to the plaintiffs, who were in-dersees of the bills of lading. Between the 26th and the 29th of October a fall in the price of cotton took place, and the plaintiffs sucd the defendant for the loss thereby occasioned:— Held, that on the 26th of October the plaintiffs had a right of action against the defendant for non-delivery, that the measure of damages was the market price of cotton on that day, and that the subsequent delivery of the cotton ex " Wylo" could only be taken into account in reduction of damages, Smith v. Tregarthen, 56 L. J., Q. B. 437; 57 L. T. 58; 35 W. R. 665; 6 Asp. M. C.

Where Goods Previously Paid for. ]-The measure of damages for the non-delivery of goods, paid for at the time of purchase, is the difference between that price and the highest price the goods have attained up to the time of trial. Elliot v. Hughes, 3 F. & F. 387.

No Special Damage.]—In an action for a breach of contract, in not delivering a quantity of linseed pursuant to a contract of sale, it appeared that the plaintiff, pursuant to contract, had paid part of the purchase-money to the vendor in advance; that the defendant at the time when the linseed ought to have been delivered, had notice of his inability to perform the contract, but the money was not returned until after the action was commenced, when the amount was paid into court, with interest up to the time it was so paid in, as a consideration for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, and was only obtained out of court by the plaintiff a short time before the trial :- Held, that in estimating the damages the plaintiff was not entitled to take the price of linseed at the time of the trial as a criterion; and not having proved that he had sustained any special damage from the non-delivery of the seed and the non-return of the money, that the repayment of the money advanced, with simple interest upon it, and payment with case, with simple interest upon n and payment between the price he was to have poor to the difference between the contract price and and the market price when he was entitled to the price of the linseed at the time when it ought them. Chinery v. Viall, 5 H. & N. 288; 29 L. J., to have been delivered, was that to which he was Ex. 180; 2 L. T. 466; 8 W. R. 629.

not be given for the loss of the market in Paris. entitled. Startup v. Cortazzi, 2 C. M. & R. 165;

Payment by Bill subsequently Dishonoured. ]-Where, in a contract of sale, there are specified days for the delivery of the goods, and payment is to be made by bill, if the bill is given but dishonoured before the goods are delivered, the parties are placed in the same position as if no bill had been given, or as if the contract had been for ready money; and, therefore, if the vendor is sued by the vendee, after the dishonour of the bill, for non-delivery of the goods, the measure of damages is not the full contract price, but the difference between the contract and the market price of the goods at the time of the breach of contract to deliver. Valpy v. Oakley, 16 Q. B. 941; 20 L. J., Q. B. 380; 16 Jur. 38

— Parties.]—On 30th October, 1857, A. agreed with B. to buy of him 100 parcels of iron of a named quality, and 300 parcels of iron of another quality, to be delivered immediately, and paid for by a bill of exchange at four months' date, down. No specific from was appropriated for the purposes of the contract. A. gave the bill, which, on the 31st October, 1857, B. indorsed to his bankers, who continued the holders till the bill fell due. B. duly delivered the 100 parcels of iron, and gave A. a delivery order for the 300 parcels, which A., on 19th November, 1857, indorsed to his bankers, H. & Co., and a few days afterwards gave notice of the indorsement. H. & Co. presented the order at the works where the iron was lying, on 19th November, 1857, when delivery of it was refused. On 17th November, 1857, B. suspended payment, and on 10th February, 1858, A. was adjudicated a bankrupt. On 5th March, 1858, the bill given by A. fell due, and was dishonoured. The banking company, though they claimed to be creditors of A, for the amount of the bill, did not prove against his estate, nor had A. paid any part of the amount. B., however, had paid them a the amount. B., however, had paid them a composition of 8s. in the pound upon the amount of the bill:—Held, in an action for the non-delivery of the 300 parcels of iron, that A. was entitled to recover only nominal damages, and that the fact that H. & Co. were the real plaintiffs, suing in A.'s name, could not be taken into consideration as affecting the damages, inasmuch as H. & Co. could have no greater right to recover than A. himself had. Griffiths v. Perry, 1 El. & El. 680; 28 L. J., Q. B. 204; 5 Jnr. (N.S.)

Conversion—Re-sale.]—The plaintiff having contracted with the defendant to buy of him a lot of sheep at a certain price (less than the market price), to be paid for on delivery, took away five, for which he paid in a day or two, and agreed to take the rest in a fortnight. Within that time, before any application for the remainder, the defendant sent them away and resold them. The vendee then, within the fortnight, applied for half of them, offering to pay for them; and finding that they were resold, sued the vendor on the contract, and also in trover :-Held, that he was not entitled, on either count, to recover the full value, but only the difference between the price he was to have paid for them, of damages is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time of the breach. Pawell v. Jessapp, 18 C. B. 336.
In an action for not delivering railway shares, the measure of damages is the difference between the price of the shares at the time of the contract, and the day on which it is broken, allowing the purchaser a reasonable time, however, to purchase other shares. Shaw v. Holland, 15 M. & W. 136; 4 Railw. Cas. 150; 15 L. J., Ex.

87: 10 Jur.-100.

In an action against a public company for improperly withholding shares after tender of the sum due for calls and interest, the proper measure of damages is the value of the shares at the market price of the day of the tender, deducting the amount of calls and interest. Van Diemen's Land Co. v. Cocherell, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 732-Ex. Ch.

Deposit of Shares.]—Where the defendant, after signing an acknowledgment that scrip had been lodged in his hands by the plaintiff, and was to be redelivered to him on request, wrongfully detained the scrip for a considerable time, so that its market value had been much diminished, and did not redeliver it until after action brought :- Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to more than nominal damages. Archer v. Williams, 2 Car. & K. 26. See S. C., 5 C. B. 318; 17 L. J., C. P. 82.

But where the plaintiff suffered loss by the detention in this, that he was thereby deprived of the means of paying up his deposits, which would have entitled him to claim an allotment of other shares :-Held, that the damage was too remote. Ib.

The true measure of damages in an action for not redelivering shares lent upon a contract to return them on a given day, is not the market price at the time of the breach, but the market price at the time of the trial. Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 327; 2 C. L. R. 365; 23 L. J., C. P. 105; 18 Jur. 356.

And see SALE OF GOODS.

d. Where Sub-Contracts or Special Purpose.

Loss of Profits. ]-In an action for damages for breach of contract in the sale of goods, the measure of damages is not merely the amount of the difference between the contract price and the price at which such goods could be bought at the moment when the contract was broken, but likewise a compensation for such profit as might have been made by the purchaser had the contract been duly performed. Dunlop v. Higgins, 1 H. L. Cas. 381; 12 Jur. 295.

The ordinary rule as to the measure of damages in case of breach of contract to accept a manufactured article, applies equally in the case of an unmanufactured article. Where, therefore, in the case of an anmanufactured article, there is a market price at the date of breach, the profits that would have arisen from the contract, and the losses sustained through its breach, cannot be considered as elements of the damage. On Sale of Shares.]—Upon the breach of a the message was in cipher, wholly unintelligible contract for the sale of shares, the proper measure to any but the plaintiff and his correspondent at New York. Through the defendant's negligence the message was not sent, and the plaintiff thereby lost profits which he would have made-had the order been executed:—Held, in an action for such negligence, that the plaintiff could not recover more than nominal damages. Sunders v. Stuart, 45 L. J., C. P. 682; 1 C. P. D. 326; 35 L. T. 870; 24 W. R. 949.

> Penalty-General Loss of Trade. ]-The defendant sold to the plaintiff adulterated butter, with a warranty that the substance was butter. The plaintiff retailed the same to customers, and, being prosecuted under the Margarine Act, 1887, was fined 31. In an action for breach of warranty :- Held, that the plaintiff could not recover damages for general loss of trade profits, whether consequent on such conviction or on the resales to customers of the adulterated substance, nor could recover as damages the amount of thefine imposed. Fitzgerald v. Leonard, 32 L. R. Ir. 675.

> Notice of Purpose for which Goods sent. ]-The plaintiff delivered a parcel at a receiving office of the defendants in London, addressed to "W. H. M., Stand 23, Show Ground, Lichfield, Staffordshire; van train." Nothing was said by the person who delivered the parcel at the receiving office as to the purpose for which it was being sent to Lichfield, or to draw attention to the label :—Held, that the label was sufficient notice to the defendants that the goods were being sent to a show, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover damages for loss of profits and expenses incurred by the goods being delayed, and not delivered at Liehfield in time for the show. Jameson v. Midland Ry., 50 L. T.

A parcel of samples was delivered to the defendants, a railway company, to be forwarded to the plaintiffs. By the negligence of the defendants, who had notice that the parcel contained samples, it was delayed on the way until the season at which the samples could be used for procuring orders had elapsed, and they had in consequence become valueless. The plaintiffs could not have procured similar samples in the market. In an action for the non-delivery in a reasonable time:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover as damages the value to them of the samples at the time when they should have been delivered. Loss of Profits-Contract to Re-sell. |- In an action for breach of contract to deliver goods it was shown that the goods were not procurable in the market, that the plaintiff had entered into a contract of sub-sale, which in consequence of the non-delivery he could not perform, that such contract was not known to the defendant at the time of sale, but that he knew that the goods had been purchased by the plaintiff for re-sale :- Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages for loss of profit on the re-sale. - Contract to deliver in Two Months-Sub-Contract for Supply as soon as Possible-Notice.] -The plaintiff contracted with J. to manufacture a pile-driving machine within two months. thre a passurrum machine within two months. Shortly afterwards the defendant contracted with the plaintiff to make a portion of that machine "as soon as possible." The terms of the plaintiff's contract with I, were known to The defendant did not fulfil his the detendant. contract with the plaintiff until after the expirathe plaintiff and J., and J. refused to accept the machine:—Held, that the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant was to be performed within a reasonable time, to be measured, not by the particular existing staff and appliances of the defendant's business, but by the time in which a reasonably diligent manufacturer of the same class as the defendant would take in carrying out the contract. Hydraulic Engineering Co. v. McHaffie, 4 Q. B. D. 670; 27 W. R. 221— C. A.

Held, also, that the defendant was liable for the damages and loss of profit flowing to the plaintiff from the breach of his contract with J. Th. See Cory v. Thames Iromcorks Co., and British Columbia Saw Mill Co. v. Nettleship, post, cols. 289, 299.

Non-Delivery.]—On a contract to sell cotton of a certain quality at a certain price, to be delivered at a future time, the measure of damages for non-delivery is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time limited for the delivery; and the buyer cannot recover for the loss of profit which he would have made by carrying out a resale at a higher price made in the interval between the contract and the time for delivery. Williams v. Reynolds, 6 B. & S. 495; 34 L. J., Q. B. 221;

11 Jur. (N.S.) 973; 12 L. T. 728; 13 W. R. 940. The measure of damages in the case of a breach of a contract to deliver goods at a specified time, is, the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time of the breach of contract, or the price for which the vendee has sold; but the latter cannot recover, as special damage, the loss of anticipated profits to be made by his vendees. Peterson v. Ayre, 13 C. B. 353.

- Notice of Sub-Contract. ]-The plaintiffs in the beginning of 1871, contracted to supply, at 4s. a pair, a large quantity of shoes to H. & Co., who required them to fulfil a contract for the supply of the French army during the war. The last day for delivery by the plaintiffs was the 3rd of February, 1872, and all shoes not so delivered would be thrown back on the plaintiffs' hands. The plaintiffs delivered a certain quantity of shoes to the Midland Railway Company at Kettering, consigned to H. & Co., in London, in time to be delivered on that day. Notice was given to the station-master that the plaintiffs were under contract to deliver on that day, and if not so delivered the shoes would be thrown on and the goods were sent by goods train at the morning of the next day, and were rejected. The plaintiffs, using their utmost endeavours, could only sell the rejected shoes at 2x. 9d. a pair, and in consequence of the cessation of the war the consignees, but for their French contract, could not have sold them at a higher price even if duly received. The company paid into court 20%, which was sufficient to cover the incidental expenses and the ordinary damages to which the plaintiffs would be entitled, but the latter claimed to be entitled to recover the difference between 4s, and 2s, 9d, a pair :- Held, that they were not entitled to recover the difference. Horne v. Midland Ry., 42 L. J., C. P. 59; L. R. 8 C. P. 131; 28 L. T. 312; 21 W. R. 481— Ex. Ch.

A ship belonging to the defendant was taken by the plaintiff for the purpose of carrying coals to the coast of Africa. It was known by the defendant that Admiralty contracts were out for sending coals to this coast, and that the bills of lading were to be sent in by a certain day. The defendant, having failed to perform his contract: -Held, that he was liable in damages for the expenses incurred by the plaintiff in consequence of such failure in the performance of his con-tract with the Admiralty, the notice of that contract being sufficient to render him in law so liable. Prior v. Wilson, I L. T. 549; 8 W. R.

The plaintiff sent goods from Manchester by a railway company to his traveller at Cardiff, the delivery of the goods was, through the negligence of the company, delayed until after the traveller had left Cardiff, and the plaintiff, in consequence, lost the profits which he would have derived from a sale at Cardiff -Held, that in the absence of notice to the company of the object for which the goods were sent, the plaintiff could not recover from them such profits as damages for the delay. G. W. Ry. v. Redmayne, 35 L. J., C. P. 123; L. R. 1 C. P. 329; 12 Jur. (N.S.)

A can manufacturer, at Cockermouth, bought cloth at Huddersfield for the purpose of making it up into caps, which he was in the habit of selling through the country by means of travellers. The cloth was delivered to a railway company on the 15th of March, to be carried by their railway to Maryport; but, through the negligence of their servants it was sent to Bull Gill station, and did not reach the manufacturer's hands until the 12th of April, which was too late for his purposes. In an action against the company for not delivering the cloth within a reasonable time:—Held, that he was entitled to recover as damages the amount of the diminution in value of the cloth by reason of the season for making up and selling the caps having passed, but not for the loss of anticipated profits, or the expenses of travellers despatched on journeys rendered fruitless by reason of the inability to Femiliary 10 execute truthess by reason of the harding to execute their orders. What is sufficient Notice of a Sub-Contract.]

On the 6th June, C. delivered at a booking office in London, samples to be carried by the Midland Railway Company to Chesterfield; no directions were given as to the mode of carriage, ordinary rate. The samples were contained in a box, on the top of which was a special printed label in the following terms, "Traveller's goods. Deliver immediately," and underneath was written the address of the consignee. The goods not being delivered before the evening of the 8th of June, although they might reasonably have been delivered on the 7th, C. sued the company to recover one guinea paid by them to their traveller for his expenses at the usual rate of one gninea a day, for which time he was delayed at hesterfield by the non-receipt of the goods :-Held, that there was no special contract between the parties, nor was the merely labelling the box as "Traveller's goods" sufficient notice to the company of the purpose for which the goods were being sent, so as to make that purpose common knowledge to both parties, or in any way to affect the company with special notice of the facts so as to make particular damages recoverable against them. Ry., 38 L. T. 226. Candy v. Midland

The plaintiff, under an alleged agreement that certain shares which he held in a company should be taken by one L. in payment of a debt should be taken by one L. In payment of a debt due from him to L., if such shares were regis-tered, executed a valid transfer of the same and handed the certificates to L. The plinitiff applied to the company under s. 26 of the Com-panies Act, 1867, to register the transfer, but they refused to do so upon the ground that he was inducted to them. The question of his in-debtechess was decided in his favour in an action between him and the company, and the transfer was subsequently registered. The com-pany had no notice of the alleged agreement between the plaintiff and L., the transfer being expressed to have been executed for a nominal sum. The market value of the shares having transfer was executed and that at which it was actually registered, the plaintiff sought to recover damages from the company for their wrongful refusal to register the transfer :- Held, that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover naminal damages, as the company had received no notice of the alleged agreement between him and L., and also because he had suffered no damage either in respect of calls or otherwise from the refusal of the company to register the transfer. Skinner v. City of London Marine Insurance Corporation, 54 L. J., Q. B. 437; 14 Q. B. D. 882; 53 L. T. 191; 33 W. R. 628—C. A.

Notice of Special Circumstances. ]-By the terms of the contract the defendants agreed with the plaintiffs to have a certain ship ready on a certain date, in the South West India Docks, to receive a cargo of tiles for shipment to Australia. The ship was not ready on the agreed day, and the tiles being kept waiting in the trucks in which the plaintiffs had had them brought into the docks, the plaintiffs were obliged to pay the railway company, the owners of the trucks, a certain sum for the detention, which sum they now sought to recover from the defendants as damages for their breach of contract. If the plaintiffs had followed the ordinary course of business at the docks, they would have employed the dock company to bring the files into the docks up to the ship's side, and the dock company's scale of charges, which were slightly higher than the railway company's, would have included storage of the tiles at the docks for ordinary rate. The samples were contained in a during which the trucks were actually detained was less than three weeks:—Held, that the de-fendants had no right to assume that the plaintiffs would follow the ordinary course of business in the mode of bringing their goods into the docks, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to deliver the tiles in any manner they pleased, and that the detention of the trucks was the natural and ordinary consequence of the defendants' breach of contract. > Non-Acceptance—Sub-Contract.]—A declaraplaintiff agreed to supply to the defendants 3,900 tons of cast-iron chairs in certain quantities ner month, from February, 1847, to May, 1848, pay-ments to be made by the defendants a month after delivery, that although the defendants accepted a portion of the chairs, and although the plaintiff was ready and willing to perform the contract until the refusal and discharge of the defendants, yet they refused to accept or receive the residue of the chairs, and discharged the plaintiff from supplying the residue, and from the further performance of the contract. The plaintiff had contracted with other parties for the supply of some of the chairs at a price rather above the average price to be paid to him by the defendants, and was obliged to pay 500%, to get off his sub-contract, and he had also entered into arrangements with ironfounders for the supply of iron, and had built a foundry for the manufacture of the chairs :- Held, that these in assessing the damages. Cort v. Ambergate Ry., 17 Q. B. 127; 20 L. J., Q. B. 460; 15 Jur. 877. matters were properly taken into consideration

> Sub-Contract-Written Agreement not mentioning.]—The plaintiff having received an order from P. to supply from 150 lbs, to 200 lbs, of wound cotton daily, verbally agreed with the defendant that the defendant should undertake the winding of it, informing the defendant as was the fact, that the plaintiff had taken upon himself the consequences of late delivery, if any, to P., and obtaining from the defendant the assurance that he, the plaintiff, might rely on him. Afterwards, and on the day of the interview, the plaintiff sent the defendant a written order for the cotton, on the express condition that the same should be delivered daily, but containing no notice or stipulation as to the subtaining no notice or stipulation as to the sub-contract of the plaintiff with P. The defendant failing to deliver regularly to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff to P., the result was that P. daimed, and the plaintiff paid to P. 3000, by way of reinbursing P, for his loss upon re-sale of the goods which P.'s customers had refused to accept, as having been delivered late :- Held, that the plaintiff might recover the 3001, from the defendant as damages for the breach of contract to deliver the cotton daily. Sawdon v. Andrew, 30 L. T. 23.

Purchase for Specific Purpose. ]-On breach of contract by the seller to deliver an article obviously valueless if used for the purpose for which such an article is ordinarily used, the buyer is entitled to recover damages based on the value of the article if used for the specific purpose for which the buyer bought it, although such specific purpose were unknown to the seller three weeks without further charge. The time at the time of the sale. Such value may be ascertained by considering the net annual profits to be obtained from such specific use of the article. De Mattos v. Great Eastern Steamship Co., 1 Cab. & E. 489.

Particular Purpose-Part of Mill. |--When two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive, in respect of such breach of contract, should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally, i.e. according to the usual course of things, from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the con-templation of both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it. Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Ex. 341; 2 C. L. R. 517; 23 L. J., Ex. 179; 18 Jur. 358; 2 W. R. 302.

When a contract is made under special circumstances, and those circumstances are communicated by one of the contracting parties to the other, the damages resulting from the breach of the contract which they would reasonably contemplate are, the amount of injury which would ordinarily follow from a breach of contract under those special circumstances. But if the special eircumstances are unknown to the party breaking the contract, he at the most can only be supposed to have had in his contemplation the amount of injury which would arise generally, and in the great multitude of cases not affected by any special circumstances, from such a breach of contract. A carrier contracted with a miller to carry two pieces of iron forming the broken shaft of a mill, and deliver the same to an artificer to serve as a model for a new one. A shaft being indispensable to the working of the mill, and the miller not having another, the mill necessarily remained idle until the new shaft could be supplied, but of this the carrier was not aware. He did not. however, deliver the iron to the artificer within a reasonable time, and, a delay having con-sequently arisen in the delivery of the new shaft, was sned by the miller for a breach of his agreewas succest, the inner for a order of ms agree-ment:—Held, that he could not recover as damages the loss of profits incurred by the stop-page of the milk. - Threshing Machine, -A. contracted to deliver to B., a farmer, a steam threshing machine within three weeks from the 24th of July, but did not do so till the 11th of September. B., as A. well knew, was in the habit of threshing out his wheat in the field, and sending it off at once to the market. In consequence of the nondelivery of the machine it became necessary to carry the wheat home and to stack it. The wheat was damaged by exposure to the weather, so that it was necessary to dry it in a kiln, and the quality was much deteriorated, and before it could be sold the market price had fallen.

A. knew that the machine was wanted for immediate use at the time appointed for the delivery, but he led B. on from day to day to believe that it would be shortly delivered :-Held, in an action for the non-delivery of the machine, that B. was entitled to recover damages in respect of the deterioration of the quality of wheat, in respect of the expenses of carrying and Held, also, that B was not entitled to damages in respect of the fall in the market price. Ib.

A. contracted with B. to repair a steam threshing machine, undertaking to get it ready for harvest time. A new fire-box being needed, C. engaged to make one for A. in about a fortnight. but failed in the performance of his contract, and A. (who had paid C. for the article) was obliged to get one made elsewhere at an additional cost ; but this he did not do in time to enable him to perform his contract with B., although there was imple time for him to have done so after C. had broken his contract, whereupon B. sued A., who paid him 201, to settle the action :- Held, that A, was entitled to recover from C, the sum he had paid him for the fire-box, and the extra cost incurred in getting another; but that the compensation paid by A, to B, was not such a damage pension pant by A. 10 b. was no such a training as might fairly and reasonably be considered either as arising naturally from C.'s breach of contract, or such as might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it. - Agricultural Show.]-The plaintiff was a dealer in cattle-spice and was in the habit of going about to agricultural shows exhibiting samples of his goods. He so exhibited them at Birmingham, and desiring to exhibit them at Newcastle, he had them delivered to an agent of a railway company who had a special office on the show-ground at Birmingham for the purpose of forwarding goods that had been exhibited.

The company's clerk supplied a blank consignment note. This plaintiff's agent filled up, describing the goods as sundries, and the address us Neweastle show-ground, and indorsing it, "must be delivered Monday certain," A conversation also took place with reference to the vital importance of having the goods at Newcastle on Monday. The goods not having been delivered at Newcastle on Monday, nor in time for the show, the plaintiff, who had gone there to meet them, such the railway company for the non-delivery, claiming damages for his expenses and loss of time or profit. The company paid 101. into court to cover expenses, and a verdict was entered for 201. additional in respect of loss of time or profit :-Held, that the verdict was right, the surrounding circumstances justifying the inference that the elerk knew the purpose for which the goods were wanted, and made that the basis of the contract so as to render the company responsible for the damage naturally flowing from the non-delivery. Simpson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 182; 1 Q. B. D. 274; 33 L. T. 805; 24 W. R. 294.

Held, also, that in the case of a man whose business it was to attend agricultural shows and make profit thereby, the profit which would have been made at a particular show is not too speeulative to form the subject of damages. Ib.

Prize Competition. ]-A prize had been offered for the best plan and model of a machine for loading colliers and barges, and plans and models intended for the competition were to be sent by a certain day; the plaintiff sent a plan and model accordingly by a railway, but through negligence they did not arrive at their destination until after stacking it, and in respect of the expense of kiln-drying. Intentions as to User-Supposition of Seller. When, on the sale of a chattel, the buyer intends it for a special purpose, but the seller supposes it is for another and more obvious purpose, the buyer can recover, as damages for the nondelivery according to the contract, the loss of profit which might have been made from the purpose supposed by the seller, provided the buyer has actually sustained damages to that or The second of th

A, agreed to sell and deliver to B, within a certain time the hull of a floating boom derrick; but A. did not deliver it till six months after the specified time. B., who was a large coal-mer-chant in the port of London, purchased the hull in order to place in it, as he in fact did, large hydraulic eranes and machinery for the purpose of transhipping his coals direct from colliers into barges. The hull was the first vessel of the kind ever built, and B.'s special purpose was entirely novel, and was unknown to A. A. believed that B. was parchasing the hull for the purpose of using her as a coal store. If B. had been prevented using the hull for his special purpose, he would either have sold her to be used in the hulk trade, as a coal store, or, if unable to do so, would have used her himself as a store, and this was the most obvious use to which such a vessel was capable of being applied by persons in the coal trade; but the hulk trade is a distinct branch of the coal trade, and was no part of his business. Had the hull been purchased for this purpose, the delay in the delivery would have occasioned loss to the amount of 4201. B. actually suffered damage to a much larger amount from not having the hull ready for his special purpose at the time fixed for the delivery:—Held, that B, was entitled to the 4201, as the damages which A, must be taken to have contemplated would result from the nonperformance of his contract. A company of merchants ordered, and a company of distillers agreed to furnish, a eargo of whisky to be coloured like rum for the African market. It was stipulated that the colouring matter should be harmless. The stipulation was disregarded. The whisky produced effects alarming and startling, though not shewn to be actually deleterions. It consequently proved unmarketable:—Held, that the distillers were liable in damages. Macfarlane v. Taylor, L. R. 1 H. L., Sc. 245; 18 W. R. 214.

Repairing Ship. ]-A shipbuilding company, at the time of being wound up, was under a contract with a steam-packet company to do certain repairs to a ship within a given time, and under orders obtained in the matter of the winding-up the official liquidator was authorised to complete the repairs, the rights of all parties being re-The repairs not having been completed within the stipulated time, leave was given to the steam-packet company to go in under the the steam-packet company to go in under the winding-up order and prove in respect of any damage that might have accrued from the delay:—Held, that the measure of damages was the net profits which the steam packet company might have made if the contract had been com-and materials expended in making the plan and pleted in time, but that the company was not model, and not the chance of obtaining the prize, entitled to prove for damages arising from imperfect workmanship during the delay. Waiver.]—A person who accepts the amount of a debt, in respect of the nonpayment of which at the stipulated time he has become entitled to nominal damages, cannot after acceptance of the debt, sue for such nominal damages. Beaumout v. Greathead, 3 D. & L. 631; 2 C. B. 494; 15 T. J. C. P 130

Damuum absque Injuriâ.]—The plaintiff was entitled to the lateral support of his land, but not for the wall upon it. The defendant dug a and this subsidence included particles of the plaintiff's earth, and caused the fall of the plaintiff's wall; but there would have been no partners war; put there would have seen to appreciable injury to the plaintiffs laud if the wall had not been upon it:—Held, that there was no cause of action. Smith v. Thackerah, 1 H. & R. 615; 35 L. M. C. P. 276; L. R. I. C. P. 564; 12 Jur. (N. 8.) 545; 14 L. T. 761; 14 W. R. 832.

Illegal Distress.]—Where a landlord distrains for rent goods which are not distrainable in law (as looms in work, there being sufficient without them to satisfy the rent), and the tenant pays the amount of the rent and the costs of distress. mon which the distress is withdrawn altogether : the tenant is entitled to recover only the actual damage sustained by the taking of those particular goods, and not the whole amount paid by him. Harrey v. Powoek, 11 M. & W. 740; 12 L. J., Bx. 434.

In trover, by a tenant against his landlord, for distraining goods pledged with the tenant, as a pawnbroker :-- Held, that the goods being in the hands of the pawnbroker to be dealt with in the way of his trade, were therefore privileged from distress; and the landlord being an absolute wrongdoer, the tenant was entitled to recover the full value of the goods, and not merely the value of his interest in them. Swire v. Leach, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 479; 34 L. J., C. P. 150; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 179; 11 L. T. 680; 13 W. R. 385.

Where a landlord distrains for rent, and the distress is void ab initio, and does not merely become so by a subsequent irregularity, the measure of damages in an action of trespass against the landlord by the person distrained upon is the actual value of the goods taken, and the jury, in estimating the damages, ought not to make any deduction from such value in respect of the rent due. Attack v. Bramwell, 3 B. & S. 520; 32 L. J., Q. B. 146; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 892; 7 L. T. 740; 11 W. R. 309.

Wrongful Sale by Sheriff.]-A party took a house of another, with goods valued as between an outgoing and incoming tenant, and employed an auctioneer to re-sell the goods; before could do so they were seized under an execution against the original seller; but the sheriff employed the same auctioneer to sell them, when they produced an amount considerably less than the valuation :--Held, in an action of trespass brought against the sheriff, that the jury was justified in giving damages for taking the goods to the full amount of the valuation. Luckley v. Pye, 8 M. & W. 133; 9 D. P. C. 744; 10 L. J., Ex. 305 : 5 Jur. 346.

Conversion—Right to Possession.]—In an action for the conversion of goods of which the plaintiff has the immediate right of possession, the true measure of damages is the full value of the goods at the time of the conversion. Edmondson v. Nuttall, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 280; 34 L. J., C. P. 102; 13 W. R. 53.

Sale-Payment by Instalments. ] - R. contracted with the plaintiffs to build for them a ship of a specific kind, on account of which they from time to time advanced money. After some of the advances had been made, and when the not for the wall upon it. The determine and a jot the darances had note make, and what the well in his own land, adjoining the land of the ship was partly bullt, R. gave the plaintiff, and land when he no longer required it, of sale:—Held, as the bill of sale passed the filled it up, but the material used for the filling present property in the ship to the plaintiffs, and of such property to the time of the completion of the ship, and the defendants having taken wrongful possession of the ship after the bill of sale, and after further progress had been made in the building, but before she was completed, and having completed her, in trover for such conversion, that the plaintiffs could recover as damages the value of the ship at the time of the conversion, but not her value at any subsequent period, nor, as special damage, the amount of freight which the plaintiffs might have gained with her if R, had delivered her to them completed, according to his contract. Read v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; 22 L. J., C. P. 206; 17 Jur.

In trover for goods by assignees of a bankrapt, which had been purchased by him under an agreement, by which the purchase-money was to be paid by instalments, and an assignment of the property was to be executed by the vendor, when the whole purchase-money had been paid, with power for the vendor to re-enter in ease of default in payment of the instalments :—Held, that the assignees were entitled to recover the full value of such goods against a mere wrong-doer, notwithstanding default had been made in payment of some of the instalments, and the vendor had to that extent an interest in the goods, Turner v. Hardvastle, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 683; 31 L. J., C. P. 193; 8 L. T. 748.

And see SALE OF GOODS.

Possession Subject to Deed of Sale. ]-By deed of sale, A. assigned all his household goods to seeme a debt due from him to the assignee, subject to a provise that the deed should become void upon payment of the debt on a certain day, or on some earlier day, to be appointed by the assignee by a notice in writing, to be served on A. twenty-four hours before the day of payment so appointed; interest to be paid in the meantime. It was also agreed that, after default made in payment contrary to the proviso, it should be lawful for the assignee to enter and take possession of the goods, and to sell them, and reimburse himself out of the proceeds, accounting to A, for any suplus; and that, until such default, it should be lawful for A, to hold, use and possess the goods without hindrance from the assignee. The assignee served A. with a notice to pay on a day earlier than that named in the deed, and afterwards entered and took, and sold the goods, but the notice was bad, having been served less than twenty-four hours before the day of payment appointed :- Held, that A, had, under the deed, the right of possession of the goods, defeasible only by default in payment after due notice, and that he might therefore sue the assignee in trespass for having wrongfully entered and sold, and that in such action the measure of damages should be, not the value of the goods, but the value of A.'s interest in them at the time of the trespass. Brierly v. Kendall, 17 Q. B. 937; 21 L. J., O. B. 161.

In Action by Trustee for Breach of Agreement made with Bankrupt. ]—A. & S., being traders in embarrassed circumstances, sold their business to the defendant upon condition that he should pay certain debts owing by them. This he failed to do, and left a balance of 1,7501, unpaid to the creditors of A. & S. A. & S. after and not the damages which may be sustained wards liquidated their affairs by arrangement by the reversioner. Ecelyn v. Raddish, Holt, ander the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and the plain- 543, that the habendum did not postpone the vesting tiff having been appointed trustee, brought an action for breach of contract :- Held, that he was entitled to recover the sum of 1,750/., and not merely nominal damages. Parter v. Varley (9 Bing, 93) disapproved of. Ashdown v. Ingamells, 50 L. J., Q. B. 109; 5 Ex. D. 280; 43 L. T. 424-C. A.

> Wrongful Delivery by Holder of Pledge. -A. having purchased jute, warehoused it at the London Docks, paid a deposit on it, and received weight notes for it from the Dock Company, and these he deposited with B, as a security for advances made to A. by C., and B. agreed to hold them as such security. The jute having been destroyed by fire, A. applied to B. for the notes, who wrongfully gave them up to him, and A. then went to the vendor of the jute and obtained back the deposit and subsequently became insolvent and failed to repay C. his advances. C. having sued B. for his breach of contract in delivering up the weight notes to A.; -Held, that C. was cutitled to substantial and not merely nominal damages. Matthews v. Discount Corporation, L. R. 4 C. P. 228—Ex. Ch.

Withholding Grant of Land -Compensation. -An officer in the army, employed in the civil service of the government of Australia, received a promise from the governor of the colony of a grant of land, upon condition that he settled in the colony. He retired from the army and settled in the colony. His claim having been from time to time deferred, he took proceedings under a local act enabling him, against the government of the colony, to obtain compensation :- Held, that he was entitled to compensation, measured by the value of the specific land at the time of the commencement of the suit. Robertson v. Dumareng, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 66; 10 L. T. 110; 13 W. R. 280; 3 N. R. 587.

Right of Reversioner. |-- In an action by a reversioner for damage done to the reversion by entting off the caves of a building belonging to him, and by creeting a wall with a drip over his premises :- Held, that as there might be repeated actions for continuing the misance, evidence tendered at the trial of the first action for the purpose of shewing the diminution in the salable value of the premises was properly rejected. Buttishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696; 25 L. J., C. P. 290 ; 4 W. R. 603.

A landlord sued his tenant for an injury done by him to the reversion, by wrongfully removing from the land large quantities of clay; and for a conversion of the clay. The jury found that the removal of the clay had depreciated the value of the land by 1561; and that the value of the clay itself was 1501. A verdict was entered for the former sum :- Held, on motion to increase the verdict, by adding thereto the sum of 1501,, that the plaintiff was not entitled to receive the value of the clay as well as compensation for the injury done him by the removal of the clay. Templemore v. Moore, 15 Ir. C. L. B.

Tenant for Life. ]-A tenant for life in covenant, can only recover such damages as are commensurate with the injury done to his life estate.

By Tenants in Common.]-Where A. and B.; A plaintiff in an action of trespass claimed them, if B. dies, actions for infringements committed in B.'s lifetime survive to A., who is entitled at law to recover the whole damages. Smith v. L. & N. W. Ry., 2 El. & Bl. 69; 17 Jur.

f. Aggravation, Mitigation and Reduction.

Aggravation-Intention.]-In an action for throwing poisoned barley upon the plaintiff's premises in order to poison his poultry, the jury is not confined in their verdiet to the actual damages sustained, but may consider the malicious intention of the defendant, Lyons, 2 Stark. 317; 20 R. R. 688.

In an action for a wrong, whether arising out of a trespass or a negligent act, the jury. in estimating the damages, may take into consideration all the circumstances attending the committal of the wrong. Emblen v. Myers, 6 H. & N. 54; 30 L. J., Ex. 71; 2 L. T. 774; 8 W. R. 665. See Bell v. Midland Ry., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 287; 30 L. J., C. P. 273; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 4 L. T. 293; 9 W. R. 612.

In an action for wrongfully and injuriously pulling down a building adjoining the plaintiff's stable in a negligent and an improper manner, and with such a want of proper care that, by reason thereof, a piece of timber fell upon his stable and destroyed the roof, and by reason of the negligence, earclessness and unskilfulness. part of the building fell upon and injured his horse; evidence was given shewing that the defendant had acted wilfully and with the object of forcing the plaintiff to give up possession of the stable : the jury is properly directed, that if they think the defendant has acted with a high hand, wilfully and with the object of getting the plaintiff out of possession, the damages may be higher than if the injury was the result of pure negligence. Ib.

An unqualified person shooting a gamekeeper's dog will justify a judge in directing considerable damages. Roy v. Beaufort (Duke), 2 Atk. 192.

---- Plea of Justification. |-- In an action for false imprisonment, the defendant, in addition to the general issue, pleaded a justification, on the ground that the plaintiff had committed a felony, for which the defendant had him taken in custody; but at the trial his counsel abandoned this latter plea, and exonerated the plaintiff from the imputation contained in it :- Hekl, that the patting this plea on the record was a persisting in the original charge, and proper to be taken into consideration by the jury in estimating the amount of damages. Warviek v. Foulkes, 12 amount of damages. Warwiek v. Foulkes, 12 M. & W. 507; 1 D. & L. 638; 13 L. J., Ex. 109; 8 Jur. 85.

Mitigation and Reduction. ]-In an action for false imprisonment the defendant, under the plea of not guilty, may give in evidence the excuse, if it merely goes in mitigation of damages, though H. & N. 276; 27 L. J., Ex. 334; 6 W. R. 515.

are tenants in common of a patent assigned to substantial damages from the defendants for pulling down a wall, and they tendered in evidence a conveyance to them, to shew that they bona fide believed that the wall was theirs, but the judge refused to admit it. Semble, per Erle, C.J., that it ought to have been admitted, in reduction of damages. Skull v. Glenister, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 81; 33 L. J., C. P. 185; 9 L. T. 763; 12 W. R. 554.

In actions of contract, where, supposing the data to be admitted or established, and to beunaffected by any evidence introducing other legitimate elements of consideration, the damages may be more or less matter of calculation, although, prima facie, the plaintiff may be entitled to the full measure of damages, yet where the actual amount of damage has been in any degree affected by the conduct of the plaintiff or his agents, that is a legitimate element of consideration, and the jury is at liberty to diminish the damages on that account. But if they do so unreasonably and arbitrarily, the court will grant a new trial, as for a verdict against Wilson v. Hicks, 26 L. J., Ex. 242. evidence.

Although the plaintiff, in an action for an injury done, really has a right of action against the defendant, the jury is entitled to look at all the circumstances of the case, and at the couduct of both parties, and if they think that in going on with the action the plaintiff has acted in an obstinate and perverse manner, they may take that into consideration when estimating the damages. Davis v. L. & N. W. Ry., 4 Jur. (x.s.), 1303; 7 W. R. 105.

- Insurance Money. |- In an action for injuries caused by the negligence of a railway company, a sum received by the plaintiff on an accidental insurance policy cannot be taken into account in reduction of damages. Bradbura v. G. W. Ry., 44 L. J., Ex. 9; L. R. 10 Ex. 1; 3I L. T. 464; 23 W. R. 48. See Grand Trunk Ry. v. Jennings, 58 L. J., P. C. 1; 13 App. Cas. 800; 59 L. T. 679; 37 W. R. 403—P. C.

A plaintiff sued the defendants for damaging his ship by collision :-Held, that they were not entitled to deduct from the amount of damages. to be paid by them, a sum of money paid to the plaintiff by insurers in respect of such damage. Yates v. White, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 272; 5 Scott, 640. S. P. Jones v. White, 1 Arn. 85; 2 Jur. 303.

Agreement in Substitution-Increased Profits.

The plaintiff agreed with F, to let him land on a building lease for ninety-eight years, from Christmas, 1835, at a peppercorn rent, for three-years, and then at 115l, a year, payable quarterly, F. to build on the land, and cover in the mes suages within the first three years, and to accept a lease-proviso for re-entry on default. E, entered Vindictive Damages.]—Consideration of the plaintiff brought ejectment, and recovered posprinciples upon which vindictive damages are session on June 12th, 1839. After re-entry, the given against wrongdoers. Dreufus v. Perwrian plaintiff agreed with a new tenant to let him the Guano Cb., 58 L. J., Ch. 758; 42 Ch. D. 66; 61 premises for the residue of F.'s term, at a peppercorn rent for the year ending Midsummer, 1840 ; 701. for the year ending Midsummer, 1841; and 140%, a year for the rest of the term. The plaintiff, in an action for breach of F.'s agreement claimed as damages the difference between the rent which he would actually receive down to he cannot do so without a special plea, if it Midsammer, 1841, and that which would have amounts to a justification. Linford v. Lake, 3 accrued down to the same period if F. had kept his agreement :- Held, that the jury was not bound to award that amount, but might give | 15 C. B. 46 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 197 ; 18 Jur. 1105 ; their verdict on an estimate of the plaintiff's | 2 W. In an action for breach of a contract for the quick discharge of a ship, made with several persons jointly, where some of them had made profits by reason of such breach of contract which they would not otherwise have made, through another ship in which they were interested having been substituted for the purpose for which the former ship was required:—Held, that the amount of the joint damages could not be reduced by the profits so made by some of the West India Dock Co., 44 L. J., C. P. 181; L. R. 10 C. P. 300; 32 L. T. 321; 23 W. R. 624,

Cross Claims relative to similar Matters. - In an action for damages for the non-performance and improper performance of work which the plaintiff had employed the defendant to do, the defence was that the defendant had sued him for the price of the work alleged to have been improperly done, and the plaintiff had settled by paying the whole amount then sned for ; and that, as he might have given the non-performance and the defective performance complained of in evidence in reduction of damages, he was precluded from bringing a cross-action:—Held, that though he might have availed himself of the causes of action for which he sued in reduction of the claim in the former action, yet he was not bound to do so, but might maintain a separate action for them. Duris v. Hedges, 40 L. J., Q. B. 276; L. R. 6 Q. B. 687; 25 L. T. 155; 20 W. R. 60.

Set-off.]—To an action for freight, a plea, on equitable grounds, that the plaintiff, in the course of his employment by the defendant, undertook to carry his coals, and by his negligence and unskilfalness the coals were lost, and that the cost price of the coals was equal to the plaintiff's demand, and claiming equitably to set off one against the other, is a bad plea. Stimson v. Hall, 1 H. & N. 831; 26 L. J., Ex. 212; 5 W. R. 367.

- Loss of Cargo-Neglect to Insure. ]-By a charterparty A. agreed to pay B., master of a ship, one-third of the freight at the final sailing the ship, to be returned to A. if the cargo should not be delivered at the port of destination, A. insuring at the owner's expense, and 4 Jur. (N.S.) 169. eleducting the costs out of the first payment. A. paid the one-third freight, deducting the costs of insurance. The ship and cargo were lost, and A. brought an action to recover back the onethird freight. B. pleaded that the loss of the one-third freight was a loss which A, was to be insured against; that A. insured so negligently that the insurance was useless, and that by such negligence A. became liable to B. for the same amount which he claimed from B., and to make good the same to B.:—Held, that the plea was bad; that the conclusion of law as to A.'s liability was not warranted by the facts stated, as the amount to be recovered by B. as damages for A.'s negligence was not necessarily identical with that sued for by A. Charles v. Alton, — Payment of Freight—Unseaworthiness of Ship.]—A declaration stated that a charter-party was made by the owners of a ship then at Sunderland and the defendant, whereby it was Profit made by some Plaintiffs from Breach.] agreed that the ship, being tight, staunch and strong, and every way fitted for the voyage, should at Sunderland load a cargo from the merchant's factory, and, being loaded, should therewith proceed to Constantinople for orders, to deliver there or at other places named, being paid freight at rates named, "one-fourth of the freight to be advanced to the owner's agent in London on the ship having sailed, less 51, per cent, for insurance, interest and commission and that the defendant caused the ship to be loaded, and she sailed for Constantinople, and that all things necessary happened and were done to entitle the owners, by their agent in London, to receive from the defendant the fourth part of the freight, yet he had not paid it. A plea, that the ship was not, at the commencement of the voyage, tight, staunch and strong, and every way fitted for the voyage, and that, by reason of the premises, the ship and the cargo were wholly lost is a good plea; for the sailing of the ship in a seaworthy condition was made by the charterparty a condition precedent to the payment of the fourth of the freight; but the plea could not be supported on the ground of avoiding circuity of action. Thumpson v. Gillespy, 5 El. & Bl. 209; 24 L. J., Q. B. 340; 1 Jur. (X.S.) 779; 3 W. R. 505.

Covenants to Repair-Demise and Re-Demise. ]-In an action by a reversioner against an assignee on a covenant to repair and yield up in repair, a plea by way of equitable defence, that the defendant had re-demised the premises to the plaintiff for the residue of the term, wanting thirty days, under a similar eovenant, the defendant finding timber for repairs, that he had found such timber, that the plaintiff broke the covenant, and that the non-repair sued for was the same non-repair, and that the damages were identical, is bad, either as a plea of equitable sef-off, or as a legal defence by way of avoidance of circuity of action; because, notwithstanding the express allegations of the plea, it was manifest upon the pleadings that the covenants of the parties differed as to the duration of the time over which they extended, and also as to the degree of liability they respectively imposed, so that it was impossible that the measure of damages could in each case be the same. Minshull v. Oakes, 2 H. & N. 793; 27 L. J., Ex. 194;

Measure of Assessment altered by Act of Party—Contracts.]—If a party entitled under a contract to receive a profit from another by his own act so confounds the measure of that which he was to receive that it can be no longer ascertained, he vacates his whole claim. Pringle v. Taulor, 2 Taunt, 150.

Therefore, where A, agreed to find sufficient coal for B,'s engine, to draw water from A,'s mine and B.'s little coal, as they then stood, and B. sank to a lower seam, in draining which he drained the other two seams, but consumed for his engine more coal than before :- Held, that A. was no longer bound to furnish any coal, because B. had destroyed the measure of sufficiency. Ib.

In Case of Wrongdoers.]-Where a wrong has been committed, the wrongdoer must suffer from the impossibility of accurately ascertaining the amount of damage. Leeds (Duke) v. Amberst, 20 Bear, 239.

Proportion of Liability of Joint Tort Feasors. -Where two persons are jointly sued for false imprisonment, one of whom has acted from improper motives, the damages ought not to be assessed with reference to the act and motives of the most guilty or the most innocent party, but the true criterion of damage is the whole injury the party has sustained from the joint act of trespass, Clark v. Newsam, 1 Ex. 131; 16 L. J., Ex. 296.

Damages cannot be severed where the count is for a joint trespass, and the jury finds the defendants guilty accordingly. Hill v. Goodchild, 5 Burr. 2790.

See TORT.

g. Prospective.

When Recoverable, -A plaintiff sued the defendant for himry to his buildings by mining operations of the defendant on the land of the defendant. A special referee having found that the plaintiff, in addition to injury already in-curred, would incur injury in the future, and having assessed the prospective damages in respect of such injury at 1501. —Held, that the prospective damages were recoverable: Lamb v. Walker, 47 L. J., Q. B. 451; 3 Q. B. D. 389; 38 L. T. 643; 26 W. R. 775.

Case in which compensation for damage done to an estate was awarded once for all, so as to take away any right of action for subsequent damage against the defendants, who were held to be not wrongdoers, but persons exercising of the plaintiff, subject to paying compensation for the permanent injury thereby occasioned to the said estate. Great Laxey Mining Co. v. Clayue, 4 App. Cas. 115; 27 W. R. 417—P. C.

Second Action.]-" When the cause of action is complete, it would be increasing litigation to say You shall not have all you are entitled to in the first action, but you shall be driven to a second, third, or fourth, for the recovery of your damages." Per Best, C.J., in Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bing. 240.

When damages have been awarded of an insufficient character, another action does not lie for the same cause. Fetter v. Beale, 1 Ld. Raym. 339.

Time of Service. ]-In an action for injuring the plaintiff's apprentice, whereby he was disabled from serving, the jury may give damages for the loss of service, not only before action brought, but afterwards down to the time when. as it appears in evidence, the disability may be expected to cease. Hodsoll v. Stallebrass, 11 A. & E. 301; 3 P. & D. 200; 9 Car. & P. 63; 8 D. P. C. 482; 9 L. J., Q. B. 132.

h. Double or Treble Damages.

Calculation of . - Where a statute gives by way of penalty for withholding duties, double or any other multiple of the sum withheld, the sum found by the jury is to be taken as the amount due in point of fact. Att. Gen. v. Hatton, McClcl. 214; 13 Price, 476.

Where a statute gives treble damages, the plaintiff is entitled to three times the full amount of the damages found by the jury, and treble costs; and the damages are not to beealculated in the manner treble costs usually are. Buchle v. Bewes, 6 D. & R. 1; + B. & C.

4. Costs of Action when Recoverable.

Separate and Independent Contracts. ]-B., a carrier, having contracted with H. to carry his pictures to Paris, made a second contract (containing different stipulations) with a railway company that the company should carry them to Calais. The pictures having been injured on the journey through the negligence of the railway company, H. brought an action against B. for the damage, claiming 1,000l. The railway com-pany, being requested by him to defend the action, refused, repudiated all liability, and told him he must deal with the action as he thought fit. He defended the action, and H. recovered against him a vendict of 650%, for the damage to the pictures. He, B., having sucd the railway company to recover the costs he had paid and incurred in defending H.'s action :- Held, that the two contracts being different and independent, he could not recover the costs, since they were neither the natural and proximate consequence of the railway company's default, nor ncurred at the request of the company, or for their benefit. Baxendale v. L. C. & D. Ry. 44 L. J., Ex. 20; L. R. 10 Ex. 35; 32 L. T. 330; 23 W. R. 167-Ex. Ch.

The plaintiff contracted with a tramway company to construct a tramway for them in a public road, and made a sub-contract with an asphalte company, under which the latter nudertook to lay the asphalte and to keep it in good repair and condition for twelve months. In consequence of the defective state of the asphalte within that period, H., who was driving along the road was thrown out of his cart and injured. H. theremon brought an action against the tramway company, who gave notice to the plaintiff. The plaintiff then called upon the asphalte company plaintent then cannot upon the aspirate company to defend H.'s action, but they declined to have anything to do with it. The plaintiff resisted H.'s claim, and ultimately compromised it for 701., but was obliged also to pay 401, for the costs of H.'s attorney, and expended 181. more for the costs of defending the action. The jury found that the course taken by the plaintiff in resisting and ultimately compromising H.'s action was a reasonable and proper one :- Held, that the asphalte company was liable for the 70/., but not for the 40%, or the 18%, these latter charges not being the natural or necessary consequence of." their default, the contracts between the plaintiff [O. Notice of Sub-sale-Profits-Costs of Action by Sub-vendee. |- The defendants contracted with the plaintiff to deliver goods to him of a particular shape and description at certain prices and by instalments at different times. When the contract was made the defendants knew that except as to price, it corresponded with and was substantially the same as a contract which the plaintiff had entered into with a French customer of his, and that it was made in order to enable the plaintiff to fulfil such last-mentioned contract. The defendants broke their contract, and there being no market for goods of the description contracted for, the plaintiff's customer obtained damages against him in the French court to the amount of 281, :- Held, in an action against the defendants for their breach of contract, that the plaintiff was not only entitled to recover as damages the amount of profit he would have made had he been able to fulfil his contract with his customer, but also damages in respect of his liability to such customer, and that in estimating such last-mentioned damages the 281, which the French court had given might be treated as not an unreasonable amount at which such damages might be assessed. Elbinger Action Gesellschaft v. Armstrong (L. R. 9 Q. B. 473) approved of. Grébert-Bargnis v. Nugent, 54 L. J., Q. B. 511; 15 Q. B. D. 85—C. A. Affirming 1 Cab. & E.

The defendant contracted for the sale of coal of a particular description to the plaintiffs knowing that they were buying such coal for the purpose of re-selling it as coal of the same description.
The plaintiffs did so re-sell the coal. The coal delivered by the defendant to the plaintiffs under the contract, and by them delivered to their subvendees did not answer such description, but this could not be ascertained by inspection of the coal, and only became apparent upon its use by the sub-vendees. The sub-vendees thereupon brought an action for breach of contract against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs gave notice of the action to the defendants, who, however, repudiated all liability, insisting that the coal was according to contract. The plaintiffs defended the action against them, but at the trial the verdiet was that the coal was not according to contract, and the sub-vendees accordingly recovered damages from the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs therenoon sned the defendant for breach of contract, claiming as damages the amount of the damages recovered from them in the action by their sub-veudees, and the costs which had been incurred in such action. The defendant paid the amount of the damages in the previous action into court, but denied his liability in respect of the costs :- Held, that the defence of the previous action being, under the circumstances, reasonable, the costs incurred by the plaintiffs as defendants in such action were recoverable under the rule in Hadley v. Baxendale (9 Ex. 341), as being damages which might reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties, at the time when they made the contract, as the the time when they made the contract, as the prespect of the simple of the inner low domains, such probable result of a breach of it. *Baxendale* v.* damages not being contemplated by the additional L. Indemnity-Costs of Action. ]-Under a covenant to indemnify against all actions and claims in respect of the covenants of a lease, costs properly incurred in reasonably defending an action brought for a breach of one of the covenants are recoverable as damages. Murrell v. Fysh, 1 Cab. & E. 80.

In consideration of B. promising to assign to A, all his interest in an agreement by which he held certain premises, A, undertook to indemnify B. against breaches of the covenants and con-ditions in the agreement. No assignment was executed, but A, entered and held possession of the premises till the expiration of B,'s term (letting them fall out of repair), when B, was sued by his landlord for dilapidations. After giving A. notice of the action, B. paid money into court, which the jury found to be enough :-Held, in an action brought by B, against A, on his promise to indemnify him, that a good consideration appeared for the promise, and that B. was entitled to recover as damages the extra costs necessarily incurred by him, over and above the taxed costs paid to him in defending the former action, Howard v. Loregrore, 40 L. J., Ex. 13; L. R. 6 Ex. 43; 23 L. T. 396; 19 W. R. 188.

- Construction of. ]-A. chartered B.'s ship to carry a cargo of merchandise from Liverpool to Puerto Cabello, in Venezuela. Afterwards the parties added to the charterparty a clause by which the charterer was to have the option of sending a portion of the cargo to Maracaibo, and "that any and every expense the vessel might incur in consequence of this additional clause should be borne by the charterer." The charterer londed the vessel with a cargo, part for Puerto Cabello, and the residue for Macaraibo, and made out two separate manifests. On the arrival of the vessel at Puerto Cabello, the master. at the request of the custom-house officers, shewed to them both manifests, and they prohibited the discharge of that part of the cargo assigned to Puerto Cabello, on the false ground that there were contraband goods on board by which the cargo was confiscated, and they imposed on the master a fine of 500 dollars for having two manifests, instead of a manifest on one sheet only, and detained the ship because the fine was not paid. The master appealed to the tribunals of the country, and claimed compensation for delay of the ship. He was told that, if he paid the fine, the necessary order for the clearance would be given, but he had no funds out of which he could pay it. About the same time a revolution occurred in Venezuela, which prevented all commercial and legal proceedings. quently the government agreed to pay the master 5,000 dollars as compensation for the detention of the ship, and 164 dollars for expenses of law suits, which sums were never paid. After some further delay, the ship proceeded to Maracaibo:

-Held, that B. was not entitled to recover from A. under the additional clause in the charterparty, either the loss sustained by reason of the detention of the ship at Puerto Cabello, or the expenses incurred in repairing the damage incurred in and about the legal proceedings in respect of the ship, or the fine of 500 dollars, such

The proper questions for the jury in such a case are, whether it was a reasonable thing to defend the action, and whether the defence was conducted in a reasonable manner. 10.

A., a broker, contracted with B., for the purchase, on behalf of C., of certain goods. refusing to accept the goods, B. sued A. for the breach of contract. C. had notice of the proceedings, but repudiated his liability, and A. defended the action unsuccessfully. In an action by A. against C. for the damages and costs paid and incurred by him in the first action, C. paid into court enough to cover the damages only, and it was left to the jury to say whether A., in defending the former action, had pursued the course which a prindent and reasonable man would have done in his own case. The jury, having found for the plaintiff:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover the costs. Brown v. Hall, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 503.

Sum paid in settlement of Action. ]-A "boat-staging," or suspension platform, put up for the plaintiffs by the defendant under a contract between them, to enable the plaintiffs to paint a a house, fell, through being insecurely fastened by the defendant, and hurt a painter in the employ-ment of the plaintiffs. He brought an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, against the plaintiffs for injuries sustained in consequence of the defective state of the boat-staging. The plaintiffs settled the action by paying to the painter 1251, and then sned the defendant for breach of his contract :- Held, that the defendant was liable under the contract; but that, inasmuch as the plaintiffs had employed a competent contractor to put up the boat-staging, and there was, on the facts, no evidence of negligence by the plaintiffs, they were not liable to their servant for the injury he had sustained, and therefore the money which they had paid to settle his action was not recoverable as damages from the defendant for his breach of contract. Kiddle v. Locett. 16 Q. B. D. 605; 34 W. R. 518.

- Negligence-Contract-Breach of Implied Warranty. ]-The plaintiffs, stevedores, agreed to discharge a cargo of deals from the defendant's ship, and, in accordance with the custom of the port, the defendant undertook to provide them with all necessary derricks, cranes, chains, &c., reasonably fit for the purpose. A chain so supplied was defective and broke, and caused injuries to one of the plaintiffs' workmen, who sued them under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880. The plaintiffs settled this action for 1251., a sum which it was not suggested was an unreasonable one, and then sought to recover the amount so paid from the defendant. It was admitted by the defendant on the one hand that there had been a breach by him of an implied warranty that the which it was supplied, and by the plantiffs on the other hand that they might, by the exercise of reasonable care, have disconnect that Wrong-doer-Extra Costs incurred by Mistake.]-A wrong-cloer cannot be heard to complain that in proceedings harriedly taken to stop the wrong the plaintiff has not accurately stated his title, and in such a case the defendant will not be relieved from the payment of the extra costs occasioned by the plaintiff's mistake as to his title. Att.-Gon. v. Timbino, 46 L. J., Ch. 654; 5 Ch. D. 750; 36 L. T. 684; 25 W. R. 802.

Occasioned by Fraud of Defendant's Manager. A customer deposited for safe custody the certificates of certain railway shares with his bankers, with whom he had an account, on which they charged a commission. The certificates were placed in a strong box, of which the manager of the bank had uncontrolled care. The manager sold the shares and forged transfers. The customer instituted a suit in equity against the railway companies and the purchasers, for the purpose of having his name restored as holder of the shares. He obtained a decree, but without costs, the costs being refused principally upon the ground that the railway companies had sent letters to him informing him that the transfers had been addressed to him, in accordance with his instructions, to the care of the manager of the bank; to which letters the manager forged answers. He afterwards claimed against the bankers for the amount of the costs which he had thus incurred :- Held, that though the bankers were bailees for reward, and had committed gross negligence in leaving the certificates in the unwatched control of their manager, still the costs were not the natural and necessary consequences of their neglect, and therefore could not be charged against them. Of Agent. |- A defendant, professing to have anthority from T. and J., verbally made an agreement with the plaintiff for the lease of a house belonging to T, and J, for seven years, and put the plaintiff into possession, no proper lease having been executed. He had, in fact, no authority from T. and J., and they brought ejectment against the plaintiff, which he defended unsuccessfully, after consulting the defendant and his attorney, and being guided by their advice. The jury found that he acted reasonably in defending the ejectment. In an action against the defendant for the breach of his warranty of authority :- Held, that the costs of the ejectment were not a damage naturally flowing from the defendant's breach of warranty, masumch as, if the had had authority, the plaintiff being tenant at will only, would have been defeated in the ejectment. Pao v. Davis, 1 B. & S. 220; 30 L. J. Q. B. 257; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1010; 4 L. T. 399; 9 W. R. 611.

An action frrespass was afterwards brought by a person claiming under the defendant against the plaintiff, who gave notice of it to the defendant. The defendant paid no attention to the notice, and the plaintiff, acting on his own judgment and without express authority, defended the action. A verdict was eventually found against him, and he was obliged to pay damages and costs. In an action against his landlord for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment contained in the denies — Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the costs and damages he had paid, and also the expenses he had himself incurred in defending the action of trespass. Robe, v. Crusch, 37 L. J., Ex. 8; L. R. 3 Ex. 44; 17 L. T. 249; 16 W. R.

The plaintiff, a lessee of land, brought an action against the lessor and against other lessess who claimed a right of way over the plaintiffs land under a grant from the same lessor, deaying the right and claiming an injunction against the lesses; or, if the court should hold that they had a right of way, then damages from the lessor under his covenant for quite enjoyment. At the trial the other lessess established their right of way, and judgment was given against the lessor for damages for the loss sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the exercise of the right of way:—Held, that the measure of damages payable by the lessor was not the permanent injury to the land, but only the damage sustained at the comnencement of the action; but that the lessor, being the cause of the whole litigation, must pay the costs of the plaintiff and the other lessees. Child v. Senning, 48 L. J., Ch. 302; 1 Ch. D. 302; 2 TV. R. 462.

Trespass—Setting aside Judgment.]—In trespass for solving the plaintiff goods under colour of a judgment, the declaration alleged that, by means thereof, the plaintiff was forced to pay costs in setting aside the judgment.—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled in this form of action to recover the costs incurred by him in setting aside the judgment. Scope and Policy.]—The policy of the Debtors Acts, 1869 and 1878, in leaving a defaulting trustee exposed to the penalty of imprisonment, is not vindictive; the object of the penalty is simply to produce payment of the money. *Bur*vet v. Haumond, 48 L. J., Ch. 249; 10 Ch. D. 285; 27 W. R. 471.

He made default in payment:—Held, that this was not "default in payment of a sum of money" within s.4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, and that he was liable to attachment for disobeying the order of the court.

Nonpayment of Costs Generally. ] - An order of the court for payment of costs constitutes a prison for a term not exceeding six weeks, under the Debtors Act, 1869. s. 5, in default of payment of the debt or instalments. Hevitson v. Sherwin, L. R. 10 Eq. 53; 22 L. T. 576; 18 W. R. 802.

Husband's Establishment kept up on Wife's Estate. |-The plaintiff moved to commit the defendant for default in payment of a judgment debt of 291, for goods supplied to him, the appli-cation being supported by an affidavit that the defendant kept up a large establishment, and was to all appearance a man of means. The defendant made an affidavit stating that he was an undischarged bankrupt, had no money, and was unable to pay the plaintiff's demand, and that his wife's property was settled to her separate use. Stephen, J., made an order committing the defendant for six weeks, or until payment, and this order was affirmed by a divisional court. The defendant appealed, and filed a further affidavit shewing that he was living in a very small way, and that the expenses of the establishment were all paid by his wife out of her separate estate. The Court of Appeal being satisfied that the defendant had no means of payment discharged the order for committal. Scrimgeour (5 C. P. D. 366), and the observation of James, L.J., in Esduile v. The defendant was committed to prison for six weeks for default in payment of an instalment of 101, pursuant to an order under the Debtors Act, 1869, upon an affidavit by the plaintiff that the defendant was residing in a large, well-furnished house, keeping horses, carriages, a groom, and other servants, and living in the style of a country gentleman of means; that he had been seen on several occasions at different towns and places with his horse and carriage, and always appeared to have money at his command; and that the plaintiff was informed and believed that he had ample means to pay the debt and costs in the action :- Held, that the order of commitment must be affirmed, although the defendant swore that all the furniture, horses, carriages, and effects at the house above mentioned belonged to his wife, and were bought and maintained by her separate money and estate; that the groom and other servants were the servants of his wife and maintained at her sole expense; that he had no horse or carriage or any other property of his own, nor had he money at his command that would enable him to attend court to answer the application, and his wife declined to supply him with any; and that he was nuable to pay the debt and costs in the action. Harper v. Scrim-geour, 5 C. P. D. 366; 29 W. R. 264.

"Default in Payment of a Sum of Money" Order to Pay Money in pursuance of Under-taking — Contempt of Court.] — An execution creditor gave, in interpleader proceedings, an undertaking to make good any deficiency on sale, which was embodied in an order directing the sheriff to sell the goods seized. There was a deficiency, and the Master ordered the execution creditor to pay the amount to the claimant, This order not being obeyed, an order was made attaching the execution creditor for contempt of court; but there was no proof of means to pay: Ch. D. 3.

—Held, that the case was one of "default in the 6—C. A.

debt capable of being enforced by committal to payment of a sum of money" within s. 4 of the prison for a term not exceeding six weeks, Debtors Act, 1869, and that there was, therefore, no jurisdiction to make the order for attachment. > Judgment Debt—" Execution"—Irish Judgment Registered in England.]—The Judgments Extension Act, 1868, gives no jurisdiction to commit a judgment debtor to prison under the Debtors Act upon the certificate of a judgment obtained in Ireland and registered in England under the former act, inasmuch as such committal is not a process of "execution," and the general words of s. 1 of the Judgments Extension Act, giving jurisdiction to the English courts upon such a judgment, are controlled by s. 4 and limited to "execution" under that act. Watson, In re, Johnson, Ex parte, 62 L. J., Q. B. 85; [1893] 1 Q. B. 21; 4 R. 90; 67 L. T. 519; 41 W. R. 34

On a motion under the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 5, an order was made for his committal until he should pay the sum, in payment of which he had made default, and also a gross sum for costs fixed by the court in lieu of taxed costs. Rogers v. Rogers, 23 L. T. 796; 19 W. R. 817.

3. PERSONS IN FIDUCIARY CAPACITY.

a. Generally.

Periods to be Considered.] — To ascertain whether a person ordered to pay and making default fills the character of (a) trustees, (b) persons acting in a fiduciary capacity, or (e) solicitor, within the exception of the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4. sub-ss. 3 and 4, three periods may possibly be material—namely, (1) when the act on which the order was founded was done, (2) when the order was made, (3) when the default was committed—in cases (a) and (b) the period to be looked at is the first; in case (c), if not the first, at the latest the second period. Per Fry, L.J., in cases (a), (b), and (c), the proper period is the first. String, J. re, 55 L. J., Ch. 553; 25 Ch. D. 342; 55 L. T. 3; 34 W. R. 614; 51 J. P. Meaning of Term.]—A "person acting in a diford, Ex parte, Hincks, In re, 45 L.J., Bk. 127; fiduciary capacity" (Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, 34 L.T. 666; 24 W.R. 931. sub-s. 3) means a person who stands in a fiduciary relation towards any other person who may be entitled to call upon him to pay, whether such other person is or is not the plaintiff, or one of the plaintiffs, in the action in which the order for payment has been made. Marris v. Ingram, 49 L. J., Ch. 123; 13 Ch. D. 338; 41 L. T. 613; 28 W. R. 434.

A son in the course of management of one of his father's farms sold part of the farming stock, and received the proceeds. Upon the father's death an action was brought by parties interested in his estate against the son for payment of the moneys received by him, and for accounts. The son having failed to comply with an order made in the action for payment of a sum of money into court:—Held, that he was a "person acting in a fiduciary capacity," within s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869; and, accordingly, the court not being satisfied that he had not the means of payment, leave was given to the plaintiffs to issue a writ of attachment against him for nonpayment. Ib.

Deterrent Object of Act.]—It is immaterial that a defaulting trustee, against whom an attachment is sought to be obtained under s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869, and s. 1 of the Debtors Act, 1878, is unable to pay the moneys in respect of which he is in default, if the court is of opinion that his breach of trust is of such a character as to constitute a fraud. The object of granting attachments in such cases is not only to recover the money, and to punish fraudulent trustees, but to deter other trustees from committing fraudulent breaches of trust. Knowles, In re, Doodson v. Turner, 52 L. J., Ch. 685; 48 L. T.

Application for Writ by Person not in Position of Cestui que Trust.] — The special remedy afforded by the Debtors Act, 1869, in respect of default in payment by a trustee, is a remedy intended to be given only as between trustee and restni que trust, and is not a remedy for a mere reditor, where the person against whom the remedy is sought to be asserted is not a trustee for such creditor. Firmin, In re, London and County Bunking Co. v. Firmin, 57 L. T. 45.

Hearing of Debtor. - An attachment ought not to issue under any of the exceptions in s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, ex parte, but the debtor should have an opportunity of shewing that he is not within the exception. Ferguson v. Ferguson, 44 L. J., Ch. 615; L. R. 10 Ch. 661.

" Possession or Control." ]--Though the exception of the Debtors Act, 1869, as to imprisonment for default by a trustee to pay "any sum in his possession or under his control," applies where a trustee had improperly parted with the fund, it does not apply where, although through his wilful default, he never had it in his possession. Ib.

For the purpose of bringing a trustee within the 3rd exception of s. 4 of the Debtors Act. 1869, it must appear that money ordered to be paid by him had at some time been in his possession or under his control, and the fact that a trustee has upon his appointment promised to make good the deficiency of a former trustee does not make him liable to committal for non-compliance with an order directing him to pay. Cud- against a defaulting trustee where, owing to the

One of two partners was appointed trustee under a liquidation, and, before the affairs were wound up, died. At the time of his death he was indebted to the estate in 2017. The surviving partner was then appointed trustee on his giving an undertaking in writing to make good any deficiency. The latter never received anything on behalf of the estate. An order of court was made for payment of the 2011, and on its being disobeyed an application was made to commit the surviving partner:—Held, that no order to-commit could be made, because it was not shewn that the debtor had ever had the money in his possession. Ib.

A trustee who has received trust money is deemed to have it in his possession until he discharges himself of his trust, and he may be attached, as being within the 3rd exception to s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for making default in payment of a sum so received, and ordered by in payment of a sum so received, and ordered by a court of equity to be paid by him, notwith-standing that he may have parted with the actual possession of or control over the money prior to the order for payment. Middleton v. Chichotzer A D. J., Ch. 237; L. R. 6 Ch. 152; 24 L. T. 173; 19 W. R. 299, 889.

But interest the few states of the state of the s

But interest due from him in respect of trust money so received is not money in his possession or under his control, and an attachment will not issne for non-compliance with an order directing payment of such interest. Ib.

Trustees were held liable for a breach of trust in improperly selling certain bonds forming part of their trust funds. By the judgment in the action they were ordered to make good the valueof the bonds at the date of the judgment. The value of the bonds at the date of the judgment was greater than the value of such bonds at the time of the sale :- Held, on an application to commit the defendants for contempt in not complying with the order, that the difference between the value of the bonds at the time of sale and their value at the date of the judgment was not in the possession of the defondants or under their control within the meaning of s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869, and therefore that the order could not be enforced by attachment. Walker, In re, Walker v. Walker, 60 L. J., Ch. 25; 63 L. T. 237; 38 W. R. 766.

Attachment.]—A defaulting trustee, who has disregarded an order for payment of trust moneys into court, is not protected from attachment under the Debtors Act. Young v. Dallimure, 22 L. T. 119; 18 W. R. 445.

Loan to Cestui que Trust.]—Where a trustee had sold out trust funds and lent them to a cestui que trust, and an order was made for payment of the same into court by the trustee, the court, under the circumstances of the case, and being satisfied that the trustee was wholly unable to refund the trust moneys, exercised the discre-tion conferred by the Debtors Act, 1878, and refused an application for a writ of attachment for non-compliance with the order. Street v. Hope, 10 Ch. D. 286; 27 W. R. 470.

Trustee without Means.]—Under the discretion conferred upon the court by the Debtors Amendment Act, 1878, the court will refuse to grant an application for a writ of attachment defaulter being wholly without means, no useful object would be gained thereby. Mackenzie, I Executor.]—Letters of administration had been Eq. 44 L. 7. 618.

Admission by Debtor, afterwards becoming Trustee. By an order of June, 1878, com-promising an action brought to recover from B. moneys which he had borrowed from A. at interest, B. "by his counsel admitting that the principal sum in his hands claimed in the action amounted to ——l." it was ordered in action amounted to effect that he should hold 1,700%, part thereof, on certain trusts, and should be at liberty to retain it during the life of C., paying interest for it, and liberty was given to apply for payment of the principal and interest if default was made in payment of interest. Default having been made, B., in 1887, was ordered to pay the money into court, and on his failing to do so, leave to issue an attachment was applied for. He deposed that when the order of 1878 was made he had not in his hands any money or investments representing the sum owing from him or any part thereof :- Held, that although B. up to the order of 1878 was only a debtor and not a trustee, he must, having regard to his admission, be held, upon the making of that order, to have had the money in his hands as trustee-that he therefore came within the exception in s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869. and was liable to attachment for nonpayment, Preston v. E. herington, 57 L. J., Ch. 176; 37 Ch. D. 104: 58 L. T. 318: 36 W. R. 49—C. A.

Culpable Negligence-Attachment-Inability to Pay-Discretion of Court. ]-Where a trustee had failed to comply with an order to pay into court large sums which had been disallowed him on passing his accounts, it was shewn that he had by cultable negligence left the trust moneys entirely to the management of agents, and he was unable to prove that the sums disallowed had been applied by them for purposes author-There was no charge of any dishonesty, and the trustee alleged on oath that the moneys had in fact been applied on behalf of the cestui que trust, though under a mistaken view of the trustee's duties. The trustee had no means of replacing the sums. The court, in the exercise of its discretion under the Debtors Act, 1878, s. I. refused to attach the trustee-(1) because he had not been guilty of anything in the nature of a criminal offence; (2) because it did not appear that there was any contumacions refusal to comply with the order. Aglosford (Earl) v. Poulett (Earl), 61 L. J., Ch. 406; [1892] 2 Ch. 60; 66 L. T. 484; 40 W. R. 424-North, J.

Misapplication by Co-trustee.] — Where a trustee, without any dishonesty or fraudulent breach of trust, hands over money to his co-trustee, who misapplies such money, the former is not liable to attachment under s.4, subs. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869. Smith. In rr. Hands v. Andrewce, 62 L. J., Ch. 363 (§ 1883) 2 Ch. 1; 2 R. 309; 68 L. T. 337; 41 W. E. 289; 57 J. P. 516

Representative of Deceased Person.]—Upon default by the personal representative of a deceased person to pay a sum of money which he has been ordered to pay by the court, sequestration may issue without arrest under 32 & 33 Viot. c. 62, s. 8. Sphes v. Dysan, 39 L. J., Ch. 288; L. R. 9 Eq. 228; 21 L. T. 606.

Order on Administratrix to Pay over to Executor.]—Lecters of administration had been granted to the widow of a deceased person upon the suggestion of intestacy, and she had received a sum of money, part of the deceased! property. The letters of administration were subsequently called in, in an action propounding a will of the deceased, and in that action she was ordered to pay the sum of money to the administrator pending suit, which order she had not obeyed!—Held, that she was not protected by the Debtors Act, 1809, and therefore was liable to attachment. Transchi v., Smartl, 54 L. J., P. 92: 10, P. D. 184; 34 W. R. 46.

Defaulting Executor-Possession or Control-Principal and Interest, ]—An executor making default in payment of a sum of money found due from him in an administration action, and which he has been ordered to pay into court, is within the 3rd exception to s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, notwithstanding that the sum consists of a debt which had been owing to the testator during his life, if the executor had been in a fiduciary relation to the testator in respect ordered to be paid in had been in the executor's possession or under his control. Therefore, where the order directs payment of a sun composed of principal and interest not distinguished, an attachment cannot be issued because so much of the sum as represents interest cannot be said to have been in his possession or under his control. Hickey, In re, Hickey v. Colmer, 55 L. T. 588; 35 W. R. 53.

One of Two Executors.]—In order to bring a trustee within the Brd exception of s, 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, 82 & 33 Vict. c. 62, it is not mecssary that the money should have been in his sole possession or under his sole control. Therefore, where a sum of money, forming part of the assets of a testator's estate, was paid into a lault to the joint account of two excentors, with power to one of them to draw checutes, and he drew out the money and misuppiled it, and an order was made against both executors for payment of the money into court:—Held, that the other executor was within the exception, and that a writ of attachment might be issued against him for manpayment of the money. Econs v. Bear, L. R. 10 Ch. 76; 31 L. T. 625; 23 W. R. 67;

Manager of Testator's Business-Disobedience to Order to pay Money into Court-Member of Parliament. - A member of parliament was appointed receiver and manager of the business of a testator in an administration action, but was afterwards discharged and ordered to pass his accounts and pay the balance due from him into Subsequently an order was made by which he was directed to pay a certain sum found due from him into court. A motion to attach him for default in payment was made; but on payment of part of the sum due from him the motion stood over by arrangement. On the motion coming on for hearing, he made an affidavit to the effect that the amount paid was raised by a friend; that he had no means, and if a writ of attachment were issued against him he should be unable to pay; and that he was a member of parliament and claimed privilege as such :—Held, that he was liable to imprisonment as a person acting in a fiduciary capacity within

s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869; that it was not a case in which the centr would refuse to attach, acting on the discretion given it by the Debtors Act, 1878, s. 1; and that parliamentary privilege had no application to such a case. Gent, In re, Gent-Ducis v. Hurris, 58 L. J., Ch. 162; 40 Ch. D. 190; 60 L. T. 355; 37 W. R. 151.

— Non-lodgment of Certified Balance—No Educiary Relation.]—In an action to administer the personal estate of P. T., deceased, the judgment on further consideration ordered defendants, who were administrators with the will annexed of the widow of the deceased, to lodge in couri 310%, the balance certified to be due by her to the estate. The defendants having failed to comply with the order, the plaintiff moved that they might be committed for compense time parties had been established, and therefore that an order for attachment could not be granted. Transfe v. Fitzsimons, [1894] 1 fr. R. 63.

Partner.]—One of two partners receiving money on account of the firm does not receive it "in a fiduciary capacity" so as to be within the 3rd exception to s, 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Pidducke v. Burt, 63 L. J., Ch. 246; [1894] I Ch. 343; S IL, 104; 70 L. T. 558; 42 W. R. 248.

Austioneer—Money received from Sale, ]—An auctioneer is a person acting in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869, S. 4, sub-s. 3, and if he makes default in payment of the money produced by the sale of goods entrusted to him for sale when ordered to pay it by a court of equity he is liable to attachment, whether he still holds the money or has parted with it. Cranther v. Elgond, 5 c L. J., Ch. 416; 34 Ch. D. 601; 56 L. T. 415; 35 W. R. 399—C. A.

Company—Director, ]—A divector of a company was ordered, under s. 165 of the Companies Act, 1869, to pay the full value of shares received by him from the promoter, upon which no money had been paid by Held, upon motion to commit him to prison for nonpartment of the money, that his case was not that of a defaulting trustee, within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, but of a shareholder who had not paid the full amount due from him. Motion to commit refrased, Dimonol Fuel Co., In re, Metcalfe's Class, 49 L. J., Ch. 347; 13 Ch. D. 815; 42 L. T. 178; 28 W. R. 435.

— Promoter. ]—A sale by a promoter to his company was set asiste for fraud, and the promoter ordered to repay the purchase-money to the company. The promoter instituted proceedings in liquidation under s. 125 of the Dankrappey Act, 1860, and a receiver of his property was applicted. No part of the sam ordered to be regard to the company was paid. The company months of the condition of the promoter field, that the condition of the promoter field, that the condition of the promoter field, that promoter was not a "trastee or personating in following capacity" within s. 4 of the Defeors Act, 1869; and secondly, because he was protected by s. 12 of the Bankruptey Act, 1869. Phamitate Sewage Co. v. Hartmort, 25 W. R. 743.

b. Effect of Bankruptcy Law.

Trustee—Effect of Bankruptey—Jurisdiction.]
—The court has jurisdiction, under s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869, to order the attachment of a trustee who has made default in payment of a sum of money which he has been ordered to pay into court, notwithstanding that a receiving order in bankruptey has been made against him.
Smith. In ve. Hands v. Andrews, 62 L. J., Ch.

Non-compliance with Order to Pay Cash into Court as Trustee. - By an order made on the 5th April, 1889, the defendant was directed, as trustee, to pay two sums of cash, which he was alleged to have misapplied, into court on or before the 6th May, 1889. He failed, however, to comply with that order. On the 13th May, 1889, a receiving order was made against him on his own petition, and he was adjudiented a bankrupt, and he had not yet obtained his discharge. The plaintiffs moved for liberty to issue a writ of attachment against him, the notice of motion being dated the 22nd April, 1890:— Held, that the property and person of the debtor were protected by s. 9 of the Bankruptey Act, 1883; and that the court had no jurisdiction to direct a writ of attachment to issue against him. Simes, In re, Simes v. Newbery, 62 L. T. 721; 38 W. R. 570.

Fraudulent Preference.]—A person who has been ordered to repay to the trustee of a bank-rupt's estate money which he has received by way of frandulient preference does not hold the money in a fiduciary capacity within the meaning of s. 4 of the Debrors Act, 1869, and cannot, therefore, if he make default in payment of the money, be committed to prison under that section. Howard, Experter, Chapman, Let e, 42 L. J., Bk. 19; L. R. 8 Ch. 231; 28 L. T. 4; 21 W. R. 152.

Sect. 9 of the Debtors Act, 1869, is only intended to preserve to the Court of Bankruptcy the special powers of Imprisonment conferred upon it by saidt sections as the 19th, 70th, and 92td of the act of 1869, and is not intended to preserve to the Court of Bankruptcy any powers of imprisonment for debt which have been taken away from other courts by the Debtors Act, 1869.

Money received by a creditor, who was a married woman, by way of fraudulent preference, does not constitute a trust fund for the benefit of the bankrupt's estate, and the non-compliance by the creditor with the order of the court to pay the fund over to the trustee in the bankruptcy does not subject such creditor to imprisonment, as being within the 3rd exception to the 4th section of the Debtors Act, 1869. Wood, Be parte, Chapman, La re, 21 W. B. 7.1

Disobedience of Order for Costs, ]—A trustee in liquidation was ordered to pay the taxed costs of the solicitor and the costs of the motion upon which the order was made. On default, he was committed to prison for his contempt of court in disobeying the order :—Held, that the order of committal was wrong, for that the costs of the motion could not be said to be moneys in his hands as a trustee within s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors Act, 1869. Sharp, Ew parte, Hind, In re, 37 L. T. 168.

Trustee Protected. ]-A trustee, who had been | agency :- Held, that the defendant was liable to ordered in a suit to pay into court an amount imprisonment under s. 4, sub-s. 3, of the Debtors admitted to be due from him, and mixed with Act, 1869, as a person acting in a fiduciary his own moneys, was adjudicated bankrupt :-Held, that although the debt was one from which an order of discharge would not release him, still, as it was a debt provable under the bankruptcy. he was, pending the bankruptey proceedings, protected by the Bankruptey Act, 1869, s. 12, from attachment for disobedience to the order. Colliham v. Dalton, 44 L. J., Ch. 702; L. R. 10 Ch. 655; 23 W. R. 865.

Discharge Refused.]-Leave was given to issue an attachment against a defendant for nonpayment of money, being a default by a person acting in a fiduciary capacity. He was attached and put in prison. He then filed a declaration of insolvency and was adjudicated bankrupt, and applied for his discharge. Malins, V.-C., refused the application, saying that the bankrupt, if so advised, might renew his application after he had passed his final examination:—Held, that this refusal was right. Lewes (Earl) v. Barnett, 47 L.J., Ch. 144; 6 Ch. D. 252; 26 W. R. 101—

4. Solicitors.

Solicitor-Order for Payment of Money-Subsequent Bankruptcy—Jurisdiction.]—The court has jurisdiction to order a writ of attachment to issue against a solicitor for default in payment of a sum of money which he has been ordered to pay in his character of an officer of the court, notwithstanding that he has subscquently become bankrupt, Edye, In re, 63 L. T. 762; 39 W. R. 198.

Default in Payment by Solicitor-Attachment, notwithstanding Part Payment.]-A writ of attachment against a solicitor for nonpayment of a sum of money due from him as an officer of the courts may be executed, although the client has since the issue of the writ accepted a sum of money in part payment. Harrey v. Hall (L. R. 16 Eq. 324) distinguished. Fereday, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 894; [1895] 2 Ch. 437; 13 R. 639; 73 L. T. 56.

A solicitor received money belonging to a client, and paid it in to his own banking account. Afterwards an order directing him to pay the money to the client was made by the court. After the making of this order the client signed an agreement to accept payment by instalments. Default was made in payment of the instalments, and a further order for payment was made. This order having been disobeyed, an order for attachment against the solicitor was made. No order had been made calling on the solicitor to answer affidavits, but the matter had been referred to the Master, who had reported that the money was due to the client:—Held, that the case was within the 4th exception in the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, and therefore the solicitor was liable was rightly made, and the order of attachment was rightly made, and must be restored. Nullification of Order by Arrangement. order made against a solicitor under the Debtors Act, for payment of money by a certain day, with notice that in default his property would be liable to sequestration and himself to be arrested and committed to prison, was followed by the issue of a fi. fa., under which the sheriffs took possession. An arrangement was then made by which the sheriffs withdrew from possession, upon an engagement by him to pay the amount, costs, charges, and interest by monthly instalments. and in default that they should re-enter under the original order and proceed with the execution of the warrant as if they had not withdrawn from possession. Default having been made in payment of the instalments :- Held, that, after the arrangement for withdrawing from possession and payment by instalments, the debter could not be attached for default. Harvey v. Hall, 48 L. J., Ch. 95; L. R. 16 Eq. 324; 28 L. T. 734; 21 W. R. 783.

Order on Solicitor to Pay Costs. ]solicitor was ordered under r. 112 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886, to repay to the trustee certain costs together with the costs of the order, and the solicitor repaid the costs but not the costs of the order, the court refused to commit him, being doubtful whether he had been ordered to pay the money in his character of solicitor, Default by a solicitor in payment of the balance found due from him to his client upon taxation, under the common order in chancery. is default in payment of a sum of money when ordered to be paid by a solicitor in his character of an officer of the court, and an attachment may be issued against him. White, In re, 23 L. T. 387; 19 W. R. 39.

An order was made against a solicitor for delivery of his bill of costs and taxation. He moved to discharge this order, and the application was dismissed with costs. He afterwards appealed, and the appeal was also dismissed with costs :-Held, that the nonpayment of the costs of the appeal was not a default in payment of a sum of money by a solicitor as an officer of the court within the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub.-s. 4, and that an attachment could not be issued against him. Hope, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 797; 7 Ch. D. 523; 26 L. T. 814; 20 W. R. 694.

The default by a solicitor in payment of a balance found due from him upon taxation of his bill under the common order for that purpose, is a default in payment of a sum of money ordered to be paid by the solicitor in his character of an officer of the court within the meaning of the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, sub.-s. 4, and an attachment may be issued against him. Non-application of Chancery Rules to Cases in Exchequer Division,]—A residuary legatee, being cutitled to a sum of money which the trustee of the will admitted that he had received. brought an action against the trustee in the Exchequer Division, and levied execution on the judgment. The execution not having realised enough to satisfy the judgment, the legatee applied to the Exchequer Division for an order to pay the money within a definite time, intending to proceed against the trustee by way of attachment in accordance with the rule of the Court of Chancery of January, 1870, made for working out the Debtors Act, 1869:—Held, that no jurisdiction is given by the Judicature Act, s. 24, sub-s. 1, to the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice to enforce payment of a debt in the manner sought by the plaintiff, Drewitt v. Edwards, 26 W. R. 60. Affirmed, 37 L. T. 622; 26 W. R. 122-C. A.

Election of Remedy.]—Held, that the plaintiff, having pursued the remedy given by the common law divisions, could not subsequently avail himself of the chancery remedy.

Effect of Receiving Order—Arrest.]—Having regard to the terms of s. 9 of the Bankruptey Act, 1883, as to the effect of a receiving order in in a county court, an order for payment of 201. protecting a debtor from arrest, the order must was made. The defendant having made default be deemed to have been "made" on the day it in payment thereof, a judgment summons was was pronounced, and therefore as protecting the

The defendant having failed to pay, the plaintiff applied to the judge of the county court of the district in which the defendant resided for an order under s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for payment by instalments, and, upon the judge refusing to make the order upon the ground that he had no jurisdiction, applied to the bankruptcy judge in chambers —Held, that the county court judge had jurisdiction to make the order asked for. Washer v. Elliott (1 C. P. D. 169, and col. 324, infra) explained. Ib.

County Court-Jurisdiction-Committal Order -Prohibition-Non-appearance of Debtor.]-A county court judge has jurisdiction to make a committed order under the Debtors Act, 1869, notwithstanding the non-appearance of the debtor; and a prohibition will not be granted to restrain the proceedings thereunder upon the ground that the debtor had not an opportunity of being heard as to his ability to pay. Pitcher v. Bourn (10 Times L. R. 245) doubted and disapproved. Johnstone v. Kiernan, 10 R. 313.

Power of County Court. ]-Semble, per Bovill, C.J., and Brett, J., that the power of a judge of a county court, under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, ss. 98, 99, and 103, to commit more than once for the nonpayment of a judgment debt, is virtually superseded by the Debtors Act, 1869, ss. 4 and 5; and that it is now limited to a single commitment (not to exceed six weeks) for a single default, -each neglect, where the order is for pay-

- Of Mayor's Court. ] - The power of making an order for payment of a debt due on a judgment of a superior court, and of committing the debtor in case of default, which is conferred on inferior courts by the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 5, cannot be exercised by the Mayor's Court of London if the debtor does not reside or carry on business within the city of London at the time he is snummoned on such judgment. Appeal from High Court.]—By the operation of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 103, the jurisdiction and powers under the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 5, formerly vested in the High Court, are assigned to, and are to be exercised by the judge to whom bankruptcy business is assigned. By s. 104, an appeal is given in bankruptey matters from the order of the High Court to the Court of Appeal. An appeal from an order of the judge to whom bankruptcy business is assigned upon an application under s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, therefore, now lies to the Court of Appeal, and not to a Divisional Court. Failure to file Order as required by repealed. Bankruptcy Act, 1849 .- A. having commenced an action of debt in the Queen's Bench against B., a trader, B. proposed that a judge's order should be made for a stay of proceedings upon payment of debt and costs, and sent to A. a summons for that purpose, upon which a consent was indorsed by A. A judge's order was there-upon made at the instance of B., directing proceedings to be stayed on payment of debt and costs, in default of payment, judgment to be signed and execution to issue; B. served a copy of this order on A. Neither the original order, nor any copy of it, was filed with the clerk of the docquets and judgments in the Queen's Bench, as directed by the repealed Bankruptey Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106), s. 137. Judgment was signed, and execution taken out, under the order; and the sheriff paid to A. from the proceeds of the sale of goods of B., the debt and costs for which execution had issued. After the execution and payment B. became bankrupt: -Held, that under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 137, the order, judgment and execution were void as against B.'s assignees, the order not having been filed; and that the assignees might recover from A, the amount paid him under the execution as money had and received to their use as assignees. Farrow v. Mayes, 18 Q. B. 816; 17 Jur. 132.

Payment by Garnishee under void Judgment. The defendant in an action consented to a judge's order for judgment against him, which was accordingly signed, and, a garnishee order was accordingly signed, and, a garmine order having been made upon the judgment, the garnishee paid the debt attached to the judgment creditors before the expiration of twenty-one days from the date of the making of the judge's order. The order was not filed as required by s. 27 of the Debtors Act, 1869. The defendant subsequently committed an act of bankruptcy, and was thereupon adjudged bankrupt :- Held, that, although the moneys attached under the judgment had already been paid to the judgment creditors before the act of bankruptey, nevertheless, the judgment being avoided by failure to file the judge's order, the trustee in bankruptey was entitled to recover from the judgment execution upon and in pursuance of Ord. XLII.

No order is necessary for the discharge of a prisoner in custody for contempt under any of the exceptions contained in s. 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, where the writ of attachment has appended to it a note in the following terms:
"Note.—This writ does not authorise an imprisonment for any longer period than one year." It is now the usual practice to append the above note to all writs of attachment issued under the above section. Educards, In re, Brushev, Edwards, 51 L. J., Ch. 943; 21 Ch. D. 230; 30 W. R.

Release on Undertaking to Pay by Instalments. ]-Trustee in a liquidation who had been committed to prison, for non-compliance with an order directing him to pay a sum of money, part of the debtor's property, received by him in his character of trustee, into court, ordered to be released upon his undertaking to pay amount due by quarterly instalments. Hedger, Exparte, Frank, In re, 42 L. T. 192.

Action for Detaining beyond Year.]-In an action in which the plaintiff acted as solicitor and improperly signed judgment and issued execution and received the amount of the levy, an order was made on him to bring that amount into court, and on his non-compliance an order of attachment was made under which he was arrested and committed to the custody of the defendant, then governor of a county gaol. The order was to attach the plaintiff so as to have him before the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice to answer touching an for and obtained his discharge under a judge's order. In an action by him against the defendant for detaining him beyond the year:—Held, that whether the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 4, applied or not, the defendant having complied with the order was not liable to an action, but was protected by the exigency of the writ. Greaves v. Keen, 4 Ex. D. 73; 40 L. T. 216; 27 W. R.

Foreign Attachment.]—A plaintiff in the Mayor's Court of London had sued the defendant by process of foreign attachment. In order to dissolve the attachment he surrendered himself into custody, and remained in prison until the plaintiff obtained final judgment :- Held, that the process of foreign attachment authorised the benefit as guides, but the standards laid down detention of the debtor only until fluid judgment; in them must not be substituted for that which that the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 29, preserving the is laid down in the not. Use of Authorities.]—The only use of authorities on decided cases is the establishment of some principle which the judge can follow out in some principle when the ladge can follow out in deciding the case before him—per Jessel, M.R. Hullett's Estate, In re, Knatchbull v. Hullett, 49 L. J., Ch. 415; 13 Ch. D. at p. 712; 42 L. T. 421; 28 W. R. 732.

The only thing in a judge's decision binding as an authority on a subsequent judge is the principle upon which the case was decided; but it is not sufficient that the case should have alleged contempt, but the order did not shew been decided on a principle, if that principle is what the contempt was. The plaintiff was kept not itself a right principle, or one not applicable in custody for more than a year, and then applied to the case; and it is for a subsequent judge to say whether or not it is a right principle, and, if not, he may himself lay down the true principle. In that case the prior decision ceases to be a binding authority or guide for any subsequent judge, for the second judge who lays down the true principle in effect reverses the decision—per M.R. Osborne and Rowlett, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 310; 13 Ch. D. at p. 785, Observations as to the necessity of preserving an uniformity of decision in the different courts. Parkin v. Thorold, 16 Beav. 59; 16 Jur. 959.

In determining whether a transaction amounts to a fraudulent preference, the court ought now to have regard simply to the statutory definition contained in s. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869. The decisions on the subject before the act may earlier law and decisions for the purpose of inter-preting the provisions of a statutory code can overrule a decision which has been acted upon preting the provisions of a statutory code can only be just find on some special ground, such as for so long—per Sherr (Lord), M.E. Licharish, the doubtful import or previously acquired tech. Ex-parte, Wallin, In. m, 59 L. J., 0, B. 500 25 mical meaning of the language used therein, Q. B. D. 176; 62 L. T. 674; 88 W. R. 482. Robinson v. Canadian Pacific Ry., 61 L. J., P. C. 79 : [1892] A. C. 481 : 67 L. T. 505-P. C.

Old Established Cases not to be lightly Overruled. —A case after it has stood for a long period unchallenged should not in the interests of public convenience, and having regard to the protection of private rights, be overruled except upon very special considerations—per Thesiger, L.J. Pugh v. Golden Valley Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. at p. 723; 15 Ch. D. 330; 42 L. T. 863; 28 W. R. 863.

Where an old case is contrary to the principles of the general law, the Court of Appeal ought not to shrink from overruling it even after a considerable lapse of time, but when an olddecided case has made the law on a particular subject, the Court of Appeal ought not to interfere with it, because people have considered it as establishing the law and have acted upon it—per Jessel, M.R. Smith v. Keal, 9 Q. B. D. 352; 47 L. T. 143; 31 W. R. 80.

The court will not overrule eases upon which conveyancers may have relied even though the court does not consider the case a sensible decosion—per Bowen, L.J. Lashmar, In re, Mondy v. Penfold, 60 L. J., Ch. 143; [1891] 1 Ch. 258; 64 L. T. 333.

A rule lauded by the highest legal authorities. and acted upon for centuries, ought not to be disturbed upon appeal. Harrey v. Farquhar, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 192.

Although an old decision, which has been long followed as having settled the law, may be shown to have proceeded upon a wrong view of what the case was, it cannot be disregarded. Baker v. Tucker, 3 H. L. Cas. 106; 14 Jur. 771.

Where a decision has been frequently questioned, though not overruled, the fact that it has stood for twelve years without being authoritatively overruled, does not bind a court of error to follow it—per Baggallay, L.J. Peurson v. Peurson, 54 L. J., Ch. 32; 27 Ch. D. 145; 51 T. 311; 32 W. R. 1006.

Where there has been a deliberate unappealed decision of a court with regard to the effect of a condition in a common form of contract which has become known to all persons who have to deal with such matters, and has been acted on for eighteen years, it has always been the legal practice, even of courts of error, to follow such decisions, even though they would not, perhaps, have given the same decision had the case come originally before them-per Brett, M.R. Palmer v. Johnson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 348; 13 Q. B. D. 355; 51 L. T. 211: 33 W. R. 36.

If a contract founded upon a statute has been in daily use and a decision of the courts on that statute has been acted on throughout the country for a long time, the Court of Appeal might feel bound to follow the old decision even though not agreeing with it, on the ground of the number of persons who had acted on it—per Esher (Lord), M.R. Phillips v. Rees, 59 L. J., Q. B. 1; 24 Q. B. D. 17; 61 L. T. 713; 38 W. R. 55; 54 J. E. 29.

When a decision has stood for many years, the Construction of Code. ]-An appeal to the courts would not have come to the same Morrell, 148,

I think that a doctrine having been laid down so long ago, whether it rests upon any sound basis or not, it would be most improper to depart from it now, because one would be really altering the contract between the parties; for we have a right to suppose that they have entered into it upon the basis of that which for nearly a century has been understood to be the law-per Herschell (Lord) and Morris (Lord). Tancred v. Steel Co. of Scotland, 15 App. Cas. 125.

Where documents are in daily use in mercantile affairs, without any substantial difference in form from time to time, it is most material that the construction which was given to them years ago, and which has from that time been accepted in the courts of law, and in the mercantileworld, should not be in the least altered, because all subsequent contracts have been made on the faith of the decisions. Therefore, whether one thinks that one would oneself have come to the same conclusion as the judges did in the beginning is immaterial. One ought to adhere strictly to the construction which has been put upon such documents—per Esher (Lord), M.R. Pendorf v. Hamilton, 55 L. J., Q. B. 546; 17 Q. B. D. 674; 55 L. T. 499; 35 W. R. 70; 6 Asp. M. C. 44.

If the question were doubtful, I should hesitate very long before I laid down a different rule of construction in relation to sections of the Wills Act which have had for many years a particular construction given to them; because it is impossible to say how many persons may have acted upon the faith that that construction was correct and rested the disposal of their property upon that belief. Of course if it were clear that the construction put by the courts upon the sections was wrong, it would be our duty, disregarding the result, to express a contrary opinion—per Herschell (Lord). Airey v. Bower, 56 L. J., Ch. 742; 12 App. Cas. 269; 56 L. T. 409; 35 W. R. 657.

- Erroneous construction of Statute. - I am sensible of the inconvenience of disturbing a course of practice which has continued unchallenged for a long time, and which has been sanctioned by high legal anthority. But if it is really founded upon an erroneous construction of an act of parliament, there is no principle which precludes the House of Lords from correcting the error. To hold that the matter is not open to review would be to give the effect of legislation to a decision contrary to the intention of the legislature, merely because it has happened, for some reason or other, to remain unchallenged some reason of other, to remain indiantengation for a certain length of time—per Macnaghten (Lovd). Hamilton v. Baker, The Sura, 58 L. J., 17, 57; 14 App. Cas. 209; 61 L. T. 26; 38 W. R. 129; 6 Asp. M. C. 413. And see preceding case.

- Rule of Procedure. - Where a judgment contains a decision on a rule of procedure which has thus been brought before the public, the profession, and the legislature, and remained undisturbed for many years, and has been acted upon and dealt with in statutes and rules of court, When a decision has stood for many years, the even if I dissented from it, I should hesitate to courts always consider that subsequent contracts overrule it—per Brett, M.B. Fruser v. Ehrenhave been entered into subject to it, and even if perper, 53 L. J., Q. B. 78; 12 Q. B. D. 318.

- As to Jurisdiction. ] - The rale that | governs us in not overruling decisions of many years standing, on which persons may have it does not preclude a bill of review. Hosking acted in making contracts or otherwise does not v. Terry, 7 L. T., 52. apply to a decision as to the jurisdiction of another court, and there is no reason why at any distance of time a superior court should not overrule it—per Lord Esher, M.R. Reg. v. Edwards, 53 L. J., M. C. 149; 13 O. B. D. 586; 51 L. T. 586.

Binding Character of old Dicta. ]-If, even in the absence of any judicial decision, a dictum in law has been accepted and has entered into contracts and dealings, so that by not following it I should be actually disturbing anything which had been done in former times over and over again on the faith of this dietum, I should feel myself bound by it—Pearson, J. Rosher, In re, Rosher v. Rosher, 53 L. J., Ch. 722; 26 Ch. D. 821; 51 L. T. 785; 32 W. R. 825.

Examination by Judge of Practice in his Court. — I do not think that a judge would wish any statement which he may have made in the course of a case, merely obiter and casually, to be treated as necessarily being an authority on the subject in question; but when a judge has thought it necessary for the purpose of a case to make a deliberate examination of the practice of his court, and to state such practice, I do not think the authority of such statement can be got rid of merely by arguing that it was not really necessary for the actual decision of the case - per Lord Esher, M.R. Bell Cow or Cow, Ex parte, 57 L. J., Q. B. 103; 20 Q. B. D. 19; 58 L. T. 323; 36 W. R. 213 : 52 J. P. 484.

In House of Lords. - Where a case involves a clear principle which has been decided by the House of Lords, that decision must be followed by every other inferior court. French v. Macale, 2 Dr. & W. 269; 1 Con. & L. 459; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 568.

The decisions of the House of Lords are conclusive declarations of the existing state of the law, and are binding upon itself when sitting judicially, as much as upon all inferior tribunals, and can only be altered by act of parliament. Att.-Gen. v. Windsor (Dean), 8 H. L. Cas. 369; 30 L. J., Ch. 529; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 833; 2 L. T. 578 8 W. R. 477.

The rule of law laid down by the Honse of Lords as the ground of its judgment, sitting judicially as the last and supreme court of appeal must be taken for law until altered by act of parliament. If the law were not binding upon the House it would be arrogating to itself the right of altering the law, and legislating by its separate authority. Beamish v. Beamish, 9 H. L. Cas. 274; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 770; 5 L. T. 97.

A judgment of the House of Lords given on appeal cannot be reversed; but where such appeal and judgment have been obtained by suppression and misrepresentation, the Honse will afterwards discharge the order granting the leave to appeal and the order constituting the leave to appeal and the order constituting the judg-ment thereon. Tommey v. White, 4 H. L. Cas. 313. A decision of the House of Lords once pronounced in a particular case is conclusive in that case, and cannot be reversed, except by act of parliament; but if the House should afterwards be of opinion that an erroneous principle lind been adopted in the first case, the House would not be bound in any other to adhere to such principle. Wilson v. Wilson, 5 H. L. Cas. 40; 20 L. J., Ch. 697.

An order of the House of Lords, affirming a decree in Chancery, is final and conclusive, but

The House of Lords will not reconsider a question which it has once decided. Thellusson v. Rendleshum, 7 H. L. Cas. 429.

A decision of the House of Lords is binding upon every court in the kingdom, including the House itself in its judicial character. Topham

v. Portland (Duke), 17 W. R. 911.
Decisions of the House of Lords upon questions of law, as the construction of statutes and especially of fiscal acts, are binding upon the House in subsequent cases. Inland Receive Commissioners v. Harrison, 43 L. J., Ex. 138; L. R. 7 H. L. 1; 30 L. T. 274; 22 W. R. 559.

- Decision on English Case - Effect on Scotch Case.]-A decision of this House in an English ease ought to be held conclusive in Scotland as well as England, as to the questions of English law and English jurisdiction which it determined. It cannot, of course, conclude any question of Scottish law, or as to the jurisdiction of any Scottish court in Scotland, So far as it may proceed upon principles of general jurisprudence, it ought to have weight in Scotland; as a similar judgment of this House on a Scotch appeal ought to have weight in England —per Lord Selborne, L.C. Ewing v. Orr-Ewing, 10 App. Cas. 499; 53 L. T. 826.

 Elaborate Judgment not dissented from. -Where, in the House of Lords, one of the learned lords gives an elaborate explanation of the meaning of a statute, and some of the other learned lords present concur in the explanation, and none express their dissent from it, it must be taken that all of them agreed in it —per Esher (Lord), M.R. West Durby Union v. Atcham Union, 59 L. J., M. C. 17; 24 Q. B. D. 117; 38 W. R. 361; 54 J. P. 485. S. P., Manchester Overscors v. Ormskirk Union—per Cole-ridge (Lord), C.J., 59 L. J., M. C. 103;24 Q. B. D. 678; 62 L. T. 661; 38 W. R. 778; 54 J. P. 487.

- Conflicting Decisions.]-If two cases decided in this House cannot be reconciled, I apprehend that the authority which is at once the more recent, and the more consistent with general principles, ought to prevail—per Selborne, L.C. Campbell v. Campbell, 5 App. Cas. at

It is the duty of this House to maintain, as far as possible, the authority of all former decisions of this House; and although later decisions may have interpreted and limited the application of earlier, they ought not (without some unavoidable necessity) to be treated as conflicting-per Selborne, L.C. Caledonian Ry. v. Walker's Trus-tecs, 7 App. Cas. 259; 46 L. T. 826; 30 W. R. 569; 46 J. P. 676.

Dicta. - Observations made by members of the House, beyond the ratio decidendi which is propounded and acted upon in giving judgment, are only to be followed in as far as they may be considered agreeable to sound reason and to prior authorities. Att. - Gen. v. Windsor (Dean), 8 H. L. Cas. 369; 30 L. J., Ch. 529; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 833; 2 L. T. 578; 8 W. R. 477.

- Lords equally Divided. |-- Where there is an equal division of opinion among the lords, and in consequence, the judgment of the court below stands, the result is the same as to authority as

Ratio Decidendi, how Discovered. -If five lords give five different sets of reasons, you have the decisions, and you must find out for yourself which of the judgments is to be relied upon as giving the proper reasons. But I think in all these cases you must only look at the judgments of the lords who formed the majority, and who decided the case—per Jessel, M.R. Redgrave v. Hurd, 51 L. J., Ch. 118; 20 Ch. D. 14; 45 L. T. 489; 30 W. R. 251.

Decisions of Courts of Co-ordinate Jurisdiction.]—The Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer followed each other's decisions, as a matter of courtesy; but the vicechancellors did not consider themselves bound by each other's decisions. I have differed frequently from courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction—per Jessel, M.R. Guthercole v. Smith, 44 L. T.

The Court of Appeal is not bound by the decision of the Exchequer Chamber when the latter court were equally divided in opinion, and, in consequence, the judgment of the Queen's Bench was affirmed—per Brett, L.J. Smith v. Lambeth Assessment Committee, 10 Q. B. D. 328.

When the decision of one court is cited to another of co-ordinate authority, the latter has a right to regard it in a critical, and even sceptical spirit; and, while accepting the decision, to decline the reason of deciding, if a better one can be assigned. Tottenham's Estate, In re, lr. R. 3 Eq. 528

The court will not review a decision of a contemporary court of co-ordinate authority, unless there has been a conflict of decision, or such decision is at variance with a long line of authorities.

Buller, In re, 8 Jun (N.S.) 205.

The decision of a co-ordinate branch of the court will be followed until reversed on appeal, in order to avoid an unseemly conflict of decisions. Hotchkiss's Trusts, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 647. S. P., Times Life Assurance and Guarantee Co., In re, Nunneley, Ex purte, 39 L. J., Ch. 297; 22 L. T. 198; 18 W. R. 404.

Where there is power to appeal, the courts are bound by the decisions of courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction. Casson v. Churchley, 53 L. J., Q. B. 335; 50 L. T. 568. Sec The Vera Cruz, infra.

According to the comity of judicial tribunals in this country, one court of co-ordinate jurisdiction should not, in a case in which there is an appeal, differ from another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction-per Brett, M.R. Palmer v. Johnson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 348; 13 Q. B. D. 355; 51 L. T. 211; 38 W. R. 36.

Though a divisional court is not in every case and under all circumstances absolutely bound by a decision of another divisional court, still according to all the ordinary rules by which the practice of the courts is regulated, such a deciproduce of the courts is regulated, such a decision should be followed—per Pollocis, B. Verwor v. Watson, 60 L. J., Q. B. 205; [1891] I Q. B. 400; 64 L. T. 460; 55 J. P. 454.

Decisions of Lord Chancellor-Judge of First Instance. ]-I think the Lord Chancellor, wherever he is sitting and whatever case he is trying, is still Lord Chancellor, and his decision is binding of the courts in Westminster Hall to hold itself by a previous decision of a lord chancellor ment. Ib. A vice-chancellor, in deciding a case, is bound or not. Freeman v. Pope, 39 L. J., Ch. 148; L. R. 9 Eq. 206; 21 L. T. 816; 18 W. R. 399.

Where a previous decision, even of the Court of Appeal, is clearly based upon a misapprehension, the court is not bound to follow it. Dogdale v. Dugdale, L. R. 14 Eq. 234.

Whether binding on Court of Appeal. ]-Although the decision of a lord chancellor given before the Judicature Act may be overruled by the Court of Appeal, yet such a course ought only to be taken exceptionally, and in a very strong case. So rarely is that done, that practically the decisions of a lord chancellor and the old lord justices are considered as binding on the Court of Appeal—per Cotton, L.J. Watts, In ro, Cornford v. Elliott, 55 L. J., Ch. 383; 29 Ch. D. 958; 53 L. T. 426; 33 W. R. 885. S. P., Gard v. Sewers Commissioners—per Baggallay, L. J.; 54 L. J., Ch. 707; 28 Ch. D. 509; 52 L. T.

I think I may say that we ought not to lay down as an absolute rule that decisions of lord chancellors, at all events sitting alone, are to be taken as decisions of the Court of Appeal and absolutely binding on this court, so as to prevent us from even looking into the grounds or considering the case which was before the particular lord chancellor. But no doubt the greatest weight ought to be given to such decisious, and, unless they are shewn to be manifestly wrong or manifestly contrary to the general current of authority on the point decided, it appears to me that we ought not to take upon ourselves to over-Tule them—per Thesiger, L.J. Wheeldon v. Burrows, 48 L. J., Ch. 855; 12 Ch. D. at p. 54; 41 L. T. 327; 28 W. R. 196.

I may say that I do not consider the decision of a lord chancellor is absolutely binding upon us, because every lord chancellor's decision was liable to be re-heard, not only by himself, but by his successor—per James, L.J. Askworth v. Munn, 15 Ch. D. at p. 377; 43 L. T. 553; 28 W. R.

Conflicting Decisions of different Lord Chancellors.]—When we have conflicting decisions of two Lord Chancellors, the decision of the subsequent lord chancellor is entitled to the greater weight, because the subsequent Lord Chancellor could overrule the decision of the prior Lord Chancellor—per Jessel, M.R. Henty v. Wrey, 58 L. J., Ch. 674; 21 Ch. D. 332; 47 L. T. 231; 30 W. R. 850.

Power of Full Court of Appeal to overrule Decisions of Smaller Number. ]-The Court of Appeal is one composed of six members, and if at any time a decision of a lesser number is called in question, and a difficulty arises about the accuracy of it, I think the court is entitled, sitting as a full court, to decide whether we will follow or not the decision arrived at by the smaller number—per Lord Esher, M.R. Didon', Newbury and South-of equal runk; it does so simply from what may  $a_0 mpon_0 R_y \dots C_1 W. B_y, 9$  Ry. & Can. Traff. be called the comity of judges. In the same way, there is no common law or statutory rule to oblige a court to bow to its own decisions; it does so again on the grounds of judicial comity. But when a court is equally divided, this comity does not exist, for there is no authority of the court as such, and those who follow must choose one of the two adverse opinions—per Brett. M.R.

The Vera Cruz, 53 L. J., P. 33; 9 P. D. 96; 51
L. T. 104; 32 W. R. 783; 5 Asp. M. C. 270.

Binding Character of Decisions on Construction of Documents. |- Nothing is better settled than that the construction put upon an instrument by a court of law or equity is not binding on another court of law or equity, even of inferior jurisdiction, as regards the construction of an instrument couched in somewhat similar language. New Cullao, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 285;

22 Ch. D. 488; 48 L. T. 252; 31 W. R. 185, Where the words of a document are not identically the same, the case on a question of construction is not binding on a court of coordinate jurisdiction. Huck v. London Provident Building Society, 52 L. J., Ch. 541; 23 Ch. D. 111; 48 L. T. 250; 31 W. R. 393.

Binding Character of Decisions of Privy Council.]—While attaching great weight to previous decisions in pari materia, the judicial committee will examine the reasons upon which such decisions rest, and will give effect to their own view of the law. Clifton v. Ridsdale (2 P. D. 276), approved. Read v. Lincoln (Bishop), 62 L. J., P. C. 1: [1892] A. C. 644; 67 L. T. 128; 56 J. P. 725—P. C.

It is true that the decisions of the privy council are not theoretically binding on the High Court; but in case of mercantile and admiralty law, where the same principles are professedly followed in the colonies and in this country, it is, to say the least, highly undesirable that there should be any conflict between the decisions of the judicial committee and those of the High Court or Courts of Appeal in this country—per Limley, L.J. The City of Chester, 53 L. J. P. 103; 9 P. D. 207; 51 L. T. 485; 33 W. R. 111; 5 Asp. M. C. 320.

When a decision of the judicial committee has been reported to Her Majesty, and has been sauctioned, it becomes the decree or order of the final Court of Appeal; and it is the daty of every subordinate tribunal to whom the order is addressed to carry it into execution. Pitts v. La Fontaine, 50 L. J., P. C. 8; 6 App. Cas. 482; 43 L. T. 519-P. C.

Decisions of Ecclesiastical Courts.]—I think there is anthority for saying that the temporal court, proceeding in prohibition to restrain excess of jurisdiction in the Court Ecclesiastical, is not bound by a decision of even the highest Court of Appeal in ecclesiastical matters—per Blackburn, Lord. Machanochie v. Penzance (Lord), 50 L. J., Q. B. 611; 6 App. Cas. +43; 44 L. T. 479; 29 W. R. 633; 45 J. P. 584—H. L. (E.)

Decisions of Railway Commissioners. |--- I think we have held that eases before the railway commissioners must not be cited as anthorities to us
—per Bramwell, L.J. G. W. Ry. v. Railway
Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 489.

Cas. 210.

Scotch and Irish Decisions.]-The courts carefully consider the decisions of the Scotch and Irish courts, though the decisions are not binding on English courts — per Esher (Lord), M.R. Reg. v. Income Taw Commissioners, 58 L. J., Q. B. 196; 22 Q. B. D. 296; 60 L. T. 446; 37 W. R. 294; 53 J. P. 198.

The decisions of the Irish courts, though entitled to the highest respect, are not binding on English judges. Parsons, In re, Stockley v. Parsons, 59 L. J., Ch. 666; 45 Ch. D. 51; 62 L. T. 929; 38 W. R. 712.

A decision of the court of session in Scotland is not binding upon a divisional court in England, not being a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction; and the inconvenience which might result from a difference between English and Scotch courts on the construction of an act of parliament will not prevent the English court from differing from such previous decision. Morgan v. London General Omnibus Co., 12 Q. B. D. 201; 50 L. T. 687; 32 W. R. 416.

Although we ought to pay respect to the opinion of the Court of Session on a point of law common to both England and Scotland, their decisions cannot be considered binding Johnson v. Raylton, 50 L. J., Q. B. 756; 7 Q. B. D. 445; 45 L. T. 374; 30 W. R. 350.

Scotch cases, though not binding as an authority, are, nevertheless, entitled to the greatest respect. Ivay v. Hedges, 9 Q. B. D. 82.

It was said the case cited was an authority, although not strictly binding on us, but yet a very high authority, indeed, of the Court of Session, and one which, if in point, I should pay the greatest possible respect to, although we wish the control of the court of the c might not feel ourselves bound by it—per Field, J. G. W. Ry. v. Railway Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 486.

As to the case cited to us, we are not bound by it, even if it was not distinguishable-per Cotton, L.J. Ib., 45 L. T. 208.

American Decisions. - An appeal was made to an American case, not of course as an authority, because I take it that a judgment of a court in New York is not an anthority in a case arising in England, but as a decision of learned judges that ought to influence the house to come to the same conclusion in the present case—per Watson, Lord. Custro v. Reg., 50 L. J., Q. B. 507; 6 App. Cas. 249; 44 L. T. 357; 14 Cox, C. C. 561.

Judgment Affirmed on Different Grounds.]-To affirm a judgment upon different grounds from that on which the case was decided in the court below detracts greatly from its value, and makes it no louger a binding authority. Hack v. London Provident Building Society, 52 L. J., Ch. 542; 23 Ch. D. 112; 48 L. T. 250; 31 W. R. 394.

Case Relied on Overruled-Costs. |-- Where a suit is instituted on the authority of a case, and the doctrine upon which the same was founded has been since got rid of, the plaintiff is entitled to have his bill dismissed without costs. Satton Harbour Improvement Cv. v. Hitchens, 1 De G., M. & G. 161; 21 L. J., Ch. 568; 16 Jur. 70.

Barnardiston.] - Lord Mansfield absolutely But cases decided by the railway commis- forbade this book being cited; for it would be only misleading to students, to put them upon B. FORM AND EFFECT. reading it. Woolston v. Woolston, 2 Burr. 1142.

Dyer.]—Marginal notes in Dyer are good authority. Milward v. Thatcher, 2 Term Rep. 84; 1 R. R. 432, S. P., Jones v. Handcock, 4 Dow, 202; 16 R. R. 53.

Moseley.]-A book possessing a very considerable degree of accuracy. Mills v. Farmer, 1 Mer. 92; 19 Ves. 487, n.

Weekly Notes.]—The Court of Appeal does not allow the Weekly Notes to be read as an authority-per Cotton, L.J. Pooley's Trustee v. Whethum, 33 Ch. D. 77.

Case in "The Times"—Verification by Affidavit.]—It was proposed on the hearing of a 1. In General. case in the Court of Appeal to refer to a report of a case from "The Times," but it was only allowed to be read after having been verified by an affidavit of the barrister who had acted as "The Times" reporter. Walter v. Emmott, 54 L. J., Ch. 1061, n.-C. A.

Manuscript Note.]—As to the authority of Ms. notes cited at the bar, see Hawley, Ex parte, Richards, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 435

Citing Text-books.]—It is to my mind much to be regretted, and it is a regret which I believe D. PAROL EVIDENCE. every judge on the bench shares, that text-books are more and more quoted in court-I mean of course text-books by living authors-and some judges have gone so far as to say that they shall not be quoted. Union Bank v. Manster, 57 L. J., Ch. 124; 87 Ch. D. 51; 57 L. T. 877; 52 J. P. 453.

A. VALIDITY AND OPERATION.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Blanks.]-A deed, executed with the name of a transferee or vendee, in blank, is void at common law. Hibblewhite v. M. Morine, 6 M. & W. 200; 9 L, J., Ex. 217; 4 Jnr. 769.

A deed signed in blank is not executed, and in an action for calls the point arises mider never indebted. Consuls Insurance Co. v. Newall, 3 F. & F. 130.

This principle is applicable to transfers of stock under ss. 14 and 15 of the Companies Chuses Act, 1845. Parcell v. London and Provincial Banh, 62 L. J., Ch. 795; [1893] 2 Ch. 555; 2 R. 482; 69 L. T. 821; 41 W. R. 545—C. A.

When filled up. - It is not necessary that the attesting witness should be able to state that blanks were filled up at the time of execution. England v. Roper, 1 Stark. 304.

Incidents Unknown to Law.]—Where a canal company demised land adjoining the canal to A., and also granted to him the exclusive right to let pleasure-boats for hire upon the canal + let pleasure-boats for hire upon the canal + led, that, on the ground that the owner of property cannot attach to it incidents hitherto Held, thirdly, that the plea was bad, as not unknown to the law, the grant of such exclusive shewing that the condition was performed as far the state of the s

Conditions Void in Part. ]-A bond conditioned for the performance of several things, if one of them is void at common law, yet may be good for the others; as where it was conditioned to pay money, and to do an act which was perhaps simony. Newman v. Newman, 4 M. & S. 66; 1 Stark. 101; 16 R. R. 386. S. P., Cusse v. Corfe, 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 140.

Where the condition of a bond is entire, and the whole unlawful, it is in most eases void; but where it consists of different parts, some of which are lawful, and others not, it is good for so much as is lawful and yold for the rest. Yale v. Rew

(in error), 6 Bro. P. C. 31.

Inconsistent with Estate Granted.]-A covenant in a fee-farm grant of 1858 that the grantee, his heirs and assigns, might assign, sublet, or otherwise part with the possession of the demised premises, provided he did not divide them into more than four divisions or lots, unless with the consent in writing of the grantor, his heirs and assigns, is absolutely void and inoperative, as being repugnant to the free power of alienation necessarily implied by the fee-farm grant. Lunham's Estate, In re, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 170.

- Becoming Impossible.]-Where there is a condition to do one of two things, and one becomes impossible, it is no reason for not performing the other. Da Costa v. Davis, 1 Bos, & P.

242; 4 R. R. 795.

Where the condition of a bond is originally impossible, the bond is absolute. Where the condition is originally illegal, the bond is vold. Where the condition subsequently becomes impossible by the act of the obligor, or of a stranger. the bond is forfeited. Where it becomes impossible by the act of the obligee, the bond is saved. Anon., 5 N. & M. 378.

By a local act, a treasurer of a turnpike was when required, to account to the trustees, and pay the balance to them. Action on a bond conditioned that C., treasurer of the turnpike roads. should account and pay according to the directions of the local act, and of 3 Geo. 4, c. 126. Plea, that so much of 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, as is referred to in the condition, was repealed by 4 Geo. 4, c. 95, and that C. duly accounted and paid up to the time of the repeal. Replication. assigning breaches: first, that C. received money and did not account for it, though after the repeal of 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, he was required by the trustees to render an account to persons appointed by them to receive it; and secondly, that C. received money which he had not paid over, and which still remained in his hands :- Held, that so much of the condition as related to accounting under 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, having become impossible by the act of the legislature, the obligation, as far as related to that, was saved; but that so far as related to accounting under the local act, the condition remained possible. Davis v. Cary, 15 Q. B. 48; 15 Jur. 310.
Held, secondly, that the first breach was bad, at the local act, the tendency of the local act, the condition of the local act, the local act as the local act did not require the treasurer to executed it, it was not yet binding on the others though they had executed it. Peto v. Peto, 16 Sim. 590; 13 Jur. 646.

plea that the Thames Conservancy Act had transferred all control of the tolls to a corporation called the Conservators of the River Thames is a good plea, as the performance of the condition had become impossible by the act of law. Brown v. London Corporation, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 726; 30 L. J., C. P. 225; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 755; 3 L. T. 813; 9 W. R. 336. Affirmed, on appeal, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 828; 31 L. J., C. P. 280; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1103; 10 W. R. 522—Ex. Ch.

To a suggestion of breaches on a bond, entered into by a barony eess collector, with two sureties, for the due collection of the public moneys presented for, alleging that the collector did not duly collect, or pay, or cause to be paid to the plaintiffs, two clear days before the first day of the assizes, all the public moneys that he was by warrant required to collect, but that there was still a portion uncollected and unpaid, the defendant pleaded, that by reason of complete paralysis he was rendered permanently ineapable of collecting the said moneys, or of appointing a deputy to collect them, and as a further defence pleaded that the breaches in the suggestion alleged took place before the entering up of the judgment on the bond, and not after. On demurrer by the plaintiffs :-Held, that the defences were bad. Belfast Bunking Co. v. Hamilton, 12 L. R., Ir. 105-C. A.

Non-Execution.]—It is no objection to title that assignment of term was executed by one executor only, though deed was prepared as an assignment by two, one executor being competent to assign. Simpson v. Gutteridge, 1 Madd. 609;

R. G. having died intestate, possessed of eonsiderable personal property, and entitled after the death of his wife to the principal of eertain bank stock standing in the name of a trustee; his brother, by letter, expressed his intention of relinquishing his share of the intestate's estate to the widow, executed to the trustee (transferring to the widow) a release of the bank stock, and directed the preparation of a release of the general personal estate, the execution of which was prevented by his death, but his wish to execute it continued to his last hour: the release of the stock is effectual in favour of the intestate's widow; but the intention to relinquish the share of the general personal estate, not being perfected, amounts not to a gift; and she, as administratrix, must account to the representatives of the brother, but without interest. Hooper v. Goodwin, 1 Swanst. 485; 1 Wils. 212; 18 R. R. 125.

The eight children of A. being entitled to a fund equally, in the event of their surviving B., seven of them, in pursuance of an arrangement made amongst themselves, whilst the eighth, whose name was James, was in India, executed a deed by which they and he were made to covenant with each other, reciprocally, that, in case any of them should die in B.'s lifetime, leaving a child or children, such child or children should be entitled to the share or shares of his, her or their parent or parents, in such manner as if such parent or parents had survived B. James never executed the deed, but he and six of those who did execute it survived B. The other left children, and those children claimed to be entitled under the deed to their parent's share: -Held, that the deed was made upon the

Where agreement of reference provides that award shall be made by four persons, or any three of them, and award purports to be made by four, but is signed by three only, it is void. Thomas v. Harrop, 1 Sim. & S. 524; 24 R. R. 221.

A recital showing that a prior absolute conveyance was in fact a mortgage was held not to be conclusive on the party claiming the benefit of the prior deed, though he entered under the second, inasmuch as he had not executed it. Tull v. Owen, 4 Y. & Coll. 192; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33 : 4 Jur. 503

Where funds came to the wife after marriage, the husband being in India, a contract of settlement of those and of other funds, by her father, was prepared and executed by the latter, and sent out for execution by the husband, who in the meantime had given instructions for a settlement in different terms :-Held, that the husband not being bound to execute the former, the father was not bound by it, although executed by him, and containing covenants for the benefit of an infant, Woodcock v. Monchton, 1 Coll. 273.

One of two partners procured the discount of a promissory note of the firm, on an agreement for a mortgage of shares belonging to the firm in certain ships and their freight, and of the policies of insurance effected by the firm on the shares. A mortgage deed was prepared, purporting to be made by both partners, but was only executed by the one. At the time of the execution of the deed one of the ships was lost, but this fact was not then known to the parties :- Held, that the security was binding on the firm notwith-standing the execution of the deed by one partner only, and passed the insurance money, although the deed was not registered according to the shipping acts. Bosanquet, Ex parte, 1 De G. 432.

A mortgage made to A., B. and C., was paid off. The deed of release recited that the sum of 3,000%, part of the mortgage debt, was not the money of A., B. and C., but belonged to D. and E., upon a joint account, D. and E. were parties to the deed, and purported to acknowledge the receipt of the money. The deed was not excented by D., and E. received the 3,000%. The estate being subsequently sold :- Held, that the purchaser could not refuse to complete, on the ground that there was no sufficient discharge of the 3,000l. mortgage debt. Matson v. Denis, 10 L. T.

Where the creditor had prepared the deed so as to shew on the face of it that it was intended to contain a joint and several covenant by two co-sureties, and had sent it in that form to be executed by one of such sureties, but had not procured the execution of it by the other surety, and had not informed the surety who had executed it of this fact; but had, on the contrary, written to him as "one of sureties," the principal debtor having become insolvent: Held, that the surety who had executed the deed was entitled in equity to be relieved from all liability on the covenant. Evans v. Brembridge, 2 K. & J. 174; 25 L. J., Ch. 102: 2 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 4 W. R. 161. Affirmed 8 De G., M. & G. 100; 25 L. J., Ch. 334; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 4 W. R. 350.

assumption that all the persons named as parties deed of marriage settlement is drawn up as would execute it; and as one of them had not between the intended husband and wife, and their respective fathers; and the father of the wife secures to the father of the husband a sum of money as the portion of the wife, according to a provision of the deed, but neither he nor his daughter execute the deed, and it is executed only by the intended husband and his father : it is binding upon, and as between the parties who execute, and creates efficient rights for the objects of the settlement. M. Veill v. Cubill. 2 Bligh, 228, Assignee of leaseholds accepting the benefit of an assignment :- Held, in equity liable to the covenants on his part contained in the assignment, though he did not execute it. Willson v.

Lennard, 3 Beav, 373.

D., in 1824, agreed with S. for the purchase of an estate, and that the purchase deed should contain a covenant by D. that he, his heirs, and assigns would pay to S., his executors, adminis-trators, and assigns the sum of 6s. for each chaldron of coals gotten out of the estate and shipped for sale. The purchase deed was subsequently executed by S., but not by D. D., however, entered upon the land, and he and his devisees and their assigns enjoyed the property. Coal was also got and shipped for sale :- Held, that the execution by D. of a counterpart of the deed containing the covenant could not be presumed, and that although the persons who had taken and enjoyed the coal with notice of the covenant might be liable, there was no liability in D. or his representative under the covenant. Witham v. Vane, 44 L. T. 718.

By deed made between A, of the first part, and B. of the second, and other parties, reciting the title of A to some lands and of B. to others, A. and B. purported to convey to trustees some of A.'s lands, and by a separate testatum A. alone conveyed the remainder of them, and also purported to convey to B.'s lands. A. alone covenanted for title. There were powers of sale and exchange, including all the lands and premises, and to change the trustees, which were introduced with the usual words of agreement by all the parties to the deed :- Held, that the deed bound B.'s land, at all events in equity; and, semble, was an effectual conveyance of them at law. Hill v. Mill, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 107.

- Action to Set Aside-Parties.]-A person named (jointly with others) as a party to a deed, but who did not execute it, cannot alone maintain an action to have the deed declared invalid. Luke v. South Kensington Hotel Co., 7 Ch. D. 789.

If it was intended that the deed should not be binding in equity unless all the joint parties should execute it, those who did execute it are capable of joining in an action to have it declared invalid, and in an action for that purpose they ought to be named as plaintiffs. Ib.

- Power to Disclaim.]—A tenant in tail in possession of au estate executed a disentailing deed, purporting to be a grant of the estate to A. and B, and their heirs, free from all estates tail of the grantor, to the use of A. and B. and their heirs upon trust to the grantor. The deed was enrolled but not executed by A. and B., who sub-sequently executed a deed of disclaimer:—Held, that the disentailing deed operated as a grant and not by the Statute of Uses; that it was rendered inoperative by the subsequent disclaimer by the grantees; and that the estate tail was not barred. Peacock v. Eastland, 39 L. J., Ch. 534; L. R. 10 Eq. 17; 22 L. T. 706; 18 W. R. 856.

Qualified Execution - Power to Repudiate. Not every attempt by a form of execution to restrain the full operation of a deed can be treated as a non-execution of it. Where a deed of assignment by debtors to a trustee for the benefit of all creditors who should execute the deed was executed by the plaintiffs, who appended a note that they executed only in respect of certain claims scheduled to the deed and amounting to $73,531, and it appeared that sub-sequently thereto they received a sum of money from the trustees by virtue of their execution of the deed :-Held, that the plaintiffs were bound. The note did not amount to a refusal to execute; and the plaintiffs having received payment under the deed could not be heard to repudiate it, and deny their execution. Wilkinson v. Anglo-deny their execution. Wilkinson v. Anglo-Californian Gold Mining Co. (18 Q. B. 728) held to be inapplicable. Turnuouth Erchange Bunk v. Bletken, 54 L. J., P. (2. 27; 10 App. Cas. 293; 53 L. T. 537; 33 W. R. 801—P. C.

Escrow-From what Date Operative. - Bond delivered to a third person, to be delivered to the obligee on performance of a condition, takes effect on performance from the original scaling, though both obliger and obliger be dead. bond by a feme, delivered to a stranger before marriage as an escrow to be delivered on condition, is good, though the condition is performed after marriage. Graham v, Graham, 1 Ves. J.

— Death of Executing Party before Performance of Condition.]—A railway company, after serving notice to take land, agreed in writing with the owner to accept the title, and the conveyance was executed by him and delivered to his solicitors as an escrow with a written authority to the company to pay the money to them. The owner died, having made a will and appointed executors, and the company requiring the land, but the executors not having proved, paid the money into the bank under the 8 & 9 Viet. c. 18, and took possession. The executors filed a bill to restrain such taking possession, and for an injunction:—Held, that the escrow could have been made effectual upon the condition upon which it was authorised to be delivered, but that the authority died with him by whom it was given; and there being a contract, the case was withdrawn from the opera-tion of 8 & 9 Viet. c. 18, and the injunction refused on the terms of the company bringing the purchase-money and interest, provided for by the contract, into court. Newton v. Metropolitan Ry., 1 Dr. & Sm. 583; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 738; 5 L. T. 542; 10 W. R. 102.

Retention of Deed by Party Executing. Where a deed has been formally delivered with apt and proper words, its retention by the grantor, after such delivery, will not render it inoperative. Hall v. Palmer, 3 Hare, 532; 13-L. J., Ch. 352; 8 Jur. 459. S. P., Due d. Gurronss v. Knight, 5. B. & C. 671; 8. D. & R. 348; 4 L. J. (cs.) K. B. 161; 29 R. R. 355. Xenne, Whichken, 36 L. J., C. P. 313; L. R. 2 H. L. 296; 16 L. T. 800; 16 W. R. 38.

A person entitled to an equitable reversionary interest in stock made a voluntary assignment of it by deed to trustees. No notice was given of this deed, either to the trustees named in it, or to any person interested in it, or to the original trustees of the stock; the assignor retained the deed, and subsequently destroyed it, and made a different disposition by will of the fund, which was still standing in the names of the original trustees:—Held, that unless the deed could be successfully impeached on the ground of frand, mistake, or surprise, it operated as an effectual disposition of the fund, notwithstanding the absence of notice, and the retention and destruction of the deed by the assignor. Way's Trusts, In re, 2 De G., J. & S. 365; 34 L. J., Ch. 49; 10 Jnr. (N.S.) 1166; 11 L. T. 495; 13 W. R. 149.

An instrument purporting to be a deed was executed in the presence of an attesting witness, but had never been out of the possession of the grantor :- Held, in an action against the executor of the grantor, that the jury might properly find that it was delivered. Hope v. Harman, 11 Jur. 1097

An unstamped deed conveying a house of the grantor upon trust to apply the profit rent to the payment of two life annuities was found in his possession after his death. It was signed and sealed by him; and the attestation clause stated that it was signed, scaled, and delivered by him in the presence of two witnesses, one of whom said that he remembered witnessing the deed, that the grantor after signing put it in his pocket, not delivering it to anyone, but he could not recollect whether the grantor said that he signed, sealed, and delivered, or used any words on the occasion. Subsequently the grantor conveyed this same house by a deed duly executed and stamped, upon trusts inconsistent with the former deal, and by his will made the next day he devised the house, "subject to two life annuities charged thereon by me." By a codicil he made another provision for one of the annuitants.—Held, that there was sufficient evidence of the delivery of the first deed, and that it prevailed over the second. Evans v. Gray, 9 L. R. Ir. 539.

A deed (which by arrangement was to be executed in duplicate, one to be prepared by each party, and to be interchanged between them) was executed by the grantee, but not attested, and was by him sent to the solicitor of the grantors to procure their execution; and they accordingly signed, sealed, and delivered it :-Held, that this was a complete delivery, whereby the estate passed; and that the arrangement did not render the deed an escrow until the duplicates were interchanged. Kidner v. Keith, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 35.

A person executing a voluntary settlement passes the estate out of himself, though he retained the deed in his own possession; and such settlement is not affected by a subsequent voluntary deed, delivered over to the party in whose favour it is made. The court, in the absence of special circumstances, will give effect to the first legal instrument in favour of the party claiming under it. Roberts v. Williams, 4 Hare, 130; 11 L. J., Ch. 65; 5 Jur. 1057.

A voluntary covenant by a party to pay a sum of money to persons therein mentioned, either in his lifetime or in a certain time after his decease, is a valid covenant, and creates a valid debt, though the deed was kept in the covenantor's possession till his death, and its execution was unknown to the covenantees or cestuis que trustant. Alexander v. Brame, 19 Beav. 436.

Hassel, 32 Beav. 217.

A voluntary deed, never parted with, executed for purpose that has never been completed, is considered in equity as an imperfect instrument. Cecil v. Butcher, 2 Jac. & Walk. 573; 22 R. R. 213.

- By Agent.]-Where a party executed a mortgage to his bankers, but the deed was not delivered over by his attorney nutil a month after his bankruptcy :- Held, a good delivery to the mortgagee. Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & Coll.

- By Third Person.]- Delivery to a third person for the use of the party in whose favour the deed is excented, where the grantor parts with all control over the deed, makes the deed effectual from the instant of the delivery, although the person to whom the deed is so delivered be not the agent of the party for whose benefit the deed is made. Doc d. Garnons v. Knight, 5 B. & C. 671; 8 D. & R. 348; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 161; 29 R. R. 355.

Successive Deeds. ]-The question whether several deeds are part of the same transaction or are separate and distinct transactions depends on the surrounding circumstances, and not simply upon the fact whether the deeds are, or are not, by express reference grafted into or connected with each other. Harman v. Richards, 10 Hare, 81; 22 L. J., Ch. 1066.

Evidence of surrounding circumstances on which the court held a settlement, that standing alone would have been fraudulent against creditors, to be connected with and made part of the same transaction with several purchasedeeds of even date, to which some only of the same persons were parties. Ib.

On a marriage, two separate sums were provided by two separate deeds, for the portions of younger children, and each deed contained a hotchpotch clause :- Held, that these clauses were separate and distinct, and operated only on the fund contained in each settlement respectively. Montague v. Montague, 15 Beav. 565.

Four deeds, though bearing date on four consecutive days, held to be necessarily connected together, and to form one transaction. Ford v. Stuart, 15 Beav. 498; 21 L. J., Ch. 514.

W. R. and A. his wife, by deed dated the 30th June, appointed to the sole appointment of W. R., and subject theremito to certain uses. W. R., by deed dated the 1st July, again subjected the estate to the joint appointment of himself and his wife; and by a deed of the 2nd July, W. R. and his wife appointed the estate by way of mortgage. The intermediate deed was on paper. The dates of the other deeds were filled in, and the last deed was much interlined, the wife being by such interlinentions made a party subsequently to the engressment of the deeds:—Held, that the three deeds formed one transaction, and therefore that the last deed was not voluntary. Whithread v. Smith, 3 De G., M. & G. 727; 2 Eq. Rep. 377; 23 L. J., Ch. 611; 18 Jur. 475; 2 W. R. 177.

The execution of two deeds at several times, the one granting aunuities to seven parties, and the other granting different amusities to five of the same parties, affords no presumption that the one is substituted for the other. Benham v. Newell, 24 L. J., Ch. 424; 3 W. R. 333.

A viduntary deed, though retained by the lating to the same subject-matter are executed v. on the same day, the court will inquire which of Construction.] - When two deeds rethem was executed first; but if there is anything either that they shall take effect pari passu, or .Held, that the indenture was a deed, and not a that one should take effect in priority to the testamentary paper. Jeffrios v. Alexander, 8 other, the court will presume that they were H. L. Cas. 594; 31 L. J., Ch. 9; 7 Jur. (S.S.) excented in such an order as to give effect to the 22; 2 L. T. 768. See Patch v. Shore, 2 Drew. manifest intention. Halden or Gartaide v. Silk. & Sm. 589; 32 L. J. Ch. 185; 9 Jur. (S.S.) 63; stone and Dudsworth Coul and Iron Co., 51 L. J., 11 W. R. 142. Benham v. Newell, 24 L. J., Ch. 328; 12 Ch. 176; 14 L. T. 76; 31 W. R. 35. Ch. 424; 3 W. R. 333.

Incorporation by Reference. - If a man is bound to execute a deed containing particular covenants, and, by the desire of those who have a right to call on him to execute that deed, he executes another deed containing a covenant that he will obey, observe and perform all the covenants in the principal deed, he becomes bound by the principal deed. North of England Banking Co., In re., Straffor's Excentors' Case, 1 De G., M. & G. 576; 22 L. J., Ch. 194; 16 Jur.

A reference to a deed of a specified date, there being two of the same date, one executed at that time, the other subsequently, was, in the absence of positive evidence, and aided by circumstances, applied to the former. Wudeson v. Richardson. 1 Ves. & B. 103.

Operative as Agreement. ]-A bond void in law may be enforced as an agreement in equity, subject to the effect of the equitable circumstances under which it was made. Squire v. Whitton, 1 H. L. Cas. 333; 12 Jur. 125.

An instrument purporting to be a bond, executed by an obligor, with blanks for the name of the obligee, and therefore void in law, is inoperative in equity as an agreement, there being no second contracting party. Ib.

A party joining as surety in a bond ought to be informed of the nature of the obligation, name of the obligee, and the relation in which he stands to the principal obligor. Ib.

An instrument, which in terms purported to be a conveyance of land, but not being by deed could not operate as such, and which contained a stipulation not to disturb the party intended to take the premises, was held to operate as an agreement, and not as a deed. Rew v. Ridgwell, B. & C. 665; 9 D. & R. 678; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 67.

Whether Deed or Will.]-A person being possessed of some pure personalty, but of considerable property in mortgages, executed some years before his death an indenture, by which, declaring a wish to found certain charities, he covenanted to pay, or that if he did not pay during his lifetine, his executors should, within twelve months after his death, subject to his debts and legacies, pay to certain persons therein named 60,0001, to be invested in their names on the trusts thereby declared; the trusts were charitable trusts. This deed was never enrolled in chancery. On the same day he made a will, giving certain legacies, and appointing executors, most of whom were the persons named in the deed. These papers were never communicated by him to anybody. Just before his death he caused the papers to be produced from the drawers, and handed them to the persons attending his death-bed. They were tied up with a memorandum, which declared that they had been prepared in that form, under advice, to save the legacy duties, and in order that, if probate duty was paid, in the first instance, it might be got back again in consequence of the covenant sideration of the lessee's expenditure on certain in the deeds themselves to shew an intention creating a debt to be paid out of the assets:either that they shall take effect pari passu, or Held, that the indenture was a deed, and not a > Covenant constituting Specialty.]—A debtor by simple contract executed a deed, in which he admitted the amount of his debt, and secured it by an assignment of property to his creditor. The deed contained no covenant or agreement to pay :- Held, that this deed did not make the debt a specialty. Marryat v. Marryat, 28 Beav. 224; 29 L. J., Ch. 665; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 572; 2 L. T.

> A covenant to bequeath a sum of money constitutes a specialty debt against the covenantor's estate, and is not satisfied by the mere insertion of such a bequest in his will. Graham v. Wick-ham, 1 De G., J. & S. 474; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 702; 8 L. T. 679; 11 W. R. 1009.

> A. being indebted to B. on simple contract, gave a promissory note for the amount, and executed a deed by which, after reciting the debt and the note, he, as further scenrity, charged certain property with the payment of it, and agreed to execute such a mortgage of the property, with all powers, covenants and clauses incidental thereto, as B, should require :- Held, that the deed converted the debt into a specialty debt. Saunders v. Milsome, L. R. 2 Eq. 573; 15 W. R. 2.

> Although a debt is acknowledged under seal, and a security given, yet, if there is no covenant for repayment, the acknowledgment does not nor repayment, the acknowledgment does not necessarily create a general specialty debt. Jackson v. X. E. Ry., 47 L. J., Ch. 303; 7 Ch. D. 573; 37 L. T. 664; 26 W. R. 513.

> Incorrect Recitals. ]-A man cannot be required to execute a deed containing incorrect recitals. Hartley v. Burton, L. R. 3 Ch. 365.

- Remedy.]-A deed which incorrectly recites the consideration of a contract on which a conveyance was executed, does not thereby warrant a suit in equity to set aside the contract, but only to reform the conveyance. Harrison v. Guest, 8 H. L. Cas. 481.

Estoppel by Recitals. ]-See col. 392, post.

Necessary Operative Words-Exchange. ]-A deed or conveyance could not operate as an exchange without the word "exchange." Eton College (Provost) v. Winchester (Bishop), 3 Wils. 458, 485; Lofft, 401; 2 W. Bl. 936.

— Feoffment, Exchange, &c.]—As to the operation of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4, see Due d. Starling v. Prince, 20 L. J., C. P. 223; 15 Jur.

— Grant.]—The words "limit and appoint" may operate as words of grant, so as to pass a reversion. Shore v. Pincke, 5 Term Rep. 124, 310. And see Brudenell v. Elwes, 1 East, 442; 6 R. R. 310; and Beard v. Westcott, 5 Taunt. 394, 403; 5 B. & Ald. 801 : 24 R. R. 553.

Grant or Licence.]-A canal company, in con-lease thereof, with licence to take ice from a part of the canal :- Held, that the licence was not exclusive, but that it was a grant of sufficient ice to enable the lessee to fill the icehouses, and that, so long as the lessee was able and willing to take this quantity of ice, the lessors could not derogate from their grant by subsequent licences which would interfere with it. Newly, W. Harrisson, 1 John & H. 393; 4 L. T. 397; 9 W. R. 849. Affirmed, 4 L. T. 424; 9 W. R. 849.

Estate of Conveying Party Passes. ]-A conveyance of land passes running water, unless expressly excepted, which is not to be presumed. Canham v. Fisk, 1 Price's P. C. 148.

When a person, having several estates or interests in land, joins in conveying all his estate errests in Bunt, joins in conveying at an escute and interest in the land to a purchaser, every estate or interest vested in him will pass by the conveyance, although not vested in him in the character in which he became a party to the conveyance. Drew v. Norbury (Earl), 3 Jo. & Lat. 267; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 171, 524. S. P., Youde v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 534; 14 L. J., Ex. 70. S. C., 14 Sim.

131 : 8 Jur. 547.

A person having a legal estate in certain premises as trustee, and an equitable and beneficial interest in the same estate, executes a deed which might be construed as purporting to pass either both estates, or only the equitable estate which alone he has a right to convey :-Held, that the instrument should be construed as intending to pass only the estate which he had a right to convey; for a party shall be presumed to have intended to do only that which he had a right to do, provided the instrument be fairly and reasonably capable of that construction. Fausset v. Carpenter, 2 Dow & Cl. 232; 5 Bli. (N.S.) 75—H. L. (Ir.)

A deed which could not operate as a release, because it purported to convey an estate in futuro, held to operate as a covenant to stand seised. Roe d. Wilkinson v. Traumarr, 2 Kcn. 239; Willes, 682; 2 Wils, 785. S. P., Haberg-ham v. Vincent, 2 Ves. J. 226; 2 Bro. C. C. 353.

Scully v. Scully, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 153,

A deed in the ordinary form of a grant in fee without any recitals does not contain any statement of the grantor's seisin in fee sufficiently precise to create an estoppel in a case where the granter had no title at the date of the deed, but subsequently acquired an estate in fee. General Finance, Mortgage, and Discount Co. v. Liberator Permanent Building Society, 10 Ch. D. 15; 39 L. T. 600; 27 W. R. 210.

Covenants for title contain no such statement, being merely a bargain by the covenantor to pay damages if he has no such title, Ib,

Prima facie, when a person conveys or settles an estate, he means to include in the conveyance every interest which he can part with, and which be does not except. Johnson v. Webster, 4 De G., M. & G. 474; 3 Eq. R. 99; 24 L. J., Ch. 300; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 145; 3 W. R. 84. When the owner of an estate has also a charge upon it, and there is some intermediate charge or estate between his own charge and his ownership in fee, it may be reasonable to say, that without some special act, no presumption can be made of an intention to merge the charge in the fee, for that might be against the interest of the owner, by letting in the intermediate estate; but icehouses on the banks of the canal, granted a act of the owner himself, this reasoning has no application. Ib.

A., the devisee in fee of real estates subject to a trust to raise 6,000l. for B., which the testator directed, in the event of B.'s death without children, to sink into the residue of his personal estate, and to go to A., on his marriage, conveyed the estates to the trustees of his marringe settlement, subject to the trust to raise the 6,0001., and died, living B. On B.'s death without children, the representatives of A. filed a bill to establish the charge :- Held, under the circumstances, that it had merged in the inheritance. Ib.

— Agricultural Fixtures, ]—A, purchased a farm from the devises in trust of the father of B., and the premises were conveyed by a deed, to which B. was a party, as one of the devisees. A. demised the premises to C. immediately after the conveyance, and B., who was in the occupation of the farm at the time of the conveyance, under a lease from the devisces, removed some rick staddles, a threshing machine and a granary from the premises after the demise to C. The deed conveyed the land and all fixtures; the articles in question had been put on the land by B.'s father :- Held, that everything attached to the land having passed by the deed, B. had no right to remove the articles as fixtures removable by an outgoing agricultural tenant. Wiltsheer v. Cottrell, 1 El. & Bl. 74; 22 L. J., Q. B. 177; 17 Jur. 758.

Trees. ]-Chapter not being entitled tofell timber on the deanery lands, except for the purpose of repairs, a lease granted by them of certain "woods, groves, hedgerows and springs, was construed not to include the right of felling timber; and a bill by the lessee for an account was dismissed with costs. Herving v. St. Paul's (Dean), 3 Swanst. 492; 2 Wils. Ch. 1; 19 R. R. 259. of timber felled during the lease by the lessors,

- Where General Words are used.]-General words in a grant must be restricted to what the grant or had power to grant at the date of the grant. Booth v. Alevoh, L. R. 8 Ch. 663; 29 L. T. 231; 21 W. R. 748.

Covenant that notwithstanding any former grant of 1,500%, charged upon the whole estate of the covenantor, the lands of Blackacre and White-acre shall stand exonerated therefrom, and that all his other lands and estates shall stand charged therewith, creates a charge on the lands of which he was then seised or possessed, though not specified by name. Falkner v. O'Brien, 2 Ball & B.

Distinction between a covenant that all the estates of a covenantor are charged with a sum of money, and that he will charge his estates; the former is a charge upon all covenantor's lands, the latter is not. Ib.

An assignment, in general terms, of personal estate will pass promissory notes in the possession of the settlor, although not indorsed to the dones, Richardson v. Richardson, L. R. 3 Eq. 686; 15 W. R. 600,

E., by a voluntary deed, in 1858, assigned certain specific property, and "all other the personal estate, whatsoever and wheresoever, of her, E., to R. absolutely"; and appointed him, his executors, administrators, and assigns, her attorney where the intermediate estate is created by the and attorneys in her name, but for the sole benefit of R., to sue for and recover the assigned predeeds as should be necessary for deriving the full theest as shount on necessary and certaing to the benefit of the assignment. At the date of the assignment, E. was possessed of certain promis-sory notes, given to her to secure the repayment of advances made by her. These were not specifically mentioned in the deed. Upon R.'s death, in 1864, these notes were found in his possession, but not indorsed to him. There was no evidence as to any delivery of the notes by E. to R.:—Held, that the property in the notes passed by the deed to R., on the principle that the deed of assignment operated as a complete declaration of trust by E. of all her property in favour of R. Ib.

A., who, under a deed made by his father, was entitled upon his father's death to a moiety of his personal estate, assigned to trustees in these words, "all the property of which he now is or may stand possessed, both real and personal, and now consisting of one note of hand for 1201., one other note of hand for 40*l*., one cottage in his own possession, sold to S. at his decease for 155*l*., two other cottages in the occupation of F. and W.," upon certain trusts, for his wife and relations. A, afterwards died in the lifetime of his father. Upon the death of the father:—Held, that the trustees under A.'s assignment were entitled to take under that instrument the moiety of the father's personal estate. Choyce v. Ottey, 10 Hare, 443.

A deed purporting to settle a sum of money, portion of moneys to which the settlor was entitled under the Statute of Distributions," passes chattels real coming to the settlor in the manner described. Newitt v. Robinson, 15 W. R. 77.

Where the owner of certain lands, by deed, describing them as in the possession of himself. A. B., granted, assigned, transferred, and set over, directed, limited, and appointed the same to C. D. for life, but no livery of seisin was made : Held, that the deed operated as a valid grant of the reversion of that part of the premises in the occupation of A. B. Doe d. Were v. Cole, 7 B. & C. 243; 1 Man. & Ry. 33; 6 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 20.

A person who executes a deed of inspection as a creditor, if there is nothing in the deed to shew that he executed it in respect of a particular claim, is to be taken to have executed it in respect of whatever is due to him. Graham v. Achroyd, 17 Jur. 657; 1 W. R. 107.

Means of enjoying Property passes. ]-A deed of conveyance made under the anthority of an act of parliament must be read as if the sections of the act were incorporated in it. A conveyance granting land for a special purpose must be construct as conveying all the rights necessarily incident to the due execution of that purpose, Elliot v. North Eastern Ry., 10 H. L. Cas. 333; 2 N. R. S7; 32 L. J., Ch. 402; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 555; 8 L. T. 337; 11 W. R. 604.

Whether the conveyance is a voluntary bar-gain between the parties, or is made because the act gives the grantee the power of compelling a grant, these rules are applicable. Ib.

Where two properties are possessed by the same owner, and there has been a severance made of part from the other, anything which was used and was necessary for the comfortable enjoyment of that part of the property which was granted, must be considered to follow from the grant. Eleart v. Cochrane, 4 Macq. H. L. 117; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 925; 5 L. T. 1; 10 W. R. 3.

An owner of two adjoining properties, consistmises, and to do and execute all such acts and ing of a tan-vard and a house and garden, madea cesspool in a corner of the garden, and a drain to carry the water into it from the tan-yard, which gradually sloped down towards the gar-den. Afterwards he sold the two properties to different persons. The conveyances made no allusion to the existence of the drain and cesspool:—Held, that the easement passed by an implied grant with the tan-yard. Ih.

A grant by lease of premises last held under the grantor as bleach works, implies a licence to use the same as such. Hull v. Lund, I H. & C. 676; 32 L. J., Ex. 113; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 205; 7 L. T.

- Reservation.]-Under a reservation of mines with liberty to sink pits, the right of erecting a steam engine and other machinery necessary for driving them, with all proper accessories, passes as incident thereto. Dand v. Kingscote, 6 M, & W. 174; 9 L, J., Ex. 279.

Right of Support. - A conveyance of land to a railway company, for the purposes of the line, gives a right by implication to all reasonable subjacent and adjacent support connected with the subject-matter of the conveyance, and therefore, although in a conveyance to the railway company, the minerals are reserved, the grantor is not entitled to work them even under his own land, in any manner calculated to endanger the railway. Caledonian Ry. v. Spret, 2 Macq. H. L. 449; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 623; 4 W. R. 659; S. P., Caledonian Ry. v. Belhacen (Lord), 3 Macq. H. L. 56; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 573; G. W. Ry. v. Cefn Cribber Brick Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 500; [1894] 2 Ch. 157; 8 R. 178; 70 L. T. 279; 42 W. R. 493.

On the same principle, if an owner of a house conveys the upper storey, reserving all below, the purchaser will be entitled, on general principles, without stipulation, to prevent any damage to the walls underneath. Ib.

But if I grant a meadow to A for grazing purposes, retaining the minerals and the adjacent land, and if A., having no warranty against sub-sidence, thinks fit to build a house on the edge of the meadow, and the house falls, he is without remedy against me, and has himself alone to blame for the consequences, Ih.

If, however, the grant was made expressly for building purposes, there would then be an implied warranty of support, both subjacent and adjacent. Ib.

In the case of a grant to a railway company for the purposes of the railway, if the line which divides the land granted from the land retained traverses a quarry, it may be that no adjacent support is necessary, and that the grantor may dig or remove the whole contiguous soil. Ib.

But if the dividing line traverses a bog or a bed of sand, it will be incumbent on the grantor to leave untouched such an intervening measure of lateral support as will prevent any part of the land granted from retreating. Ih.

Amount of, in Case of Railway.]— Whether a conveyance of land for the purpose of a railway being constructed thereon is volumtary or compulsory, every grant carries with it all that is necessary to the enjoyment of the subject-matter of it, and a certain amount of lateral support, being essential to the safety of way crosses a river, then the abutments of the bridge will require a greater support than the other parts of the railway, and the conveyance will carry such support as an incident. Elliot will earry such support as an incident. v. N. E. Ry., supra.

Certain reservations of minerals contained in a railway act: Held, not to vary the ordinary rule at common law as above stated. Ib.

Receipt for Purchase Money. ]-The absence on a deed of a receipt for the consideration. though it is notice of its non-payment, is not constructive notice of other irregularities in the transaction. Greenslade v. Darc. 20 Beav. 284. And see Burnhart v. Greenskields, 9 Moore, P.C. 18.

When a purchase deed contained a recital that the purchase money had been paid or accounted for, but there was no receipt for the purchase money on the back of the deed :—Held, that the vendor, in respect of his lien for impaid purchase money, was entitled to priority over a mortgagee of the purchaser. Boven v. Cobb, 19 W. R. 614.

A joint and several receipt for purchase money, given by three persons, only one of whom had power to give a receipt :-Held, a valid receipt by such one who had power. Miller v. Pridden, 18 L. J., Ch. 226 If the consideration expressed by the deed to be paid in money for an annuity, or interest in expectancy, and acknowledged to be received in money by the receipt endorsed on the deed, be not paid in money, or proved to be ready to be so, and held over at the request of the grantor or vendor (in which case ultimate non-payment will not affect the primary contract), the court will, on that ground, cut down the grant or purchase to a loan, without reference to the question of inadequacy, which, nuless very gross, would not per se avail; and disregarding the fact, that a life assurance was effected, because such insurance is res inter alios, etc., and besides leaves contingency sufficient to exclude usury. makes no difference that the contract for the annuity is between near connections, there not being one equity for ordinary money-brokers, and another for relations; and on a bill to set it aside, the court has no jurisdiction to reform the contract, but only to sustain or subvert it. Courts of equity acted on the principle of the Annuity Act, 17 Geo. 3, previously to that act. its object being, not to frame an entirely new protection for grantors of annuities, but to preserve evidence, to provide positive rules, and to give courts of law jurisdiction in cases previously falling within the jurisdiction of courts of capity. which the Annuity Act facilitated, but neither added to, nor affected in substance. Drought v. Eustace, 1 Moll, 328.

A. and B., respectively the first and second mortgagees in fee of an estate, were induced, through the fraud and misrepresentation of W., who acted as solicitor for both, to execute to him a conveyance of the estate, free from both mortgage debts; the deed was endorsed with receipts for the mortgage money by A. and B., in the usual form, although in reality no money whatever was paid. W, then entered into possession, and became the reputed owner of the estate. Subsequently he executed an equitable mortgage of the estate, by covenant and deposit of the title paid, an annuly to R for his life in names deeds, to C, who had no notice whatever of the lollowing, namely, one molety by E, during his prior mortgages not having been in fact paid off: life, and the other molety by E, his executors or

Who may Convey.]—A person out of possession cannot convey anything to a stranger; he can only give a release to one in possession. Underwood v. Courtown (Lord), 2 Sch. & Lef. 65.

Liability of Infants. ]-A deed executed by an infant to secure advances made to him for expenditure upon necessaries is not bluding upon him when he becomes of age. Martin v. Gale, 46 L. J., Ch. 84; 4 Ch. D. 428; 36 L. T. 357; 25 W. R. 406.

Where a person represents to another that he is of age, and executes to him a release upon which the other acts, he cannot afterwards impeach the validity of the release on the ground of his minority, and it is immaterial whether he was or was not aware of the incorrectness of the representation. Wright v. Suowe, 2 De G. & Sm. 321.

Whether Joint and Several. ]-A., as principal, and three sureties, B., C. and D., executed a bond to E. for the fidelity of A, in certain duties for which he was employed by E., the bond being in the following form :- "We, A., B., C. and D., are held and firmly bound to E. in the sum of 50%, each, to be paid to E., his executors, administrators, and assigns; to which payment, well and truly to be made, we hereby bind us, and each of us, our and each of our heirs, executors, and administrators, and every of them, by these presents":—Held, that the bond was the separate bond of each obligor, binding each to pay the sum of 50%, in the event of default by the principal; and that, therefore, the payment of 50%, by B., one of the obligors, after breach, was no answer to an action on the bond against another obligor, C. Armstrong v. Cahill, 6 L. R., Ir. 440.

E. and F. entered into a joint and several bond. of which the condition was, that if they or either of them, their or either of their heirs, &c., duly bond should be void :- Held, that the liability under this bond was joint and several, and that F, having failed after the death of E, in paying the annuity, the estate of E, was liable on his default. Church v. King, 2 Mylne & C. 220.

A bond by three, whereby they bound themselves jointly, and their respective heirs, executors, and administrators respectively, to pay, which was conditioned to be void, if they or either of them, their or either of their heirs, exeentors, or administrators, paid: —Held, that it was a thereby discharged. Ib. died, that his assets were liable, Tinning V Coutes, 18 Benv. 401.

There is no settled rule of equity that la contract which at law would be construed as joint, is to be treated in equity as joint and several. Kendull v. Hamilton, 48 L. J., Q. B. 705; 4 App. Cas. 504; 41 L. T. 418; 28 W. R. 97.

An action and a judgment against two persons who had borrowed money from the plaintiffs (though the judgment is unsatisfied) constitute a bar to another action brought by the same plaintiffs against a third person, who is afterwards discovered to have been really interested as a partner with the two debtors in the business for the purposes of which the money had been borrowed. King v. Houre (13 M. & W. 494) adopted. Ib.

This doctrine does not depend on the doctrine of estoppel. Ib.

The expression that partnership debts were treated in equity as joint and several explained.

A surety bond by three obligors, for the payment of 1,000L, worded, "for which payment to here of 1,000%, worded, for which payment to be well and faithfully made, we bind ourselves, and each of as for himself, for the whole and entire sum of 1,000% each," is a several, and not a joint and several bond, and may be enforced against the obligors severally; and the tearing off of the seal of one of the obligors of such a boud by the obligees does not avoid it as against the others. Collins v. Prusser, 3 Dowl, & R. 112; 1 B, & C. 682; 1 L. J. (6.8.) K. B. 212; 25 R. R. 540. S. P., Collins v. Everett, 3 Dowl. & R. 122.

Joint bond considered, from intention, as joint and several. Thomas v. Fraser, 3 Ves. 399. S. P., Burn v. Burn, 3 Ves. 573,

Where a bond was in form only a joint bond, but it was suggested to have been the intention of the parties to make it joint and several, the court referred it to the Master, to inquire whether this was the intention of the parties. Where such intention appears on the face of the bond the court will treat it as a joint and several bond, although it is only a joint boud in form. Symonds, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 200.

A. and B. were obligors in a joint bond. A., who was alleged to be the principal debtor, died :- Held, that his assets were not in equity liable upon the bond, but that the liability survived to B. Richardson v. Horton, 6 Beav. 185; 12 L. J., Ch. 333; 7 Jur. 1144.

A partnership composed of three persons, A., B. and C., gave a joint and several bond to a bank to cover advances to be made to them by the bank on a cash credit, and in that bond two administrators, during the life of E.; after the and the security, so far as his estates were condeath of E. the whole by F. his heirs, excentors, cerned, was no further continued, no arrangement or administrators, during the life of B. then the between the surviving partners, or between them and the bank, for the purpose of settling the general accounts being capable of affecting that security. Bank of Scotland v. Christie, 8 Cl. & F.

> After the death of A., the bank continued as before its dealings with the partnership then constituted by B. and C., and at a certain period payments made to the bank entirely balanced the debt due to it at the time of A.'s death :-Held, that the separate liability of A.'s estate was

- Execution by whom, |- If the plaintiff shews on his declaration in an action on a boud against two, that the bond is executed by three, it is good matter of plea in abatement, or in arrest of judgment, but is no ground of nonsuit on non est factum. South v. Tunner, 2 Tannt, 254: 11 R. R. 556.

If in an action on a bond against one, it is declared on as the joint bond of him and two others, it is no variance that the bond is likewise the separate boud of each of the obligors. Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34.

If the defendant pleads that it is not his deed, it is only necessary to prove that the bond was executed by him. Ib.

Where a man executes a bond, meaning it to be the joint bond of himself and another, who does not execute, it is the several bond of the former, but he may have it delivered up, as contrary to intention. Underhill v. Horwood, 10 Ves. 225.

A. executed a bond as the joint and several bond of himself and B., and signed it "A, and B.," having no authority from B. so to do:— Held, that the bond was good, as the several bond of A. Elliot v. Davis, 2 Bos. & P. 338; 5 R. R. 616.

Discharge, ]—If an obligee in a joint and several bond makes one of the two obligors his executor, with others, the action on the bond is discharged as to both. Cheetham v. Ward, 1 B. & P. 630; 4 R. R. 741.

Though an obligee of a bond covenants not to sue one of two joint and several obligors, and if he does, that the deed may be pleaded in bar, he may still sue the other obligor. Dean v. Newhall, 8 Term Rep. 168.

Parties to Sue on. ]-Although a deed poll may be formed so as to give a right of action against a party executing it, yet no one can bring an action on an indenture except a party or one claiming through him. Gurdner v. Luchlan, 4 Myl. & C. 129; S L. J., Ch. 82; 2 Jur. 412, 1056. And see 6 Sim. 407.

When a deed is made inter partes, no one who is not expressed to be a party can sue on a covenant contained in it; and this is not a mere rule of construction, but a rule of positive law. Action as for a total loss upon a policy of insurance, in which the declaration set out the estates held by A. were specially named as part policy in the form of a deed-poll, scaled with the securities for these advances.—A. died —Held, seal of a corporate company, in which deed its that by his death the partnership was dissolved, iwas recited that K., one of the plaintiffs, held. represented that he was interested in the subject- inheritance of the hereditaments and premises matter, or duly authorised as owner, agent, or would have belonged in case the deed had not matter, or duly authorised as owner, agent, or was agreed that the capital, stock and funds of the company should, according to the provisions of the deed of settlement of the company, be liable to make good, and applied to pay and make good all losses on the ship; but it was provided that the capital, stock and funds of the company should alone be liable, and that no shareholder of the company should be liable to any claims or demands, nor in anywise charged by reason of the policy; the declaration averred that the company became insurers to the plaintiffs for a certain sum on the ship, and that the plaintiffs were always interested :-Held, that all the persons assured might well be joined as co-plaintiffs in an action on the policy with K., though they were not specifically named in the deed-noll, for it is not absolutely necessary, in order that a person may be joined as a co-plaintiff in an action on a deed-poll, that he should be specifically named in the deed as a person interested in it, if he is so designated that it cannot be mistaken that it was he who was interested. Sunderland Marine Insurance Co. v. Kearney, 16 Q. B. 925; 20 L. J., Q. B. 417; 15 Jur. 1006.

- Parties Intended. - Where a composition deed is made between parties, a person who is not named a party to it, but is so described that he can be ascertained, may sue upon the covenants contained in it. In 1801, by a deed since lost, after reciting the conveyance to the defendants by A, by a deed of even date, of land in consideration of an annual rent of 105%, to be paid "to A, or the person or persons to whom the freehold or inheritance of the premises thereby released should for the time being belong in case the deed had not been made," the defendants covenanted, "to and with A. and the person or persons to whom the freehold or inheritance of the hereditaments and premises thereinbefore recited to be released should for the time being belong," to pay the rent-charge. In 1827, by another deed, reciting the above-mentioned deed, and that A. was dead, and that "the freehold and inheritance of the hereditaments and premises mentioned and comprised in the deed of 1801, or the rent-charge or yearly sum of 105L," were vested in B., and that the rent-charge had been duly paid to A. during his life, and to B. after his death, the defendants proceeded to ratify and confirm the deed of 1801, and declared that it should be good, valid and effectual to all intents and purposes according to the true intent and meaning thereof, notwithstanding its loss. The plaintiff afterwards became entitled, under a conveyance from B, to all his interest in the rent-charge. An action having been brought by the plaintiff for arrears of the rent-charge :- Held, that it appeared with sufficient clearness, looking at the whole of the deed of 1801, that the operative words were intended to designate as the grantees of the rent-charge the same person or class of persons as that referred hands of the person to whom they were originally to in the recitals of that deed, namely, A., and given may be valid in the hands of an innocent the person or persons to whom the freehold or holder for value. Bonds of a company which are void in the

A company gave bonds to H., who transferred 695-C. A. to an innocent purchaser for value, the transfer-being registered in the books of the company. The purchaser brought an action against the company upon the bonds. It was arranged be-tween the plaintiff and the company that judgment should be signed, but not nutil the expiration of three months. In the meantime a petition was presented to wind up the company, upon which an order was subsequently made. The which an order was subsequently made. bonds were alleged to be ultra vires, and void as between the company and H. :-Held, that without entering into the question of the validity of the bonds as between the company and H., they money was borrowed for S. A charge created by C. S. npon his estates to secure the payment of a sum of money borrowed for S. H. S. is a good consideration, not only for a collateral charge upon the estates of S. H. S., to indemnify C. S. and his estate from payment of the money borrowed, but also for the settlement of the S. estates upon his family. A. H., being a trustee for the younger children of S. H. S., advanced a sum of 5,1851. 3s. 4d. upon the security of certain estates in Berkshire, which C. S., on the 20th of January, 1832, demised to A. H. for 300 years to secure the repayment. The expectant on the death of his mother, the tenant for life; and on the 21st of January, 1832, S. H. S. demised the S. estates to C. S. for 2,000 years, to indemnify him and the Berkshire estates from the 5,185l, 3s, 4d, and interest secured to A. H.; and by deeds dated the 23rd and 24th of January, 1832, in further compliance with an agreement recited in this deed, he settled the S, estates upon various uses for the benefit of his family. On the death of the tenant for life, S. H. S., being greatly indebted to G. S. F., executed a disentalling deed, and conveyed the S. estates to G. S. F., giving him a power of sale over the estates as a security for the money due; this was subsequently confirmed by another deed; and in a suit instituted by G. F. S. insisting that the settlement of the 23rd and 24th of January, 1832, was voluntary and void against the subsequent alienation for value made to G. F. S., who had notice of the settlement :- Held, that the agreement made by S. H. S. with C. S., to indemnify him against the 5,1851. 3s. 4d. and to settle the S. estates, was such as this court would specifically perform, and that it was a consideration sufficient to support the settlement; that the recital in the deed of 24th of January, 1832, of the agreement between S. #### B. FORM AND EFFECT.

1. DATE.

Effect of ]—A deed must be taken to speak from the time of its execution, and not from the date apparent on the face of it. Browne v. Burron, 5 D. & L. 289; 2 B. C. Rep. 220; 17 L. J., Q. B. 49.

Where, by a deed made on the 29th of August, mortgagor" in consideration of the moneys which February next ensuing, the words "29th of Febrnary then next" were construed to mean the 29th February in the next leap year. Chapman v. Beecham, 3 G. & D. 71; 3 Q. B. 723; 12 L. J., Q. B. 42.

Where a deed has no date, or an impossible date, as the 30th of February, and in the deed reference is made to the date, that word must be construed delivery; but if it has a sensible date, the word "date," occurring in other parts of the deed, means the day of the date, and not of the delivery. Styles v. Wardle, 7 D. & R. 507; 4 B. & C. 908; 4 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 81; 28 R. R.

By deed dated the 27th of October, 1827, between the defendant and the plaintiff, after reciting that copyhold premises were surrendered to the plaintiff for securing repayment of 300%. by him that day lent to the defendant, the plaintiff covenanted, on repayment of that sum and interest on the 27th of April, 1828, to surrender the premises to the defendant, and the defendant covenanted to pay the 3007, and interest at the time appointed for payment. There was also a stipulation, that, in default of payment, the plaintiff might take possession of the premises. The deed was in fact executed on the 23rd of August, 1834. No principal, interest or rent had ever been paid by the defendant. In February, 1854, the plaintiff brought ejectment:—Held, that the deed was a sufficient acknowledgment, within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 14, of the plaintiff's title at the time of the execution of the deed, and consequently his right of entry was not barred. Jayne v. Hughes, 10 Ex. 430; 24 L. J., Ex, 115; 3 C, L. R, 188; 3 W, R, 65,

For Payment of Bond. ]-A bond, dated on a certain day, in a penal sum, conditioned for payment of a lesser sum generally, without naming any day of payment, is payable on the day of the date. Furgular v. Morris, 7 Term Rep. 124.

A bond, conditioned for the payment of a certain sum with interest, may be put in suit without a previous demand of payment. Glbbs v. Southam, 3 N. & M. 155; 5 B. & Ad. 911.

Loan Payable by Instalments. ]-The plaintiffs lent money to S. upon his bond, under which the principal was to be paid in five years by instalments, in case the debtor should so long live, the instalments being calculated so as to cover the principal of the loan, interest thereon, the expenses of negotiating it, and a margin representing a premium for the insurance of the debtor's life. The condition of the bond made it void ; first, if the instalments were regularly paid till the expiration of the five years, or till the death of the debtor, whichever should first happen; secondly, if all the instalments which would have become payable at the expiration of the five years, if the debtor lived so long, were at any time paid ap, the balance of instal-ments being at once payable on the failure of any single instalment. The defendant as surety executed the bond, and default having been made in payment of one instalment, the plain-1832 (being leap year), a party covenanted to pay tiffs brought an action claiming the entire balance a sum of money, with interest, on the 29th of of unpaid instalments:—Held, that the amount

A bond, conditioned to pay costs on the 29th November, in Cumberland, when taxed by the Master, is forfeited by nonpayment, though in fact the costs were only taxed on the 25th November, of which the defendant had no notice on or before the 29th; for he might have had them taxed before, and thus have known their amount in time. Bigland v. Skelton, 12 East,

A bond, executed in March, 1832, was conditioned for the payment of 51, interest on 2001. on the 1st March, 1833, and 51, on the 1st March, 1834, and 2051, on the 1st March, 1835. The first year's interest was not paid till March 30th, 1833: -Held, that the bond had become forfeited. Skinners' Company v. Jones, 4 Scott, 271: 3 Bing. (N.C.) 481; 3 Hodges, 18; 6 L. J., C. P. 113.

Filling up Blank for Date. ]-Filling in the date of a warrant of attorney, when left in blank, after execution, is not such an alteration as will avoid the instrument. Keane v. Smallbone, 17 C. B. 179; 25 L. J., C. P. 72; 4 W. R. 11.

Filling in by a mortgagee of the date, the period for redemption, and the names of the tenants of mortgaged premises, after the execution of the deed of the mortgagor, are not such alterations as to invalidate the deed. . Adsetts v. Hires, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1063; 9 L. T. 110.

Where a deed purported to bear date on the 20th November, and was executed by one of two parties on the 16th of that month, and by the other on a previous day :- Held, to be immaterial, it not appearing that a blank was left for the date at the time of the execution. Cockell v. Gray, 6 Moore, 482; 3 Br. & B. 186.

2. Execution.

a. Presumptions respecting.

Of Counterpart. ]-D., in 1824, agreed with S. for the purchase of an estate, and that the purchase-leed should contain a covenant by D. that he, his heirs and assigns, would pay to S., his executors, administrators, and assigns, the sum of 6s. for each chaldron of coals gotten out of the estate and shipped for sale. The purchasedeed was subsequently executed by S., but not by D. D., however, entered upon the laud, and he and his devisees and their assigns enjoyed the property. Coal was also got and shipped for sale: Held, that the execution by D. of a counterpart of the deed containing the covenant must be presumed, and that the words "shipped execution of a settlement by indentures of lease claimed was not a penalty, and could be re- for sale" in the deed meant coal actually shipped covered. Protector Endowment Loan Co. v. Grice, for sale. Withom v. Vane, 32 W. R. 617—H. L.

In an action for money received, the defendant, as an answer to the action, put in one part of a deed executed by the plaintiff, whereby the defendant covenanted to pay over all moneys received by him on account of the plaintiff; notice having been given to the plaintiff to produce the counterpart of this deed :-Held, that the possession by the defendant of the plaintiff's part of the deed was presumptive evidence that he had executed the counterpart; and that this was equally a ground of nonsuit, whether the counterpart had been lost or not. East India Co. v. Lewis, 3 Car. & P. 358; 33 R. R. 680.

Deeds Executed on same Day-Priority of Operation. - When two deeds relating to the same subject-matter are executed on the same day the court will inquire which of them was executed first. But if there is anything in the deeds themselves to show an intention either that they shall take effect pari passu, or that one should take effect pari passu, or that one should take effect in priority to the other, the court will presume that they were executed in such an order as to give effect to the manifest intention. Holden or Gartside v. Silkstone and Dodsworth Coul and Iron Co., 51 L. J., Ch. 828; 21 Ch. D. 762; 47 L. T. 76; 31 W. R. 86. And see col. 348, ante.

Absolute or Conditional Operation. -A. having received moneys belonging to B., privately and without any communication with B., prepared and executed a mortgage to him for the amount. A. retained the deed in his custody for twelve years, and then died insolvent. After his death the deed was discovered in a chest containing his title deeds :-Held, that the deed was not an escrow, there being no evidence to shew that it was executed conditionally, but that it took effect from its execution, and was good against A.'s creditors. Exton v. Scott, 6 Sim. 31.

A deed, the possession of which was not delivered, held complete, and not merely an escrow, when it was complete on the face of it, and the memorial was duly registered treating it as executed at the time of its date, and the non-delivery accounted for by delay respecting a mortgage which was part of the consideration. Blennerhasset v. Day, Beat, 468.

Deeds of appointment of a sum of 30,0001, for younger children's portions having been properly executed, and being found in the custody of the family solicitor:-Held, that the onus was thrown upon the party disputing them, to prove their invalidity as escrows. Rowley v. Rowley, 1 Kay, 242; 23 L. J., Ch. 275; 18 Jur. 306.

Sealing.]—A document, purporting to be a bond, bore the words "sealed with my seal," and the attestation clause was to the effect that the document had been "signed, sealed and delivered" by the obligor. The document was properly stamped as a bond. It did not appear that a seal had in fact ever been affixed, and there was no mark, wafer or scal visible upon the face of the document :- Held, that the court could not, under the circumstances, presume that the document had been scaled. Smith, In re, Oswell v. Shepherd, 67 L. T. 64—C. A.

From Circumstances. ] - The existence and pally the existence of the drafts: the statement in an abstract of the title, and the existence of 339. the lease for a year of other estates appearing to have been included in the same place of settlement, Word v. Garnons, 17 Ves. 134; 11 R. R. 35.

Skipworth v. Skirley, 11 Ves. 64; 8 R. R. 86.

Length of possession, as a ground for presuming a release, depends on the nature of the possession, whether adverse or not. Fenwick v.

Reid. 1 Mer. 114.

Courts of equity will presume a release within the same limits of time within which juries will be directed to presume it, whether any statute of limitation is applicable to the case or not. Baldwin v. Peuch, 1 Y. & C. 453.

b. Manner of.

Signature-In what Name-Misnomer.]-A person having executed a deed in the name of J. Janes, his real name, and being described in the body of the deed as J. James, but with the proper description and address added :- Held. that the property passed to him, and the jury was warranted in so finding. Junes v. Whitbread, 11 C. B. 406: 20 L. J., C. P. 217; 15 Jur. 612.

In debt on bond the plaintiff by his declara-tion complained against W. F. B., said by the name of W. B. The defendant pleaded non est factum. At the trial it appeared that the defenthat described in the declaration, by the name of W. B., and that, at the time of the execution, he was known by that name :- Held, first, that the proof was sufficient to sustain the issue; secondly, that, even if the objection were valid, it was not one of which the defendant could avail himself under the plea of non est factum. Williams v. Bryant, 5 M. & W. 447; 7 D. P. C. 502; 9 L. J., Ex. 47: 3 Jur. 632.

Signing-When Necessary. |- Signing as well as sealing a common bond for money innecessary. Hodghinson, Ec parte, 19 Ves. 296.

> By a deed made between E. C., of the first part, G. W., of the second part, J. R., of the third part, and D. H. and J. S. N., of the fourth part, G. W. assigned a patent to D. H. and J. S. N., to be paid for by instalments, extending beyond a year from the execution of the deed. The deed was signed and executed by all the parties except D. H. There was a seal in the usual way for him, but no signature. It was proved that he had, together with J. S. N., attempted to work the patent, and sent a notice to the plaintiff, pursuant to a proviso in the deed, in which the deed was recited as made between the several parties thereto, and their names were correctly stated. This was signed by D. H. In an action on the deed against D. H. and J. S. N., they severally pleaded non est factum. At the trial D. H. produced the deed :-Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury that he had adopted and delivered the deed, Cherry v. Heming, 4 Ex. 631; 19 L. J., Ex. 63.

In an action by a company for calls, the declaration stated, that by deed made by and between the several persons whose names and seals were or might thereafter be thereunto subscribed, and who had sealed and delivered, or who might seal and deliver the same, of the first part; and persons nominated to be covenantees for the benefit of the company, of the second part; the parties of the first part covenanted with the parties of the second part to pay the calls. Averment, that whilst the defendant was a shareholder, "and after the execution by the defendant of the deed as aforesaid," the directors made a call, Breach, nonpayment, The declaration contained no direct averment that the defendant executed the deed :- Held, that the words "after the execution by the defendant of factum. At the trial it appeared that the defendant did in fact execute a bond agreeing with dant had subscribed, scaled and delivered the deed, and that they were, upon general demurrer, deed, and that they were, upon general demarks, equivalent to such an averment. > A deed acknowledged by married women was signed by the parties and witnessed; but no seal or representation of a seal appeared at all on the deed :- Held, that the attestation clause, in which it was stated that the deed had been signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of the witnesses, was prima facie evidence of due execution. Mayer, In re, 40 L. J., C. P. 201; 24 L. T. 273: 19 W. R. 641.

> If a document appears to have been signed and attested, it is presumed to have been sealed and delivered, whether any impression of a seal appears on it or not. S. C., nom. Sandilands, In re, L. R. 6 C. P. 411. And see Hall v. Bain-

Proof that a party signed a deed, which bears Delivery:]—It is not necessary that it should on the face of it a declaration that the deed was appear upon the face of a deed that it has been sealed by the party, is evidence to be left to a Semble, that words at the end of a deed, following the "In equis rel testimonium," &c. following the "In equis rel testimonium," &c. form no part of the deed. A. deposited with B., his stockbroker, the certificates of shares in the Balkis Consolidated Company, and executed a blank transfer to secure the balance of his current account. articles of the company required that transfers of shares should be made by deed. Shortly after-wards B. filled up the blank transfer with the name of L. as transferee, and deposited the shares with L. as security for money borrowed, as he alleged, in pursuance of the general direc-tions of A. Later on B. closed A.'s account and sold the shares. L., who was willing that the purchase should be completed, applied to the company to register the transfer to himself. In the meanwhile A., who had disputed B.'s account, had given the company notice not to register. L. now moved, under the Companies Act, 1862, s. 35, to rectify the register by inserting his name. On production of the transfer it appeared that it contained no seal or wafer in the place of a seal, but only a mark on the paper of the place where the seal ought to be. The transfer was witnessed by B.'s clerk as having been signed, scaled and delivered by A., but the attesting witness did not make any affidavit, and the evidence of A. and B. as to whether A. put his finger on the seal or not was contradictory :-Held, that no order could be made on the motion; that L. could have no right to be registered unless A, were estopped from denying that the transfer to L. was good, and this estoppel could only arise if the document delivered to L. were prima facie complete; that it was not complete in the absence of a scalunless it was shewn that it had been sealed, and for this the evidence was insufficient. Balkis Consolidated Co., In re, 58 L. T. 300; 36 W. R. 392.

The plaintiff executed a declaration of trust operating as a voluntary settlement of leasehold property upon his mother for life, with remainders in favour of her children. Subsequently a deed was indorsed upon the original assignment of the property to the plaintiff, purporting to convey the legal term to the mother absolutely. The plaintiff signed his name to this deed opposite the seal, which had been previously affixed by another person, but immediately on his signing it the solicitor who was present, hearing of the declaration of trust, stopped all further proceedings. The deed, however, so signed, but undated and unattested, was left in the hands of plaintiff's mother, who afterwards repaired them to the plaintiff's knowledge. In a deed of arrangement between the plaintiff and his mother's executors, prepared by plaintiff's direction, and signed by him, though not completely executed, were contained recitals of the deed in the contained recitals of the contained recitals o executed, were contained recitals of the deed in Grantor keeping.]—The grantor of a deed question, and of the lease to the defendant:— signed it, scaled it, and declared in the presence

c. Escrow.

What is. ]-To determine whether an instrument is an escrow or not, the question is not merely whether the instrument was delivered to a third person to be held conditionally, but whether the delivery was of a character negativing its being a delivery to the party who was to have the benefit of the instrument. Watkins v. Nash, 44 L. J., Ch. 505; L. R. 20 Eq. 262; 23 W. R. 647.

It is not necessary, in order to constitute an escrow, that the deed should be expressly delivered as such. If, at the time of the delivery of the deed, there is an agreement that the deed is to have operation only on certain conditions, that is sufficient to constitute a delivery as an escrow. Nash v. Flynn, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 565; 1 Jo. & Lat. 162.

Parol Evidence-Question for Judge or Jury. Although, in general, the question whether contract has been executed only as an escrow is for the jury, because it depends on the facts proved by oral evidence; yet where the evidence is in writing, the question becomes one for the judge. Furness v. Meck, 27 L. J., Ex. 34. And see Pym v. Campbell, 6 El. & Bl. 370; 25 L. J., Q. B. 277; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 641. Daries v. Jones, 17 C. B. 625; 25 L. J., C. P. 91. Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 787; 29 L. J., Ex. 369.

To show no Contract.]—Where an agreement for a lease had been signed by the plaintiff, and was subsequently signed by the defendant, but not in the presence of the plaintiff, and the defendant never delivered the agreement to the plaintiff :- Held, that evidence might be admitted to show that there was no true animus contrahendi between the parties. Pym v. Campbell (25 L. J., Q. B. 277; 6 El, & Bl. 370) followed. Pattle v. Hornibrook, 66 L. J., Ch. 144; [1897] 1 Ch. 25; 75 L. T. 475; 45 W. R. 123.

instrument was delivered as an escrow. Stoytes v. Pearson, 4 Esp. 255.

Whether or not delivery to a person not a party to it is essential to constitute a deed an escrow, where there are several grantees, and one of them is also solicitor to the grantor and to the other grantees, and the deed is delivered to him, evidence is admissible to show the cha-of the attesting witness, that he delivered it as his act and deed, but kept it in his own possession :- Held, that the deed was effectual from the moment of its execution though there was no delivery of it to the grantee, or to any person for his use. The grantor afterwards delivered the deed to a third person for the use of the grantee, intending to renounce all control over it. Such third person was not the agent of the grantce, nor did the grantee ever receive or know of the existence of the deed till after the death of the grantor :- Held, that the deed was effectual from the moment of such delivery. Doe d. Garanas v. Knight, 8 D. & R. 348; 5 B. & C. 471; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 161; 29 R. R. 355.

A. having received moneys from B., privately and without any communication with B., prepared and executed a mortgage to him for the amount. A. retained the deed in his custody for twelve years, and then died insolvent. After his death the deed was discovered in a chest containing his title-deeds:-Held, that the deed was not an escrew, there being no evidence to show that it was executed conditionally, but that it took effect from its execution, and was good against A.'s creditors. Exton v. Scott. 6 Sim. 31.

Delivery to Third Party. -A., being indebted to his bankers, excented a deed, purporting to be a mortgage to them, for securing the debt. After executing it, he delivered it to his attorney, who retained it in his possession till A.'s bankruptcy, which occurred about a month afterwards. The attorney then delivered it to the mortgagees :-Held, that this was a good delivery by A, to the mortgagees, Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & C, 119.

A person made a deed of gift of all his real property to his daughter. He signed and scaled it, and no one being present but the attesting witnesses, he said, "I deliver this as my last act and deed." After this he desired a third person to keep it, and not deliver it to his daughter till he was dead, it being suggested to him that she might otherwise take his property from him in his lifetime:—Held, that the delivery of the deed was complete; but semble, that if the direction to keep it had been given before he said "I deliver this," the deed would not have operated as an escrow. Doe d. Lloyd v. Bennett, 8 Car. & P. 124.

Deeds of appointment of a sum of 30,000%, for younger children's portions having been properly executed, and being found in the custody of the family solicitor :- Held, that the burden of proof was thrown on the party disputing them to shew that they had been executed as escrews. Rowley v. Rowley, Kay, 242; 2 Eq. Rep. 241; 23 L. J., Ch. 275; 18 Jur. 306; 23 L. T. 55.

Conditions. |-Where A. executes a deed, and delivers it to B. as an escrow, to be delivered to C, on a certain event, possession of the deed by C, is prima facie evidence of the performance of the condition. Hare v. Harton, 2 N. & M. 428; 5 B. & Ad. 715 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 41.

If the vendor of a leasehold estate delivers payment of the residue of the purchase-money, the property in the title-deeds of the estate is so vested in the vendee, that the vendor, obtaining possession of them, and pawning them, confers on the pawnee no right to detain them after tender of the residue of the purchase-money. Hooper v. Ramsbottom, 6 Taunt. 12; 1 Marsh. 414; 4 Camp. 121.

Previously to the execution of a deed of composition, it was agreed, in the presence of the surety for the payment of the composition, that it should be void unless all the creditors executed: the surety then executed the deed in the usual manner, without saying anything at the time of its execution; it was then delivered to one of the creditors in order that he might get it executed by the rest :- Held, that this was a delivery of the deed as an escrow, and, as all the creditors had not executed, the surety was not bound thereby. Johnson v. Baher, 4 B. & Ald. 440; 23 R. R. 338.

The execution by the debtor of a deed of trust is not in the nature of an escrow before it is executed by the trustees. Simpson v. Sikes, 6

M. & S. 295.

In an action upon an apprenticeship deed by the master against the father the declaration stated that the indenture was scaled by the defendant and his son, and that during the termthe son absented himself, and refused to continue in the service. Plea, that the indenture was not the deed of the defendant; that it was not the deed of the plaintiff; that it had not been executed by the plaintiff, and that it had not been executed by the defendant, and delivered to A. only as an escrow. When the defendant exeented the deed at the office of A., the attorney who prepared it (the plaintiff not being present), he requested that the plaintiff should not be allowed to execute it until an arrangement was made as to expenses, and A. made a memorandum on the deed to that effect, and acted upon it, declining to allow the plaintiff to execute it, when called to do so, and he never had executed it : Held, that, though the jury found the defendant intended that the deed should bind him, and delivered it as a complete deed, the evidence shewed that the deed was delivered as an escrow, and that the action could not be maintained. Millership v. Brookes, 5 H. & N. 797; 29 L. J., Ex. 369.

An action upon a deed described as made between G, of the first part, the defendant and L. of the second part, and the plaintiff of the third part, whereby the defendant and L. jointly and severally covenanted with the plaintiff for payment by G. of certain annual premiums, the defendant (setting out the deed in hee verba, shewing that it was made between G, of the first part, the defendant and L. and Pearce of the second part, and the plaintiff of the third part) pleaded, that the deed was made and executed by him on the faith that Pearce should join therein, or execute it, and that Pearce never did join therein or execute it :- Held bad, it not appearing that the defendant's execution of the deed was upon condition that his execution should be void, if the deed was not executed by Pearce, the other co-surety. Cumberlege v. Law-son, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 709; 26 L. J., C. P. 120; 5 W. R. 237.

A deed of inspectorship and composition made between a debtor and his creditors in Great Britain contained a covenant that in a certain the conveyance as an escrow to take effect on event the debtor would, if required by the inspector, assign all his property to the inspector for the benefit of the creditors; that upon such. assignment the inspector should give a certificate that the debtor had so assigned, and that thereupon the debtor should be released from his debts. The deed contained a proviso that it should "cease, determine, and be void" if all the creditors in Great Britain to a certain amount did not execute it within six months from its d. Macleod v. East London Waterworks, M. & M. date. The debtor was duly required by the inspector to execute an assignment, and did so, and received a certificate :- Held, that the deed was not void, but voidable only; that the release constituted a good defence against a creditor who had executed the deed, and who, having had notice that all the creditors had not signed the deed, had endeavoured to obtain payment of a dividend out of the property assigned to the inspector. Dunn v. Wyman, 51 L. J., Q. B.

Semble, the proviso was inserted in the deed for the benefit of the debtor, and a creditor who had executed could not take advantage of it. Ib.

Intention. -A bond executed with the usual formalities may operate as a deed in præsenti. although at the time of such execution it was expressly agreed that it should not take effect until a certain event had happened; and the intention of the parties at the time of execution is a question of fact for the jury on the whole evidence. Murray v. Stair (Earl), 3 D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82; 26 R. R. 282.

It is not necessary that the delivery of a deed as an escrow should be by express words; if, from the circumstances attending the execution, it can be inferred that it was delivered not to take effect as a deed until a certain condition was performed, it will operate as a delivery as an escrow only. Bowker v. Burdekin, 11 M. & W. 128; 12 L. J., Ex. 329.

Where one of three partners executed an assignment of the partnership property before, but the others did not execute it until after a flat in bankruptev had issued :-Held, in the absence of anything to shew that the deed was delivered as an escrow, that it amounted to an act of bankruptey by the one who so executed it, and that his share of the partnership property passed to 177 the assignees under the flat. A lease by deed was duly executed by the plaintiff and P., but in pursuance of a previous agreement, it remained in the possession of the lessor until 100%, for goodwill and fixtures was paid, P. paid 501., and entered into possession, and curried on business upon the premises until he became bankrupt. The defendant entered into possession as assignee of the bankrupt. In an action for use and occupation:—Held, that the deed was not delivered so as to take effect as a lease, and that until payment of the remaining 50l. a tenancy from year to year existed, and therefore the defendant was liable in this form of action. Gudgeon v. Besset, 6 El, & Bl, 986; 26 L. J., Q. B. 36; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 212.

A deed (which by arrangement was to be executed in duplicate, one to be prepared by each party, and to be interchanged between them) was executed by the grantee, but not attested, and was by him sent to the solicitor of the grantors to procure their execution; and they accordingly signed, sealed and delivered it:— Held, that this was a complete delivery whereby the estate passed; and that the arrangement did not render the deed an escrow until the duplicates were interchanged. Kidner v. Keith, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 35.

3. INDORSEMENTS, PLANS, AND SCHEDULES.

Indorsements. - An indorsement on a deed after it has been signed by the parties, but written at the same time with the scaling and delivery, is part of the deed. Lyburn v. Warring-

- As to Interest. - By acts for improving a port, commissioners were empowered to raise money upon instruments which were known in the market as Old Pier Bonds. These bonds were all originally issued at 51, per cent, interest, with the exception of eight for 100%, each, which were granted to B., upon which a memorandum was indorsed before or at the execution of the bonds, whereby the obligee (under his hand only) agreed to accept interest at 41, per cent., provided the payments were regularly made. A., who was the holder of these eight bonds, was applied to by C., a broker employed to purchase such securities for D., and A. agreed to sell to D. "eight Old Pier Bonds for 1001, each," nothing being said on either side as to the rate of interest payable thereon. The bonds were left with the broker for the purpose of getting them transferred. He accordingly prepared a transfer, and got it registered, and then, for the first time, discovered that the interest payable on them was, by the memorandum on the back, limited to 4l. per cent., upon which he immediately repudiated them. In an action for the contract price, the jury found, that the bargain between U., as D.'s agent, and A. was for Old Pier Bonds of the usual sort at 5l, per cent., but that A. only intended to sell bonds at 4l. per cent, :-Held, that the jury was warranted in the conclusion they came to, and that the indorsement, in equity at least, became part of the bond. Keele v. Wheeler, 8 Scott (N.R.) 323; 7 Man. & G. 665; 13 L. J., C. P. 170.

— Deferring Payment.]—A bond was conditioned that the obligor should indemnify the obligee from all sums the latter should pay, or be liable to pay, on the obligor's account; and, before the execution of the bond, a memorandum was therean indosed, that the obligee "has given an oudertaking not so use upon the bond to the estate and ordertaking not so use upon the bond till after A blood having been given for 2,0004, the she obliger's death ":--Held, that this memo- loblogor died, and his executor gave the obligee a deed by which R, was to be apprenticed to the random was to be taken as part of the condi-plaintiff, and that the defendant should pay a tion; and made the bond in effect payable only by the representatives of the obligor after his death. Burgh v. Preston, ST. R. 483: 5 R. R. 416.

A son being indebted to his father upon a bond for 1,000L, and interest, subsequently joined his father as surety in a bond for 5001, and execute the deed and pay the premium, yet he interest, given by the father to a third person, and a memorandum was indorsed upon the bond for 1,000%, by which it was agreed between the father and son, that the son should not be called on to pay the within-mentioned principal of 1,0007, until the father should have paid all principal money and interest due on the bond for 500/L;—Held, that this indorsement did not affect the interest accruing due upon the bond for 1,000/. Reed v. Morris, 2 Myl. & Cr. 361; 6 L. J., Ch. 197; 1 Jur. 233.

> - Addition to Lease. ]-Covenant in a lease that the lessee would not dig gravel out of any part of the demised premises without the consent of the lessor, except what should be dag out of two acres, part of the premises demised. By indorsement it was agreed, that it should be lawful for the lessee to break up and dig for gravel any part of the within-demised premises, he covenanting to pay to the lessor 20% for every acre he should break up and dig, at or before the expiration of the time, and to make good the same :- Held, that the lessee was not entitled to dig for gravel in the two acres of garden ground mentioned in the lease, without making them good. Flint v. Brandon, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 73.

> — Release, ]—A. bequeathed to B. 7001.. part of 1,2001, which B. owed him on bond: A. afterwards revoked the bequest, but made an indorsement on the bond, by which he forgave B, the 7001. A.'s executors brought an action against B. for the 1,200/.; B. filed a bill to restrain the action, offering to pay to the executors the balance of 500%. The court refused the injunction, because B. had given no consideration for the indorsement on the bond. Tufnell v. Constable, 8 Sim, 69.

> A. being indebted to B., C. and D., three sisters, who were his near relations, partly on his own account and partly as executor of his father, executed to them a bond for 500l. At the time of giving the bond, A. objected to give it; and agreed to do so only on a verbal representation that it was not intended to be enforced, unless B., C. and D. should come to want, an event which did not happen. The bond remained in the hands of the three till the death of B., and after her death in the hands of the survivors, and after the death of C. in the hands of D., whose property (by mutual arrangement) it was at the time of her death. On the bond was found the following indorsement: "This bond is never to appear against A.: Witness, C. and D." This was dated eleven years after the date of bond. It was not made clear that C.'s name was written by herself; it was said that D. had written it! It was, however, proved that if D, had written it, she did so with the authority of C .:- Held, that, without saving whether the indersement amounted to a release, which was a legal question, there was an equity under the circumstances against enforcing the bond; that, if put in suit, the action would be restrained; and that there was nothing due on the bond to the estate fresh bond, and received back the original bond, reference to coloured parts of a plan. A yard with a memorandum indorsed upon it and signed by the obligee, in which he declared that he had accepted the fresh bond in lieu of the first :-Held, that the obligee could only claim under the second bond, and that the estate of the original obligor was discharged so far as the obligee was concerned. Shore v. Shore, 2 Ph. 378; 17 L. J., Ch. 59.

A., by a deed, in which it was recited that he was selsed in fee, mortgaged to B. in fee. Indorsed on this deed was a memorandum signed by C .: - That by an indenture of surcharge, the within premises were charged by me, the purchaser of the equity of redemption thereof, with the payment of the further sum of 3251, and interest":—Held, that this amounted to an admission by C, that he came in under A., and that he was therefore bound by the recital that bound A. Dow d. Gaisford v. Stone, 3 C. B. 176; 15 L. J., C. P. 234.

Plan-Erroneous.]-On a conveyance of a plot of land of certain measurements, set out on a plan, with two houses recently erected or about to be erected thereon, it was proved that the foundations were laid before the deed was executed :- Held, that it was immaterial that the ground occupied by the houses exceeded the measurements stated. Manning v. Fitzgerald,

1 F. & F. 633.

A deed conveyed a piece of land, forming part of a close, by reference to a schedule annexed, The schedule described the land, in a column headed "No, on the plan of the Briton Ferry Estate," as "153 b"; in a second column, headed "Description of Premises," as "a small place marked on the plan"; in a third column, as being in the occupation of A.; and in a fourth, as "34 perches." At the time of the contract, a line was drawn on the plan as the boundary-line, dividing the piece 153 b from the rest of the close, of which it formed a part. The plan was drawn to a scale, but, mon measurement of the land, was found incorrect; and 153 b contained, within the line so drawn, less than 34 perches, according to the actual measurement on the planand 27 perches only according to the actual measurement of the land :-Held, that the statement that the piece of land conveyed contained 34 perches was merely falsa demonstratio, the prior portion of the description being sufficient to convey it, and that the deed passed only the portion of land actually marked off on the plan, as measured by the scale. Liewellyn v. Jersey (Earl), 11 M. & W. 183; 12 L. J., Ex. 243.

A deed purporting to convey "all that messuage or farmhouse, and several closes of land thereto belonging called Gotton Farm, in the occupation of G. S., and consisting of the several particulars specified in the first division of a schedule thereunder written, and more particu-larly delineated in a map or plan thereof drawn There were no in the margin of the schedule. general words. In an action brought to try the right to a slip of land, which was not mentioned either in the schedule or in the plan, evidence was offered on the part of the grantee to shew that the locus in quo had always been occupied with the closes mentioned and delineated in the schedule and plan, and treated as part of Gotton Farm :- Held, that this evidence was not admissible, and that the deed was conclusive. Barton v. Dawes, 10 C. B. 261; 19 L. J., C. P. 302.

The parcels in a conveyance were described by delineated, but not coloured, in the plan :-Held, to pass under the general word "yards, Held, to pass under the general word "yards," Willis v. Watney, 51 L.J., Ch. 181; 45 L.T. 739; 30 W. R. 424.

M, being entitled to lands on both sides of a river, sold and conveyed to L. a piece of land, the dimensions of which were minutely given in the eonveyance, and which was therein stated to contain 7.752 square vards, and to be bounded on the north by the river, and to be delineated on the plan drawn on the deed, and thereon coloured pink. The dimensions and colonring extended only to the southern edge of the river, and if half the bed had been included the area would have been 10,031 square yards, instead of 7,752 square yards. The deed contained various reservations for the benefit of M., but contained nothing express to show whether the half of the bed was intended to pass or not :- Held, that the prememorial to pass or not reflect, that the pre-sumption that the grant included half the bed was not rebutted. Micklethwait v. Newlay Bridge (h., 33 Ch. D. 133; 55 L. T. 336; 51 J. P. 132-C. A.

By lease and release, executed in 1839, M. and others conveyed to W.a piece of freehold ground, with a messuage thereon, adjoining a covered gateway, "together with the exclusive use of the said gateway." The dimensions of the gateway or passage, as to length, breadth, and height, were mentioned in the deal; and the said "piece of ground and premises" were stated to be more particularly delineated by the portion in the plan thereto, and coloured pink. The covered gateway was not coloured on the plan :-Held, that the conveyance to M. did not merely confer on W. and his successors in title a right of way through the covered gateway, but enabled them to use the gateway for all purposes, Reilly v. Booth, 44 Ch. D. 12: 62 L. T. 378: 38 W. R. 484

In a "sett," or lease, of a mine, the boundary line was described as "a line drawn from J. V.'s honse," to a bound-stone; and in the description of the parcels in the lease, it was described, which said premises are particularly described by the map on the back of this 'sett," On this map the boundary line appeared to be drawn from the north-east corner of the house. The position of the house itself was incorrectly represented on the map :- Held, that the judge was bound to look at the map as forming part of the deed, and (dissentiente Lord Westbury) to tell the jury that the line was to be drawn as marked on the map. Lyle v. Richards, 35 L. J., Q. B. 214; L. R. 1 H. L. 222; 15 L. T. 1.

Schedules-Part of Deed. |-Where, by articles under seal, a defendant bound himself under a penalty to deliver to the plaintiff, by a certain day, "the whole of his mechanical pieces as per schedule annexed":—Held, that the schedule formed part of the deed, which without it was insensible. Weeks v. Maillardet, 14 East. 568.

Where there was a mortgage of an iron foundry, and fixtures and working plant thereon, as specified in an inventory, which was to be read and construed with the deed. The inventory included stock in trade, which was not mentioned in the deed. A petition for liquidation was filed by the mortgagor, and thereupon the stock in trade was claimed by both the mortgagee and the trustee in the liquidation:-Held, that the inventory could not, contrary to the intention of the parties, be allowed to enlarge the operation of the deed; Jardine, Ex parte. M.Manus, In rc. 44 L. J., Bk. 58; L. R. 10 Ch. 322; 32 L. T. 681; 23

W. R. 736.

Under a deed of 1658, a manor with its rights. members, liberties, and appurtenances, saving and reserving certain land therein mentioned, was conveyed to trustees upon trust to permit the persons named in the schedule to the deed, their heirs and assigns, being tenants of the several messanges and tenements mentioned in the schedule, to have and convert to their own use a ratable proportion of the rents and profits of the manor, according to the yearly rents and purchase-moneys paid by them respectively, for the purchase of their messuages and tenements: -Held, that such an interest in the profits of the manor could not be annexed to the various tenements mentioned in the schedule without appropriate words of conveyance for that purpose. Hutchinson v. Morritt, 3 Y. & Coll. 547.

Not Annexed—Bill of Sale.]—A bill of sale transferred to A. "all the goods, fixtures. household furniture, plate, china and effects of whatever kind belonging to us, and in and about the messuage, tenement, or premises where he now resides, and being No. 2, Park-road, Old Kent-road, Surrey, and the chief articles whereof are particularly enumerated and described in a schedule hercunto annexed," The schedule being inadmissible by reason of its not being annexed :- Held, that the bill of sale was admissible without the schedule. Dyer v. Green, 1 Ex. 71; 16 L. J., Ex. 239. See Dains v. Heath,

3 C. B. 938; 16 L. J., C. P. 117.

A bill of sale assigned to R. "all the household goods and furniture of every kind and description whatsoever in the house No. 2, Meadow-place, more particularly mentioned and set forth in an inventory or schedule of even date herewith, and given up to R. on the execution thereof." the time of the execution one chair was delivered to R, in the name of the whole of the goods. The inventory did not mention all the goods in the house :- Held, that no goods passed under the bill of sale, except those specified in the inventory. Wood v. Roweliffe, 6 Ex. 407; 20 L. J., Ex. 285.

By an assignment of looms on certain premises, and other effects and things thereto belonging, more particularly set forth in the schedule, articles used therewith, they having been upon the premises, pass, although the looms only were mentioned in the schedule. Cort v. Sagar, 3

H. & N. 370: 27 L. J., Ex. 378.

Assignment of all and every the household goods, &c., the particulars whereof were stated to be more fully set forth in an inventory signed by the grantor and annexed thereto, but the inventory was not forthcoming :- Held, nevertheless, that the assignment was effectual, it appearing from the answer of the party resisting tis validity, that the particulars could be ascertained. England v. Duons, 2 Beav. 522; 9 L.J., Ch. 313; 4 Jur. 526.

- Composition Deed-Annexed after Exeention.]-A. executed to B. and C. a deed of ention.]—A. executed to B. and C. a deed of Sydney City Commissioners, 12 Moore, P. C. 473; trust for the benefit of creditors, purporting to 7 W. R. 267. these to the second of creations, purporting to the made between him of the first part, B. and C. and that as it was not as a matter of fact, in- were set out in a schedule thereunto annexed, tended that the stock in trade should be being creditors of A., of the third part. At the included in the mortgage, it passed to the trustee. time of its execution by A, there was no schedule annexed. When it was produced in evidence in an action by A. against B. and C., for a mortgage deed alleged to have passed under it, it had a schedule annexed consisting of the signatures of certain of his creditors, some of which had been erased, and others had no sums set against them : -Held, that the deed was not avoided thereby, West v. Steward, 14 M. & W. 47.

C. CONSTRUCTION

1. IN GENERAL.

Person relying on opposite Constructions in different Actions. - Where a litigant has obtained a construction by the court of certain covenants in a deed in his favour, he cannot in a second suit set up a contrary construction to that adopted by the court in the first suit. Gandy v. Gandy, 54 L. J., Ch. 1154; 30 Ch. D. 57; 53 L. T. 306; 33 W. R. 803-C. A.

Argument of Inconvenience. ]-The argument of inconvenience is a very strong argument where the construction is ambiguous, where it is fairly open to two constructions. Then the argument of inconvenience, like the argument of absurdity, may be used with great force; but when the construction is clear beyond controversy, it is no answer to say that there are some consequences which will cause inconvenience which were pro-Spinning Co., In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 167; 16 Ch. D., 686; 43 L. T. 620; 26 W. R. 133.

Modified by Custom.]-A custom cannot vary or alter the construction of written documents, Mencies v. Lightfoot, 40 L. J., Ch. 561; L. R. 11 Eq. 459; 24 L. T. 695; 19 W. R. 578. S. P., Hayton v. Irwin, 5 C. P. D. 130; 41 L. T. 666; 28 W. R. 665-C. A.

Presumption of Knowledge of Contents. ]-In the absence of evidence to the contrary, there is a legal presumption that a man knows the contents of a deed which he executes. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862; 20 Ch. D. 611; 47 L. T. 89; 30 W. R. 648, S. P., Salkeld v. Vernon, 1 Eden, 64,

Where the Words are not Ambiguous.]-It is the safest and best mode of construction to give to words free from ambiguity their plain and ordinary meaning. Buchanan v. Andrew, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 286.

Deeds are to be read in their grammatical and ordinary sense, and the court should not transpose the words of a clause, unless it is absurd or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the rest of the deed. Clements v. Henry, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 79, In construing grants, the words used must be taken in the sense which the common usage of mankind has applied to them as well in reference to the context in which they are found, as the eircumstances in which they are used. Lord v. an equitable effect for a clause, because the construction but upon it at law would leave it inoperative. Gladstone v. Birley, 2 Mer. 404.

Repetition. - When a word occurs twice in the same instrument it is to receive one meaning in both places, unless there appear a clear intention to the contrary. Ridgeway v. Munkittrick. 1 Dr. & War, 34.

Where there is an Ambiguity-Construction against Grantor. ] - The general rule that the construction must be taken most strongly against construction mass be taken most strongly against the grantor, modified by the necessity of giving effect to every word of the instrument, if it can reasonably be done. Pattching v. Dubbins, 1 Kay, 1; 23 L.J., Ch. 45; 17 Jur, 1113; 2 W. R. 2.

Every dead is to be taken most strongly against the grantor; but where an owner of an estate, on his marriage, settles it upon himself for life, with remainders over, and is, therefore, in one sense, both grantor and grantee, his interest under the deed is to be construed as if a stranger had been the granter. Vincent v. Spicer, 22 Beav, 380: 25 L. J., Ch. 589: 2 Jur. (N.S.) 654 : 4 W. R. 667.

The maxim, that a grant in which there is any obscurity or difficulty must be construed most strongly against the grantor, has no application at the present time. Taylor v. St. Helous Corporation, 4d L. J. Ch. 857; 6 Ch. D. 264; 37 L. T. 253; 25 W. R. 885—C. A. But see Birrell v. Dryer, 9 App. Cas. 345; 51 L. T. 130; 5 Asp. M. C. 287—H. L. (Sc.)

The principle that an ambiguous grant shall be construed in favour of the grantee and against the grantor is recognised in :- Doe d. Davies v. Williams, 1 H. Bl. 25; 2 R. R. 703. Dann v. Spurrier, 3 Bos. & P. 899; 7 R. R. 797. Doe d. Webb v. Diwon, 9 East, 15; 9 R. R. 501. Bullen v. Denning, 5 B. & C. 842; 8 Dowl. & R. 657; 4 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 314; 29 R. R. 431. Leech v. - Against Party working a Wrong.] --Where words in an assignment, or in a deed, are capable of two constructions, they are to be construed strongly against the party who uses them to work a wrong. Radger v. Comptoir d' Escompte de Paris, 88 L. J., P. C. 30; L. R. 2 P. C. 393; 21 L. T. 33; 17 W. R. 468.

To Effectuate Intention, - Deeds must be construed to operate according to the intention of the parties, if by law they may; and if they cannot operate in one form they shall in another, which, by law, will effectuate the intention. Goodfitle d. Edwards v. Bailey, Cowp. 600.

The doctrine that in construing a will the circumstances and intention of the testator may be considered in order to ascertain his meaning, applies likewise to deeds. Sidebotham v. Knott,

26 L. T. 700; 20 W. R. 415.

K., being solely seised of hereditaments devised to him for the benefit of the testator's wife and children, conveyed by indenture all his real estate in trust for K.'s children:—Held, that the property devised to K. did not pass by the indenture. Ih.

a deed, and will give it such a construction as

A court of equity is not bound to find supports that general intent, although a particular expression in the deed may be inconsistent with it. Arundell v. Arundell, i Myl. & K. 316; Coop. t. Brough. 139: 2 L. J., Ch. 77.

If the time at which a remainder in a deed is to yest is not ascertained by the limitation itself, it vests immediately in consequence of the legal presumption in favour of vesting estates; but that presumption may be rebutted or controlled by intention collected from the recital of any other part of the deed. Cholmondeley (Marquis) v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. 81; 22 R. R. 84.

Where a limitation in a deed is perfect and complete it cannot be controlled by intention collected from other parts of the deed. Ib.

An imperfect limitation must be construed by the meaning and intention collected from the whole of the deed taken together. Ih.

In construing a deed, legal presumption can only prevail in the absence of a contrary intention, or where that is not manifested with sufficient clearness. Ib.

Words of description to be construed according to the intention if clearly manifested on the face of the deed, though contrary to their correct technical sense.  $\vec{Ib}$ .

The effect of a limitation in a deed, which, taken by itself, would primâ facie create a vested remainder, will be controlled by a contrary intention clearly manifested. Ib.

If a clause in a deed be distinct and express, however absurd it may be, it must prevail, and it is not its consequences which will justify the court in swerving from its clear obvious meaning; but if a rational exposition can be given, consistent with a fair interpretation of the language, it would then relinquish its most valuable powers if it did not abandon a construction which, although more consonant with the literal interpretation, leads to a capricious and irrational result. Therefore where the terms of a deed of settlement, taken literally, implied the obligation of consent to marriage at any time, it was limited to non-age, and female plaintiff, who married after she became adult, without consent, was held not to have incurred a forfeiture. Tobin, 1 Moll. 543.

Equity in constraing the effect of a contract, never departs from what appears on the face of the instrument to be the intention of the parties, unless contrary to some principle of law. Pentland v. Stoakes, 2 Ball & B. 78.

In putting a construction upon a deed, the court will limit the private signification of general expressions in it by the purposes for which it was executed, so far as those purposes can be discovered from the deed itself. Houston v. Barry, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 294.

- Events not Contemplated. ]-An instrument is to be construed without adverting to the nature of its provisions if legal, or to what they would have been if a particular case had been contemplated. Mosley v. Mosley, 5 Ves. 248. S. P., Miehlethauit v. Nevday Bridge Co., 33 Ch. D. 133; 55 L. T. 336; 51 J. P. 132—

General Words - After Specific. ] - General words in a deed, following words specifically describing and enumerating a certain house and closes, are controlled and limited thereby. nture. Ih.
A court of equity looks to the general intent of 223; 1 L. J., Ex. 73.

General words, although introduced for the prima facie only to things cjusdem generis with those specifically enumerated. Crompton v. Jarrett, 54 L. J., Ch. 1109; 30 Ch. D. 298; 53 L. T. 603: 33 W. R. 913—C. A.

The proper rule of construction is to give to general words such as "goods, chattels, and effects" the full meaning which they ordinarily would bear, and not to limit them to things ejusdem generis with what has been specifically mentioned, unless it is quite plain that that was Regiroted, diness it is quite plant that that was the intention. Anderson v. Anderson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 457; [1895] 1 Q. B. 749; 14 R. 367; 72 L. T. 313; 43 W. R. 322—C. A.

Where one of a set of heads in the dispositive clause of a disposition is expressed in general terms and concludes a specific enumeration and description of separate subjects, prima facie. and unless the contrary appear, it must be presumed that it was merely intended to carry rights ejusdem generis with those previously described and disponed. Lee v. Alexander, 8

App. Cas. 853-H. L. (Sc.)

If a party possessed of a term of years makes an assignment, for the benefit of his creditors, of various species of personal property by name, concluding with the words, " and all his personal estate whatsoever," these latter words are sufficient to pass the term to the assignees, not withstanding the preceding particular words of the assignment. Upon the sale or the mortgage of a mill, looms used in the mill, not attached to the freehold, but removable at pleasure, do not pass under the general words. "machinery belonging to mill." Hutchinson v. Kay, 23 Beav. 413; 26 L. J., Ch. 457; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 652; 5 W. R. 341.

By a mortgage of a mill, the stones, tackling, and instruments necessary for the working of the mill pass to the mortgagee. Place v. Fagy, 4 Man. & Ry. 277.

Leaseholds which are not specified do not pass by the general words, all other "property and effects." Hopkinson v. Lush, 34 Beav. 215; 10 Jur. (x.s.) 288; 10 L. T. 122; 12 W. R. 392.

F. B., by indentures of lease and release, in consideration of natural love and affection for his sisters, by indenture released a particular freehold estate to B., his heirs and assigns; and assigned a particular leasehold estate, and all other the property in Great Britain or Ireland, whether real or personal, which he might be entitled to at the time of executing the indenture to B., his executors, administrators, and assigns, upon trust, that B., &c., should stand possessed thereof upon trust to pay the rent, interest, dividends, or annual produce arising therefrom, or the moneys arising from the sale thereof, equally between his three sisters. F. B. was, at the date of this indenture and of his death. seised of a share in a freehold house situate in K. street, not mentioned in the lease or release: -Held, that the release could not operate as a covenant to stand seised of the house in K. street, there being therein no mention of that house, and the general words being, from the frame of the deed, applicable only to leasehold or other personal estate. Drangworth v. Blair, 1 Keen, 795; 6 L. J., Ch. 263; 1 Jur.

Where in any document a general condition would be implied, if there is inserted a specific and limited condition, it must be assumed that such specific and limited condition was meant to take the place of the general condition. Gvas, Ex parte, Clement, In re, 3 Morrell, 153—C. A.

General words in a deed by which a particular estate was conveyed held not to pass a reversion, the court considering that a sufficient indication of intention not to pass it appeared on the face of the deed, Mullineux v. Ellison, 8 L. T.

All other his Lands, &c., in M .- Description of Lands. |- A., being seised of a manor in Middlesex, which included lands held in demesne, called for the sake of distinction, but not commonly known as, the Kensington estate, and also other lands, occupied by copyholders, called, for the sake of distinction, but not commonly known as, the Brompton estate, mortgaged all the lands called the Kensington estate three times over; and then by another mortgage (for consolidating the three mortgages of the Kensington estate), reciting those three mortgages, and the intention to make one mortgage of all the property comprised in them. A. mortgaged all those lands already in mortgage (by particular description following the parcels as stated in the previous deeds), "and also all other his lands and hereditaments (if any) in the county of Middlesex":—Held, that neither the manor nor the Brompton estate passed under those words. Rooke v. Kensington (Lord), 2 K. & J. 753: 25 L. J., Ch. 795; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 755 : 4 W. R. 829.

- All other his Messuages., &c, in W. or elsewhere-Two Estates. ]-Estates at Wootton were settled to the use of L. for his life, with remainders to his eldest son, the son's wife, and their children, and ultimately to L. himself in the trust estates, with a direction, "out of the reals or any moneys held by them upon the L, for the advancement of his eldest son and trusts of the deed," to pay an ammuty to A, lyounger sou, and for settling, conveying and assuring the messnage, lands, &c., after-mentioned and particularly described, granted and seised of a share in a freehold house situate in K. released the same which were also in Wootton, street, not mentioned in the lease or release: but were entirely distinct from the first-mentioned estates, and also all other his messuages, cottages, closes, lands, tenements and heredita-ments whatsoever in Wootton or elsewhere: ments whatsover in Wootton or elsewhere; the general words being from the frame of the and the reversion, remainder, rents, &c., of all deed, applicable only to leasehold or other perand singular the premises, granted and released, and all his estate therein, to the use that he, L., of L. J. Ch. 263; 1 Jun. 620. should receive an annuity of 30%, a year for his life; and after his decease that his eldest son should receive thereout an annuity of 10%, a year for his life; and subject to the annuities, to the use of his younger son, his heirs and assigns for ever. He also assigned all his household goods to the younger son, on his covenanting to pay 20%, to the elder :- Held, that the first-mentioned estates, though not named, passed to the younger son by the general words; and that although the annuity of 10% could not legally be charged on both estates, this did not negative the intention to pass both; but that the annuity must be taken as charged upon the estate which might legally be subjected to it, the property being sufficient. Doe d. Pell v. Jeyes, 1 B. & Ad. 593; 9 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 82.

"And all other the Hereditaments of them or either of them, "&c.]—Two partners, to seeme a partnership debt, conveyed certain joint property particularly described in the deed, "and all other the hereditaments of them or either of them situate elsewhere in the town of Morpeth," recitals, covenants and premises in the deed relating solely to the joint property :-Held, that the operation of the deed extended to a separate estate of one of the partners in the town of Morpeth. Young, Ex parte, Gowen, In re, 4 Deac. 185.

" All other Moneys, Securities, Property and Effects."]—Leaseholds which are not specified do not pass by the general words "all other property and effects." Hophinson v. Lush, 34 Beav. 215; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 288; 10 L. T. 122; 12 W R 399

By a deed executed by a trustee of a banking company on his retiring, he assigned three specified policies held for securing debts due to the bank, and the debts themselves. He also assigned leaseholds X., mortgaged to him for securing a debt due to the bank, "and all other moneys, securities, property and effects," vested in him and four others as trustees for the company:—Held, that leaseholds Y., belonging to the bank absolutely, and vested in the retiring trustees, and the same other four trustees, but which were not referred to in the deed, did not pass under the above general words. Ib.

"All other Property, &c., whether Real or Personal."]-F. B., in consideration of natural love and affection for his sisters, by indenture released a particular freehold estate to B., his heirs and assigns; and assigned a particular leasehold estate, and all other the property in Great Britain or Ireland, whether real or personal, which he might be entitled to at the time of executing the indenture to B., his executors, administrators and assigns, upon trust, that B., &c., should stand possessed thereof upon trust to pay the rent, nterest, dividends, or annual produce arising was, at the date of this indenture and of his death, Held, that the release could not operate as a covenant to stand seised of the house in K. street, there being therein no mention of that house, and — All the Estate, &c.]—In a conveyance of land, the general clause, purporting to convey all the estate, &c., of the grantor, may be restricted in its construction by the recitals and general scope of the instrument. Williams v. Pinckney. 67 L. J., Ch. 34-C. A.

A man being entitled to an estate in fee in one moiety and a leasehold interest (subject to forfeiture on assignment) in the other molety of a house, and also to other freehold and leasehold property, executed a mortgage deed, which recited that he was entitled in fee to certain other property and to the said house, and conveyed the same in fee with the usual estate clause, and which also recited that he had leasehold interests in two other properties, one of which it conveyed by underlease, and the other it covenanted to assign on request :- Held, that the leasehold assign on request :—rrent, that the reasonour interest in the moiety of the house did not pass. Francis v. Minton, 36 L. J., C. P. 201; L. R. 2 C. P. 543; 16 L. T. 352; 15 W. R. 788. Guardians of an infant tenant in tail redeemed the land tax on the entailed estate. The tenant in tail died, having bequeathed the land tax to the next tenant in tail. The latter tenant in tail suffered a recovery and settled the estate, but always dealt with the redeemed land tax as a subsisting charge. The settlement contained in its operative part the usual general words "all the estate, &c.":—Held, that the land tax was not merged by its redemption, by the recovery, by the operation of the settlement, or otherwise but passed by a bequest of it in the settlor's will. Blundell v. Stanley, 3 De G. & Sm. 433; 18 L. J., Ch. 300; 13 Jur. 998.

Two terms were ereated in the same manner, one of 300 years, in 1712, the other of 600 years, in 1768. In 1791 the latter was assigned to D., to secure a mortgage debt; and by a deed of even date, the former was assigned to B., as a trustee for A. A. died, having appointed B., C. and D. his executors. In 1801, by a deed indorsed on the first assignment of 1791, and "made between B., C. and D., executors of A., of the one part, and E. of the other part," B., C. and D. assigned the premises, "and all the estate," &c., to E. for the residue of the term of 600 years, subject to the equity of redemption :-Held, that the term of 1712, being held by B. in what must be deemed his own right, did not pass by force of the words "and all the estate," &c., and was not merged. Rooper v. Harrison, 2 Kay & J.

In 1790, an advowson appendant to a manor, was sold and assigned for the residue of a term of 500 years created in the manor and advowson in 1745, and which, except as to the advowson, ceased :-Held, that this did not sever the appendancy, and that the advowson passed by a sub-sequent release of the manor with general words.

M., being lessee of premises for a term of years herefrom, or the moneys arising from the sale to G., under a lease containing a covenant by G. hereof, equally between his three sisters. F. B. that M. should at any time during the term be at

A., in consideration of A.'s having paid off certain mortgages upon the premises, to assign the freehold to A. by way of mortgage, subject to a first mortgage to the lender of the purchase-money. A deed was executed by M., which recited that G. had conveyed the freehold to M., leaving a blank for the date of the deed of conveyance, and recited also that M. had made a mortgage to the lenders of the purchase-money, a blank being left for the date of the deed of mortgage. It was then witnessed that M. conveyed the premises (subject to such last-mentioned mortgage), and all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim and demand whatsoever of M. in the premises, to A., his heirs and assigns, for ever. The freehold was not then, nor was it eventually. conveyed by G. to M .: - Held, that the deed did not pass M.'s leasehold interest; that, looking at the intention of the parties, the deed must be construed as intended to pass the freehold when purchased, and that such purchase never having been made, the deed was, with respect to those premises, wholly inoperative. Goodwin v. Noble, 8 El. & Bl. 587.

A mortgage was expressed to comprise by way of grant in fee, "all and every the estate, right, title, property and interest of the mortgager of and in all and every those two fields or parcels of land, containing together about twenty-two acres or thereabouts, situate at and abutting upon the main road at" H., and "bounded upon one side by" B. lane, "and also of and in all and every other, if any, the lands, hereditaments and premises at H. aforesaid of, in, or to which the mortgagor hath an yestate, right, title, property or interest." All of the mortgagor's property at H. was freehold, except a strip of land of about three-quarters of an acre which lay between the freeholds and B. lane, and which was of copyhold tenure :- Held, that the copyhold strip passed under the general words and was included in the mortgage. Rooke v. Kensington (2 Kay & J. 753), and Crompton v. Jarratt (30 Ch. D. 298), distinguished. Semble, having regard to the position of the property and the description in the deed, the copyhold strip was included in the parcels themselves. Early v. Rathbone, 57 L. J., Ch. 652; 58 L. T. 517.

- Moieties. ]-One by deed, in consideration of love and affection to his name, blood, &c., and for settling the undivided moieties of his manors. lands, &c., thereinafter mentioned, granted the sald undivided moieties, particularly describing them, together with all other his lands, tenements and hereditaments in the kingdom of Ireland : habendum, the said undivided moieties before granted, together with all other his estates in the kingdom of Ireland, to A. to the several uses thereinafter declared, and for no other use whatsoever, and then declared the uses of the undivided moiety only :- Held, first, that the grantor did not intend to pass any lands but the undivided moieties; and, secondly, supposing the sweeping clause did extend to any other lands, yet no use being declared of them, they descended to the heir-at-law. Moore v. Magrath, Cowp. 9.

A deed, whereby a person conveys "one full moiety," is prima facie evidence that the grantor is owner of the other moiety. Reed v. Williams, 5 Taunt. 257; 14 R. R. 748.

The premises intended to be conveyed by a liberty to purchase the freehold, and having made ideed of mortgage were described as the defendrangements for borrowing a sum of money for the purches of making such purchase, agreed with A., in consideration of A.'s having paid off certain premises. This conveyed the molety only, to mortgages upon the premises, to assign the free-hold to A. by way of mortgage, subject to a first mortgage, to the lender of the purchase-money. We not consider the molety of the premises in which he was entitled in his own right, and not one-third part of the same premises in which he described to the lender of the purchase-money. We note that the plaintiff. Doe d. Raihes v. Anderson, 1 the plaintiff. Doe d. Raihes v. Anderson, 1 the plaintiff.

A. being entitled to a contingent interest in 1,000l., being a moiety of 2,000l., part of a snm of 20,000l. directed by the will to be invested, and which was accordingly invested in the 3 per cent, consols, advertised it for sale by anction. describing it as a reversion to 1,000%, principal money, payable on a contingency, and part of a sum of 20,000L invested in the 3 per cent, consols. The interest having been put up for sale in pursuance of the advertisement, B. became the purchaser; and by an indenture reciting the bequest, the investment of the legacy, and the purchase at the sale, A. assigned to B. "all that sum of 1,000l. sterling, being one molety of the legney or sum of 2,000%, bequeathed by the will" :- Held, that B. was entitled to the value of the 1,000*l*, in its state of investment. Lucas v. Bond, 2 Keen, 136; 6 L. J., Ch. 259. Affirmed 2 Keen, 496; 7 L. J., Ch. 207.

There being an assignment by way of security for the husband's debt of a molery of the wife's contingent fund, and the wife when the contingency happened, insisting upon a sertlement, and a molery being settled:—Elcli, with reference to subsequent assignments of portions of the entire fund, that the first assignment passed all the remaining moiety, and not half of it. Archer v. Gardkev, C. P. Cooper, 340.

— Together with all Profits, &c., and all the Estate, &c.]—C. having, in 1815, purchased the tithe of land of which he was selsed in fee, in 1816, by a settlement on the marriage of his son, conveyed the land to transces for his son's wite, "together with all profits, commodities, advantages, emoluments, hereditaments and appartenances, to the premises belonging or in anywise appertanting, and the reversion; and all the estate, right, title, interest, use, trust, possession, freelold, inheritance, reversion, possibility, property, challeuge, claim and demand whatsoever of him C. therein or thereto, or to any part or parcel thereof"—Held, that the tithes did not pass by this conveyance. Chapman v. Gateombe, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 516; 2 Scott, 738; 5 L. J., C. P. 93.

Reversion.]—Although it is a rule of law that a reversion will pass by general words, unless a different intention is distinctly shown in other parts of the instrument, yet such an intention may be gathered by implication from the form of the deed. Multineaw v. Ellison, 8 L. T. 236.

Where a deed conveying a particular estate is expressed in such terms as appear to be reasonable only on the supposition that the general words of conveyance were not intended to pass the reversion. It is a sufficient indication of intention by the parties. Ib.

A deed was executed, by which it was intended to pass the whole of certain reversionary interest in an estate, but by mistake one share was omitted:—Held, that the intention was so clear that the whole estate must be considered to have passed. Kaupping v. Tomitinon, 18 W. R. 684.

A, assigned "all his ready money, securities | said gateway." The dimensions of the gateway for money," &c., &c., "and all other his personal | as to length, breadth and height, were mentioned estate and effects whatsoever or wheresever, of | in the deel —Held, that the conveyance to W. or belonging or due or owing to him :-Held, that the general words passed only property ejusdem generis with that specified, and that they did not convey a contingent reversionary interest in u legacy. Wright's Trusts, In re, 15 Beav. 367.

- Right of Way. ]-A grant of a right of "ingress, egress and regress is a grant of a right of way from the locus a quo to the locus ad quem, and from the locus ad quem forth to any other spot to which the grantee may lawfully go, or back to the locus a quo. By a deed of conveyance from a railway company of a close of land the grantee was given a right of free ingress, egress and regress, to and from certain private roads which bounded the close and led to the railway station and on to the public highways:-Held, that the grantee was entitled to pass from the close to the private roads, and thence to the public highways, or in the reverse slirection, and was not limited to passing from the close to the railway station or vice versa. Somerset v. G. W. Ry., 46 L. T. 883.

H. and P. were tenants in common of N. and V. estates. By a deed of partition V. was conveyed to H.: and N., "together with all and every their rights, members, easements and appartenances," was conveyed to P., who sold it to B. A right of way had existed for many years leading from V. to N., and had been up to the time of the partition used by H. and P. :-Held, that such right of way did not pass to P. by the general words used in the deed of partition. Worthington v. Gimson, 2 El. & El. 613; 29 L. J., Q. B. 116; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1053.

The plaintiff being the owner in fee of land partly built upon, conveyed to the defendant a dwelling-house, with a coach-house and stable at the back, and a field, together with all ways, waters, easements and advantages whatsoever to the dwelling-house and field belonging or usually enjoyed therewith, with free liberty of ingress, egress and regrees for the defendant with entile and carriages, over the carriage road and footpath leading to the dwelling-honse, coach-honse and stables, in the occupation of N. and the defendant. Previously to the time of this conveyance a private road was used by earringes, eattle, &c., from the turnpike road to the defendant's coach-house, and stable, and field, from which road there was a gate into the field. The defendant afterwards pulled down his coach-house and stable, and built a wall across the private road near their former site (inclosing a portion of the road which had been conveyed to him in fee), and he also opened a gate at the further corner of his field into the private carriage road, which he used instead of the former gate, and drove cattle and carriages along the road into the field and back again :- Held, that the defendant was liable in trespass inasmuch as the grant of all ways to the field belonging or usually enjoyed therewith extended only to the user of the way as it existed at the time of the grant, through the then existing gate, and the express grant was of a right of way to the dwelling-house, coach-house and stable only.

Henning v. Burnet, 8 Ex. 187; 22 L. J., Ex. 79.
By lease and release, executed in 1839. M. and others conveyed to W. a piece of freehold ground. with a messuage thereon, adjoining a covered gateway, "together with the exclusive use of the in the deed :-Held, that the conveyance to W. did not merely confer on W. and his successors in title a right of way through the covered gateway, but enabled them to use the gateway for all purposes. Reilly v. Booth, 44 Ch. D. 12; 62 L. T. 378; 38 W. R. 484—C. A.

Portico passing on Conveyance of House. - The plaintiff purchased two adjoining houses, one of which he had agreed to sell to P. in whose occupation it then was. This house had in front a projecting portion, which, to the extent of between two and three feet, overlapped the adjoining house, so that it extended to some distance beyond the party-wall of the two houses. The door of the house was in the centre of the projection, which formed a portice with a pillar, cornice, string course and pediment, all of which in part overlapped the adjoining house of the plaintiff. P. conveyed his house to the defendant, who painted the front including the whole of the projecting portion. In the conveyance to P., which the owner of the two houses had prepared at the plaintiff's request, the projecting part was not specifically mentioned as being conveyed. The plaintiff brought an action of trespass against the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, inasmuch as either the projecting portion passed by the conveyance to the defendant, or he had an easement in it. Fox v. Clarke, 43 L. J., Q. B. 178; L. R. 9 Q. B. 565; 30 L. T. 646; 22 W. R. 744—Ex. Ch.

- Running Water.]-A conveyance of land passes running water, unless expressly excepted, which is not to be presumed. Canham v. Fish, 2 Cr. & J. 126; 2 Tyrw, 155; 1 L. J., Ex. 61.

Upon the construction of the particular instruments, executed by a corporation to a purchaser : -Held, that by the conveyance of one-fourth "of and in the leat or watercourse," the purchaser acquired no interest in the water, other than such part as remained after supplying the public purposes for which the leat was anthorised to be made. Att.-Gen. v. Plymouth Corporation, 9 Beav. 67; 15 L. J., Ch. 109,

- Moiety of Canal.]—The presumption of law that where a piece of land is conveyed, which is bounded by a public highway or a non-navigable river, the conveyance passes the moiety of the soil of the highway or river, does not apply in the case of a canal. Chamber Calliery Co. v. Rochdule Canal Co., 64 L. J., Q. B. 645; [1895] A. C. 564; 11 R. 264; 73 L. T. 258—H. L. (E.)

- "Yards."]-The parcels in a conveyance were described by reference to coloured parts of a plan. A yard, delineated but not coloured in the plan, was held to pass under the general word "yards." Willis v. Watney, 51 L. J., Ch. 181; 45 L. T. 739; 30 W. 424.

"Machinery belonging to Mill."]-Upon the sale or mortgage of a mill, looms used in the mill, not attached to the freehold, but removable at pleasure :- Held, not to pass under the general words "machinery belonging to mill." Hutchin-son v. Kay, 23 Benv. 413; 26 L. J., Ch. 457; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 652; 5 W. R. 341.

Other Cases. ]-Where A. was entitled for life to the whole of an estate, directed to be sold, and B. (as was supposed) to a moiety in remainder as real estate; but in reality B, was only entitled | to one-fifth, and that as personalty, and A. and B., for securing a sum of money lent to them jointly, but paid into the hands of A., conveyed the "undivided moiety of B." and all the interest of each of them therein, and levied a fine for further assurance :-Held, that A.'s interest in one-fifth only of the property was comprised in the mortgage. Griereson v. Kirsopp, 5 Beav. 983

W. H. was entitled for life to the interest of certain residuary estate, to the principal of which the wife of A. J. was entitled absolutely. W. H. being largely indebted to A. J., executed an indenture, assigning to A. J. all his, W. H.'s. interest in the said residuary estate. It was subsequently discovered that the residuary estate consisted partly of a fund, the existence of which was unknown to either of the parties at the time of the execution of the indenture. W. H. thereupon filed a bill which, not complaining that the indenture had been executed by fraud, sought to exclude from its operation the additional fund by treating the indenture merely as a security for the amount then due from W. H. The Lord Chancellor, however, dismissed the bill, holding that the words of the indenture were sufficient to pass the interest of W. H. in the fund in question, and that no case was made on the pleadings for reforming the instrument. Howkins v. Juckson, 2 Mac. & G. 372; 2 H. & Tw. 301; 19 L. J., Ch. 451.

An assignment of "all and singular the legacies, debts, moneys, estates and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, and of what nature or kind soever, of or to which J. H., in right of his wife or otherwise," was possessed, will not pass a claim of the assignor's wife to dower out of the estates of her former hisband. Brown v. Meredith, 2 Keen, 527; 6 L. J., Ch. 361.

A., and B. his wife, resident abroad, had a life interest in government stock, with a joint power of appointment by deed in favour of their children; and B, was tenant for life of other stock. with remainder to the children of the marriage, The dividends on both sums of stock were transmitted through the banking firm of C. & Co. to A, and B., who had no other account with that firm. In 1830 A. and B. appointed by deed onehalf of the first fund to their eldest son, and the remainder among their younger sons equally, reserving a power of revocation as to the shares of the younger sons. In 1839 and 1843, on the respective marriages of two of the younger sons. A. and B. executed joint instruments (unattested), by which they disposed that the two sons respectively should receive from the survivor of them a capital property of 7,000 dollars, "which stand in the English bank of C. & Co." :- Held. that, in point of construction, the words "which stand in the English bank of C. & Co." described both funds, and that each of the two sons was entitled, under the two latter instruments, to receive only from the fund over which the power of appointment extended so much money as with the share he was entitled to out of the other fund would make up the sum thereby provided for him. Sheffield v. Von Donop, 7 Hare, 42; 17 L. J., Ch. 481 : 12 Jur. 672.

A bond and warrant of attorney executed in Ireland, by a landed proprietor in that country, to receive a sum of ____l. An instrument executed by foreigners in a foreign country must, on a demurrer, be construed according to the obvious import of its terms. unless there are allegations in the bill, that according to the law of the country in which it was executed the true construction of it is different. Spain (King) v. Machado, 4 Russ. 225; 6 L. J. (0.8.) Ch. 61; 28 R. R. 56.

A son, being indebted to his father upon a bond for 1,0007, and interest, subsequently joined his father as surety in a bond for 500l, and interest given by the father to a third person : and a memorandum was then indersed upon the bond for 1,000L, by which it was agreed between the father and the son, that the son should not be called on to pay the within-mentioned principal sum of 1,000% until the father should have paid all principal money and interest due on the bond for 5007, :—Held, that this indorsement did not affect the interest accruing due upon the bond for 1,000/, and therefore that after the deaths of the father and son the personal representative of the father might file a bill against the real and personal representatives. of the son, praying for immediate payment of the interest on the bond for 1,000l., and for payment of the principal when the principal and interest on the bond for 5007, should have been paid. Reed v. Norris, 2 Myl. & C. 361; 6 L. J., Ch. 197; 1 Juy, 233.

A grandfather, in consideration of a bond from the father to grant him an annuity of 501, during his life, enters into a counter bond with the father, conditioned for the payment to the son of a like annuity, in case he was not sufficiently provided for during the life of the grandfather, exclusive of any allowance from his father. The son obtains through some other interest a place in the Ordnance Office, with a salary exceeding the amount of the annuity :- Held, that this was not a sufficient provision within the meaning of the bond, being an office only during pleasure, whereas the provision in the contemplation of the parties must have been of a permanent nature, Peche v. Smith, 3 Mer. 312.

The fact that a bond is payable on demand and that interest is payable from the date of the bond is a circumstance to shew that it is a simple money bond, and not a bond to secure floating balances. Walker v. Hardman, 4 Cl. & F. 258; 11 Bli. (N.s.) 229; 5 L. J. (O.s.) Ch. 39,

2. RECITALS.

Incorrect.]—A man cannot be required to execute a deed containing incorrect recitals. Martley v. Burton, L. R. 3 Ch. 365; 16 W. R. 876.

Effect of.]—Recitals in a deed tendered but not executed were held admissions by the parties on whose behalf the deed was prepared, but capable of being rebutted. Bulley v. Bulley, 44 L. J., Ch. 79; L. R. 9 Ch. 739; 30 L. T. 848; 22 W. R. 779, Recitals in documents are no evidence of what is there recited, though actual possession, in conformity therewith, would constitute a prima facietitle. Bristow v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas. 641 estopped by recitals contained in other deeds through which the title so conveyed is derived. Doe d. Shelton v. Shelton, 4 N. & M. 857; 3 A. & E. 265; 1 H. & W. 287; 4 L. J., K. B.

A recital in a lease, professing it to be made under a leasing power in a will devising an estate tail, does not estop the person accepting the lease from shewing that the estate tail was barred. Blackhall v. Gibson, 2 L. R., Ir. 49.

A deed in the ordinary form of a grant in fee without any recitals does not contain any statement of the grantor's seisin in fee sufficiently precise to create an estoppel, in a case where the grantor had no title at the date of the deed, but subsequently acquired an estate in fee. General Finance, Mortgage and Discount Co. v. Liberator Permanent Building Society, 10 Ch. D. 15; 39 L. T. 600: 27 W. R. 210.

Covenants for title contain no such statement. being merely a bargain by the covenantor to pay damages if he has no such title. Ib.

An obligor sued on a bond reciting a certain consideration, is estopped from pleading that the consideration was different, unless he can make it appear by his pleas that the real transaction was fraudulent or unlawful. Hill v. Manchester and Salford Waterworks Co., 2 B, & Ad, 544.

In 1801, by a deed since lost, after reciting the conveyance to the defendants by Lord Vernou, by a deed poll of even date, of the site of a canal and other premises, in consideration of an annual rent-charge of 105L, to be paid to him "or to the person or persons to whom the freehold or inheritance of the premises thereby released should for the time belong, in case the said instrument or deed poll had not been made"; the defendants covenanted with Lord Vernon "and to and with the said person or persons to whom the freehold or inheritance of the hereditaments and premises hereinbefore recited to be released shall for the time being belong," to pay the said yearly rent-charge in manner as and at the times whereon the same shall become due and pavable ; and a power to distrain for nonpayment of the rent-charge was given, and covenants made by the defendants, to and with persons described, in the same terms as the grantees of the rent-charge. In 1827, by a deed poll reciting the last deed verbatim, and the fact of its loss, and reciting the death of Lord Vernon, and that the "freehold and inheritance of the hereditaments and premises mentioned and described in the said deed poll, or the said rent-charge or yearly sum of 1051," was then vested in the Earl of Jersey, and that the rent-charge had been duly paid to Lord Vernon during his life, and to the Earl of Jersey since his death. The defendants ratified and confirmed the deed poll so executed as aforesaid, and declared that the same should be "good, valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, according to the true intent and meaning thereof notwithstanding the same is lost or mislaid as aforesaid." In an action by the assignce of the rent-charge :- Held, that the terms of the deed of 1801 were explained by the recital contained therein and the recital of the deed of 1827, and that the latter deed, admitting under the defendant's seal that the rent-charge was vested in fee in the Earl of Jersey, estopped the defendants from denying it and formed good evidence of a valid

But a party to a deed of conveyance is not separate deed in 1703, A. declared he was seised of the freehold of lands in trust for B., to whom he had on the same day granted a lease of the same lands for one thousand years, is not evidence of the contents of the deed declaring the trust; neither is the receipt of a Master acknowledging such deed to have been lodged with him evidence of its contents, though it may be in existence.

Kelly v. Power, 2 Ball & B. 236.

On the death of one trustee, the survivor executed a deed reciting that he was desirous of retiring from the trust, and that he had appointed another person to be a trustee in his place, and conveying the trust property to such new trustee :--Held, that the appointment by recital was good. Miller v. Priddon, 18 L. J., Ch. 226.

Where the recital in a deed stated a certain act to have been done by a party who executed the deed, and a defendant who claimed through such party denied by his answer that such act had ever been done; the recital was yet taken to Whatman v, Gibson, 9 Sim. 196; 7 be true. L. J., Ch. 160; 2 Jur. 273.

By a marriage settlement in 1779, lands were conveyed to the use of the husband (the settlor) for life: the remainder to the wife for life; remainder to the children as they or the survivor should appoint; and in default of appointment, to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband; and in default of such issue the lands to stand charged with a sum of 2,000l, to the wife's father, his heirs and assigns. In 1798 the husband and wife by a deed reciting the first deed, that there was no issue of the marriage, and that they intended to bar all the estates and provisions in the former settlement, and to settle the lands to new uses thereby declared, covenanted to levy a fine for that purpose to enure to such uses as they should appoint; and in default of such appointment, to the use of the husband for life ; remainder to trustees for a term of years, remainder to the wife for life, and after the decease of both, to the use of the heirs and assigns of the husband; and as to the term, upon trust to raise 2,000L, and pay the same to the wife, or as she should appoint, and in case of her death without appointment, to her next of kin. The fine did not bar the first charge. On a bill by the representative of the wife's father, who was also one of the next of kin of the wife (after the death of the husband and wife without issue or appointment), to procure both snms of 2,000l. to be raised out of the settled lands :- Held, that not withstanding the recital in the deed of 1798. of the intentions of the parties, the first charge of 2,000l. should be extinguished, and although such charge still remained, yet the trusts of the term for raising the second charge of 2,000%, were not therefore inoperative, but the same must still be carried into execution; and that both sums of 2,000*l*, must therefore be raised. Farr v. Sheriffe, 4 Hare, 512; 15 L. J., Ch. 89; 10 Jur. 630.

A party who by appointing the whole fund equally amongst all the objects of the power had exhausted the power, and afterwards appointed larger shares to some of the objects of the power, and then by a deed poll stated that the first appointment was a mistake, was bound by the statement in the deed poll; and consequently that to the extent of a share in the fund which had become vested in him as next of kin of one grant. Guyn v. Neuth Cunal Co., 37 L. J., Ex. of the deceased appointees, effect must be given 122; L. R. 3 Ex. 20; 18 L. T. 63; 16 W. R. 120; to the latter appointment. Armytage v. Army-A recital in a deed executed in 1739, that by a | tagge 1, Y. x. Coll., C. 461; 6 Jur. 790. ance was in fact a mortgage :- Held. not to the 2,000%, mortgage as against the settlement : of the prior deed, though he entered under the second, inasmuch as he had not executed it. Tull v. Owen, 4 Y. & Coll. 192; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq.

33: 4 Jur. 503.

A young lady a few months after she came of age, and on the eve of her marriage, with her father's concurrence, but without the knowledge of her intended husband, made an absolute assignment of her reversionary interest in a sum of stock to the trustee thereof, by a deed, which recited a contract for sale of such stock to the trustee, and the payment of the purchase-money, and upon this deed was indersed a receipt for the purchase-money, signed by the lady, no purchase-money having been in fact paid :- Held, that the falsehood of the recitals in the deed alone would have been sufficient to prevent the court from supporting it as a security, to the amount of the consideration expressed, for a larger sum due from the lady's father to the trustee for money advanced for her education.

Lewellin v. Cobbold, 17 Jur. 448.

By a deed, dated in 1847, entered into between A. and his son B., and C., after reciting that A. and B. were indebted to C. in 10,000l. advanced by him, and that C, was then liable, as surety on behalf of A. and B., to R. B. and J. T. for a further sum of 3,000l, advanced by them, it was further recited that the deed was executed in favour of C., "as well to give further security for the 10,000%, as to secure him from all sums of money which he might pay, or become liable to pay, in discharge of his liability to R. B. and J. T." At the time the deed was executed it was asserted by C., and understood and believed by A. and B., that C. was under legal liability to repay R. B. and J. T. the 3.000%; whereas, in fact, he was only morally liable to see that their debt was discharged. A., in his examination, stated, that had the real facts been known at the time of the execution of the deed, this debt would have been included therein. In 1849 B. excented a creditor's deed in favour of L., as trustee, for the benefit of the creditors of A, and B. L. filed a bill against C., praying an account of what was due to C. under the deed of 1847; and contesting his right to be allowed the 3,000%; -Held. that C. not being legally liable for the repayment of the 3,000L, the plaintiff was, not withstanding the recital in the deed of 1847, in taking the account entitled to have the 3,000%, disallowed, Luke v. Brutton, 23 L. J., Ch. 294; 18 Jur. 412.

An estate was settled (subject to two mortgages to X, in fee) to the use of A, for life, with remainder in default of A.'s issue, which happened, to the use of B. for life, with remainder to the use of A. in fee. B. was also absolutely entitled to a 2,000% mortgage for a term of 500 years on the fee. By a settlement made in 1876, on C.'s marriage (after reciting the titles of A. and B, subject to the two mortgages to X.), A. and B. "according to their respective estates and interests" conveyed the fee simple " and all the estate, &c.," of the grantors to trustees to hold (subject to the mortgages to X.), to the use of A., B. and C., for successive life estates, with remainder to uses to secure a jointure to C.'s wife, with remainders over. This deed contained no reference to the 2,000l. mortgage. B. afterwards voluntarily transferred the 2,000l. mortgage to

A recital shewing that a prior absolute convey- having died, an action was brought to establish be conclusive on the party claiming the benefit Held, that the 2,0007, mortgage was not within the scope of the settlement. Held, also, that no estoppel as to the mortgage was raised by the settlement, and there was no ground for equitable relief in favour of those claiming under the settlement on account of any representation made by B., or standing by on his part. Williams v. Pinchaey, 67 L. J., Ch. 34—C. A.

A party to a deed is not estopped in equity from averring against, or offering evidence to controvert, a recital therein contrary to the fact. which has been introduced into the deed by mistake of fact, and not through fraud or deception on his part. Brooke v. Haymes, L. R. 6 Eq.

Where, therefore, a deed of release and indemnity to the executor of a testator contained a recital to the effect that out of the testator's residuary estate the executor had retained the sum of 191. 8s., being the amount of the legacy duty on the beanests contained in the will, and in fact the sum so mentioned was only part of such legacy duty :-Held, that the executor, who was afterwards called on to pay the balance of the duty, was not precluded from recovering such. amount from the estates of the residuary legatees. under the covenant for indemnity in the deed.

When a deed recited that the grantor devised to carry out intentions expressed in a draft will, which the intending testator had died without executing, and also professed to recite those testamentary intentions; but the recital of them was in fact erroneous :- Held, that the erroneous recital could not be corrected by reference to the draft will itself. Curter, In m, Ir. R, 3 Eq.

--- Title to Patent.]-A declaration stated that letters-patent had been granted to the defendant for improvements in purifying gas, and that other letters-patent had been granted to the plaintiff for an improved mode of manufacturing gas, and that parts of the plaintiff's invention intended to be secured had been claimed in the specification; that disputes had arisen between the parties as to their rights under the letters-patent to the use of oxides of iron for the purpose of purifying gas; and that, to put an end to such disputes, the parties covenanted by deed with each other for a mutual right of using the patents on the terms of giving notice to use the same. Breach, want of notice. Plea, that the plaintiff's patent was not a good and valid patent, in this, that it was not new, and the plaintiff was not the true and first inventor :-Held, that the intention of the deed was to prevent disputes between the parties, and that the defendant was estopped by the deed from denying the validity of the patent, its novelty, and that the plaintiff was the true and first inventor. Hills v. Luming, 9 Ex. 256; 23 L. J., Ex 60 —— Shares.]—A., by indenture, demised to B. for ten years the dividends to be declared on certain railway shares at a yearly rent, payable half-yearly. In an action by A. against B. upon this deed, the declaration alleged that A. was a member of the company, and as such was possessed of or entitled to certain shares therein : C., who charged it in favour of the plaintiffs, the declaration set out the indenture, and alleged who had no notice of the settlement. A. and B. a breach of covenant to pay the rent. B. pleaded that A., at the time of the making of the inden- recital; and a recital in an instrument not under shares:—Held, that B. was estopped by his deed from so pleading. Brekett v. Brudley, 7 Man. & G. 994 : 8 Scott (N.R.) 843 ; 2 D. & L. 586 ; 14 L. J.,

Consideration, ]—An obligor, sued on a bond reciting a certain consideration, is estopped from pleading that the consideration was different, unless he can make it appear by plea that the real transaction was fraudulent or unlawful. Hill v. Manchester and Salford Waterworks, 2 B, & Ad, 545; 2 N, & M, 573; 1 L. J., K. B. 230, S. P., Horton v. Westminster Improcement Commissioners, 7 Ex. 780; 21 L. J., Ex. 297.

- On whom, -Where a recital in an instrument under seal is intended to be a statement which all the parties to the deed have mutually agreed to admit as true, it is an estoppel upon all, whether they are parties to the deed by executing it, or only by accepting it. But when it is intended to be the statement of one party only, the estoppel, though all have executed the deed, is confined to that party. The intention is to be gathered from constraing the instrument. Stronghill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 781; 19 L. J., Q. B. 209; 14 Jur. 741.

- Partnership Release.]-In trover for paper, it appeared that the plaintiff and the defendant had been in partnership together as paper manufacturers and iron merchants. The partnership was dissolved by a deed which recited that it had been agreed that the business of paper manufacturer should belong exchisively to the defendant, and the business of an iron merchant to the plaintiff, but that the plaintiff should receive out of the stock paper to the value of 8981. 4s. 11d., which should remain in the paper-mill for a year at his option. The deed also recited that, in performance of that arrangement, paper to the value of 898%. 4s. 11d. had been delivered to the plaintiff. and the same was then in the mill, as the plaintiff acknowledged. It was then witnessed that, in performance of the arrangement, the plaintiff and the defendant dissolved partnership, and the plaintiff assigned to the defendant the stock-intrade of the business of a paper manufacturer, except the 8981. 4s. 11d. worth of paper so delivered to the plaintiff as aforesaid; and the defendant assigned to the plaintiff the stock-intrade of the business of iron merchants; there were also mutual releases. No paper whatever was set apart or delivered to the plaintiff, but the jury found that the defendant had converted the whole stock :- Held, that the parties were estopped by the deed to say that no such delivery had taken place. Wiles v. Woodscard, 5 Ex. 557; 20 L. J., Ex. 261.

- Not in Collateral Action. - Recitals in a deed do not operate as an estoppel against a party to the deed in an action not founded on the deed, but collateral to it. Morgan, Exparte, Simpson, In re, 45 L. J., Bk. 36; 2 Ch. D. 72; 34 L. T. 329; 24 W. R. 414.

Where a distinct statement of a particular fact is made in the recital of a bond, or other instrument under seal, and a contract is made with reference to that recital, it is not as between the ture, was not possessed of or entitled to the seal may be such as to be conclusive to the same extent. Carpenter v. Buller, S M. & W. 209; 10 L. J., Ex. 393.

But a party to an instrument is not estopped, in an action by another party not founded on the deed, and wholly collateral to it, to dispute the facts so admitted; but evidence of the circumstances under which such admission was made is receivable to shew that the admission was inconsiderately made, and is not entitled to weight as a proof of the fact it is used to establish. Ib.

Notice by. ]-A general recital in a deed that there are mortgages on the estate :- Held, to affect parties claiming under the deed in the notice of a mortgage not specified therein. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 18; 4 Jur. 1028.

Controlling Effect or Explanation by. Where the words in the operative part of a deed of conveyance are clear and unambiguous, they cannot be controlled by the recitals or other parts of the deed. Walsh v. Treranian, 15 Q. B. 784; 19 L. J.. Q. B. 458; 14 Jur. 1134. S. P., Orr v. Mitchell, [1893] A. C. 238; 1 R. 147— H. L. (Se.). Ingleby v. Swift, 10 Bing. 84; 3 M. & Sc. 489; 2 L. J., C. P. 261.

But where those words are of doubtful meaning, the recitals or other parts of the deed may be used as a test to discover the intention of the parties, and to fix the meaning of those words. Ib.

The rule that recitals may control general words is applicable to all deeds, and not only to releases. Jenner v. Jenner, 35 L. J., Ch. 329; L. R. 1 Eq. 361; 12 Jn. (N.S.) 138; 14 W. R. 305. S. P., Childers v. Eardley, 28 Beav. 648.

In the construction of a deed, regard must be had to all its parts, and general words are to be restrained by a particular recital contained therein; and if a deed operates two ways, the one consistent with the intent of the party, and the other repugnant to it, the courts will put such a construction on it as will give effect to such intent, which is to be derived from the whole of the instrument. Solly v. Forbes, 4 Moore, 448; 2 Br. & B. 88; 22 R. R. 641. S. P., Currey v. Armitage, 6 W. R. 516.

Where the recital and the operative part of a deed are at variance, the latter must be acted on until the deed has been reformed. In a suit to reform the instrument, the court would be enabled, from the circumstances, to judge which was erroncous. Hammond v. Hammond, 19 Beav, 29.

A covenant in a deed, if ambiguous, will be controlled by the recitals. Selby v. Crystal Paluce Gas Co., 30 Benv. 606.

A marriage settlement contained a recital that the land intended to be dealt with was subject to a certain charge, and to a term of 1,500 years. The operative part of the deed referred to a schedule, in which certain lands situate in four townships in the county of Durham, and subject to this charge, were particularly described. The operative part also contained general words referring to all other lands belonging to the settlor in these townships. The settlor, at the time of the settlement, was entitled to other lands in two of these townships of about the same value as the scheduled property, but subject to a different set of charges to those mentioned in the recitals :parties to the instrument, and in an action upon Held, that these last lands did not pass by the it, competent to the party bound to deny the deed, and that the operation of the generawords was confined to the lands which were to property over which he had no power, and in subject to the charges mentioned in the recitals. Durham (Earl), In re. Grey (Earl) v. Durham

(Earl), 57 L. T. 164.

The operative part of a power of attorney appointed X, and Y, to be the attorneys of the plaintiff without in terms limiting the duration of their powers, but it was preceded by a recital that the plaintiff was going abroad, and was desirous of appointing attorneys to act for him during his absence :- Held, that the recital controlled the generality of the operative part of the instrument, and limited the exercise of the powers of the attorneys to the period of the plautiffs absence from this country. Dauby v. Conts. 54 L. J., Ch. 577; 29 Ch. D. 500; 52 L. T. 401; 33 W. R. 559.

The recitals in a deed are a key to the construction, where the operative part is doubtfully expressed, and not otherwise. Baily v. Lloyd, 5 Russ, 330; 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 98; 29 R. R. 30.

Where they are inconsistent, the operative part of a deed prevails over the recitals; but where the operative part is ambiguous, the recitals may be resorted to, to explain the ambiguity. Young v. Smith, 35 Beav. 87.

Where A., in a conveyance to uses, settled an estate for life on himself, remainder in tail to his issue, with an ultimate limitation to the heirs of S. R. in fee, and at the time of the settlement A. was himself the right heir of S. R. :-Held, that this ultimate limitation was void, and that the estate, after the death of A. without issue, deseended on his heirs general; and that it was not competent to go into the intention of the settlor, apparent from the recital, in order to explain the words of this limitation, they being words of plain and well-known import. mondeley (Marquis) v. Clinton, 2 B. & Ald. 625; 21 R. R. 419.

By a marriage settlement, after a recital that on the treaty for the marriage it was agreed that all real and personal property which during the coverture should devolve upon or vest in the wife or the husband in her right, to the value of 2001. at any one time, should be settled upon the trusts thereinafter declared, it was witnessed that it was thereby agreed and declared between and by the parties thereto, and the husband thereby covenanted with the trustees, that if at any time during the coverture any real or personal estate should devolve on or vest in the wife, or the husband in her right, to the amount in value of 200l, at any one time, the husband would make, do and execute, or cause and procure to be made, done and executed, and join and concur in making, doing and executing all such conveyances, &c., as would effectually vest such real and personal estate in the trustees upon the trusts therein declared. After the marriage, a deed was executed by the wife's mother, under which, during the coverture, a sum exceeding 2001. became payable to the wife for her separate use :- Held, by Fry, J., that this sum was within the covenant, and must be settled. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that as the operative part of the deed was clear, the recital could not control it-that as the operative part of the deed only related to acts to be done by the husband, the agreement and declaration between and by the parties that those acts should be done did not import a covenant by any other party that they should be done, and that there was, therefore, no covenant by anyone but the husband-that the covenant by him could not be held to relate which he had no interest-and that the wife, therefore, was not bound to bring into settlement property given to her separate use. Tredwell, 18 Ch. D. 354; 45 L. T. 118; 29 W. R. 793-C. A.

A marriage settlement recited an agreement to convey a certain estate, save and except the lands of Ballyhenry, and its sub-denominations; but the operative part of the deed purported to convey by name, as a separate denomination, the lands of Kilahan, which it was proved were reputed a sub-denomination of Ballyhenry :-Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of mistake to justify the court in striking Kilahan out of the settlement. Alexander v. Crosbie, 145 Ll. & G. t. Sngd.

Held, that the recital of an agreement to mortgage a "freehold estate at A., subject to the charge affecting the same," did not restrict the operative part of a deed, which in its terms included other freehold estate not subject to any charge, and also copyhold, there being also other memoranda shewing an intention to give a general charge. An assignment of one equal eighth part or share, or other part or share, parts or shares, to which the assignor became cutitled :- Held, upon the construction of the recitals and of the whole instrument, to pass only one-eighth, although the assignor was entitled to a larger share. Gray v. Limerich (Eurl), 2 De G. & Sm. 370; 17 L. J., Ch. 443; 12 Jur. 817.

The plain effect of the operative part of a deed cannot be cut down by the recitals. Holliday v. Overton, 14 Beav. 467; 21 L. J., Ch. 769;

16 Jur. 346.

A trustee for a banking company had vested in him, as such trustee, property held by the bank as security for moneys advanced, and also property belonging to the bank absolutely. The trustee, upon retiring from the trusts, executed a deed, which contained recitals shewing an intention to pass to new trustees for the bank the property vested in him by way of seemrity only. There was also a recital of a request by the bank to transfer the property generally vested in the trustee. At the time the deed was executed, it was not present to the minds of the parties that there was any property vested in the trustee other than the securities :- Held, that leaseholds of great value, which were the absolute property of the bank, did not pass, Hopkinson v. Lusk, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 288; 10 L. T. 122; 12 W. R. 392.

The same rule of construction applies whether a deed of conveyance is for value or of trust property only. 1b,

In 1844 A. agreed to give a security for the debt then due, or which might thereafter become due to him, from a company. This was carried into effect by a deed in 1845, which, after reciting the agreement, assigned all sums claimed to be due, and which he might thereafter recover :- Held, that the deed passed all sums due at its date, but nothing subsequent. Scott v. Scott, 24 Beav. 263.

Release. - General words in a release are to be limited and restrained by the particular words in the recitals. Bayes & Bluck, In re, 13 C. B. 563; 22 L. J., C. P. 173. Stanchewer v. Farrer, 14 L. J., Q. B. 122. The defendant having given the plaintiff a would withdraw an execution from the premises of the former, the plaintiff executed a general release of all suits, which, after reciting the agreement to withdraw the execution, &c., proceeded to state, "that in pursuance of the agreement, and in consideration of the said sum of 401. being now so paid, as hereinbefore is mentioned. &c." :- Held, in an action on a promissory note which had been dishonoured, that the release was no bar to the suit, as the general words were qualified by the recital, which stated only an agreement to pay, and not an actual payment of the 401. Lampon v. Corke, 5 B. & Ald. 606; 1 D. & R. 211; 24 R. R. 488,

In an action on a covenant by S. against J. and another, a release was pleaded, which began by reciting "that various disputes were subsisting between S. and J., and actions had been brought by them against each other, which were still depending, and that it had been agreed between them that, in order to put an end thereto, J. should pay S. 150l., and each should execute a release to the other of all actions, causes of action, and claims brought by him, or which he had against the other"; and then proceeded in the usual general words to release all actions, &c. whatsoever :- Held, that the effect of the general words was confined by the recitals to actions then commenced, and in which S, was the party on one side, and J. on the other, and that it could not be pleaded to an action brought by S, against J. and others jointly; and that parol evidence P. (N.R.) 113. was admissible to shew that, at the time of exeenting the release, there were mutual actions depending between S. and J. for other canses than that of the present suit, and for such causes only. Simons v. Johnson, 3 B. & Ad. 175; 1 L. J., K. B. 98.

A release, though unlimited in its terms, held, from the recitals and context, to operate only as to a particular sum mentioned in the recitals. Lindo v. Lindo, 1 Benv. 496; 8 L. J., Ch. 284.

A release contained in a deed, which recited that the defendant stood indebted to his creditors in the several sums set to their respective names, and that they had agreed to take from the defendant 15s, in the pound upon the whole of their respective debts, whereby the creditors, in consideration of 15s. in the pound paid to them before executing the release, each and every of them did release the defendant from all manner of actions, debts, claims, and demands in law and equity, which they or any or either had against him, or thereafter could, should, or might have, by reason of anything, from the beginning of the world to the date of the release, was held to release nothing but the respective debts, and all actions and demands touching them; for the general words of release have reference to the particular recital, and shall be governed by it. Payler v. Homersham, 4 M. & S. 423; 16 R. R. 516.

Therefore, where to an action by the plaintiffs on the defendant's bond, the defendant pleaded this release:-Held, that the plaintiffs, in their replication, might plend that the bond was given by the defendant, with others, as a security for the repayment of bills drawn upon them by the defendant, and for moneys advanced to him, and that the sum set against their names in the release was due to them from the defendant on the day of the release on his own account, and the promissory note for 40L in consideration that he; the release, were not, nor was any part included or meant by them or by the defendant to be included in the sum set against their names or in the release. Ib.

A., the mother of B., having entered into a bond on his behalf for 1,000L. B. executed an indemnity bond of the same date, viz. 26th April, 1800, in the sum of 2,000l, conditioned for the payment of 1,000l. three months after her decease. On the 9th February, 1801, A. made a codicil to her will, by which she relinquished two debts due from him, one of 1,000l, and one of 500l, and desired him to be punctual in indemnifying her estate against the 1,000%, bond of the 26th April. Three days after the execution of this codicil, A. executed a release to B., which, after mentioning a snm of 500l., for which she had his bond, and two sums of 480l, and 300l, due to her from B., for which she had receipts, expressed that she had agreed to release B. from those sums "and of and from all or any other sum or sums of money, claims and demands thereby secured or intended to be seenred, and all other snm or snms of money, claim, and demand what-soever"; and released him accordingly from those sums, and all claim on account of those sums, "or for or on account of any other matter, canse, or thing whatsoever":—Held, first, that this release did not extend to the indemnity bond; and, secondly, that no intrinsic evidence could be admitted to explain the intentions of A. as to the release. Butcher v. Butcher, I Bos. & — Covenant.]—A marriage settlement recited an agreement that the future property of the wife should be settled, but the covenant to settle was on the part of the husband alone, to execute all necessary deeds, as that such property should (so far as he was concerned) be vested in the trustees, on the trusts of the settlement :- Held, that property afterwards given to the separate use of the wife was not liable to be settled. Hammond v. Hummond, 19 Beav. 29,

By the marriage settlement of O., dated in 1821, a sum of money was settled upon the children of the marriage as O, should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment, to be divided among all the children at twenty-one equally. By his will, O. did not validly appoint the fund, but he gave certain legacies to his children, of whom A. was one, at twenty-one. By the marriage settlement of A., dated in 1851 (she being then an infant), after reciting that A, was entitled to certain sums and to other interests, and that it had been agreed that the intended husband should covenant to assign to trustees all the property which, "under the will or otherwise of the said O.," A. might become entitled to, the husband covenanted to assign to trustees all the property which, "under the will or otherwise of the said O., or otherwise howsoever," A, might become entitled to. A, attained twenty-one, and a share of the unappointed fund, under the settlement of 1821, becoming therefore payable to her .—Held, as between the trustees of the settlement of 1851 and the husband moneys intended to be seenred by the bond, although part was due at the time of executing Trust, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1069. The words in the operative part being clearly sufficient to include the interest which A, took in the unappointed fund, the court refused to cut them down by reference to ambiguous words in a recital which did not clearly include such interest. Ib.

Where the operative part (which was not by way of present conveyance, but by way of covenant) appeared to be intended to follow, but did not accurately follow, the words of a recital, the effect of the operative part will be limited to the extent pointed out by the recital. Noul's Trusts, Lu r. 4 Jur. (X.S.) 6.

A marriage settlement resited the treaty to be, to settle all property which may come to the wife from H. by will, or codied or codieds, or otherwise. The instand subsequently corenanted to settle all property which thereafter might come to the wife by any will or codied or codicids of H. or otherwise:—Held, that a gift to the wife by the will of one of the trustees of this marriage settlement (not being H.) was not bound by this covenant; and that the covenant only bound the husband to settle sneh property as should be derived by the wife from H. Ih.

will, purported to devise a farm, consisting partly of freeholds and partly of copyholds, to a trastee upon trust to sell and divide the proceeds amongst five persons, of whom the plaintiff was one. The plaintiff came of age in 1867, and shortly afterwards sold her one-fifth share under the will to her nucle, and executed a deed conveying to him her one-fifth share and "all other the estates, shares, parts, and interests" of her in the farm; and her uncle mortgaged the farm (other shares in which he took under the will) to a loan company. Subsequently, the nucle by chance discovered an old disentailing deed, dated in October, 1841, from the non-enrolment of which his solicitors inferred that the plaintiff was really entitled to an estate tail in all the freehold parts of the farm. Thereupon he cansed a draft deed to be prepared (to which he and the loan company were parties), for execution by the plaintiff in order to bar the entail. This draft deed recited that in 1746 R. devised all his freehold and copyhold hereditaments to his daughter in tail; that in 1840 his grandson B. became entitled to those hereditaments as tenant in tail, and that in 1841 he barred the estate tail in the copyholds, and executed a deed dated October, 1841, which purported to bar the estate tail in the freeholds, but that that deed was never enrolled, and that, therefore, the estate tail in the freeholds had never been barred. plaintiff refused to execute the proposed deed, and relying upon the admissions contained in the recitals, but having no other evidence that the freeholds comprised in the deed of October, 1841, and purporting to be devised by B. in 1851, belonged to R. at the date of his will, though she had evidence that he was seised of the copyholds of that date, filed a bill against her uncle and the loan company, praying that the conveyance by her to her uncle, and the mortgage by him to the loan company, might be declared void as against her, and that she might be declared to be entitled to the freeholds as tenant in tail :- Held, that the suit being in the nature of an equitable ejectment, the strictest proof must be given that R. was seised of all the freehold parts of the farm at the date of his will in 1746; that although the admissions contained in the recitals of the proposed deed were admisshle as evidence, pet they were not conclusive, as they were not admissions of facts within the knowledge of the defendants, and the court would examine the facts on which those admissions were beard and determine for itself what weight ought to be attached to the admissions: that the deed of Oerober, 1941, lift not justify the inference that R. was seised of the freeholds comprised in it at the date of his will, but that on the contrary the omission to enrol that deed rather led to the inference that the freeholds were affered with finite more than the freeholds were affered with finite more than the freeholds were affered with finite more to have passed by his will, nor to be subject to the entail, and that, will nor to be subject to the entail, and that, therefore, the appeal must be dissussed with costs. Bulley, Bulley, 44 L. J., Ch. 79; L. R. 9 Ch. 30; 30 L. T. 848; 22 W. R. 779.

A mortgagor, with two sureties, entered into a bond to the mortgagee, the condition of which, after reciting that the mortgagor was seised in tail of premises of which he had covenanted to suffer a recovery, to come to the use of the mortgagor in fee, subject to the proviso for redemption, was, that the bond should be void if the recovery should be suffered, so and in such manner, as that under and by virtue thereof, and of the mortgage deed, the premises should be vested in the plaintiff in fee, according to the true intent and meaning of the mortgage deed, subject only to the proviso for redemption. recitals in the mortgage deed stated a seisin in fee by the mortgagor's maternal grandfather in 1795. A deed of settlement and fine in 1795, by his daughter and devisee and her husband to themselves for their lives, with power of appointment by the former, which she, in 1809, executed by a devise to her son, the mortgagor, for life, and his sons in tail; and also a conveyance after the wife's death of the husband's life estate to the mortgagor, were proved. In an action on the bond against a surety :- Held, that these recitals. were sufficient evidence that the maternal grandfather of the mortgagor had seisin, and that the possession had followed the limitations and power of the deed of 1795. Edwards v. Brown, Tyrw. 182: 1 C. & J. 307; 3 Y. & J. 423; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 84.

As Asknowledgment of Debt.]—By the acknowledgment of a debt in a deed under sal, a covenant to pay will not be implied where the acknowledgment is merely colluteral to the purpose for which the deed was executed. Jackson v. North Eindern Rep. 47 L. J., Ch. 903; 7 Ch. D. 573; 57 L. T. 64; 26 W. R. 513.

Where a deed on the sale of certain inventions and patents contained a recital that the purchase-money had been paid, it being held that no express covenant was contained therein for payment :—Held, further, that in the face of such acknowledgment it was impossible to imply such a covenant, and that on partial evidence. Mongan's Patent Jachor Co. v. Morgon, 35 L. T.

A conveyance, after reciting that it had been agreed that 1.400L, part of the purchase-money, should be paid to a mortgage of the premises, and that the residue of the purchase-money, and the state of the the vendor, witnessed that, in consideration of the 1.400L, poid to the mortgage at or before the scaling and delivery of the deed, the receipt whereof the mortgage acknowledged, and from the mortgage money and every part thereof acquitted and dischanged the vendor and purchaser; and also in consideration of the 460l. paid to the vender as before mentioned, the receipt whereof, and also the payment of the mortgage-money, making in the whole 1,860l., the vendor thereby acknowledged, and from the sume and every part thereof acquirted, released, and discharged the purchaser:—Held, to be no estopped upon the vendor, the release by the words "as before mentioned." xc., referring to, and being qualified by the recital, which stated an agreement to pay the 400l., and not an actual payment. Botteell v. Summers, 2 Y. & J. 407; 3l R. R. 613.

A recital of the existence of a debt may amount, by reference to the context, to an implied contract to pay; but does not, of itself, necessarily imply such a contract. Treas v. Where a deed executed by A. and B. recited that A. was indebted to B. in various sums, the amount of which was not yet ascertained, and a balance not yet struck, and that A. was willing to pay B. the amount which might appear to be due to B. in respect of such sums, such amount to be ascertained and paid as thereinafter mentioned, and the deed afterwards provided for taking the accounts by the arbitration of two persons named in the deed :- Held, that notwithstanding the clause as to arbitration, the recitals amounted to an absolute promise to pay the amount when ascertained, and that when coupled with extrinsic parol evidence as to the amount they were sufficient consistently with the statute 9 Geo. 4, c, 14, to take the debt out of the Statute of Limitations. Cheslyn v. Dalby, 4 Y. & Coll. 238.

— Reference to another Instrument.]—An obligor of a bond couldifunct for the symment of rent, at the rate of 170L a year, "according to an indenture of lense," is estopped from saving that the rent reserved by the Indenture was 140L a year. If a bond in its recital refers to a bill of exchange as the principal security, the bond may be construed to be only a collateral security, atthough it is a specialty, and of a higher nature than the bill, which is only a simple contract debt. Hank of Lepland v. Beresford, 6 Dow, 234; 19 Ir. E. 50.

A deed of indemnity recited, that by a former deed the plaintiff land become trustee to a company, and incurred certain liabilities:—Held, first, that in an action on the deed of indemnity to recover money paid to a creditor of the company, it was incumbent on the plaintiff to produce the former deed, to shew that he became liable as trustee: secondly, that such deed, when produced, could not be received in evidence without proof of its execution; thirdly, that no more of the former deed was proved by the recital in the latter than was actually stated in that recital. Gillett v. Abbatt, 3 N. & P. 24; 1 W. W. & H. 8; 7 A. & E. 783; 7 L. J., Q. B. 61; 2 Jur. 300.

Restraining Liability.]—A covenant of indemnity, unlike a release, is not to be restricted by its rectals. Buker. In rv. Chillias v. Rhodes, Seuman. In rc, Rhodes v. Wish, 51 L. J., Ch. 315; 20 Ch. D. 230; 45 L. T. 658; 30 W. R. 858— C. A. The extent of the condition of an indemnity bend may be restrained by the recitals, though the words of the condition import a larger liability than the recitals contemplate. Pearsull v. Summerstt, 4 Tant. 593.

The recital in the condition of an indemnity bond, professing to state the agreement between the parties, does not confine the responsibility of the spreties to the limits therein specified.

Sunson v. Bell, 2 Camp. 39.

The condition of a bond recirci that the defendant had agreed with the plaintiffs to collect their revenues from "time to time for tweether mouths", and afterwayds stipulated, that "at all times thereafter during the continuance of such his employment, and for so long as he should continue to be employed," he would justly account and obey orders:—Held, that the obligation was conflued to the period of twelve mouths mentioned in the recital. Literpool Watercowles v. Alkinson, 6 Bast, 307; 2 Smith, 634.

A bond taken in the penal sum of 1,000*l*, cannot be reduced to 500*l*, by a recital in the condition that the parties had agreed to execute a bond in the sum of 500*l*. Ingleby v, Swift, 10 Bing, 84; 4 M, & Sc, 488; 2 L, J, C, F.

The condition of a bond, executed by the principal and two sureties in the penal sum of 1,000l., contained a recital that the obligor had taken a farm of the obligee, subject to the payment of rent reserved in a lease of even date with the bond, and that it had also been agreed by the obligor and the obligee, that the obligor should enter into a bond with two sureties in the penalty of 500l, for the due payment of the rent. Rent having been found by a jury to be due to the amount of 740l., the court refused to reduce the verdict to 500%, to which only it was contended the sureties could be liable by virtue of the recital in the condition. Ingleby v. Mousley, 3 M. & Sc. 488.

A, as surety, executed a bond, the condition of which recited an agreement between the directors of an Indian railway company and P., whereby it was agreed that P. should forthwith proceed to such place in the East Indies, at such time, and by such conveyance, as the company should direct, and should there serve the company as engineer at a certain salary per month, to commence from the day of his embarkation at Southampton. The condition was in terms of the recited agreement, but mentioned no place of embarkation. The company paid for the passage of P. to India, on board a vessel about to leave Southamuton: but the bond not having been executed in sufficient time to enable him to go by that vessel, he was directed by the company to go by way of Marseilles, and so meet the vessel. He embarked at Dover, but never reached Marseilles, and in a short time returned to this country :- Held, that the condition of the boud was not restrained by the recital, and consequently that the surety was ilable, notwithstanding the principal did not embark at Southampton. Supplying Omission.]—The omission of the word "pounds" may be supplied in a bond acknowledged "in the sum of 7,700l, of lawful money of Great Britain," conditioned for the payment of several sums denominated as pounds shillings and pence, although the sums secured respecting the number of perches was immaterial, amount to more than the half of 7,700l. Coles v. Hulme, 3 Man. & R. 86; 8 B. & C. 568; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 29; 32 R. R. 486.

Parcel Omitted by Mistake.]—A deed was executed, by which it was intended to pass the whole of certain reversionary interests in an estate, but by mistake one share was omitted:-Held, that the intention was so clear that the whole estate must be considered to have passed. Knapping v. Tomlinson, 18 W. R. 684.

A mistake in a deed in a statement of the then occupier of premises will not vitiate, if the description of parcels is the same as in a former conveyance of the same premises, and the intention to pass the same property is clear. Wilkinson v. Malin, 2 Tyrw. 544; 2 C. & J. 636; 1 L. J., Ex. 234.

A deed conveyed a piece of land, founing part of a close, by reference to a schedule attacked to it, which described the land in a column headed "Number on the plan of the Briton Ferry Estate," as No. 138 b.; and in another column, headed "Description of the as "a small piece marked on the premises," premises, as a smar piece market on the plan "; and in a third column, as in the occupa-tion of J. E.; and in a fourth column, headed "Perches," as 34. This plan was drawn to scale, but upon measurement of the land, was found to be incorrect; a line was drawn across the close 153 b, which contained less than 34 perches according to the measurement on the plan, and only 27 perches according to the actual measurement of the land :-Held, that the prior portion of the description being sufficient, the statement greater part, but not all, of the closes whereof and that the purchaser was not entitled to 34 perches, according to the measurement on the map, or according to the measurement of the land, but only to the portion of the close actually marked off on the map as ascertained by the scale. By Reference to Boundaries.]-By a demise of land situate at A., and now in the occupation of S., lying within certain boundaries, land within the boundaries passes, though not in the occupation of S. Doe d. Smith v. Galloway, 2 N. & M. 240; 5 B. & Ad. 43; 2 L. J., K. B. 182.

If a deed correctly describes land by its quantities and occupiers, though it describes it as being in a parish in which it is not, the land will pass by the deed. Lambe v. Reuston, 5 Taunt. 207; 1 Marsh. 25.

"More or Less,"]-A conveyance described the land as containing the dimensions shewn and delineated on a plan in the margin "be the same a little more or less," and purported to convey it as it was then held and enjoyed by the vendor. The plan specified the dimensions in feet and inches, and the measurement corresponded with the actual measurement to a few inches :-Held, that the description could not be controlled or affected by the fact that six feet of the part of the passage purporting to be conveyed was also included in the subsequent conveyance to the plaintiff, and had been treated as part of No. 1, by being covered in and included in the curtilage, Dodd v. Burchall, 1 H. & C. 113; 31 L. J., Ex. 364; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1180.

Strips of land lying along a highway, even though indirectly connected with parts of a waste, may well pass under a conveyance of the adjacent inclosure, though the deed purports to state the quantity of acres, within the fences, that were therein passed, if the words "more or less" were added. Dendy v. Simpson, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1058; 9 W. R. 743—Ex. Ch. Affirming,

C. B. (N.S.) 433.

By Reference to Occupation. ]-Under a lease of "all that messuage or tenement called, &c., now or late in the occupation of C.," the boundaries given not accurately defining the premises, a gateway under a portion of the messuage, and leading to a yard behind, in which were some small houses not included in the demise, the tenants of which had always used the gateway, does not pass, in the absence of evidence to show that it has been in the exclusive occupation of C. Dyne v. Nutley, 14 C. B. 122; 2 C. L. R. 81.

A shop, over which there was a leaden roof, was demised to M., under the description of " the same was late in the occupation of C." During that occupation another tenant of the same landlord had a right to use the leaden roof :-Held, that these words were merely used for the identification, and did not limit the rights of M. to the absolute originment of the leaden roof. Martyr v. Lauvence, 10 Jur. (N.s.) 858; 10 L. T. 677; 12 W. R. 1043.

A conveyance by deed of all that messuage, with the lands, &c., belonging, late in the occu-pation of B., and which house, lands, &c., are called by the names following (naming the 313.

Two adjoining plots of ground, A. and B., were let on building leases to separate tenants. On plot A. a house and stables were built, and on plot B, a house, the stables being situate between the two houses. The leases of both premises having become vested in P., he, in 1795, blocked up the communication between the stables and A., and attached them to B., with which premises they continued to be occupied. P. then made an assignment of the lease of A., excepting the stables, but including cellars under them. In 1823, the owner of the reversion in both premises granted to the defendant, in whom P.'s estate in the massigned premises was vested, a reversionary lease of B. by a description and plan corresponding both in measurement and boundaries with the original lease, but with the addition among the general words of the following, "with all stables . . . to the premises belonging or appertaining," and with a covenant to surrender at the end of the term "the racks, mangers, &c., affixed, or belonging to the premises," there being no such words in the corresponding covenant of the original lease. There were no other stables belonging to, or occupied with B.:—Held, that the stables did not pass under the lease of 1823. Maitland v. Mackinnon, 1 H. & C. 607; 32 L. J., Ex. 49; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 255; 7 L. T. 427; 11 W. R. 237.

A conveyance of a house, mill, and lands, called Clock Mills, and "all lands, &c., belonging, used, occupied and enjoyed, or deemed taken or accepted as part thereof, &c.," will pass leasehold lands which have been occupied with, and are reputed part of Clock Mills, as well as freehold, especially against the conveying party. Doe d. Davies v. Williams, 1 H. Bl. 25; 2 R. R. 703.

A specific description by abottments shall prevail, and parcels shall not be limited by an maccurate description of the occupation. Doe d. Smith v. Galloway, 5 B. & Ad. 43; 2 & M. 240; 2 L. J., K. B. 182.

Where the words of a second deed are sufficient to pass the whole of the property conveyed by a former deed, and the intention to do so is clear, a mistake in describing the occupation will not vitiate. Wilkinson v. Malin, 2 C. & J. 636; 2 Tyrw. 544; 1 L. J., Ex. 234.

Soil of Highway.]-Where piece of land which adjoins a highway is conveyed by general words, the presumption of law is that the soil of the highway usque ad medium filum passes by the conveyance, even though reference is made to a plan annexed, the measurement and colouring of which would exclude it. Berridge v. Ward, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 400; 30 L. J., C. P. 218; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 876.

The plaintiff granted to the defendant two pieces of land separated by, and each described as abutting on, a strip of land called a street, which the plaintiff intended to dedicate as a highway, but which was, in fact, never so dedicated. For more than twenty years before action the defendant used this piece of land for the purposes of his business in such a way as to make it impassable, save for foot passengers. Within twenty years both the plaintiff and the defendant had repaired some railings which separated this intended street from an adjoining highway; and within the same period the bed was intended to pass or not. M. was at the

B.'s farm consisted), passes the closes expressly defendant had first inclosed a small portion of named only, and not the residue also. Griffills the street, and then fenced it in at each end, v. Pennon, 9 Jun. (x.8) 885; 8 L. T. 84; 11 W. R. Where it abuntted on two highways. In an action to recover possession of the land :-Held (affirming the decision of the Exchequer Division), that the presumption that the soil to the middle of a highway belongs to the owner of the adjoining inclosed land, does not apply where such land abuts on an intended highway which has not at the time of the conveyance been dedicated to the public. Leigh v. Jack, 49 L. J., Ex. 220; 5 Ex. D. 246 : 28 W. R. 452.

Held, also, that the plaintiff had not been dispossessed by the defendant, nor had he discontinued possession within the meaning of s. 3of the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Where a deed of conveyance of land contiguous to a highway described the parcels, giving the acreage to the thousandth part of an acre, by reference to an Ordnance map and to a schedule and plan drawn on the conveyance, the measurements and corresponding numbers and colouring of which did not include any portion of the highway, and further contained a recital that the trees on the land to be sold had been valued, and the amount of the valuation-which, in fact, did not include any of the trees upon the highway-formed part of the purchase-money : -Held, that the presumption of law that a micity of the highway passed by the conveyance-was rebutted. Berridge v. Ward (10 C. B. (N.S.)-400 distinguished. Pryor v. Petre, 63 L. J., Ch. 531; [1894] 2 Ch. 11; 7 R. 424; 70 L. T. 331; 42 W. R. 435—C. A.

Soil of Common.]—Under a conveyance by the lord of the manor of P. of "all those messuages, lauds, tenements, commons, wastes, woods, underwoods, and the soil of the wood and underwoods of P.," without any reservation of manorial rights, the soil of the common of P. passes. Cutor v. Croydon Cunal Co., 4 Y. & Coll. 405.

Bed of River ad medium filum, 1-Though the presumption that a grant of land described as bounded by an inland river passes the adjoining half of the bed of the river may be rebutted by circumstances which shew that the parties. must have intended it not to pass, it will not be rebutted because subsequent circumstances, not contemplated at the time of the grant, shew it to have been very disadvantageous to the grantor to have parted with the half bed, and if contemplated would probably have induced him toreserve it; nor is the presumption excluded by the fact that the grantor was owner of both banks of the river. Micklethwait v. Newlay Bridge Co., 33 Ch. D. 133; 55 L. T. 336; 51 J. P. 132-C. A.

M., being entitled to lands on both sides of a river, sold and conveyed to L. a piece of land, the dimensions of which were minutely given in the conveyance, and which was therein stated to contain 7,752 square yards, and to be bounded on the north by the river, and to be delineated on the plan drawn on the deed, and thereon coloured pink. The dimensions and colouring extended only up to the southern edge of the river, and if half the bed had been included, the area would have been 10,031 square yards, instead of 7,752. The deed contained various reservations for the benefit of M., but contained nothing express to shew whether the half of the time owner of a private bridge close by, from which he received tolls. Thirty years afterwards a bridge was projected to cross the river from L.'s land. The plaintiffs, who had succeeded to all M.'s property in the neighbourhood, brought their action to restrain the making the new bridge. If the grant to L passed half the bed, no part of the new bridge would be over land of the plaintiffs:—Held, that the presumption that the grant included half the bed was not rebutted, and that an injunction could not be granted on the ground that the erection of the bridge would be a trespass. Ib.

The presumption that, by a conveyance describing the land thereby conveyed as bounded by a river, it is intended that the bed of the river, usque ad medium filum, should pass, may be rebutted by proof of surrounding circumstances in relation to the property in question which negative the possibility of such having been the intention. The owners of a manor by conveyances made respectively in 1767 and 1846 granted to purchasers pieces of riparian land fronting a river, the bed of which formed parcel of the manor. It was proved that, prior to the carliest of the conveyances, a fishery in the river fronting the lands conveyed had for a very long time back been from time to time let to tenants by the lords of the manor as a separate tenement, distinct from the riparian closes; and that at the date of the conveyances in 1846 such fishery was actually under lease to tenants. The grantees under the before-mentioned conveyances, and their successors in title, had, until the acts complained of in the action, never claimed or exercised any right of fishing over the bed of the river by virtue of any right of soil or otherwise, but the owners of the manor, or their tenants of the fishery, had always fished without interruption:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the conveyances ought not to be construed as passing any portion of the bed of the river to the grantees. Deconshire (Duke) v. Pattinson, 57 L. J., Q. B. 189; 20 Q. B. D. 263; 58 L. T. 392; 52 J. P. 276—C. A.

The general law of conveyancing-that, where a riparian owner, who is also owner of the soil under the river ad medium filum, makes a grant of his land on the banks of the river, the soil ad medium filum passes by the grant—applies to land of any tenure, whether freehold, copyhold, or leasehold. Tilbury v. Silva, 45 Ch. D. 98;

62 L. T. 254.

The presumption that a conveyance of land adjoining a river passes the bed ad medium filum without special mention does not apply unless the bed is in the disposition of the grantor. so that it would pass if expressly mentioned. The presumption is rebutted by proof of the existence of a several fishery in a person other than the grantor. It is doubtful whether the presumption applies at all to an inclosure award required by an inclosure act to contain an exact quantitative description of the allotments made. Ecroyd v. Coulthard, 66 L. J., Ch. 751; [1897] 2 Ch. 554; 77 L. T. 357; 46 W. R. 119; 61 J. P. 791.

Conveyance of "Exclusive Use of Gateway."-By lease and release, executed in 1839, M. and others conveyed to W. a piece of freehold ground, others conveyed to m. a pieceta receioning fronting with a messuage thereon, adjoining a covered gateway, "together with the exclusive use of the said gateway." The dimensions of the gateway to passage, as to length, breadth and height, and the said gateway to the s were mentioned in the deed; and the said "piece of ground and premises" were stated to be more particularly delineated by the portion in the plan thereto, and coloured pink. The covered gateway was not coloured on the plan :- Held, that the conveyance to W. did not merely confer on W. and his successors in title a right of way on W. and its succession at the a right of way through the covered gateway, but enabled them to use the gateway for all juriposes. Semble, the conveyance to W. passed the ownership of the gateway, and not merely an easement, Berlly v. Booth, 44 Ch. D. 12; 62 L. T. 378; 38 W. R. 484-C. A.

Right of Way.]—A way not strictly appur-tenant will not pass under the words, "together with all ways thereto belonging or in anywise appertaining," unless it can be collected that the parties intended to use those words in a sense more extensive than their ordinary legal signifi-cation. Barlow v. Rhodes, 1 C. & M. 439; 3 Tyrw. 280 : 2 L. J., Ex. 91, Chattels-Locality.]-Assignment by way of mortgage of trader's furniture, shop fittings, stock-in-trade, &c., held only to extend to such furniture, &c., as were in the house and shop at the time of the mortgage, and remained there at the bankruptcy. Stephenson, Ex parts, 17 L. J., Bk. 5; 12 Jur. 6.

- Investments. ]-The plaintiff was entitled to a contingent interest in 1,000/., being a moiety of 2,000L, part of a sum of 20,000L directed by the will to be invested, and which was accordingly invested in the 3 per cent, consols. The defendant became a purchaser at a sale by auction of the premises, which were described as a reversion to 1,000l, principal money payable on a contingency, and part of a sum of 20,000l, invested in the 3 per cent, consols. The assignment to the purchaser described the property as "all that sum of 1,000l, sterling, being one moiety of the legacy or sum of 2,000/, bequeathed by the will" -Held, that the purchaser was entitled to the —Held, that the purchaser was entraced to the value of the 1,000*L* in its state of investment. Lucas v. Bond, 2 Keen, 136; 6 L. J., Ch. 259. Affirmed, 2 Keen, 496; 7 L. J., Ch. 207.

A deed purported to settle a sum of money, portion of the moneys to which the settlor was entitled under the Statute of Distributions :-Held, that it passed chattels real coming to the settler in the manner described.

Other Cases.]—Where a general grant is made of ten acres of ground adjoining or surrounding a particular honse, part of a larger quantity of ground, the choice of such ten acres is in the grantee; and a devise to the like effect is to be considered as a grant. Hobson v. Blackburn, I Myl. & K, 571; 2 L. J., Ch. 168.

An assignment of "all and singular the legacies. debts, moneys, estate and effects, whatsoever and wheresoever, and of what nature and kind soever, of or to which J. H., in right of his wife or otherwise, was possessed," will not pass a claim of the assignor's wife to dower out of the estates of her former husband. Brown v. Meredith, 2 Keen. 527; 6 L. J., Ch. 361.

implication and presumption of law, but if an the vessel should be complete. Read v. Fairhabendum follow the intention of the parties as to the estate to be conveyed will be found in the habendum, and consequently no implication or presumption of law can be made; and if the intention so expressed be contrary to the rules of law, the intention cannot take effect, and the deed will be void. On the other hand, if an estate and interest be mentioned in the premises, the intention of the parties is shewn, and the deed may be effectual without any habendum; and if an habendum follow which is repugnant to the premises, or contrary to the rules of law, and incapable of a construction consistent with either, the habendum shall be rejected, and the deed stand good upon the premises. Goodtitle d. Dodwell v. Gibbs, 5 B. & C. 709 : 8 D. & R. 502; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 284; 29 R. R. 866.

Discrepancy between granting Part and Habendum, ]—M., possessed of two contiguous plots of ground, assigned one of them to T., "together with the right to use the walls on the north side" (i.e. on the adjoining plot) for building purposes. T. afterwards assigned the plot so purchased by him to the defendant by deed, the granting part of which was silent as to "rights, members and appurtenances," habendum " with the rights, members and appurtenances thereto belonging"; and, subsequently, M. assigned the adjoining plot of ground to the plaintiff :- Held, in an action for trespassing upon the walls, that the right to use them for building purposes Passed with the plot of ground to the defendant.

Reuwick v. Daly, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 126.

Where the words of an habendum in a deed are manifestly contradictory and repugnant to the words in the premises, the former are to be disregarded; but where part of the words in the habendum are contradictory to those in the premises, and part explanatory, the contradictory part only need be rejected. Doe d. Timmis v. Steele, 4 Q. B. 663; 3 G. & D. 622; 12 L. J., Q. B. 272.

The bolder of an estate for life in realty granted the laud to A., his executors, administrators and assigns, habendum from a future date for the term of the grantor's life :-Held, to pass an estate for life. Boddington v. Robinson, 44 L. J., Ex. 223; L. R. 10 Ex. 270; 33 L. T. 364; 23 W. R. 925.

The rule is, that where there is an express grant in the premises of a deed, that grant cannot be prejudiced by the invalidity of the habendum, but where the premises contain only an implied grant, and the habendum is invalid, the conveyance fails. Ib.

Qualification.] - The habendum of a deed, although void, may be looked at, together with the other parts of the deed, to qualify the estate granted by the premises. Hugarty v. Nally, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 532.

The plaintiffs contracted with R, to build a ship for them, and made advances from time to time in respect of her, and R. gave them, as a security for the advances, a bill of sale of the ship, which stated that he, R., thereby did sell, transfer and assign to the plaintiffs a certain ship in progress of building (describing her), to have and to hold the same to the plaintiffs for ever, when she should be completed:—Held, that the present property passed to the plaintiffs by the bill of sale, and that the vesting of it was not banks, 13 C. B. 692; 22 L. J., C. P. 206; 17 Jur.

- Counterpart. ]-The rule as to lease overruling counterpart applies only where there is inconsistency between those two documents compared with each other, and not where the lease is inconsistent with itself. Burchell v. Clark, 46 L. J., C. P. 115; 2 C. P. D. 88; 35 L. T. 690; 25 W. R. 334-C. A.

When the term mentioned in the reddendum in a lease differed from that stated in the habendum, and the counterpart throughout stated the term as in the reddendum, the habendum was corrected so as to agree with the reddendum. Ib.

Reservation-By Implication.]-The law will not reserve anything out of a grant in favour of the grantor, except in a case of necessity. Crossley v. Lightocler, 36 L. J., Ch. 584; L. R. 2 Ch. 478; 16 L. T. 438; 15 W. R. 801.

Essentials of a Good Reservation, ]-A reservation is a clause in a deed, whereby the feoffor, donor, lessor, grantor, &c., doth reserve some new thing to himself out of that he granted before. And in a reservation four things must concur: 1, it must be by apt words; 2, it must be of some other thing issuing or coming out of the thing granted, and not as part of the thing itself, nor of something issuing out of another thing; 3, it must be of a thing whereunder the grantor may have resort to distrain; and 4, it must be made to one of the grantors, and not to a stranger to the deed. Inchiquin v. Burnell, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 418.

An exclusive licence to take the whole of a profit à prendre of a particular kind can be granted; but such a grant cannot be inferred from language which is not clear and explicit. Sutherland (Duke) v. Heatheote, 61 L. J., Ch. 248; [1892] 1 Ch. 475; 66 L. T. 210-C. A.

By a deed dated in 1783, the plaintiff's predecessors in title revoked the old uses of certain lands, and granted and appointed such lands to the defendant's predecessor in title and his heirs, saving and reserving to themselves and their heirs full and free liberty to get and carry away the ninerals thereunder:—Held, that the clause of reservation operated, not as an exception of the minerals, but as a regrant of a non-exclusive licence to get them, and that the defendant could not be restrained from working the mines.

By deed A, and B, conveyed to D, and his heirs certain lands, excepting and reserving to A. B. and C., their heirs and assigns, liberty to come into and upon the lands, and there to hawk, hunt, fish, and fowl :-Held, that this was not in law a reservation properly so called, but a new grant by D. (who executed the deed) of the liberty therein mentioned; and therefore that it might enure in favour of C, and his heirs, although he was not a party to the deed. Wickham v. Hawker, 7 M. & W. 63; 10 L. J., Ex. 153.

Effect of Reservation. ]-Where the owner conveys land to a person, reserving the "liberty of working the coal" in those lands, he must be taken to have reserved the estate of coal (unless there are clear words in the deed qualifying that right of property) with which he stands vested bill of sale, and that the vesting of it was not at the date of the conveyance. Hamilton (Duke) postponed by the habendum to the time when v. Dunlop, 10 App. Cas. 813—H. L. (Sc.)

At common law, where A. has two interests in | made between B. and C., C. granted to B. the the same hereditament, as houses or minerals, or a watercourse and also a mill, or two storeys in a house, and demises one part, e.g. the lower portion of a house, reserving to himself the upper part, the grantee either for years or in fee will not, except by express stipulation or very direct implication, be permitted to use the portion held by him so as to interfere with the enjoyment by the grantor of the portion of which he has retained possession. Dugdale v. Robertson, 3 Jnr. (N.S.) 687.

It is a settled principle of law that not only as between the Crown and a subject, but as between subject and subject, the reservation of a right implies the means of enjoying it. Gould v. Great Western Deep Coal Co., 12 L. T. 842.

By a deed dated in 1630, the grantor conveyed in fee farm, land in the manor of A., in the county of Northumberland, "excepting and reserved out of the grant all mines of coals within the fields and territories of A. aforesaid, together with sufficient wayleave and stayleave to and from the said mines, with liberty of sinking and digging pit and pits": with a covenant by the grantees that they, their heirs and assigns, should give such accustomed recompense for digging and breaking the ground within A. aforesaid as formerly had been usually given and allowed there in like cases." By another deed of the same date, the same parties conveyed in fee farm, to other persons, lands in the manor of H, (adjoining A.), with a like exception, reservation and eovenant:—Held, that the reservation of a "sufficient wayleave" did not confine the right to such ways as were in use at the time of the grant; but that under the reservation in the former deed the coal-owner could not earry over A. coals got in H., although from part of the same mineral field. Dard v. Kingscote, 6 M. & W. 174; 2 Railw. Cas. 27; 9 L. J., Ex. 279.

A dean and chapter were seised in fee of lands, and by indenture between them and the plaintiff, demised them to him for a term, "excepting and reserving the mines under the same, with power to dig, win and carry away the mines, with free ingress, egress, regress, wayleave and passage to and from the same, or to or from any other mines, lands and grounds, on foot and on horseback, and with carts and all manner of carriages, and also all necessary and convenient passages, convenience, privileges and powers whatsoever, for the purposes aforesaid, and particularly of laying, making and granting waggonways in and over the premises, or any part there-:-Held, that the proper construction of the exception was, that it gave the dean and chapter not a general power of making ways and granting wayleaves for all purposes, but for the limited purpose only of getting the accepted minerals. Durham and Sunderland Ry, v. Walker, 2 G. & D. 326; 2 Q. B. 940; 11 L. J., Ex. 442— Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the right possessed by the dean and chapter under the clanse as lessor, was not the subject of an exception, as it was no parcel of the thing granted, nor of a reversion, as it did not issue out of the thing granted, but that it was an easement newly created by way of grant from the lessee. Ib.

In an action for breaking and entering the closes of A., it was pleaded that B. being seised in fee of the closes, and of a manor whereof the closes were parcel, demised the closes to C. for ninety-nine years; and that afterwards, by deed | 8 App. Cas. 853-H. L. (Sc.)

sole and exclusive right to pursue, kill and take all birds of warren at any time during the term in and upon the closes; together with free liberty to enter the closes, and therein to pursue. kill and take the birds of warren in and upon the same at any time, at his free will and pleasure; and so justified entering upon the closes for the purpose of pursuing birds of warren. The deed appeared to be a demise of the closes by B, to C,, "except and always reserved out of that demise anto B. all timber trees, and also except and reserved all royalties whatsoever to the premises belonging or in anywise appertaining": — Semble, that this clause created an exception or a reservation, and was not properly pleadable as a grant. Pannell v. Mill, 3 C. B. 625; 16 L. J., C. P. 91; 11 Jur. 109.

But held that, at all events, it did not amount to a grant by C. of a liberty to B. to enter upon the closes for the purpose of pursuing, killing and taking birds of warren. Ib.

Where land was conveyed by plaintiff to defendant, with a reservation to the plaintiff of a power to enter on the land and dig and make a sewer through it for the purpose of carrying off the waste water from the premises of the plaintiff; and the plaintiff having made a covered sewer in pursuance of the power, defendant made an opening in it, and drained his premises by means of it:—Held that myder the Held, that under the reservation the plaintiff was entitled to the exclusive use of the sewer. Lee v. Sterenson, E. B. & E. 512; 27 L. J., Q. B. 263; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 950.

Latent Ambiguity in Reddendum. ]-The plaintiff, in 1868, granted by deed, licence and authority to use an invention, of which the patent was vested in him, for breechloading rifles, to the defendants, "yielding and paying unto the licensor the royalty of one shilling for every gun, rifle or breech action manufactured, produced or sold under the powers hereby granted." The exemption of the Crown from royalties for the use of patents, laid down by Feather v. Reg. (6 B. & S. 257), was at that time generally believed to extend to government contractors; but by Dixon v. London Small Arms Co. (1 App. Cas. 632), this exemption was limited to the use of the immediate servants of the Crown; upon which the plaintiff brought an action to recover royalties under the deed for the rifles manufactured by the defendants for the government. The jury found that the defendants intended the deed should not apply to government contracts, and that the plaintiff knew this was their intention, and purposely abstained from mentioning the subject in order that they might be bound contrary to their intention:—Held, that the words of the reddendum suggested a latent ambignity which admitted extrinsic evidence to shew the intentions of the parties; and that the plaintiff under the circumstances could not recover. Roden v. London Small Arms Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 213; 35 L. T. 505; 25 W. R. 269.

Held, also, that the defendants were entitled to equitable relief from the plaintiff's claim. Ib. Although subsidiary clauses of a deed may be legitimately referred to, for the purpose of solving any ambiguity which is raised by the terms of the dispositive clause, yet if the terms of the dispositive clause are per se sufficient to give a right, they cannot be controlled by a reference to the other clauses of the disposition. #### 6. PARTICULAR WORDS.

"And "-" Or." ]-Whether the instrument in which the word occurs is a will or a deed, "or" may be construed to mean "and," and "and" may be construed to mean "or," if such a construction is necessary to give effect to the intention of the party by whom the word is used. White v. Supple, 2 Dr. & War. 471; 1 Con. & L.

"Appurtenances."] — As to general words "appertaining and belonging" in conveyance of a manor, see Townsend v. Champernown, 1 Y. & J. 538; 30 R. R. 825.

It is settled by the earliest authority, repeated It is settled by the charles authority, repeated without contradiction to the latest, that land cannot be appartenant to land, and the word "appartenances" only includes incorporeal hereditaments attached to the land, granted or demised, such as rights of way, of common, piscary, and the like, but it does not include additional lands. Lister v. Pickford, 34 Beav.

Under a deed of 1658, a manor with its rights, members, liberties and appartenances, saving and reserving certain land therein mentioned, was conveyed to trustees upon trust to permit the persons named in the schedule to the deed. their heirs and assigns, being tenants of the several messnages and tenements mentioned in the schedule, to have and convert to their own use a ratable proportion of the rents and profits of the manor, according to the yearly rents and purchase-moneys paid by them respectively for the purchase of their messuages and tenements: -Held, that such an interest in the profits of the manor could not be anuexed to the various tenements mentioned in the schedule without appropriate words of conveyance for that purpose. Hutchinson v. Morritt, 3 Y. & Coll. 547.

A. was owner of the E. estate adjoining the seashore, and let N., part of the estate, to a tenant with express liberty to take seaweed from the shore to manure his lands. N. was a farm lying inland, no part of it being nearer legal sense. Barlow v. Rhodes, 1. C. & M. 439; than about two miles from the shore. N., while 3 Tyrw. 280; 2 L. J. Ex. 2) so occupied, was sold to F., and the lands were described in the conveyance "as the same are presently possessed by the tenant." No express mention was made of any ensement to take seaweed, and there were only the general words, together with all the appurtenances." having claimed an easement to go and collect the scaweed adjoining A.'s estates to manure his lands:—Held, there being no express words of conveyance of such an easement, and the period of prescription not having elapsed, the easement did not pass under the words "together with the appurtenances." Baird v. Fortune, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 926; 5 L. T. 2; 10 W. R. 2.

To pass rights which are not properly servitudes, but are used in like manner, words amounting to a grant must be used. Ib.

B., in consideration of certain improvements he had made in his house, including the opening of two new windows, was granted a new lease by his landlord, in which the words "ancient lights and appurtenances" were used. After the death of the lessor his assignce allowed C., his lessee of the next house, to make certain additions thereto. C. proceeded to creet a high wall, which obstructed the light from B.'s windows, contending she had a right to do so, as he had thrown out new lights. B. filed a bill for an injunction :- Held, that as the lease referred not only to the ancient lights, but also under the word "appartenances" to the new lights, it was not competent for the lessor, or anyone claiming under him, to obstruct them; and that a decree for an injunction ought to be granted during the continuance of B,'s lease, although he had not made an interlocutory application. Duvies v. Marshall, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 720; 4 L. T. 105; 9

- Right of Way.]-A railway company purchased under the powers of their act a piece of land on which was a stable. By the conveyance to the company the premises were granted together with all "rights, members or appurtenances to the hereditaments belonging or occupied or enjoyed as part, parcel or member, thereof." The vendor had many years previously made a private road from the highway to the stable over his own land for his own convenience. and had used it ever since. The soil of this road was not conveyed to the company and no express mention of it was made in the conveyance :-Held, that a right of way passed to the company under the general words of the conveyance, Bayley v. G. W. Ry., 26 Ch. D. 434; 51 L. T. 337—C. A.

H. and P. were tenants in common of N. and V. estates. By a deed of partition V. was conveyed to H.; and N., "together with all and every their rights, members, easements and appurtenances," was conveyed to P., who sold it to B. A right of way had existed for many years leading from V. to N., and had been up to the time of the partition used by H. and P. :-Held, that such right of way did not pass to P. by the general words used in the deed of partition. Worthington v. Gimson, 2 El. & El. 613; 29 L. J., Q. B. 116; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1053.

The words "with all ways thereto belonging or in anywise appertaining" in a conveyance, will not pass a way not strictly appurtenant, unless the parties appear to have intended to use coparceners, the land was conveyed to a trustee together with all "ways, paths, passages, casc-ments," &c., to the same belonging or appertaining, or therewith usually held and enjoyed, habendum with the "appurtenances," &c. — Held, that a right of way passed. James v. Plant, 6 N. & M. 282; 4 A. & E. 749; 6 L. J., Ex. 260-Ex. Ch.

P. was the owner of an inn, the yard of which was approached by a passage over adjoining They agreed to alter their property of M. boundary, and substitute a new passage for the old one. M. accordingly, in 1854, conveyed to P. a small strip of land reaching across the end of the new passage where it entered the yard, and granted to him, his heirs and assigns, "rights, of way at all times and for all purposes along a passage intended to run between the piece of land hereinbefore conveyed and a street called the Tyrrels." By another deed P, released his rights of way over the old passage. The plaintiff was a lessee of the inn and yard under P. The defendants were tenants of M., occupying warehouses on his property, and the bill was filed to prevent the defendants from allowing carts and waggons to remain stationary in the passage in course of loading and unloading, so as to obstruct the access to the yard :- Held, that the right of way was not a right in gross, but was appurtenant to the property occupied by the plaintiff, so that his lease gave him a right to the enjoyment of it. Ackrayd v. Smith (10 C. B. 164) explained. Thorpe v. Brumfitt, L. R. 8 Ch. 650.

Right of Common. - See COMMON.

"Children"—" Issue."]—Where, in a deed, a power is given to appoint among issue, followed by a limitation over in their favour, and then it is declared that the children shall take in equal shares, the word "children" does not cut down the strict technical meaning of the word "issue." Harrison v. Symons, 14 W. R. 959.

"Gosts."]—The condition of a bond, after reciting that A had filed a bill in chancery against several persons (naming them) and the now defendant, as defendants, was, that the now defendants should pay all such costs as the Conrt of Chancery should award to all the defendants : -Held, that the construction of this condition was, that the defendants should pay the costs awarded to all or any of the defendants except himself. Vesey v. Mantell, 9 M. & W. 323; 11 L. J., Ex. 99.

"Fixtures and Fittings up."]—Household furniture does not pass under the description of "fixtures and fittings up in a deed." Simmons v. Simmons, 6 Hare, 352; 12 Jur. 8.

"Heirs."]—In a deed the extensive and ordinary signification of the word "heirs" will be limited where the intention of the parties to the deed is perfectly apparent. Wall v. Wright, 1 Dr. & Wall 1. And see Sheller's Case (Rule in).

"Household Furniture, Plate, &c., and other Goods, Chattels, and Effects in House and Stables."]—A husband settled upon his wife the use of during his life, and at his death the absolute property in, a leasehold house, coach-houses, and stables, together with "the household furni-

Under a deed of partition between two tures, wines, spirits, and other consumable stores, pareeners, the land was conveyed to a trustee and other goods, chattels, and effects "upon the thouse and or which should be brought upon the house and premises :- Held, that the horses and carriages in the coach-houses and stables at the time of the husband's death passed to the wife under the settlement. Anderson v. Anderson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 457; [1895] 1 Q. B. 749; 14 R. 367; 72 L. T. 313; 43 W. R. 322-C. A.

> Next of Kin. ]-A. assigned a fund to trustees, upon trust to pay the interest to B. for his life, and after his decease to pay, transfer, and assign the same among B.'s children; and if no child of B. from and immediately after the decease of B., upon trust to pay, transfer, and assign the same as A. should appoint; and in default of appointment, to pay, transfer, and assign the same to such person or persons as should at the time of the decease of A. be A.'s next of kin. A. died in the lifetime of B., without having made any appointment, and B. died without issue, B. is not excluded from the benefit of the limitation to A.'s next of kin. Elmsley v. Young, 2 Myl. & K. 780; 4 L. J., Ch. 200. Overruling 2 Myl. & K. 82; 3 L. J., Ch. 17.

> B. was the only surviving brother of A., and there were children of a deceased brother of A. : —Held, overruling Phillips v. Garth (3 Bro. C. C. 64), Hinchley v. Maclarens (1 Myl. & K. 27), and the decision in the present case at the Rolls, that the words "next of kin," used simpliciter, are to be taken to mean "nearest of kin," and that consequently B.'s personal representatives were entitled to the whole fund. Ib.

> "Other"—"Survivor."]—In a deed, as in a will, "survivor" may be read "other," in order to effect the intention of the parties. Palmer's Settlement Trusts, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 247; L. R. 19 Eq. 320; 32 L. T. 9.

> By a settlement executed by two sisters, E. and S., a trust fund was settled upon trust to pay the income to them equally during their joint lives, and after the death of one of them to the survivor for her life; and if either of them should die, leaving children, to pay one moiety to such children; and if either should die without leaving children, to pay the moiety of the deceased sister to the children (if any) of the "survivor," but if both of the sisters should die without leaving children, then over. deceased S. and left children; then she died without leaving children :- Held, that her moiety passed to the children of E. Ib.

> An estate was settled by deed upon A., B. and C. for life, as tenants in common, remainder to their first and other sons respectively in tail male, remainder to their daughters respectively as tenants in common in tail, remainder, "in case one or two of the said A., B. and C. should die without issue of her or their bodies, then as to the share of such one or two dying without issue, to the use of all and every the daughters of such survivors, as tenants in common in tail":-Held. that the limitation to the daughters of the survivor was a good contingent remainder, and not void for remoteness, and that the word survivors must be construed "others." Cole v. Sewell, 2 Con. & L. 344; 4 Dr. & War. 1; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 66. Affirmed, 2 H. L. Cas. 186; 12 Jur. 927.

"Plant." -In most cases the word "plant" is used to describe something which, if not in ture, plate, linen, china, glass, tenant's fix- direct contrast to stock, is at any rate of an entirely different nature. All the matters permanently used for the purposes of a trade, as distinguished from the fluctuating stock, are commonly included in the term "plant." It consists sometimes of things which are fixed, as, for example, counters, heating, gas, and other apparatus and things of that kind, and in other cases of horses, becomotives, and the like, which are in this sense only fixed, that they form a part of the permanent establishment intended to be replaced when dead or worn out as the case may be. Blake v. Shue, J 150.ns. 732.

"Possession.")—A charge was made raisable, when A or his issue should come into "possession." A jointress who had an estate for life conveyed to a trustee, in order to enable A, who was tenant in tail in remainder, to saffer a recovery, which he did, having such an interest as enabled him to suffer a recovery.—Held, to be coming into possession within the terms of the deed, and to make the charge raisable. Hill v. Bruanhton, 3 Bro. C. C. 180.

"Then."]—In a limitation by deed, on a partitudar event, to the "then" next of kin of A, the word "then" was held to refer to the event, and not to the time of its happening. Wheeler v. Addams, 17 Benv. 417.

"Younger Children"—"Other than an Eldest Son."]—A father's estate was limited after his death to the eldest son in tail, and the mother's estates were limited after her death to the sons and daughters (other than an eldest son) as tenants in common in tail:—Held, that the rule of construction was the same as to realty and personalty, and that the son of a younger son who had succeeded to the father's estate was excluded from all interest in the mother's estates. Buyliy's Settlement, In re, L. R. 6 Ch. 590; 25 L. T. 249; 19 W. R. 789.

7. Inconsistent Clauses.

Articles of separation between John Wright Henniker Wilson and Mary Wright Henniker Wilson, his wife, provided that all the rents, taxes, and other outgoings in respect of certain estates which were originally the property of the latter, should be paid by the former up to a day named, and that after that day they should be paid by Mary Wright Henniker Wilson, and that John Wright Henniker Wilson, and that John Wright Henniker Wilson should be indemnified therefrom, and from all the present debts and liabilities of the said John Wright Henniker Wilson:—Beld, that as the words in italies made the clause inconsistent with, and repregnant to itself, they ought to be disregarded. Wilson v. Wilson, 15 Sin. 487; 11 Jur. 340.

Principles on which the court proceeds in putting a construction upon inconsistent clauses in a settlement. Bush v. Watkins, 14 Beav.

Where a deed contains inconsistent clauses, the court very reluctantly rejects one altogether; and never, unless it is absolutely impossible to reconcile the inconsistencies. Tb.

A declaration inserted in the testing clause of a deed, which purports to affect or quality any of the provisions in the body of the deed, has no legal effect. Smith v. Chambers (5 Rettic, 97) followed. Blair v. Assets Co., [1896] A. C. 409—H. L. (Sc.)

D. PAROL EVIDENCE.

1. TO EXPLAIN.

In General.]—Parol evidence, to explain intention of party giving a release, rejected. Butcher v. Butcher, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 113.

Parel evidence is admissible to enable the courtrightly to understand in what sense words are used in a deed, just as evidence is afforded by a dictionary which enables us to translate a foveign language, or by a book of science, which gives us the meaning of words of art; but where the aid of parol evidence is invoked for the purpose of contradicting the express provisions of a deed, then such evidence is inclumisable. Att. Gan. V. Clapham. 4 De G., M. & G. 591; 3 Eq. B. 704; 24 L. J., G. H. 77; 1 Jur. (XSA) 505; 3 W. B. 158.

224 L. J., Ch. 111; I Jun. (N.8.) 300; S. W. R. 108.
On a question of construction of a written instrument, no evidence of the intention of the parties is admissible, though intrinsic evidence may be adduced to show the position of the parties, the state of the funds, and the rights and interests of the parties in them. But in a suit to reform a written instrument, evidence of intention is admissible. Therefore, in a suit mising both questions, the court, though it received the evidence on the one point, rejected the same evidence when considering the other. Bradford (Eurr) V. Ronney (Eurl.), 30 Beav. 431.

Acts or communications of the parties after an agreement may be evidence of facts existing at the time of the agreement material to 4ts construction, but not to determine its meaning. Monro v. Taylor, 8 Hare, 56. Affirmed, 3 Macn. & G. 713: 21 L. J., Ch. 525.

Where a deed is in writing it cannot be altered by parol evidence. Bluke v. Marnell, 2 Ball & B, 47; 12 R. R. 68. Affirmed, 4 Dow, 248.

The acts of parties cannot be allowed to affect the construction of deeds, Danglas v. Allen, 1 Con. & L. 367; 2 Dr. & War. 213.

A legal instrument is not to be construed by the acts of the parties. Bayuham v. Guy's Hospital, 3 Ves. 299; 3 R. R. 96.

A deed is not to be construed by the subsequent acts of the parties. Burrowes v. Hayes, Hay & J. 597.

In construing a charity trust deed the court will admit proof of the meaning of the founders from evidence of their acts, their form of worship, and that of the societies of which they were members, and from contemporaneous history, and will adopt the construction rendered probable by the evidence, provided it be consistent with the words of the deed. Att.-Gen. v. Drammond, 1 Dr. & War. 353; 3 Td. 162; 1 Con. & L. 210; 2 Zd. 98.

To aid in the construction of such a deed the court will receive evidence of the acts of the founders, but not of their opinions.

founders, but not of their opinions. Ib. Evidence is also admissible to explain the signification in which ambignous words or expressions were generally understood at the time of the execution of the ded. Ib.

It is a settled rule of law that, in construing a deed or written instrument, the court is at liberty to inquire into all the surrounding circumstances which may have acted upon the minds of the persons by whom the deed or will was executed; but the knowledge of such facts will not enable the court to put a construction upon the instrument inconsistent with the words thereof. Ib.

An absolute conveyance decreed to be only a clear, on the written evidence, and the accounts of the parties, that the agreement was not what the deed purported to be. Cripps v. Jee, 4 Bro. C. C. 472.

Conveyance by lease and release in fce, in the circumstances, held to be subject to a parol defeasance, and to be in the nature of a mortgage, with a power of repurchase on the footing of redemption, and a reconveyance decreed. Muttyloll Seal v. Annundochunder Sandle, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 72.

The consideration, as stated in a conveyance, was 1501. paid, and an acceptance for 3001. :-Held, that the form of the deed was not conclusive, and that it was competent for the vendor to shew that he had stipulated for a lien for the amount of the acceptance. Fruil v. Ellis, 16 Beav. 350; 22 L. J., Ch. 467; 1 W. R. 72.

If parties have made an executory contract which is to be carried out by a deed afterwards executed, the real completed contract between the parties is to be found in the deed, and the court cannot look at the contract although it is recited in the deed, except for the purpose of constraing the deed itself. The court cannot look at the contract, either for the purpose of enlarging or diminishing or modifying the contract which is to be found in the deed itself. Leggot v. Barrett, 15 Ch. D. 306; 28 W. R. 962.

To shew Intention at Time of executing Conveyance.]—In order to shew that land had been bought for certain purposes, it was proposed to adduce as evidence the minutes of the proceedings of the vendees :- Held, that the conveyance having been executed, the minutes of the proceedings were inadmissible as evidence shewing the purposes for which the land was bought. Prison Commissioners v. Middlesew Clerk of the Peace, 51 L. J., Q. B. 433; 9 Q. B. D. 506; 46 L. T. 864; 30 W. R. 881-C. A.

On a question of construction of a deed, parol evidence is inadmissible to shew the intention of the parties thereto. Pulmer v. Newell, 20 Beav. 39

Prior and contemporaneous enjoyment of a privilege which may be attached to land, and subsequent enjoyment, are admissible to explain the terms of a deed. Baird v. Fortune, 4 Macq. H. L. 127; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 926; 5 L. T. 2; 10 W. R. 2-H. L.

Although parol evidence cannot be used to add to or detract from the description in a deed, or to alter it in any respect, it is admissible to shew the condition of the property, and all other circumstances necessary to place the court, when it construes an instrument in the position of the parties to it, so as to enable it to judge of the meaning of the instrument. Ih.

One of the ordinary rules of construction of deeds is that you are entitled to look at the circumstances existing at the date of the deed. Those circumstances will give very little help in the construction if the words of the deed are clear, but they will help very much if the words are ambiguous—per Esher (Lord), M.R. Roe v. Siddons, 22 Q. B. D. 224; 60 L. T. 345; 37 W. R. 228; 53 J. P. 246.

Parcels-Explanation by Possession. - Where the description of the parcels in a conveyance are capable of two meanings, the true description security for money on parol evidence, it being | Booth v. Ratte, 59 L. J., P. C. 41; 15 App. Cas.

Parcels.]—In 1861, Plowman, a common predecessor in title of both the plaintiff and the defendant, being possessed of 27 rods of land, conveyed to the defendant's predecessor in title "all that piece of garden ground containing by estimation 20 rods, bounded on the south by other land or garden ground belonging to Plowman." In 1866, Plowman conveyed the residue of the property to the plaintiff's predecessor in title, describing it as "15 rods more or less"; the result being that if the measurement of the deed of 1861 was accurate, the defendant took under it 12 rods instead of 20, while if the measurement of the deed of 1866 was accurate, the plaintiff took under it 7 rods instead of 15. The plaintiff brought ejectment for the 8 rods in dispute :-Held, that the parol evidence of Plowman was admissible to shew that he had conveyed 12 and not 20 rods by the deed of 1861. Jerrey v. Styring, 29 L. T. 847.

— 01d Documents.]—Where parcels are described in old documents by words of a general nature, or of doubtful import, evidence is admissible to shew the meaning of the words used. Waterpark (Lord) v. Fennell, 7 H. L. Cas. 650; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1135; 7 W. R. 634.

- Not Admissible.]-Where a deed purported to convey "a messuage or tenement for-merly used as a workhouse, in the occupation of A., with the appartenances," and it was shewn that there was a small garden adjoining, which had been always occupied by A. as master of the workhouse :- Held, that the garden passed, and that the grantor could not afterwards be admitted to narrow the operation of his grant, by shewing that the conditions of sale, signed by the vendor at the time of the sale, expressly excepted the garden; or by proving subsequent declarations of the grantee that it had not been purchased by him. Doe d. Norton v. Webster, 12 A. & E. 442;

4 P. & D. 270; 9 L. J., Q. B. 373.

The question being whether the locus in quo was parcel of an estate purchased by and conveyed to an ancestor of the alleged freeholder, an agreement preliminary to the conveyance, and in which the locus in quo was expressly named as part of the land to be sold, is not admissible for the purpose of shewing what was conveyed. Williams v. Morgan, 15 Q. B. 782.

Measurement - Construction for Judge. 1-Land was granted by deed under this description : "All that piece or parcel of land or ground situate, lying, and being in the parish of C., in the county of B., measuring in width from east to west thirty feet, which piece or parcel of land or ground appointed and conveyed is more particularly delineated and described in the map or plan drawn in the margin of these presents, the fences of which piece or parcel of land or ground hereby conveyed on the cast and west sides are to be made and maintained by M. (the vendor), In an action his heirs, appointees, or assigns." for a trespass to this land, evidence was given to shew that, before the deed was executed, the ground had been staked out by the grantee under the direction of the grantor, and that the breadth of the space between the fences was in no part equal to thirty feet :- Held, that after these facts is capable of being explained by possession, had been proved it was for the judge to interpret

-In determining the meaning of a word that has both a primary and a secondary signification, the court will admit evidence as to, and will look at its primary meaning alone, and will not admit technical evidence, unless satisfied that it is to be construed in its secondary sense. Holt v. Collyer, 50 L. J., Ch. 311; 16 Ch. D. 718; 44 L. T. 214; 29 W. R. 502.

Parol evidence is admissible to enable the court rightly to understand in what sense words are used in a deed, just as evidence is afforded by a dictionary which enables one to translate foreign language, or by a book of science, which gives the meaning of words of art: but where the aid of parol evidence is invoked for the purpose of contradicting the express provisions of a deed, then such evidence is inadmissible. Att .-Gen. v. Claphan, 4 De G., M. & G. 591; 3 Eq. Rep. 702; 24 L. J., Ch. 177; 1 Jur. (N.s.) 505; 3 W. R. 158.

Custom to Control Covenant, ]-A custom to control the words of a covenant in a deed must be one which both parties to the covenant can know, and must be certain and invariable. Abbott v. Bates, 43 L. J., C. P. 150; 30 L. T. 99; 22 W. R. 488. Affirmed, 45 L. J., C. P. 117; 33 L. T. 491; 24 W. R. 101, and from whom it moves, may be supplied by evidence dehors the deed, where such evidence does not contradict the deed. Hartopp v. Hartopp, 17 Ves. 184; 11 R. R. 48.

Evidence of a consideration not expressed in a deed is admissible to shew that it was not voluntary, unless inconsistent with the deed itself. Nixon v. Hamilton, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 55; 2

Dr. & Wal, 364.

The consideration, as stated in a conveyance. was 150%, paid and an acceptance for 300%; :-Held, that the form of the deed was not conclusive, and that it was competent for the vendor to shew that he had stipulated for a lien for the amount of the acceptance. Frail v. Ellis, 16 Beav. 350; 22 L. J., Ch. 467; 1 W. R. 72.

Parol evidence is admissible to shew that there was consideration for a deed. Townend v. Toker,

To determine Meaning of Trade Term in Deed, 1 I S. L. 7. 267; 14 W. R. 22.

Although evidence is not admissible to shew, contrary to the terms of a deed, that by the contract the consideration was not to be paid, as stated in the deed, but in goods, such evidence is admissible to shew that, in point of fact, the consideration was so paid, and that goods were accepted in payment. Smith v. Battams, 26 L. J., Ex. 232.

An agreement between the administrator of the covenantee and the covenantor not to enforce performance of the covenants in the deed provided the latter would pay certain rent may be a good consideration for a parol promise to pay such rent; and the enforcement of such promise is not open to the objection that it is seeking to vary by parol the terms of an instrument under seal. Nush v. Armstrong, 10 C. #### 1. Post-Obits.

Nature of. ]-A post-obit bond is a security of a doubtful nature. Lushington v. Waller, 1 H. Bl. 94; 2 R. R. 727.

A nephew, who was provided for by his aunt's will, obtained a post-obit bond from her. It was set aside, he not having proved that she knew that the effect of the bond was to make her will irrevocable. Cooke v. Lamatte, 15 Beav, 234; 21 L. J., Ch. 371.

Validity of ]-A debtor executed a post-obit bond for payment of a sum of money. The bond recited that the debtor owed the money to the obligee. The bond was assigned to a third party, who took the assignment upon the faith of the lebtor's tacit representation that the debt was due, as recited in the bond. The debtor afterwards assigned his estate and effects to trustees for the benefit of creditors, and subsequently instituted a snit for the performance of the trusts of the deed in equity. The transferee of the bond applied to be allowed to prove, but was opposed the debtor, and his claim disallowed by the chief elerk, on the ground that the bond was originally given for a gambling debt. The only evidence of the gambling transaction was that of the debtor :-Held, by Stuart, V.-C., that the debt was provable, for that the debtor could not be allowed to set up as against an innocent transferce, a state of circumstances inconsistent with representations made by him before the transfer, and upon the faith of which the transfer was taken, and that as bona fide holder of the bond without notice, he was within the equity of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 41; and, upon appeal.—Held, that the decision of Stuart, V.-C., was correct, the only evidence in support of the allegation that the debt was a gambling transaction being that of the debtor, who was not a trustworthy witness. Hawker v. Hallewell, 25 L. J., Ch.

B., for the purposes of a society of which he was the solicitor, borrowed 600%, on the security of a joint bond entered into by himself and C. The bond was conditioned to be void if the obligors, their heirs, executors or administrators, should within one month after the death of such one as should first depart this life of three persons, named in the bond, pay to the obligee The bond also charged the interests to 2.0007. which the obligors might become entitled in any personal estate under the wills of the three persons, with payment of the 2,0001. Ou the death of the last survivor of the three persons the obligors sought to be relieved of their obligation under the bond, on the ground that it had been entered into under circumstances which were inequitable, and that the whole transaction amounted, in fact, to a sale of a reversionary interest for an insufficient consideration :- Held, that the bond was good. Gardiner v. Cowper. 18 L. T. 627.

2. VOLUNTARY DEEDS AND BONDS

Effect of Voluntary Bond. ] - A. by deed voluntarily settled some property on trust for himself for life, and after his decease upon trust to pay all the debts then owing by him, and any legacies or sums of money not exceeding 4001. which he by will or writing should direct, and subject thereto in trust for his son. Afterwards, in order to defeat the settlement, he gave voluntary bonds to the extent of 3,500l. in favour of other relatives:—Held, that the bonds were effectual and created valid debts, payable out of the trust property. Markwell v. Markwell, 34 Beav. 12.

Whenever a person obtains by voluntary donation a benefit from another, he is bound, if the transaction be questioned, to prove that the transaction was righteons, and that the donor voluntarily and deliberately did the act, knowing its nature and effect. 'Cooke v. Lamatte, 15 Beav. 234; 21 L. J., Ch. 371.

What is. ]-P. binds himself in a penal sum to pay an annuity of 200%, a year to trustees for the benefit of E. K., a single woman, by whom he has had five children, in consideration of her having ceded to him the custody, education, and support of such children, And such boud is conditioned to be void on due payment of the annuity during such time as E. K. shall not require the custody of the children :-Held, that such bond was for valuable consideration, and constituted a specialty debt. Plaskett's Estate, In re. Bryant v. Knyrett, 4 L. T. 544; 9 W. R. 628.

A promise to pay in consideration of the creditor forbearing to sue only operates as a valuable consideration when a right to sue exists. Graham v. Johnson, 38 L. J., Ch. 374; L. R. 8 Eq. 36; 17 W. R. 810.

3. OF INDEMNITY.

Validity. ]-A bond of indemnity given to protect a purchaser of land against adverse claims threatened at the time of the purchase is valid to the full amount of the penal sum named in it, notwithstanding that such penal sum greatly agreement exceeded the original purchase-money; there Dougl. 385.

558; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 794; 4 W. R. 621-L.JJ. | being no equity in the circumstances of the case Before Stuart, V.-C., 3 Sm. & G. 194: 2 Jur. to justify an interference with the legal right, (N.S.) 537. See Murray v. Stair (Earl), 3 and the purchaser having, in discharge of the D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82; 26 R. R. 282. sum than the full amount of the penal sum named in the bond. Osborne v. Eales, 2 Moore P. C. (N.S.) 125; 12 W. R. 654. And see Warwick v. Richardson, 10 M. & W. 282, post.

> Recitals.]-A covenant of indemnity, unlike a release, is not to be restricted by its recitals. Baker, In re, Collins v. Rhodes, 51 L. J., Ch. 315; 20 Ch. D. 230; 45 L. T. 658; 30 W. R. 858-

C. A.

A bond by a surety for W. and H., with a condition reciting that the obligees were bankers and W. and H. paper manufacturers, and had overdrawn their account with the obligees 4,8221., and, in order to enable them to carry on their business, had applied to the obligees to allow them for a time to overdraw such further sums as they should require, so that the same, together with the 4,8221, should not exceed, at any one time, 5,000/, ; which they had agreed to do : and the condition was for the payment by W. and H. and the surety, or any of them, of 4,8221, and also such further sums as the obligees should or might thereafter advance to W. and H. in the course of their business, not exceeding 5,000%.is not avoided by the obligees having allowed W. and H. to overdraw to an amount together with the 4,822l, exceeding 5,000l, for the restrictive words in the recital are not to be construed as conditional, that if the obligees exceeded the amount the bond should be void. Parker v. Wise, 6 M. & S. 239; 18 R. R. 359.

When Action lies upon.]—An obligee in an indemnity bond, upon being damnified, has an immediate right to be reimbursed. Challoner v. Walker, 1 Burr. 574.

For, one who agrees to indemnify and save others harmless against a certain engagement is bound to secure them from incurring any expense, as it runs on at the time, which falls upon them by virtue of that engagement. Sparks v. Martindale, 8 East, 593.

A. being principal, and B. surety in an annuity to C., A. gave B. a bond conditioned to pay the annuity to C., and to indemnify B. from any claims of C .:- Held, that this was not a mere indemnity bond, and that B, therefore might put it in suit as soon as A. made default in payment of the annuity, without proving that he had actually been damnified. Penny v. Foy, 8 B, & C. 11; 2 Mau, & R. 181; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 230.

Where there are several names composing a firm, but part is nominal only and not interested in the profits, and in a declaration on a bond of indemnity to secure money advanced to a third person, the breach states the money to be paid by the partners only who are interested in the profits, it is good, though the mouey was paid on bills drawn on the firm composed of all the partners. Harrison v. Fitzhenry, 3 Esp. 238.

Several owners of different ships having en-tered into a bond to a trustee, binding themselves and their assigns to indemnify each other to a certain amount, if any of their ships should be lost : and one of them having sold his ship, and she being afterwards lost, the others are not liable under the bond, unless the vendor has sold (together with the ship) his interest in the agreement of indemnity. Ayres v. Wilson, 1

For what-Receiver and Manager of Estate.] -Under a bond of indemnity given by A., that B., who was appointed the general agent of C., the receiver of his rents and the manager of his estates, should pay over to C. all rents which he should receive, as also the increase and improvements thereof upon any new contracts or renewals of leases; A. is answerable for all fines received by B. on renewing the leases which were not paid over by him. Irish Society v. Necdham, 1 Term Rep. 482.

Against Adverse Claims. ]-The condition of a bond, which recited a purchase from W. by the plaintiffs of lands, was to save them and the lands harmless from all manner of mortgages, judgments, extents, executions and other incumbrances, had and obtained, or thereafter to be had and obtained, by T. or any other person :—Held, to bind the obligor against the wrongful entry of T., being particular against the acts of a partienlar person. Nush v. Palmer, 5 M: & S. 374; 17 R. R. 364.

A bond of indennity given to protect a purchaser of land against adverse claims threatened at the time of the purchase is valid to the full amount of the penal sum named in it, notwithamount of the penal sum greatly exceeded the original purchase-money; there being no equity in the circumstances of the case to justify an interference with the legal right, and the purchaser having, in discharge of the claim and expenses incident thereto, expended a larger sum than the full amount of the penal sum named in the bond. Osborne v. Edles, 2 Moore, P.C. (N.S.) 125; 12 W. R. 654.

Against Liability for Breach of Trust.] -A. devised his real and personal estate to D. and R. upon trust to sell, and to invest 10,000L. arising therefrom, in the public funds or real scentities, for the benefit of persons mentioned in the will. The money was not so invested, but with D.'s consent was received by R., and used by him in a private trade; and R. gave to D. a bond, conditioned to keep him harmless and indemnified against all actions, suits, proceedings, claims, demands, loss, costs, charges, damages and expenses, on account of the 10,0007, or by reason of R.'s being permitted to hold the same: Held, that this bond was valid in law. Warwick v. Richardson, 10 M. & W. 282; 11 L. J., Ex. 351.

The legatees having filed a bill in Chancery against the trustees and their representatives, claiming payment of the 10,000%, and interest, obtained a decree whereby it was declared that D. and R. were jointly and severally liable to pay that sum; and the legatees carried in a claim against D.'s estate for that amount, but no money was received therefrom :- Held, that the representatives of D. were entitled to recover from R. in an action on the bond the whole amount of 10,0007, and interest, and that their claim was not limited to the amount of costs actually incurred and paid by them in the chancery suit. Ib.

- For Legacy paid to Wrong Person. A party who gives a bond of indemnity to another for the amount of a legacy improperly paid to a wrong person, and for all costs respecting it, is liable for the reasonable costs incurred by the obligee in defending a suit in equity brought by the legatee. Lloyd v. Mostyn, 10 M. & W. 478; 2 D. (N.S.) 476; 12 L. J., Ex. 1; 6 Jur. 974.

For Handing Over a Bill of Exchange. -A bond conditioned to save A. harmless from all actions, legal proceedings and costs which might be the consequence of A.'s delivering over to the defendant a bill of exchange, part of the proceeds of which a third person was entitled to, is forfeited by a payment over by A. to such third person of his share of the proceeds, upon his demanding the same, without his bringing any action; although A. gave no notice of the payment to the defendant. Ker v. Mitchell, 2

____ To secure Balance due.]—When a surety gives a continuing guarantee limited in amount to secure the floating balance which may from time to time be due from the principal to the creditor, the guarantee is, as between the surety and the creditor, to be construed (prima facie at least) as applicable to a part only of the debt co-extensive with the amount of the guarantee. But a guarantee limited in amount for a debt already ascertained which exceeds that limit is not prima facie to be construed as a security for part of the debt only. Ellis v. Emanuel, 46 L. J., Ex. 25; 1 Ex. D. 157; 34 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 832—C. A.

It is a question of construction on which the court is to say whether the intention was to guarantee the whole debt with a limitation on the liability of the surety, or to guarantee a part of the debt only. Ib.

A debtor and his surety excented a joint and several bond for 14,000% conditioned for avoidance if they or either of them should in satisfaction of a debt of 7,0007, then due from the debtor to the obligee pay the 7,0001, with a proviso that the surety should not be liable under the bond for a sum or sums exceeding altogether in debt or damages 1,3007. The debtor having paid 1,000l., part of the debt, and then filed a petition for liquidation, the obligee proved for and received a dividend of 9s, 2d. in the pound on 6,000% under the liquidation. After deducting from the 7,000l. the 1,000l. and the dividend, there remained more than 1,300%, due. The obligee having brought an action on the bond against the surety to recover 1,3000%, the surety contended that he was entitled to deduct from the 1,800%, a ratable proportion of the dividend, viz. 9s. 2d. in the pound on 1,300l., and was only liable for the balance :-Held, that the intention of the bond was that the surety should guarantee the whole 7,000l, though his liability was limited to 1,300%; that he was, therefore, not entitled to deduct a ratable proportion of the dividend, but was liable for the whole 1,300l. Ib.

A surety bound himself jointly to a banking company in 500L, the condition of the bond being that if the obligors should from time to time pay all and every such sum or sums of money as should become due to the bank for money advanced to surety's co-obligor, and pay interest at 51, per cent, per anunm for such sum or sums of money as aforesaid, to be computed as is usual with the banking company in ordinary banking accounts with them; and also the lawful commission, charges and expenses incident to. or occasioned by the transactions or matters between the bank and the co-obligor, and should indemnify and save harmless the banking company from all actions, suits and expenses, and all liability whatsoever by reason of the transactions and matters; then the bond was to be void. Provided that the principal moneys to be ultimately recovered on the bond were thereby i limited not to exceed 2507, and that the obligors or any of them should not be liable to pay, by virtue thereof, any greater principal sum than 2501. But that the bond should be a continuing security to that amount, for the snms from time to time owing as aforesaid, exclusive of interest (to be computed as aforesaid), commission, costs, charges and expenses :- Held, that the surety was liable on this bond only for 250l. principal moneys advanced, and interest accrned upon that sum : but not for interest upon any further principal sum advanced by the bank. Meek v. Wallis, 27 L. T. 650.

To Secure other Money Payments. |binds himself under a penalty to indemnify B. against his obligation to C., if the money be not paid before a certain day. B., in an action on the bond for not indemnifying, is entitled to recover the amount of the penalty of the bond, Wood v. Wade, 2 Stark, 167.

A. engages to indemnify B. against a debt due from A. and B. to C. of 50l.; they, in fact, owe 74l., for which B. is arrested. A. is liable to B. on his engagement to indemnify him. Hancock

v. Clay, 2 Stark, 100.

- Bond to Indemnify against Costs of Action.]-A condition of a bond, after reciting that one A. B. had filed a bill in chancery against several persons (naming them) and the now defendant, as the defendants, was that the now defendant should pay all such costs as the Court of Chancery should award to all the said defendants:—Held, that the construction of this condition was that the defendant should pay the costs awarded to all or any of the defendants except himself. Vesey v. Mantell, 9 M. & W. 328; 11 L. J., Ex. 99.

Amount Recoverable-Extra Costs.]-In an action by a lessee against the assignce of the lease for a breach of a contract by the assignee to indemnify the lessee against a failure to perform the covenants contained in the lease, he sought to recover the whole costs, as well those paid by him on taxation as extra costs paid by him to his own attorney, incurred in nusnecessfully defending an action brought against him by the lessor for breach of one of the covenants in the lease committed after the assignment :-Held, that the lessee was entitled to recover both the extra costs paid by him to his attorney and the taxed costs, Howard v. Loregrave, 40 L. J., Ex. 13; L. R. 6 Ex. 43; 23 L. T. 396; 19 W. R. 188,

The indemnity due from a principal to his agent covers solicitor and client costs incurred by the agent, and it makes no difference whether the contract of indemnity is express or implied. Wells and Croft, In re. Official Receiver, Exparte, 15 R. 169: 72 L. T. 359.

4. TITLE DEEDS.

Custody-Right to, passes with Estate. |-The right to the estate confers a right to the possession of the title deeds. Smith v. Chichester, 2 Dru. & W. 393; 1 Con. & L. 486; 8. P., Har-rington v. Price, 3 B. & Ad. 170. S. C., nom. Harvington v. Glem, 1 L. J., K. B. 122; Strode v. Blackburn, 3 Ves. 225; Newcastle (Duke) v. Pelham (Lord), 3 Bro. P. C. 460.

the property in the deed passes with it. Lord v. Wardle, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 680; 4 Scott, 402; 1 Jur. 382.

The person who is entitled to the inheritance has a right to the possession of the title deeds; and it is no answer to an action founded on his right to the possession of the deeds to shew that another person has a term of 1,000 years vested in him to attend the inheritance, Austin v. Croome, Car. & M. 653.

A person who has parted with his interest in the estate cannot maintain an action to recover the title deeds from another with whom he has bailed them. Phillips v. Robinson, 4 Bing, 106;
5 L. J. (0.8.) C. P. 111; 29 R. R. 518.

Where the plaintiff in a suit is the personal representative of a person who could not have sued; and through her of one who was entitled to sue, the bill will not be dismissed on that ground. Carter v. Sanders, 2 Drew. 248; 2

Eq. Rep. 891; 23 L. J., Ch. 679; 2 W. R. 325.

The personal representative of a person may maintain a suit regarding the title deeds of the testatrix's real estate. Ib.

A deposit of title deeds by the heir-at-law of a testatrix to secure a private loan will not prevent the creditors of the deceased person from proceeding against the depositee. Ib.

On the death of a tenant for life, who had granted a lease under a power in a will, the reversioners were held entitled to recover the title deeds from an assignce of the lease, with whom they had been deposited as security for money advanced to the tenant for life and the losses, Easton v. London, 33 L. J., Ex. 34; 12 W. R. 53.

A person who is out of possession, and whose ultimate right to obtain and keep possession of the title deeds depends on the validity of his title, may maintain a suit for the delivery up to him of the title deeds, if the evidence of his title is not in his own power, and depends on the production of the deeds of which delivery is prayed. Whittingham v. Cusach, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 451.

A suit by a person claiming a legal title to land, praying discovery and delivery up of the title deeds, against a person who had the deeds, and merely claimed to hold them as a stakeholder for whoever had the legal title, the deeds having been brought into court on an interlocutory motion, and another suit having been subsequently instituted in which the questions as to the title of the lands could be decided, the plaintiff in the first suit offered the defendant to consent that the deeds in court should be transferred to the second suit, and the first dismissed with costs; the defendant having declined to consent, and put the plaintiff upon terms to bring the first suit to a hearing :- Held, that the plaintiff in that suit should pay the costs of it up to the service of the notice of consent, and the defendant those incurred afterwards.

Where several are Interested in Estate. -He who has occasion to use a deed is legally entitled to the custody of it; and where several are equally interested in it, either having possession, may retain it against the others. Consequently one cannot maintain detinue against a person in whose hands the party who first obtains possession of it has deposited it, to be redelivered to him on request. Foster v. Crabb, 12 C. B. 136: 21 L. J., C. P. 189; 16 Jur. 835.

Where a purchaser of a small part of an estate takes a covenant from the vendor to produce the title deeds whenever it shall be necessary, and Where the property in land passes by deed, the deeds afterwards come into the purchaser's possession on his taking a mortgage of the other life and a son entitled in remainder; but in the part of the estate, and he then assigns the morta gage to a third person, not mentioning the deeds, such third person cannot maintain trover against him for the deeds. Yea v. Field, 2 Term Rep. 705; 1 R. R. 603, Deeds affecting Several Estates.]—Deeds which relate to two distinct properties will not be delivered to the owner of the largest property, unless he exonerates the previous holder by an unqualified covenant to produce them. original covenantee not a necessary party to a suit for the purpose of obtaining such a covenant. Ruseve v. Richards, 1 Jur. 304.

- Right to Recover. |- The owner in fee of an estate gave her title deeds into the possession of her solicitors. She afterwards settled the estate, and under the limitations of the settlement part of the estate became vested, after her death, in the plaintiffs, and the remainder in the heir-at-law of the settlor. The heir-at-law could not be found. The solicitors refused to deliver up the deeds to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover possession of the deeds from the solicitors without the concurrence of the heir; but that the deeds must be deposited in court, the plaintiffs having liberty to inspect and make copies of them. Wright v. Robothum, 55 L. J., Ch. 791; 33 Ch. D. 106; 55 L. T. 241; 34 W. R. 668-C. A.

The fact that the tenant for life has mortgaged

An equitable tenant for life of settled land was declared entitled to the custody of the title deeds upon his undertaking not to part with the deeds except with the consent of the trustees. and to produce them at all reasonable times. Burnaby's Settled Estate, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 664; 42 Ch. D. 721; 61 L. T. 22.

Before the Settled Land Acts. ]-A legal tenant for life of freeholds is entitled to the custody of the title deeds; and the court will not interfere as between a tenant for life and remainderman, except where there is danger to the safety of the deeds if left in the hands of the tenant for life, or where the court requires the deeds for the purpose of carrying out frusts relating to the property. Leathes v. Leathes, 46 L. J., Ch. 562; 5 Ch. D. 221; 36 L. T. 646; 25 W. R. 492.

On an application by a tenant for life in remainder of settled estates for the title deeds to be deposited in court:—Held, that the tenant for life in possession was entitled to their enstody.

A legal tenant for life has a right to recover from a contingent remainderman the possession of the title deeds. Altrond v. Heywood, 1 H. & C. 745; 32 L. J., Ex. 153; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 108; 7 L. T. 640; 11 W. R. 291.

With respect to the title deeds, it is a settled doctrine that this court never interferes as to the possession of deeds between a father tenant for 32 W. R. 737-C. A.

case of a stranger tenant for life the court will interfere, especially when the deeds are in court. Warren v. Rudall, 1 Johns. & Hem. 13. And see Pyncent v. Pyncent, 3 Atk. 571.

The legal tenant for life is entitled to the ens-tody of the title deeds, and they will not be ordered to be deposited in court merely because the tenant for life is heir-at-law, and claims the immediate reversion against the residuary devisce. Garner v. Hannyngton, 22 Beav. 627.

A testator devised his real estate in strict settlement, giving to trustees a power of sale and exchange, to be exercised with the consent of the person entitled in possession, if of full age; and he bequeathed his residuary personalty to the trustees upon the trusts declared concerning the moneys to arise from sales under the power. Shortly after his death a decree was made at the suit of the first tenant for life, then an infant, for the execution of the trusts of the will. Parts of the estate were sold under the power, and the money paid into court, and a large fund was there applicable to the purchase of real estates. After the tenant for life came of age inquiries were directed as to the investment of part of the funds in real estate, and as to the propriety of applying for a private estate act, which inquiries were still being prosecuted. Shortly after this the tenant for life applied to the court, that the trustees might be ordered to deliver to her the title deeds of the estate, subject to the limitations of the will, which application was refused by Stuart, V.-C. :-Held, that as a snit affecting the estates was being prosecuted, the custody of the deeds did not depend on the question who had the legal right to them, but on the question what custody was most convenient for the purposes of the suit; and that the Court of Appeal would not interfere with his interest is a strong reason for not granting the discretion of the Vice-Chancellor on the his application for the custody of the title deeds, subject. Stinford v. Roberts, L. R. 6. Ch. 307; 19. W. R. 552.

Deeds delivered to an equitable tenant for life in possession on giving security. Langualte (Lady) v. Briggs, 8 De G., M. & G. 391; 26 L. J., Ch. 27; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 982; 4 W. R. 703.

Devise of residnary real estate to trustees to permit the testator's sister, if single, to receive the rents for life without power of anticipation, but if either should marry or die, then the single one or survivor to take the whole, but if both married, on trust to sell and divide the proceeds among testator's nephews and nieces. title deeds having passed into the possession of the surviving tenant for life, on a bill filed by the trustees, the court refused to direct the tenant for life to deliver up the decas to the trustees. Taylor v. Sparrow, 4 Giff. 703; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1226; 9 L. T. 438.

-- Married Woman-No Limitation to Separate Use.]—The trustee in bankruptey of a husband whose wife is legal tenant for life of land (not to her separate use) has no absolute right to the custody of the title deeds of the land during the coverture, but the court has a discretion as to the custody. In a case in which there was evidence that a bankrupt's wife was about to apply to the Divorce Court for the dissolution of the marriage :- Held, that the title deeds of the land, of which she was tenant for life, ought to be ordered into court. Rogers, Ex parte, Pyatt, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 936; 26 Ch. D. 31; 51 L.T. 177; that the party who has a freehold estate has a 1829, by a party claiming through the convey-right to the title deeds, a mortgage in fee, with ance to W. Newton v. Beck, 3 H. & N. 220; 27 L. J., Ex. 272; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 340; 6 W. R. 443.

legal mortgagee had asked for the deeds A which the mortgagor, who was his solicitor, made excuses for not giving him. The mortgagor afterwards deposited the deeds with another mortgagee as security for the money advanced without notice of the legal mortgage :- Held, that the legal mortgagee was entitled to recover the deeds from the mortgagee by deposit. Manners v. Mew, 54 L, J., Ch. 909; 29 Ch. D. 725; 53 L. T. 84.

Where a purchaser of a small part of an estate takes a covenant from the vendor to produce the title deeds whenever it shall be necessary, and the deeds afterwards come into the purchaser's possession, on his taking a mortgage of the other part of the estate, and he then assigns the mortgage to a third person, not mentioning the deeds, such third person cannot maintain trover against him for the deeds, Yea v. Field, 2 Term Rep. 708 : 1 R R 603.

An estate comprised in an ante-muptial settlement was mortgaged for a term of years by the husband and wife in exercise of a power of appointment. The mortgage deed contained an assignment of the title deeds. The mortgage term was assigned, and assigned over, but neither assignment contained any mention of the deeds. The original mortgagee handed back the deeds to the husband mortgagor, who deposited the deeds with the defendants as collateral security for a sum of money advanced to him by a client of the defendants. The husband and wife then exercised the power of appointment in the settlement, reserving a power of appointment to the survivor. Upon the death of the survivor, the widow appointed to herself in fee :- Held, that she was entitled to recover possession of the deeds upon paving off the amount of the original advance. for although the original mortgagee was bound to give them up to the assignce of the mortgage term if required, yet, as he was not so required, the subsequent delivery of them to the husband of the plaintiff curred to the benefit of himself and the plaintiff, and upon his death they belonged to the plaintiff, by virtue of her equity of redemption, and of the appointment to herself in fee. Davies v. Vernon, 6 Q. B. 443; 14 L. J., Q. B. 30.

A mortgagee by demise for a term, but whose mortgage does not contain a grant of the title deeds, is not entitled to the deeds relating to the freehold. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765. S. P., Austin v. Croome, Car. & M. 853

Equitable Mortgagee.]—An estate was conveyed in 1803 by J. B. to W. H., who, in 1812, conveyed it to A. H., and he sold it in 1826 to the plaintiff. The original vendor did not deliver up the title deeds. In 1824 he was sued by the owner of the estate for the deeds, and a verdict was recovered against him, but the judgment was not docqueted. He absconded, and in 1825 obtained a sum of money, as on a mortgage of the covenant, and that he had no right to require them estate, from one of the defendants, with whom to be delivered to the receiver in the cause. Price, 3 B. & Ad. 170. S. C. nom. Harrington v. Glenn, 1 L. J., K. B. 122. And see Daris v. Vernon, supra.

> Jointress.]-Primâ facie title deeds are property in the custody of tenant for life, but may be taken from a jointress upon her jointure being confirmed. Ford v. Peering, 1 Ves. J. 76.

Trustee. ]-A testatrix bequeathed a leasehold estate to trustees and executors in trust for sale, and gave one of such executors a beneficial interest for his life in one-fourth part of the estate. The latter executor, being at the time indebted to the estate of the testatrix, made an assignment of his beneficial interest by way of mortgage, to seenre a private debt which he owed to a creditor, and deposited the title deeds with a creditor :- Held, on a bill by his coexecutors to recover the title deeds, that the estate of the testatrix was entitled to a lien on the interest of the defaulting executor in the premises comprised in the deeds, in priority to the lien created by his assignment to the mortgagee, and the court decreed the title deeds to be delivered up, with a declaration that they belonged to the three trustees. Cole v. Muddle, 10 Hare, 186; 22 L. J., Ch. 401; 16 Jur. 853.

Negligence cannot be imputed to trustees for leaving documents of title in the hands of one of their number, and allowing him to receive the income, and no authority to deal with the property can be implied, even in favour of a bona fide purchaser for such trustee. Cottum v. Eastern Counties Ry., 1 J. & H. 243; 30 L. J., Ch. 217; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1367; 3 L. T. 465; 9 W. R. 94.

As against tenant for life, see col. 433, supra. F. and W., as solicitors for the tenant for life. held the title deeds, which afterwards passed into the possession of W. and C., their successors.
The tenant for life died, and the estate then stood limited, first to F. and W. for five hundred years to seenre a sum of 2,000%, with remainder to trustees for six hundred years to secure a jointnre and portions, with remainder to A. B. in tail. A. B. being an infant, a suit was instituted on his behalf, in which the 2,000%, was raised on the security of the term. Upon that occasion, F, and W. covenanted with the mortgagees to produce the title deeds from time to time, and not to part with them ; but they were relievable from the covenant on certain terms. A receiver was appointed in the suit, and the court directed the costs of the solicitors of the suit to remain charges upon the estate at interest. W. and C. were solicitors in the suit for A. B. Hotham v. Somerrille, 5 Beav. 360; 6 Jur. 861,

A. B., upon coming of age, presented a petition for the delivery of the title deeds :-Held, that (independently of the covenant) W. and C. held the deeds for A. B., and not for the termors; but the covenant having been entered into for the benefit of the infant, F. and W. were not bound to part with the deeds until released from their covenants :-Held, also, that W. was not entitled to hold the deeds for the trustees of the term of six hundred years, or for any costs other than those of seeing himself properly released from the The court will not take a trust deed out of the Plaintiff, as heir-at-law of C., sued defendant rainth, is never possession of a title deed under the following circumstances: By a conveyance of the 12th November, 1862, certain freehold property was conveyed to C. in fee. On the 13th July, 1865, C., by an ante-mutial settlement of that date, in consideration of his intended marriage with the defendant's sister, charged the said property with the payment, after his death, of a yearly annuity of 12l. to her during her life, and secured the same by a grant of the said property to the defendant, as trustee for his sister, for a term of 100 years, with the usual powers of distress and entry, &c., in case of the quarterly payments of the annuity being in arrear. Upon the execution of the settlement C. handed the deed of conveyance of the 12th November, 1862, to the defendant and said to him, "You shall have the deed of the honse to hold in your possession for the safety of your sister," and at the same time a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the conveyance, and an undertaking to deliver it to C. or his assigns, on the fulfilment of the trusts of the settlement, was signed by the defendant. The marriage took place, and on C's subsequent death, in December, 1875, the plaintiff, as his eldest son and heir-at-law, brought an action in the county court against defendant to recover possession of the conveyance of 12th November, 1862. The county court judge held, in favour of the plaintiff, that he was entitled to recover the deed in question :- Held, that the defendant, as trustee of the settlement, was entitled to retain possession of the deed of conveyance in question during the continuance of the trusts of the settlement on the ground that it was delivered to him by C., the settlor, as a further security for the payment of the annuity, and that the possession of it enabled him the better to perform L. - Deeds in Court-Delivery out. ]-Where a suit affecting an estate is being prosecuted, the right of custody of the deeds does not depend on the question who has the legal right to them, but on the question what enstedy is most convenient for the purposes of the suit. The Court of Appeal will not interfere with the discretion of the judge of first instance. Stunford v. Roberts, L. R. 6 Ch. 307; 19 W. R. 552.

Deeds in possession of court delivered up to tenant for life. Webb v. Webb, Dick. 298.

Title deeds delivered out of court to tenant for life, except when brought into court under an order for safe custody. Webb v. Lymington (Lord), 1 Eden, 8.

Title deeds delivered out of court, upon the application of the trustees and the tenant for life. Duncombe v. Mayer, 8 Ves. 320.

Deeds brought into court by the executor, under the common order for production of documents made in a creditor's suit, will, after the debts are paid, be ordered to be delivered out to the party by whom they were deposited, and the court refused to order such deeds to be delivered to the plaintiff in the cause, although he was the tenant for life of the estate comprised in the deeds. Plunkett v. Lewis, 6 Hare, 65.

A sait was instituted for raising portions out possession of the bankrupt's trustees. Holder, of a settled estate. Pending the suit, the tenant Exparte, 3 Deac. & C. 276; 2 L. J., Bk. for life took a number of the leases to Paris. He afterwards, under an order of the court, brought the whole of the title deeds and leases into court, for the purposes of the suit. The purposes of the suit having been satisfied, and the portions raised by mortgage, he applied to have the title deeds and leases given up to him, which applica-tion was opposed by the mortgagees, and was-refused by Kindersley, V.-C. :—Held, by Kuight Brnce, L.J., that as the tenant for life had, on a former occasion, taken some of the deeds abroad, the delivery of them to him ought not to be ordered without the consent of the mortgagees. Jenner v. Morris, L. R. 1 Ch. 603; 14 W. R. 1003.

Per Turner, L.J., that the deeds ought to be delivered to him, on his giving sufficient security for their safe custody and production, and for returning them to court when ordered. Ib.

- To a Stranger. ]-A person who has lent his deeds for the purposes of an action to which he is not a party, which are brought into the master's office, may apply in the action to have the deeds delivered out to him, Marriott v. White, I Sim & S. 17.

- In other Cases. -A, having agreed to purchase of B. the remainder of a term, the latter delivered to him the lease, in order that he might get an assignment made out : A. then obtained an enlargement of the term from the original landlord, and refused to accept an assignment or pay the full price agreed upon, because B.'s under-tenant had removed some fixtures :- Held, that B, might insist on A. accepting the assignment, and after demand and refusal of the lease might maintain trover for it. Parry v. Frame, 2 Bus. & P. 451; 5 R. R. 651.

Upon the contract for the sale of an estate, the title and abstract to be made at the vendor's expense, the purchaser is entitled to the enstedy the trusts of the settlement with the execution of of the abstract until either the purchase is which he was charged. Chrin v. Thomas, 46 finally rescinded by consent or declared impracticable by the court. When the contract is determined the vendor is entitled to have the abstract delivered back to him. If the sale proceeds, the abstract becomes the property of the purchaser. Roberts v. Wyatt, 2 Taunt, 268; 11 R. R. 566.

> Ordering into Court. ]-Where tenant for life is satisfied, and does not care about the title, but remainderman is not; court will take care of the deeds, and not leave them in the hands of a third person who has no right to prejudice the remainderman. Ford v. Peering, I Ves. J. 78.

> A testator charged annuities exclusively on his real estate, the legal estate of which he devised to trustees, upon trust to pay the rents to or permit the same to be received by one for life, with remainders over. On the testator's death the tenant for life took possession of the estate and title deeds, and he kept down the annuities, but cut down some timber. The trustees acquiesced for four years, but afterwards proceeded by action to recover the deeds, and to receive the rents. The court, by motion, restrained the proceedings, on the tenant for life undertaking to keep down the annuities, not to grant leases or cut timber without the consent of the trustees, and bringing the deeds into court. Denton y. Denton, 7 Benv. 388; 8 Jur. 388.

rupt's Wife.]—The trustee in bankruptey of a husband, whose wife is legal tenant for life of land (not to her separate use) has no absolute right to the custody of the title deeds of the land during the coverture, but the court has a discretion as to the custody. In a case in which there was evidence that a bankrupt's wife was about to apply to the Divorce Court for the dissolution of the marriage :- Held, that the title deeds of land, of which she was legal tenant for life, ought not to be delivered to the trustee in and other cases, col. 479, post. the bankruptey, but ought to be retained in court, where the county court judge had, upon the trustee's application for delivery to him, ordered Trusce's application for derivery to finit, ordered them to be deposited. Rogers, Exparts, Pyatt, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 936; 26 Ch. D. 31; 51 L. T. 177; 32 W. B. 737—C. A.

Per Cotton, L.J.:-Whether under ordinary circumstances, an assignce from a husband of his right to receive during the coverture the rents of land of which his wife is legal tenant for life, is entitled as a matter of course to the enstody of the title deeds, quere. Ib.

Production of-By Trustee-To Cestui que Trust. - Prima facie, and in the absence of any special circumstances, a cestui que trust, even though he be only interested in the proceeds of the sale of land, is entitled to the production and inspection of all title deeds and other documents relating to the trust estate which are in the possession of the trustees. One cestui que trust can enforce his right against the trustees, without bringing before the court the other persons beneficially interested in the property when they have no higher right than himself. - By Tenant for Life-Contingent Re-mainder, - Semble, bill does not lie by purchaser from contingent remainderman for inspection of title deeds in hands of tenant for life. Noel v. Ward, 1 Madd, 322; 16 R. R. 229,

- Vested Remainder.]-Any remainderman whose estate is vested may maintain a bill against the tenant for life, for the sole purpose of production and inspection of the muniments of title. Davis v. Dysart (Earl), 20 Beav. 405; 24 L. J., Ch. 381; 1 Jur. (N.s.) 748; 3 Eq. Rep. 599; 3 W. R. 893.

If the tenant for life suggests that the purpose for which production is required is improper, the onus is on him to shew it. Ib.

This right, however, only exists when the title of the remainderman is undisputed; for, if there be a reasonable cause for litigating his title, he cannot compel reduction. Ib.

When the title of a remainderman is clear, the court will, at his instance, compel the remainderman to produce the title deeds; but if his title is not clear, the court will not, incidentally, decide in favour of the remainderman's title to the estate, in a suit merely for the production of the title deeds. Pennell v. Dysart (Eurl), 27 Beav. 542.

Absence of Title Deeds-Postponing-Right of Trustee.]-In order to postpone any party to a cause in respect of a prior mortgage or incumbranec, on the ground that you have got the title deeds, it must be shewn that you have got them through gross negligence on the part of

Trustee in Bankruptev-Life Estate of Bank- on you of shewing this. Carter v. Carter, 3 Kay & J. 618; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.)

> To allow title deeds to remain with a party, who, besides having a beneficial interest in the property, is also a trustee to others, is not gross negligence : for, qua trustee, he is the right person to hold them. Ib.

5. RELEASE.

a. Power to Give.

Nominal Parties.]—Where a lessor, with the permission of a bailiff, who had made for her a distress for rent, commenced in the bailiff's name an action against the sheriff for taking insufficient pledges, and the bailiff afterwards, without the lessor's privity, released the sheriff, the court set aside the release, and a plea thereof puis darrein continuance, Hickey v. Burt, 7 Taunt. 48; 17 R. R. 440.

If a person who is sued by a landlord, in the name of his tenant, procures a release from the nominal plaintiff, the court will order the release to be delivered up, and permit the landlord to proceed. Payne v. Royers, 1 Dongl. 407.

Assignees.]—Where one of several assignees of a bankrupt releases the cause of action, and the release is pleaded, the court will set aside the plea, suspicion being thrown on the defendant's poss, asspection being arrown out the derendant's conduct in the transaction, the co-plaintiffs indemnifying the plaintiff, who had given the release, against costs. Johnson v. Holdswarth, 4 D. P. C. 63.

Where a release by the obligee of a bond was deaded to an action by his assignee against the obligor in the name of the obligee :- Held, that the special circumstances under which the release was given, and that it was obtained by fraud, might be replied to avoid the release, Craib v. D'Aeth, 7 Term Rep. 670; 1 Bos. & P. 448, 11, Executors.]-Where an action was brought by two as executors, the court refused to set aside a plea of release given by one. Anon., 1 Chit. 391, n.

And where an action was brought by two ont of four executors, and the two who were not joined in the action released puis darrein continuance, the court refused to set aside the plea, the plaintiff having failed to make out a case of the plannin laving lanea to make out a case on fraud. Herbert v. Pijott, 2 C. & M. 384; † Tyr. 285; 2 D. P. C. 392; 3 L. J., Ex. 79.
Where husband and wife lived separately under a deed, by which he stipulated that she

the person you seek to postpone, and the onus is should enjoy as her separate property all effects,

&c., which she might acquire, and that he would not do any act to impede the operation of that deed; and the wife having as executrix commenced an action on a promissory note against the defendant, in the names of her husband and herself, and the husband released the debt, which release was pleaded pais darrein continuance; the court ordered such plea to be taken off the record, and the release to be given up to be cancelled. Innell v. Newman, 4 B. & Ald, 419.

Partners. ]-A declaration on a policy of insurance on goods on board a ship, at the suit of D. W. and A. W., alleged that the policy was made by them as well in their own name as for and in the name of every other person to whom the same did appertain; and it averred that Z. and the plaintiff A. W., or one of them, were or was, then and thenceforth until the loss, interested in the goods. The defendant pleaded a release by D. W. for himself and his partner A. W.:—Held, that the plea was a good answer to the action. Wilkinson v. Lindo, 7 M. & W. 81.

Where two plaintiffs (as partners) instructed their attorney to proceed to trial in an action brought by them against the defendant for misrepresentation as to their solvency, and a few days before the trial one of them gave a release refused to interfere. Furnival v. Weston, 7 Moore, 356; 24 R. R. 687.

A partner sued in equity for a money demand, alleged by his bill that his co-partner had released the debt, which was still due to the partnership :- Held, that the release created such a timetary in string at flaw for the debt, that the bill was not demurrable for want of equity. Piercy v. Flynney, 40 L. J., Ch. 404; L. R. 12 Eq. 69; 19 W. R. 710.

In an action for a partnership debt, a covenant not to sue entered into by one only of the partners cannot be set up as a release. Walmersley v. Cooper, 3 P. & D. 149; 11 A. & E. 216; 10 L. J., Q. B. 49.

Where Rights of Third Parties Intervene— Equity to a Settlement.]—If the wife insist upon her equity against the assignees in bankruptey of her husband, it attaches for the benefit of her children, and she cannot afterwards release it in favour of her husband. Burker v. Leu, 6 Madd, 330.

Solicitor-Lien. ]-A solicitor has a lien upon costs ordered to be paid to his client upon a petition in bankruptcy, although there be no fund in court; nor can the client release the benefit of the order to the prejudice of the solicitor. Bryant, Ex parte, 2 Rose, 237.

By Appointee under Power. ]-Appointment by will (professedly in execution of a power in a marriage settlement) to A. for life, or until he should encumber, and upon his death or incumbering to the wife of A. for life for her separate use, and after her death to A.'s children, and if asse, and titler are death to A. 8 cliniters, and the A. should die without wife or children to B., who was A.'s brother. A. and B. took other benefits under the will. The appointment to the wife and children of A. being an excessive execution of the power :-Held, that A. was bound to elect, but that B. might release to A. all his interest under the appointment. Kater v. Roget, 4 Y. & Coll. 18. M'Clel. 495: 28 R. R. 735.

Trustees.]—A plea puis darrein continuance of a release by one of several plaintiffs was set aside without costs, on the terms of an indemnity being given to the plaintiff who had released the action, although the consent of such plaintiff had not been obtained before the action was brought, it appearing that no consideration had been given for the release, and that the plaintiffs such as trustees for the creditors of an insolvent person. Mountstephen v. Brooke, 1 Chit. 390; 22 R. R. 805.

A court of equity looks with considerablejealousy at a release executed by a young lady, at or shortly after attaining twenty-one, upon a settlement of accounts between her and her trustees. Parker v. Blowam, 20 Beav. 295.

A general release given by a trustee, in fraud of his trust, is void: where, therefore, a testator bequeathed premises to a trustee, to receive the rents for the benefit of his children, and gavehim power to demise the same for a term, which he did, and received the rents, but did not apply them to the purposes of the trust; on which a bill in equity was filed against him, by one of the parties beneficially interested under the will. and a receiver was appointed, who sned the lessees in the name of the trustee for nonpayment of rent, and they pleaded a release, exe-ented to them by the trustee pending the suit, the court ordered the plea to be set aside, and days before the trial one of them gave a release the release to be delivered up to be cancelled to the defendant, without the knowledge of or Manning v. Chw., 7 Moore, 617; 1 L. J. (O.S.) (C. P. 36.

Pauper Litigants. ]-A plaintiff sning in forma panperis may execute a release of the cause of action to the defendant without the consent or knowledge of his attorney, if it is done bona fidewith a view to settle the action, and not from difficulty in suing at law for the debt, that the any intention to deprive the attorney of his costs. Jones v. Bonner, 5 D. & L. 718; 2 Ex. 230; 17 L. J., Ex. 343.

> Against Strangers. ]-Where a debt, not assignable at law, has been equitably assigned for value, and the debtor has had notice of the assignment, all payments which he may thereafter make to the purchaser on account of the debt are well made so far as the debtor is concerued, although the purchaser may have sold the debt, provided the debtor has no notice of the sale; nor is it absolutely necessary for him, ou making such payment, to require production of the original assignment. The purchaser of a debt may execute to the debtor a release for value of the debt, valid as against an assignee from the purchaser, if the debtor has not, at the time when the release is executed, notice of the assignment. Stocks v. Dobson, 4 Dc G., M. & G. 11; 22 L. J., Ch. 884; 17 Jur. 539.

b. What Amounts to.

i. In general.

Form. ]-There is no authority to say a release must be signed, as well as sealed and delivered, to make it effectual. Taunton v. Pepler, 6 Madd, 166.

Where Release under Seal necessary. ]charge on lands created by deed cannot be discharged but by deed, or at least by some formal act of release. Cupit v. Jackson, 13 Price, 721; Receipt in Writing.] — When a receipt has v. Freer, 6 Bing, 547; 4 M. & P. 305; 8 L. J. been given under scal it discharges at law all (o.s.) C. P. 176; 31 R. R. 489. canse of action, and can only be set aside by the equitable jurisdiction of a court of law; but a mere receipt in writing has no such effect; it amounts simply to an acknowledgment of money amounts simply to infacts to what action, and it may be impossed or explained by parol evidence. Lee v. Laurashire and Yorkshire Ry., L. R. 6 Ch. 527; 25 L. T. 77; 19 W. R. 729.

Release or Covenant not to Sue.]—A composiis to be treated as a covenant not to sue, and not as a release, when such is evidently the intention of the parties. A release in terms cannot be treated as a release if it be followed by a saving clause against certain parties. Currey v. Armitage, 6 W. R. 516.

When there is an absolute release of the principal debtor, the remedy against the surety is gone, because the debt is extinguished. Where such a release is given no right can be reserved, because the debt is satisfied, and no right of recourse remains when the debt is gone. Language imputing an absolute release may be construed as a covenant by the creditor not to sue the principal debtor when that intention appears, leaving such debtor liable to make good any claims for relief at the instance of his sureties. But a covenant not to sue the principal debtor is a partial discharge only, and, although expressly stipulated, is ineffectual if the discharge given is in effect absolute. Commercial Bank of Tasmania v. Jones, 62 L. J., P. C. 104; [1893] A. C. 313; 1 R. 367; 68 L. T. 776; 42 W. R. 256; 57 J. P. 644-P. C.

Covenant not to Sue, ]-A covenant not to sue one of two joint debtors does not operate as a release to the other. Hutton v. Eyre, 6 Taunt. 289; 1 Marsh 603: 16 R. R. 619.

If the obligee of a bond covenants not to sue one of two joint and several obligors, and if he does, that the deed of covenant may be pleaded in bar, he may still sue the other obligor. v. Newhall, 8 Term Rep. 168.

In an action for a partnership debt a covenant not to sue entered into by one of two of the partners cannot be set up as a release. Walmesley v. Cooper, 3 P. & D. 149; 11 A. & E. 216; 10 L, J., Q. B. 49.

A covenant not to sue one of two joint tortfeasors does not operate as a release so as to discharge the other. An agreement to accept a sum of money from one of two joint tortfeasors in full discharge of his liability, without prejudice to the right to claim against the other, ought to be construed, not as a release, but as a covenant uot to sue. Duck v. Mayeu, 62 L. J., Q. B. 69; [1892] 2 Q. B. 511; 4 R. 38; 67 L. T. 547; 41 W. R. 56; 57 J. P. 23—C. A.

- For a Limited Time. |- A covenant not to sue upon a simple contract debt for a limited time is not pleadable in bar of an action for such debt. Thimbleby v. Barrow, 3 M. & W. 210; 7 L. J., Ex. 128.

A covenant not to sue upon a bond during the life of the obligor; and that if any person to whom the obligee should assign the bond should recover the principal, the obligee would pay the obligor during his life interest on the amount recovered, is no bar to an action by the assignee of the bond in the name of the obligee. Morley nanted to pay the interest in default.

- Principal and Surety.] - A declaration stated that an action had been commenced by the public officer of a banking co-partnership against T, for the recovery of the amount of a bill of exchange drawn by him upon and accepted by the defendant for 1.250l.; that while the action was pending, it was agreed between the company, T. and the defendant, that the action should be settled as follows: 250l. and 500l. by the promissory notes of T., and 500l. by the defendant's promissory note at twelve months, the defendant consenting to the company appropriating the securities held by them to the payment of such balance, and the defendant agreeing to give them a power to sell the properties mentioned in the securities, the company to forego all interest on receiving the three notes, and to guarantee to give up the bill sued on and the 1,000L bill received on account of the said bill. The declaration averred that the company had performed all things on their part to be performed, and had always been ready and willing to settle the action. Breach, that the defendant did not nor would give the company the promissory note for 500l. nor the power of sale. Plea, that the defendant entered into the agreement jointly with M., B. and J., and that after breach of the agreement by an indenture made between the nominal plaintiffs in this action (one of whom was the public officer of the company) of the first part, the directors of the company of the second part, the defendant, M., B. and J. of the third part, and T. of the M., B. and J. of the third part, and a to another fourth part, the public officer on behalf of the company did remise, release and for ever discharge M., B. and J. of and from the action, and all actions and suits, causes of action und debts whatsoever without the consent of the defendence of the control of the co dant, and thereby released the defendant from the same :- Held, that the indonture set out in the plea did not operate as a release, but only as a covenant not to sue. Henderson v. Stobart, 5 Ex. 99; 19 L. J., Ex. 135.

A. and B. entered into a joint and several bond, conditioned for payment of moneys due by B. to a bank. After the making of the bond, the bank, without the privity or consent of B., executed a deed, whereby the bank released B. from all actions, &c., with a proviso that nothing therein contained was to extend to prevent the bank from sning any other person than B., who might be liable to make good to the bank any money due from B., or as being jointly or sever-ally bound with B. in any bond, &c., as if the deed had not been executed, it being understood and agreed, that as regards any such suits, the deed should not operate or be pleaded in bar or as a release :-Held, first, that this deed operated only as a covenant not to sue B., and not as a Price v. Barker, 4 El. & Bl. 760; 3 C. L. R. 927; 24 L. J., Q. B. 130; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 775.

Held, secondly, that A. was not discharged by the execution of the deed without his consent; the effect of a covenant not to sue the principal debtor qualified by a reserve of the remedies, against a surety being to allow the surety to retain all his remedies over against the principal, and the covenant not to sue operating only so far as the rights of the surety may not be affected. Ib. ceeds amongst his creditors; the creditors releasing the debror from the debts due to them respectively; but there was a proviso in the deed that nothing therein should affect any right or remedy which any creditor might have against any other person in respect of any debt due by the debtor:—Held, that this deed only amounted to a covenant not to sue the debtor, and that the surety was not released, but that the surety could pay off the principal to the creditor and recover the amount from the debtor. Green v. Wynn, 38 L. J., Ch. 220; L. R. 4 Ch. 204; 20 L. T. 131; 17 W. R. 385.

To an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant pleaded that the causes of action accrued to the plaintiffs against himself and A., B. and C. jointly, and not otherwise, and not separately against the defendant, and that he and A. B. and C. were jointly liable in respect of the causes of action, and not otherwise; and that the plaintiffs by deed released A., B. and C. from the causes of action. Replication, that this deed was a deed of assignment by A., B. and C. of their estate and effects for the benefit of their creditors, and contained words purporting, if considered without reference to any other part of the deed, to release as in the plea pleaded, but that, in another and earlier part of the deed, it was agreed and declared in the words following, that is to say, "that it shall be lawful for the creditors to execute these presents without prejudice to any mortgage, lien, or security which they may have for their debts, or any part thereof, or to any claim against any surety or sureties, or any other person or persons who may be liable for the payment thereof"; and that all the creditors who executed the deed, executed the same without prejudice, as aforesaid; and so the plaintiffs say that the defendant was not released, as in and by the plea is supposed:—Held, that, taking the plea and replication together, the deed appeared to amount only to a covenant not to sue A., B. and C., and not to a release, and con-sequently that the liability of the defendant. whether joint only, or joint and several, was not thereby discharged. Willis v. De Custro, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 216; 27 L. J., C. P. 243; 6 W. R. 500.

Executory Agreement.]-An executory agreement is a cause of action, and cannot be pleaded in bar to another cause of action. Rowe, 2 Bligh, 596; 21 R. R. 119.

Such an agreement is totally different from a release under the scal; but considered as in the nature of a release, it could only be applied to such part of the relief sought by the bill as relates to the questions at issue between the plaintiff and the party who proposes to have the benefit of the agreement by way of plen. It could not be pleaded in bar to the whole relief; for the cause must, at all events, proceed as to the relief sought against the other parties. Ib.

A plea of an executory agreement, containing no averments that all the parties to the agreement are ready to perform it, is not only insufficient for want of proper averments, but could not be made a good plea by any amendment; because it is not a proper subject of plea, but a Compromise of Action.]-In an action for entering the plaintiff's close, and carrying away hay, the defendants pleaded that the trespasses were committed by them jointly with C., and that afterwards certain disputes were pending between C and the plaintiff, concerning claims of C. against the plaintiff, in respect of the farm occupied by him under the plaintiff, and conoccupied by him under the plaintiff, and con-cerning claims by the plaintiff against C. in respect of the causes of action in the declara-tion mentioned; and that the plaintiff agreed to release C. from all claims, and did accordingly relinquish all claims against him in respect of the causes of action :- Held, that this plea was sustained by proof of an agreement, whereby in consideration that C. (who had been tenant of a farm under the plaintiff, and had held over the same, under colour of a claim for improve-ments) acknowledged that he had no claim against the plaintiff, the plaintiff "relinquished all claims against C, for mesue profits and rent, or for holding over," the action being substantially an action for mesue profits. Hey v. Moorhouse, 8 Scott, 156; 6 Bing. (N.O.) 52; 9 L. J., C. P. 113.

Assignment of Remedies. - To an action by indorsees against an indorser of a bill of exchange, he pleaded a deed of release, alleged to have been executed by the plaintiffs and other ereditors of one Crokat, a prior indoser. The deed appeared to have been executed by the plaintiffs alone, and was in form a more assignment by the plaintiffs to one Sonter, of the debt due to them from Crokat, putting Souter in their place with regard to the remedy against Crokat on the bill, the consideration for such assignment being 2s. 6d. in the pound on the amount of the debt :- Held, that this deed did. not sustain the plea. Houlditch v. Curty, 6 Scott, 209; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 411; 7 L. J., C. P. 217.

Collateral Undertaking.]—At the time of executing a bond to secure a sum of money, the obligors procured a letter from the obligee, stating his intention not to call in the money within a specified period, if the interest was regularly paid:—Held, to be a binding undertaking. Norton v. Wood, 1 Russ, & Mylne, 178; taking, Nor 32 R. R. 181.

Contract to Give-Extent of. ]-The defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff within two months 1,500l., and, in consideration thereof, the plaintiff agreed to deliver up all securities in his possession, under which he claimed any debt against the estate of W., deceased, to execute a general release of all claims on the estate of W. for matters between the plaintiff and W, to the day of his decease, and between the trustees and representative of W. to the date of the agree-ment, except 600L, and interest due on a bond given by W., which the defendant agreed to pay to the person entitled thereto. In an action, stating unitual promises to perform the agree-ment, the plaintiff averred that he was ready and willing to deliver up all securities under which he claimed any debt against the estate of which he claimed any debt against the estate of w., and to execute a general release of all claims on the estate of W. for matters between the plaintiff and W., to the day of his decease, and assigned for breach non-payment of the because it is not a proper surject or pica, our a lon the coact of it. In manager man mere right of action, and cannot be a bar to plaintiff and W, to the day of his decease, another suit instituted by the party against and assigned for breach non-payment of the whom the right of action is claimed, especially 1,500% and 600%, or either of them:—Held, that that this defect would not be cared by a verdict; but that in this case it appeared that the payment of the money was intended to precede the release, and, therefore, the averment was not necessary, and the declaration well enough.

Smith v. Woodhouse, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 233— Ex Cb

A nephew, who was the heir-at-law and sole next of kin of the testator, having taken the opinion of counsel as to the widow's rights under the husband's will, and being advised that she took the residue absolutely, contracted to sell to her a house which had descended to him as heir; and part of the agreement was, that he should release all demands against her as executrix, or against her deceased husband's personal estate: a general release, executed in pursuance of this agreement, was held to be valid, and to invest the stock in the executrix absolutely, though it made no specific mention acsolutely, though it made no specific mention of the stock. Collier v. Squire, 3 Russ. 467; 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 186; 27 R. R. 112.

A defendant signed an instrument, addressed to the plaintiff, in the following terms:-"In consideration of your having, by indenture, agreed to accept payment of the debt owing to you by A., by the following instalments (that is to say), 10s. in the pound on the 18th of August next, I promise to guarantee the payment of the instalments": and delivered it to the plaintiff in exchange for an indenture executed by the plaintiff ;-Held, that the true construction of the instrument was, that the defendant made his promise in consideration that the plaintiff would execute an indenture and release A. : and consequently, that the execution of the instrument was not an admission by the defendant that the plaintiff had released A., and furnished no evidence in support of an issue taken on an allegation in the declaration, that the plaintiff had released A. King v. Cole, 2 Ex. 628; 17 L. J., Ex. 283.

A declaration recited an agreement in writing, by which defendant agreed to permit plaintiff to occupy certain lands until the 29th of September, 1843, the plaintiff paving therefor on that day, as he thereby agreed to do, 30%, as rent for the same, and then to deliver up the premises to the defendant in good repair, and meantime to cultivate the same in a husbandlike manner; and that, upon the plaintiff quitting the premises, paying the rent, and observing the other stipulatious, and releasing the defendant from all claims under the will of G., as also releasing to the defendant all the lands devised by G., which the plaintiff agreed to do, the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 2001, with interest from the 29th September, 1842. It was agreed that all releases required by the defendant should be prepared by his attorney. Averment, that the plaintiff was ready and willing to deliver up the premises, and to pay the rent, and to release the defendant (as agreed on). Breach, that although the 29th September elapsed, and although a reasonable time clapsed between that day and the commencement of the action for the payment of the 2007., and although no release was prepared by the defendant's attorney before that day, non-payment of the 200l, by the defendant. Plea, that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to deliver up the premises :- Held, that the acts to be done by the plaintiff were not conditions precedent to nor independent of, 4 L. T. 795; 9 W. R. 848.

the release described in the declaration was not | but concurrent with the payment of the 2001, co-extensive with that agreed to be given, and by the defendant; that it was therefore sufficient for the plaintiff to aver his readiness and willingness to do them, without alleging performance: but that this averment was necessary, and, therefore, that the plea was good, as raising a material issue. Giles v. Giles, 9 Q. B. 164; 15 L. J., Q. B. 387; 11 Jur. 83.

A declaration, after reciting that defendant was possessed, for the residue of a term of years, of a messuage and premises, and of fixtures annexed to the premises, averred, that the plaintiff agreed with the defendant to purchase of him the residue of the term in the messuage and premises, with the appartenances and the fixtures; and the defendant agreed to give up possession of the messuage, with the appurtenances and the fixtures, on a certain day. declaration averred that the plaintiff tendered to the defendant for execution an instrument, which contained a recital that the plaintiff had lately contracted with the defendant for the sale to him of the residue of the term granted to him by P. in the messnage or tenements and hereditaments, with their appurtenances, and also all and singular the fixtures belonging to the messuage or tenements and hereditaments, for a certain sum, the receipt of which was thereby acknowledged :- Held, that as the agreement between the parties was for the agreement between the parties was for the assignment of the fixtures only, which belonged to the defendant, the recital in the instrument tendered was too large, and, therefore, that it was not such an one as the defendant was bound to execute. Manning v. Bailey, 2 Ex. 45; 18 L. J., Ex. 77.

Another plea, that the plaintiff was not ready and willing to release the defendant:—Held, that as the release was to be prepared by the defendant's attorney, and it was averred that no such release was prepared, the plaintiff's readiness to execute it was immaterial; and the plea was therefore bad, as raising an immaterial issue. Ib.

A., being indebted to B., entered into an agreement, not under seal, for the repayment of the money, B. to hold a policy on A.'s life as security. B. died, and her executors reckoned the debt among her assets, and paid probate and legacy duty upon it. Communications took place between the debtor and the executors on the one hand, and the executors and residuary legatees on the other hand, as to not enforcing the debt upon payment by the debtor of the probate and legacy duty thereon. The debtor did in fact pay such duties, and the executors withdrew their claim on the policy, but neither was the agreement surrendered to A, nor cancelled, nor was any release of his debt executed:—Held, that the communications amounted to an agreement to release the debt, and that the payment of the duties was a sufficient consideration. Taylor v. Manners, 35 L. J., Ch. 128; L. R. 1 Ch. 48; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 13 L. T. 388; 14 W. R. 154.

Reservation in Lease, |- By a deed of even date with a lease, the lessor covenanted that the lessee should retain part of each year's rent until satisfaction of a debt due from the lessor to the lessee :- Held, that though the covenant might be pleaded at law as a release pro tanto of the rent, this was only to avoid circuity of action, and the covenant was not for all purposes a release. Ledger v. Stanton, 2 Johns. & H. 687;

An indenture of lease was made on the 28th of January, 1832, for a term of nincty-one years, reserving a rent, and containing a covenant by the lessee to execute specified improvements upon the demised premises on or before the 1st of May, 1834, or pay an additional rent. The original rent was regularly paid, and receipts given for it; but the improvements, as specified in the covenant, were never made, while other and more expensive improvements were executed to the probable knowledge of the lessors; and the additional rent was never demanded or paid. In an action in 1869 to recover twelve and a half years' arrears of the additional rent :-Held, that it was not misdirection to instruct the jury, upon the issues raised, that they were at liberty, upon the facts, to presume that a release of the covenant had been executed. Tennent v. Neil, Ir. B. 5 C. L. 418-Ex. Ch.

A jury may be instructed that they are at liberty, upon evidence of long-continued nonobservance, to presume a release of a covenant, where, consistently with the evidence, the release to be presumed might have been executed before the accrual of the breach complained of. Ib.

Acknowledgment in Deed.]—An acknowledgment in a deed by a vendor that the purchasemoney has been paid, and that the vendor is therewith fully satisfied, amounts to a release.

Faweus v. Porter, 3 Car. & K. 309.

Action for dividends sold and assigned. the trial it appeared that the plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant certain dividends for 1751., but after the bargain was made, it was found that an order of the Court of Chancery was necessary before the dividends could be received by the defendant, and a dispute having arisen as to which party was to pay the costs of obtaining this order, it was agreed that the deed of transfer should be executed, and the question of costs referred to two solicitors. The deed was accordingly executed, and 1251, paid to the plaintiff. The deed, however, stated that the whole purchase-money was paid, and contained a release in the usual way:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover the remainder of the purchase-money, as the debt only accrued upon the execution of the deed, and at the same time the debt was released Baker v. Heard, 5 Ex. 959; 20 L. J., Ex. 444.

Testamentary Declarations.]-" I return A. his bond," in a will, is not a release, but a legacy, and having lapsed, the bond remains in force against a surviving co-obligor. Maitland v. Adair, 3 Vcs. 281.

Parol Expression of Intention.] entitled to a bond into which B. had entered to secure payment of a sum of money. B, was about to marry, and A. being informed of that fact, told him, "I will not distress you about the bond; I have given it up; I shall never enforce it"; but on being requested to give up the bond, she said, "No, I will be trusted, but he may rely on my word." B. married. A. afterwards married, and her husband and herself put the bond in suit. B. filed a bill in equity to restrain their proceedings, alleging that he had married on the faith of the promises made by B. : -Held, that he was not entitled to an injunction. for that what passed between the parties was neither a legal contract nor a misrepresentation of facts, but only an expression of an intention, the performance of which could not be enforced. tor is bound to make good. Yeomans v. Williams, Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. Cas. 185; 23 L. J., Ch. 865. 35 Beav. 130; 35 L. J., Ch. 283; L. R. 1 Eq. 184.

A testator wrote in his account book, opposite an entry of two debts owing to him by his brother, one being due upon mortgage and the other upon a promissory note, the words, "Not to be enforced." He received interest upon both debts for several years after the date of the entry, and up to the time of his death. The document which contained the words referred to was not propounded as testamentary :-Held, that this memorandum of the testator did not amount to a discharge of either of the debts. Peace v. Hains, 11 Hare, 151; 17 Jur. 1091.

Semble, the eases in which the court has held a debtor liberated from his obligation to pay a debt which once existed, and from which he has not been discharged by any testamentary instrument, arc, first, where the act or declaration relied on creates an immediate discharge, which the debtor might plead as a release, or by way of accord and satisfaction at law, or which he might enforce in equity as against the creditor; second where the discharge, though not immediate and absolute, but conditional, becomes perfect by the condition having in the event been performed; third, where the creditor intended to discharge the obligation at his death, and communicated that intention to those who would, under this disposition, take or represent his interest upon his death, and relied upon their fulfilment of his intention, and, fourth (in strictness belonging to another class of cases), where the transaction supposed to create the debt or obligation is rather in the nature of an advancement by one in loco parentis, or is part of a family arrangement. Ib.

A. being indebted to B., C. and D., three sisters, who were his near relations, partly on his own account, and partly as executor of his father, executed to them a bond for 5007. At the time of the giving of the bond, A. objected to give it, and agreed to do so only on a verbal representation, that it was not intended to be enforced unless B., C. and D. should come to want, an event which did not happen. The bond remained in the hands of the three till the death of B., and after her death in the hands of the survivors, and after the death of C. in the hands of D., whose property (by mutual arrangements) it was at the time of her death. On the bond was found the following indorsement; "This bond is never to appear against A. Witness, C., D." It was not made clear that C.'s name was written by herself; it was said that D. had written it. It was however, proved, that if D. had written it, she did so with the authority of C. :- Held, that without saying whether the indorsement amounted to a release, which was a legal question, there was an equity under the circumstances against enforcing the bond; that if put in suit, the action would be restrained; and that there was nothing due on the bond to the estate of D. Major v. Major, 1 Drew. 165. Mere voluntary declarations, indicating the intention of a creditor to forgive or release a debt, if they are not evidence of a release at law do not constitute a release in equity; unless, therefore, there be a consideration or some other equitable means of distinction, equity, in such a case, follows the law. Cross v. Sprigg, 6 Hare, 552; 18 L. J., Ch. 204; 13 Jur. 785.

A voluntary declaration by a creditor that he intends to release his debtor from a debt, though not amounting to a release at law, may nevertheless be held in equity to be a representation which the credi-

R. G. having died intestate, possessed of considerable personal property, and entitled, after the death of his wife, to the principal of certain bank stock, standing in the name of a trustee; his brother, by letter, expressed his intention of relinquishing his share of the intestate's estate to the said widow, executed to the trustee (transferring to the widow) a release of the bank stock, and directed the preparation of a release of the general personal estate, the execution of which was prevented by his death, but his wish to execute it continued to his last hour; the release of the stock is effectual in favour of the intestate's widow; but the intention to relinquish the share of the general personal estate not being perfected, amounts not to a gift, and she, as administratrix, must account to the representatives of the brother, but without interest. Hooper v. Gondwin, 1 Swanst, 485; 1 Wils. 212; 18 R. R. 125.

C., who acted as the confidential adviser of a testator, was the obligor in a bond to the testator for 2,0001, conditioned to be void on the payment of that sum within six months after demand. The executors demanded payment of C, which he resisted on the ground, first, that he never received more than 1,500l; and, secondly, that what passed at an interview between himself and the testator amounted to a release of all obliga-tion in respect of the instrument. The court being of opinion that the evidence of what passed at the interview amounted to no more at the utmost than an intention to deliver up the bond as an act of bonnty, which intention was never fulfilled :-Held, that much more was necessary to establish the release of a debt, and payment of the debt was decreed. Woodward v. Humpage, Inspick, In rc, 5 L. T. 382.

Destruction by father of security given by sons for money advanced :- Held, under the circumstances, an advancement and release of debt. Gilbert v. Wetherell, 2 Sim. & S. 254; 3 L. J.

, being indebted to his mother, and being under an obligation to execute a security to her, refused to do so. The mother then promised to bequeath the debt to her son if he would execute the security. This was done, but the mother died without having bequeathed the debt :--Held, that the promise to bequeath could not he enforced in equity, and that the debt formed part of the mother's estate. house, paying 2121, 10s. a quarter for board; and it was agreed that the debt should be paid off by a deduction of 1001, from each quarter's payment. Deductions of this amount were made for two quarters, but on the third quarter-day the creditor refused to make any further deduction, and paid the full amount of 2121. 10s., and continued down to the time of her death (which took place more than four years afterwards) to pay to B. the like quarterly sum. B, was appointed sole executor of his step-mother, and proved the will: -Held, that the debt was gone; first, because the appointment of B. as executor released the debt at law, and any claim in equity was rebutted by evidence of a continuing intention on the part of testatrix to give; and secondly, because the intention of the testatrix to give B, the 9001, was completed by nine quarterly payments of 212*l*, 10s, each. Strong v. Bird, 43 L. Testator gave his brother and nephew legacies, and appointed them executors, but did not dispose of the residue; they were indebted to him in unequal sums : this is no release of the debts, and they are trustees for the next of kin as to the residue. Curey v. Goodinge, 3 Bro. C. C.

Joint and several Liability-Bankruptcy of one. ]-A release to one of several persons jointly or jointly and severally liable is a release to all; but where the alleged release is informal and not under seal, it is a question of fact to be deter-mined on all the circumstances of the case whether a general release was intended to be given. Where one of several persons jointly and severally liable had become bankrupt, and the alleged release was given to his trustee in bankrnptcy:-Held, that, as the joint liability had become several by the bunkruptcy, and the bankrupt's estate was severally liable only, the release could not under any circumstances be a release to the other persons liable; that the facts shewed no intention to give a general release, but merely to compromise a right of proof against the bankrunt's estate. Wolmershausen, In re, Wolmershausen v. Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 541; 38 W. R. 537,

Other Cases. ]-Courts of equity will presume a release within the same limits of time within which juries will be directed to presume it, whether any Statute of Limitations is applicable to the case or not. Baldwin v. Peach, 1 Y. & C.

A debtor conveyed his life interest in certain property in trust for creditors, parties to the deed; and the ereditors, in consideration thereof, granted to the debtor licence to reside and attend to his affairs in any place he might think proper, without suit or molestation, in his person or his goods, chattels and effects, by any such creditors; and that, in case of any suit or molestation by any of such creditors, contrary to the true intent and meaning of such licence, the debtor should be wholly released and acquitted of the debt, and the deed might be pleaded in bar :- Held, that this amounted only to a licence by the creditor to the debtor to live unmolested, and did not operate as a release of the debt or a discharge of the debtor's estate; and that neither a suit by creditors against the trustees and the debtor to enforce the trusts of the deed, By Appointment as Executor.]—B. borrowed nor an administration suit by the creditor the trust deed or amounted to an acquittance of the debt. Held, also, that the existence of the trust deed, and the covenants and licence therein contained, prevented the operation of the Statute of Limitations during the life of the debtor, in respect of the debts, for the payment of which the trust was created. O'Brien v.

Osborne, 10 Hare, 92; 16 Jur. 960. S. L., to whom, by settlement (executed in 1800), an annuity of 2001. by way of jointure, was secured in the event of surviving her husband, continued, for many years after his death in 1809, to receive payment from her step-son, H. A. L., the inheritor of the estate upon which the annuity was charged. In 1830, the annuity being then two years in arrear, S. L. wrote a letter to her step-son, wherein she stated that to serve him she would feel happy in thenceforth giving up the 2007, annuity, which he had paid her since her husband's death, and would also make him a prescut of the 400*l*., the arrears then due. In 1834 H. A. L. died. By his will he charged his real estates with the payment of an annuity of 2001, to his step-mother. By a codicil he substituted a reduced annuity of 1001. for the annuity of 2001, granted by his will, accompanied by a declaration that it was upon condition that S. L. should not seek to raise the annuity of 2001, secured by the settlement of 1800. S. L. died in 1837, having previously made her will, and thereby appointed the plaintiff her residnary legatee and sole executor. It appeared that S. L. had never demanded either the annuity secured by the settlement or that granted by the will after the date of her letter in 1830. The plaintiff having filed a bill to raise the arrears of the annuity secured by the settlement, the court dismissed it, so far as it claimed relief in respect of the arrears which accrned in the lifetime of H. A. L., but directed an account of what was due from his death to the death of S. L. Langley v. Langley, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 313.

The assignce of a lease executes a bond to indenuify the original lessees against the covenants contained in the original lease; he afterwards quits the country; the house is left untenanted, and the original lessees are obliged to pay the rent reserved; the assignee having subsequently returned to England makes a compromise with them for the sum then due, in respect of his nonperformance of the covenants, and shortly afterwards goes abroad; they demise the house to a person who continues in the possession till the end of the term :-Held, that this mode of dealing with the premises does not give the assignee any title in equity to relief against the legal effect of his bond. Anderson v.

Bailey, 1 Russ. 313. Deed of release treated as a mere settled account, and liberty given to surcharge and falsify on proof of one or more mistakes in the recitals. Dundonald (Lord) v. Masterman, 38 L. J., Ch. 350; L. R. 7 Eq. 504; 20 L. T. 271; 17

ii Consideration

What is. - In a deed executed, upon a separation between a husband and wife, by them and the trustees of their marriage settlements, the

for payment of so much of the debt as the trust | future | property acquired | by the wife. The property was insufficient to pay, was barred by | release of the husband is a good consideration for the grant of the annuity by the wife, and the court will enforce the payment of the annuity. Logan v. Birkett, 1 Myl. & K. 220; 2 L. J. Ch. 52.

As to consideration for a release, see the case of Nocl v. Rochfort, 5 Bli. (N.S.) 667; 4 Cl. & F.

Where a testator to whom a party was in-debted in one sum on a note and another on a bond, in his will bequeathed to a son part of the entire debt, and afterwards by codicil revoked the bequest, and by endorsement on the bond declared that he thereby acquitted the obligor of the sum, and stated that in consequence he had revoked by codicil of the same date the bequest to the same amount :- Held, that being a volunteer, and the release without consideration, he was not entitled to come into equity for relief. Tufnell v. Constable, 8 Sim. 69.

A., being entitled, under a deed of 1784, to a charge affecting the estate of B., in 1814 executed a release in order to enable B, to sell the estate for the payment of creditors claiming under a trust deed of 1809; a decree to account and report the priority of incumbrances having been made :- Held, that the charge of A. retained its priority under the deed of 1784, except as to purchasers who had bought upon the faith of the release; it appearing from depositions in aid of the account, that no consideration was paid upon the execution of the release, and that the charge had not been satisfied, although the release had not been set aside or impeached in any suit instituted for that purpose:—Held, also, that the acceptance by A. of a bond with warrant, though accompanied by a release, could not under the circumstances be considered as a substituted security. Hatchell v. Cremorne, Ll. & G. t. Plunk, 236.

In a defence founded upon an allegation that the plaintiff has released or assigned his rights for a pecuniary consideration paid to him, it is incumbent on the defendant to prove that the consideration was in fact paid. Vandaleur v.

Blugrave, 6 Beav. 578.

A., being indebted to B., entered into an agreement, not under seal, for the repayment of the money, B. to hold a policy on A.'s life as security. B. died, and her executors reckoned the debt among her assets, and paid probate and legacy duty upon it. Communications took place between the debtor and the executors on the one hand, and the executors and residuary legatees on the other hand, as to not enforcing the debt upon payment by the debtor of the probate and legacy duty thereon. The debtor did in fact pay such duties, and the executors withdrew their claim on the policy, but neither was the agreement surrendered to A. nor can-celled, nor was any release of his debt executed: -Held, that the communications amounted to an agreement to release the debt, and that the payment of the duties was a sufficient consideration. Taylor v. Manners, 35 L. J., Ch. 128; L. R. 1 Ch. 48; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 986; 13 L. T. 388: 14 W. R. 154.

iii. Fraud and Ignorance of Rights.

Fraud by Releasee-Effect. ]-In an action for wife charged her separate property, comprised in the settlements, with the payment of an pleuded that the plaintiff had, upon payment of an annuity to the husband, and the husband areleased his marital rights, in respect of any facts and of the legal effect of the deed of release : Snowe, 2 De G. & Sm. 321. -Held, that the fraudulent misrepresentation alleged invalidated the deed. Hirschfield v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 46 L. J., Q. B. 94; 2 Q. B. D. 1; L. B. & S. C. Ry, 40 L. J., Q. D. 34; 2 G. D. J.; 35 L. T. 473. And see Stewart v. G. W. Ry., 2 Dr. & Sm. 438. Affirmed 13 L. T. 79; Lee v. Laneaslive and Yorkshire Ry., L. R. 6 Ch. 527; 25 L. T. 77; 69 W. R. 729.

A release, ex vi termini, imports a knowledge in the releasor of what he releases; and therefore where executors (who had taken the opinion of counsel, which they had not communicated) obtained a release of the orphanage share from the husband of a freeman's daughter, they were deered to account that the parties might elect, the length of time and alleged loss of vouchers being no sufficient bar to such account. Salheld v. Vernon, 1 Eden, 64.

A release from the younger brother to the elder, of certain premises which had been devised to him by his father, executed in consequence of a threat to file a bill, set aside in favour of creditors. Peat v. Powell, Ambl. 387; 1 Eden, 479.

On suspicious circumstances in the answer, a general account was decreed against a steward, notwithstanding a receipt in full, which was allowed only as proof of a particular payment, not of a general release or discharge upon an account stated; though under eircumstances it might have that effect, as upon proof that the principal never would give any vouchers, and an account kept by the steward. Middleditch v. Sharland, 5 Ves. 87.

Releases set aside as fraudulent; and that, too, though there was no express prayer that they might be set aside. Williams v. Smith, 7 L. J. (0.S.) Ch. 129.

Before accounts which have been settled, and in respect of which a release has been executed, can be reopened, a case must be shewn for setting aside the release, nor is the existence of usurious items in the account of which both parties were cognisant sufficient ground for setting it aside. Very strong evidence is required for setting aside, on the ground of undue influence, a transaction between two persons actively engaged in business and competent to carry it on. Fowler v. Wyatt, 24 Benv. 232

A release of the equity of redemption was set aside at the instance of the mortgagee, he having been induced to accept of it, and in consideration thereof to covenant for the payment of a perpetual annuity to the mortgagor, and to give the mortgagor a perpetual right of redemption, by means of misrepresentations by the mortgagor and his solicitor (who was also the solicitor of the mortgagee) as to the title of the mortgagor, the value of the premises, and the nature of the contract he was entering into. Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jo. & Lat. 1.

Release of an annuity given by an illiterate person without professional assistance and for inadequate consideration set aside after several years, the price being held inadequate as to the defendant, by whose covenant the annuity was secured, although, considering the nature of the security, it might not have been so from a stranger. Garrey v. M'Minn, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 526.

Where a person represents to another that he is of age, and executes to him a release upon which the latter acts :- Held, that he could not afterwards impeach the validity of the release on v. Arash, 9 Bing, 341; ± M. & So., 162; 2 L. J., the ground of his minority, and that it was C. P. 17. See Brobles v. Sheart, 1 P. & D. 615; immaterial whether he was aware or not of the [9 A. & E. 85‡; 8 L. J., Q. B. 184.

been obtained by frandulent misrepresentation of incorrectness of the representation. Wright v.

Fraud by Releasor. ]--Where an action is commenced by A. in the name and with the consent of B., who is legally entitled to maintain the action on behalf of A., a release by B. pending theaction, and a plea founded on it, will, on motion made on behalf of A., be set aside by the court. Hickey v. Burt, 7 Taunt. 48; 17 R. R. 440.

A pauper plaintiff having, behind the back of his attorney, and under circumstances shewing a desire on his part to deprive him of his costs, agreed with the defendant, in an action for unliquidated damages, to execute a release, and the defendant having pleaded such release pais darrein continuance, the court, at the instance of the attorney, set aside the plea. Wright v. Burroughes, 3 C. B. 344; 4 D. & L. 226; 15 L. J., C. P. 277; 10 Jur. 860. And see Jones v. Bonner, 5 D. & L. 718; 2 Ex. 230; 17 L. J., Ex. 343; Furnival v. Weston, 7 Moore, 356; 24 R. R. 687.

Upon a very strong case of fraud, not otherwise, a common law court will control the legal wise, a common wave out a consequent power of a co-plaintiff to release pending the action. Jones v. Horbort, Taunt. 421; 18 R. R. 520. S. P., Arton v. Booth, 4 Moore, 192; 21 R. R. 740; Monatstephen v. Breake, 1 Chit, 300; R. R. 740; Mountstephen V. Bronke, I Chit. 530;
22 R. R. 805; Lloyd v. Meeking, 9 L. J. (0.8.) C. P.
50; Wells v. Gutteridge, 1 L. J. (0.8.) K. B. 248.
Where in an action by a provisional committee suing on behalf of a railway company, one of the plaintiffs, who held fifty shares in the under-taking, executed to the defendant a release of the cause of action, the court refused to set aside the plea, the releasor having a valid interest in the concern, and not being a mere trustee. Rawstarno v. Gandell, 15 M. & W. 304; 4 Railw. Cas. 205; 3 D. & L. 682; 15 L. J., Ex. 291; 10 Jnr. 294.

After declaration the plaintiff executed a release to the defendant, and gave his own attorney notice not to proceed; the release was pleaded; to this plea there was a replication confessing the release; judgment was signed for the costs and execution issued. Notice was then given to the sheriff by the plaintiff not to execute process on peril of being treated as a trespasser, and thereupon the plaintiff's attorney obtained an order costs:—Held, that this was a proper case for the interference of the court, and that the form of the order was good. Games, Ex parte, 33 L. J., Ex. 317.

Where there are several plaintiffs, and one fraudulently gives a release to prejudice the real plaintiff, and that release is pleaded, the court will set aside that plea, and order the release given to be delivered up to be cancelled. Burker v. Richardson, 1 Y. & J. 362; 30 R. R. 795.

To induce the court, on a summary application. to set aside the plea of a release by one of two coplaintiffs, it must be clearly shown that the release had been obtained by fraud between the releasor and the defendant. Crook v. Stephens, 7 Scott, 48; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 688; 9 L. J., C. P. 209. S. P., Wild v. Williams, 6 M. & W. 490; 9 L. J., Ex. 277. Fraud upon the releasor is not a ground for setting aside the plea, since that may be replied. Ib. To a plea that the plaintiff had released one of two joint obligors, the plaintiff replied that the release was given with an undertaking on the part of the other obligor that the release should not operate on his discharge :- Held, ill. Cocks release which is good in law, but in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction it may interfere to prevent a defendant from pleading a release when it would be a manifest fraud on a third party seeking to enforce a demand against the defendant, and where the defendant himself is a party to the frund. Phillips v. Claggett, 11 M. & W. 84; 2 D. (N.S.) 1004; 12 L. J., Ex. 275.

A general release given by a trustee, in fraud of his trust, is void; therefore, where an action had been brought in his name for the benefit of his cestui one trust, the court ordered a release of the cause of action to be delivered up to be cancelled and a plea of the release to be set aside. Munning v. Cox., 7 Moore, 617; 1 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 36.

Ignorance of Rights. ]-Where a release had been executed and the parties have, for a long space of time, acquissed in it, the mere proof of errors will not, in the absence of fraud, induce the court either to set it aside, or to give leave to sureharge and falsify; but the nature and amount of the errors alleged and proved may have a very considerable effect in the consideration of the question whether the release was fairly obtained. Millar v. Craig, 6 Beav. 433.

A party who, upon a compromise, had executed a general release, claimed relief on the ground that a large item in which he was interested had been, by mistake, omitted in the account :-Held. that he was entitled to relief, but that to obtain it the release must be wholly set aside. Pritt v. Clay, 6 Beav, 503.

A release executed under a mistake held inoperative. Hare v. Becker, 12 Sim. 465; 11 L. J.,

Ch, 153; 6 Jur. 93. A release which had been executed by a person ignorant of his rights, and where it was proved that he had no intention of releasing such rights, set aside. Phelps v. Amoutt, 21 L. T. 167.

In 1841, 4,500l, was advanced by a testatrix to her son B., but no scenrity or acknowledgment was executed by B. No interest was directly paid, but an allowance covenanted to be paid to B. by the testatrix was set off against the interest, which, at 4 per cent., came to the same amount. In 1843 the testatrix made a codicil, containing a declaration that the 4,500%, was due and owing from B., and that his appointment as executor was not to have the effect of cancelling the debt. In 1854 a further codicil was made, revoking the appointment of B. as exeentor, but confirming the will and codicils in all other respects. In 1855 the testatrix wrote to B, as follows: "You must know when I gave you the money I never could intend it as a loan, but as an absolute gift; and I hope you will live many years to enjoy it" -Held, that this letter being written under a misapprehension of the nature of the original transaction, and being inconsistent with the previous conduct of the parties, did not discharge the debt thereby created. Knapp v. Burnaby, Bequest to A. for life of annuity of 1001., "by interest arising out of money to be vested for that purpose by the executors" in public funds or other good security, and after his death "the capital stocks so purchased" to A.'s children. By a codicil the testator said, "What I mean in my will by seeuring money in the public funds is to purchase a capital stock in the consols by my executors" :- Held, that the executors might either purchase in the consols or in other good security, but having done neither in the life of A ..

A court of law has no jurisdiction to set aside a | his children were entitled to 3,3337, 6s. 8d. consols, and not to 2,000*l*. cash. A. died 1843, and his children, on receiving 2,000*l*., executed a release, which, after reciting that, according to the trust, 2,000%, had been set apart to answer the annuity, they released the representative of the testator from all claims and demands. In 1854 the children instituted a suit to recover the amount of consols which would be required to produce 100L.—Held, that having regard to the situation in life of the plaintiff, the inaccuracy of the recitals, and the absence of professional assistance, they were not barred by lapse of time.

Aspland v. Watte, 20 Beav. 474.

A testator bequeathed two legacies of 2,000%. The executor rendered an account of the estate to the plaintiff, one of the legatees, shewing it to be about 1,750%, in the whole. The legatec, on receipt of half, executed a general release. Afterwards it appeared that there was a further asset of 2,000l, belonging to the estate which had been omitted :- Held, that the release was binding pro tanto, and the executor was ordered to pay to the plaintiff a moiety of the 2,000l, Anon., 31 Beav, 310.

Lapse of Time.]—A release to a trustee was set aside after the lapse of more than twenty years. and after the death of the trustee, on evidence of the plaintiff (corroborated by the terms of the deed) that it was executed in error. In such a case it is not necessary to prove fraud. Garnett, In re. Gandy v. Macaulay, 31 Ch. D. 1-C. A.

Where Rights of Third Parties intervene. 1-A mortgagor induced his second mortgagee to release the mortgaged estate in consideration of the substitution of other securities; and then created a third mortgage on the estate so released. Afterwards he created a fourth mortgage on the estate. This mortgage was made with the concurrence of the third mortgagees, who joined to postpone their security, and who received part of the money raised on the security of the fourth mortgage in part discharge of the moneys due to them upon their own seemity. The mortgager then died, and it was for the first time discovered that the scenrities substituted in the hands of the second mortgagee, and which were the consideration for the release executed by him, were forgeries. The fourth mortgages sold the mortgaged estate, and after paying off the first mortgage retained the surplus in part discharge of the moneys due to them on their security. The net value of the estate, after paying off the first mortgage, having been thus ascertained, the second mortgagee filed his bill against the third mortgagees, seeking to recover the amount of that not value for them, they having received, as above mentioned, part of the moneys raised on the security of the fourth mortgage to an amount exceeding the net value of the estate :- Held, that he was not entitled to such relief. Eyre v. Burmester, 4 De G., J. & S. 435; 33 L. J., Ch. 652; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 687; 10 L. T. 673; 12 W. R. 993. And see 10 H. L. Cas. 90 : 6 L. T. 838.

S. being indebted to B., and other persons, agreed with B. for a further advance on a mortgage of various estates in Ireland. By the deed S. covenanted that the lands of K., which formed part of the security, were free from incumbrances, and for further assurance. No title was furnished by S., nor search in the registry made by B. Before the entire advance was paid over to S., it was discovered that the lands of K. were subject to a mortgage to E. B. thereupon applied to S., who tolk him that a by would recess the many his (S.'s) request, on which assurance B. paid over the residue of the loan to S. S. subsequently, by fraud, procured a release from E., of which release B. was made aware, but was ignorant of the fraud. The fraud was discovered after some months had claused :-Held, that B, was a purchaser for value of the release, as having been procured by S. in pursuance of the covenants in the mortgage deed, and that being ignorant of S,'s fraud he was entitled to retain the advantage which the release had given him. Burmester, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 1.

Whole Transaction must be Set Aside. ]-A party who, upon a compromise, had executed a general release, claimed relief on the ground of a large item, in which he was interested, having by mistake been omitted in the account :-Held. that he was entitled to relief, but that to obtain it the release must be wholly set aside. A. B., the representative of a deceased partner, having filed his bill against C. D., the surviving partney, for an account, A. B., in consideration of 500%, released C. D. from all claims, and the bill was dismissed. By mutual error a debt of 2,0001, owing to the partnership, but which was not then known to exist, was omitted in the consideration by both parties. C. D. afterwards received it:—Held, that A. B., notwithstanding the release, was cutitled to his share of the debt. but that to obtain it the whole account must be reopened. Pritt v. Clay, 6 Beav. 503.

In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant for alleged breaches of covenants contained in their deed of partnership, and for fraud alleged to have been committed by the defendant in obtaining a deed of dissolution thereof; it appeared that as regards the breaches the plaintiff had, by the deed of dissolution, in consideration of the defendant having given up the whole of the partnership assets to the plaintiff, released the defendant from all matters and things whatever touching or concerning the joint trade, without prejudice nevertheless to the covenants and agreements in the deed of dissolution contained :- Held, that as the release could not be separated from the rest of the deed of dissolution. and as the plaintiff had not disaffirmed, and was not in a condition to disaffirm or rescind the contract, of which the release formed part, the same was binding upon him. Urquhart v. Mac-pherson, 3 App. Cas. 831—P. C.

Where a release in terms extends to sums of money which the release has openly, but without justification, taken from the releasor, the latter campot file a bill in equity to compel the releasee campor me a but in equity to compet the reneases to pay these sums, though at the time the release was given, the releasor was, in fact, ignorant of the fraud committed by the release. The remedy of the releasor in such a case is to have the release set aside in toto; and if, in consequence of dealings subsequent to the release, that cannot be done, the releasor can have no relief in equity. Skilbeek v. Hilton, L. R. 2 Eq. 587.

Unexpected Accession of Property not In-who told him that E, would release the lands on | by an executrix, persons interested in the estate gave a release of all claims on the estate to the executrix. It was afterwards discovered that property in which the testator was entitled to a share had during his life been sold at an undervalue. The executrix instituted and succeeded in a suit to set the sale aside, and recovered a large sum of money as part of the testator's estate :- Held, that this money was not included in the release, and that the persons who gave the release were entitled to share in the money so recovered as part of his estate. Howkins v. Juckson. (2 Mac. & G. 372) distinguished. Turner v. Turner. Hall v. Turner, 14 Ch. D. 829; 42 L. T. 495; 28-W. R. 859; 44 J. P. 734.

W. H. was entitled for life to the interest of certain residuary estate, to the principal of which the wife of A. J. was entitled absolutely. W. H. being largely indebted to A. J., executed an indenture, assigning to A. J. all his, W. H.'s, interest in the said residuary estate. It was subsequently discovered that the residuary estate consisted partly of a fund, the existence of which was miknown to either of the parties at the time of the execution of the indenture. W. H. thereupon filed a bill which, not complaining that the indenture had been executed by fraud, sought to exclude from its operation the additional fund by treating the indenture merely as a security for the amount then due from W. H. The Lord Chancellor, however, dismissed the bill, holding that the words of the indenture were sufficient to pass the interests of W. H. in the fund in question, and that no case was made on the pleadings for reforming the instrument. Howkins v. Juckson, 2 Mac. & G. 372; 2 Hall & Tw. 301; 19 L. J., Ch. 451.

By a deed, reciting that all the testator's assets. save a small sum retained to meet contingencies, and some doubtful debts, had been received by the executrix and applied in payment of debts, and that there remained only a sum sufficient topay part of the legacies, the legatees, in con-sideration of the sums paid on account of these legacies, released the executrix from all claims which they then had, or thereafter might have. against her as executrix, or against the residuary estate :- Held, that the deed did not operate to release the right of the legatees to be paid out of further assets which afterwards came, unexpectedly, to the hands of the executrix. Lawe v. Lawe, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 327.

As to Strangers. ]-A deed inter partes cannot operate as a release to strangers; therefore, a charter-party between A, and B. in consideration of a former charter-party between A and C., which former charter-party in consideration of the freight B. was to pay, was thereby declared null and void, A. agreeing to caucel the first in consideration of the second, and C. being thereby acquitted of all claims which A. might have against him in virtue of the first charter-party, does not operate as a release from A. to C. of the first charter-party. Storer v. Gordon, 3 M. & S. 308 : 15 R. R. 499.

Where a debt, not assignable at law, has been equitably assigned for value, and the debtor has had notice of the assignment, all payments which he may thereafter make to the purchaser on account of the debt are well made so far as the debtor is concerned, although the purchaser may have sold the debt, provided the debtor has no notice of the sale; nor is it absolutely necessary cluded. ]-In consideration of certain payments for him, on making such payment, to require production of the original assignment. The pur- | be void, and the suits may proceed. Hull v. chaser of a debt may execute to the debtor a Levy, 44 L. J., C. P. 89; L. R. 10 C. P. 154; 81 release for value of the debt, valid as against the L. T. 727, 28 W. R. 398. assignce from the purchaser, if the debtor has not, at the time when the release is executed. notice of the assignment, Stocks v. Dobson. 4 De G., M. & G. 11; 22 L. J., Ch. 884; 17 Jur. 539.

Void or Voidable.]—A deed of inspectorship and composition made between a debtor and his creditors in Great Britain contained a covenant that in a certain event the debtor would, if required by the inspector, assign all his property to the inspector for the benefit of the creditors ; that upon such assignment the inspector should give a certificate that the debtor had so assigned, and that thereupon the debtor should be released from his debts. The deed contained a provise that it should "cease, determine and be void" The deed contained a proviso if all the creditors in Great Britain to a certain amount did not excente it within six months from its date. The debtor was duly required by the inspector to execute an assignment, and did so, and received a certificate :- Held, that the deed was not void, but voidable only; that the release constituted a good defence against a creditor who had excented the deed, and who, having had notice that all the creditors had not signed the deed, had endeavoured to obtain payment of a dividend out of the property assigned to the inspector. Dunn v. Wyman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 623.

Semble, the proviso was inserted in the deed for the benefit of the debtor, and a creditor who had executed could not take advantage of it. Ib.

Conditional or Absolute. ]-The estate of an intestate was divided between the persons claiming to be creditors pari passa, and they executed a release to the administratrix from all claims. A creditor executed the deed in respect of a particular debt, which was stated. Afterwards he made a further claim against the estate of the administratrix, who had charged it with the payment of the intestate's debts :-Held, that it was barred by the release. Bisset v. Burgess, 23 Beav. 278; 26 L. J., Ch. 697; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1221.

A release of a debt "in like manner as if the debtor had obtained a discharge in bankruptey' is an absolute release, which, if given without the surety's consent, discharges the surety. Cragoe v. Jones, 42 L. J., Ex. 68; L. R. 8 Ex. 81; 28 L. T. 36; 21 W. R. 408.

A release reserving rights against a surety must be such that the surety's right to sue the debtor, if he pays the debt, is retained. Ib.

There may be a good release with a condition subsequent. Newington v. Levy, 39 L. J., C. P. 234. Affined 40 L. J., C. P. 29; L. R. 6 C. P. 180: 23 L. T. 595; 19 W. R. 473—Ex. Ch.

Therefore a plea of a composition deed executed according to the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, in which the creditors released the debtor from their respective debts, is a valid answer to an action for any such debt, although the release is made subject to be avoided by nonpayment of the composition on a subsequent day. Ib.

Where such deed is made after action, and the plea therefore is to the further maintenance, the plaintiff may reply that the release had become avoided by nonpayment of the composition, after avoided by honpayment of the composition, at the plea has been pleaded. Ib.

A release from suits may be made subject to a condition subsequent, so that if such condition subsequent is not complied with, the release will plaintiff in 1421. 9s. 7d., an arrangement was

Hall v.

Purpose and Intent. ]-A lease must be construcd according to the particular purpose and intent for which it was made; as, where A, and B., being in partnership, and in insolvent eiremistances, A. alone gave a general release by deed to the plaintiffs, to whom himself and B. were jointly indebted, with provisions that it should not operate to release or prejudice any demands which the plaintiff had against B., either separately or as a partner with A., on the joint effects of A. and B., or either of them, and that they might commence an action either against A. jointly with B., or A. separately, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiffs to recover payment from the joint estate of A. and B., or from B.'s separate effects; and the plaintiffs brought an action for money paid against both, and A. pleaded the release, on which the plain-tiffs set it out in their replication, and averred that the action was prosecuted against both, for the purpose of enabling the plaintiffs to enforce payment from A. and B, either from their joint estate, or separate estate of B .: - Held, that the action was anthorised by the deed. Solly v. Forbes, 4 Moore, 448; 2 Br. & B. 38; 22 R. R. 641.

Where the words of a release, executed according to the directions of an award, might extend to matter the parties did not intend the arbitrators to adjudicate upon, and on which they did not adjudiente, the generality of the words will be restrained by the intention of the parties. Upton v. Upton, 1 D. P. C. 400.

Though a release is general in its terms, the court will limit its operation to matters contemplated by the parties at the time of its execution. Lyall v. Edwards, 6 H. & N. 337; 30 L. J., Ex. 193. General words in a release are limited to those matters which were specially in the contemplation of the parties when the release was given. L. S. S. W. Ry. v. Blackmare, 39 L. J., Ch. 713; L. R. 4 H. L. 610; 23 L. T. 504; 19 W. R. 305. A release, general in its terms, limited so as not to include a particular debt unknown to exist at the time of its execution and not intended to be released. Moore v. Weston, 25 L. T. 542. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant for alleged breaches of covenants contained in their deed of partnership, and for fraud alleged to have been committed by the defendant in obtaining a deed of dissolution thereof, it appeared that as regards the breaches the plaintiff had, by the deed of dissolution, in consideration of the defendant having given up the whole of the partnership assets to the plaintiff, released the defendant from all matters and things whatever touching or concerning the joint trade, without prejudice nevertheless to the covenants and agreements in the deed of dissolution contained :- Held, that as the release could not be separated from the rest of the deed of dissolution. and as the plaintiff had not disaffirmed, and was not in a condition to disaffirm or rescind the contract, of which the release formed part, the same was binding upon him. Urquhart v. Macpherson, 3 App. Cas, 831—P. C.

What Debts.]—To an action for 3371. 1s. 10d. the defendant pleaded a release generally, to which the plaintiff replied non est factum. The which the plaintiff replied non est factum. facts were, that the defendant being indebted to released on payment of 10s. in the pound to his creditors by a third party. Accordingly, a composition deed was executed by the plaintiff and the other creditors, which recited that the defendant was indebted to the several creditors, parties thereto, in the sums set opposite to their names; and such creditors, in consideration of the covenant to pay them 10s. in the pound on the amount of their debts, released the defendant from all debts then owing to them by the defendant. When the deed was executed by the plaintiff, a blank was left for the sum to be set opposite to his name. This blank was subsequently filled up, without his knowledge or authority, by inserting in it the full amount of 1s. 10d. due from the defendant to the plaintiff. The inry found that it was the intention of the parties that the deed should operate only on the balance due by the defendant to the plaintiff, after setting off the cross debt due by the plaintiff to the defendant:—Held, that the effect of the deed was to release the that the effect of the deed was to release the balance only, and not the whole debt of the 337l. 1s. 10d., and that the issue on non est factum ought to be found for the plaintiff. Judgment Debt.]—A debt of record may be discharged by a release under seal. Burker v. St. Quintin, 12 M. & W. 441; 1 D. & L. 542; 13

L. J., Ex. 144.

By a deed conveying the real and personal estate of a debtor to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, the creditors executing the deed covenanted that it should operate and cnure, and might be pleaded in bar, as a good and effectual release and discharge of all and all manner of actions, suits, bills, bonds, writings, obligations, debts, duties, judgments, extents, executions, claims and demands, both at law and in equity, which they or any of them had or might have against the debtor or his estate or effects, for or by reason of all or any of the debts or engagements to them respectively due or owing by him; such covenant not to destroy any mortgage, pledge, lien or other specific security which any creditor possessed:—Held, upon the construction of the entire deed, that such general words had not the effect of releasing a judgment previously obtained by one of the creditors who executed the deed, so as to affect the priority of the creditor as between himself and a judgment creditor who was not a party to the deed, or so as to preclude the judgment creditor who executed the deed from enforcing the rights executed the deed from enturing and against the which the judgment gave him as against the estate vested in the trustees. Squire v. Ford, 9 Hare, 47; 20 L. J., Ch. 308; 15 Jun. 619.

Plea of general release containing the words "decree and orders of the Court of Chancery," is good bar to any demand set up under a decree of that court made prior to the date of the release; and if the defendant, by his answer, denies all charges of fraud, &c., in obtaining the release, such answer is sufficient to corroborate the plea. Walter v. Glanville, 5 Bro. P. C. 555.

Jurisdiction in equity to restrain execution made by which the defendant was to be on the ground of a subsequent release by the plaintiff at law of his claims under the judgment for a valuable consideration, paid by the defendant at law, notwithstanding that a rule obtained by the defendant at law to set aside the judgment on the ground of such subsequent release, had been discharged, and a writ of audita querela on the same ground had been set aside by the court of law. Williams v. Roberts, 8 Harc.

> Release of part of Lands.]—The decision of the Law Rep.) on the effect of a release of part of the debtor's lands from a judgment in discharging his other lands, donbted. Hundoock v. Hund-cock, 11 Ir. Eq. R, 472.

W. H. being seised of an estate in tail in Whiteacre, certain judgments were obtained against him in 1824. Upon his marriage subsequently in that year, Whiteacre was settled upon him for life, with remainders over for the benefit of the issue of the marriage, and a recovery was suffered to the uses of the settlement. In 1825 W. H., by purchase, acquired Blackaere in fee. In 1826 several other judgments were obtained against him. In 1829 the plaintiff agreed to lend W. H. 2,000L upon mortgage of his fee in Blackacre, and of his life estate in Whitenere, provided that the judgment creditors of 1824 would release Blackacre from their judgments, to which they assented; and then executed a deed-poll, which recited that W. H., being desirous to have Blackaere clear of incumbrances, had requested the judgment creditors of 1824 to release it from the incumbrances thereupon by the judgments, and that they, being satisfied that the residue of W. H.'s lands were a sufficient security for their judgments, agreed thereto, and by the operative part they released, exouerated, and for ever discharged Blackacre from their respective judgments, and from all writs of exeention and executions, and every other writ then sued out, or thereafter to be sued out, against Blackaere by virtue of their respective judgments or otherwise in relation thereto, and they agreed for their respective judgments only to indemnify W. H. for all costs, damages and expenses which should at any time be incurred by reason of Blackaere being attached in execution under those judgments: afterwards W. H. executed the proposed mortgage to the plaintiffs:—Held, that, both at law and equity, the operation and effect of the deed-poll of 1829 was to exonerate Whiteacre as well as Blackacre from the rights and remodies of the judgment creditors of 1824. Handoock v. Handoock, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 444.

Substituted Securities.]-R., on entering into partnership with a firm, procured in 1801 from N. & Co., bankers, on the security of four bonds and a warrant of attorney, a credit for 10,000%, to bring into the firm, which was afterwards exhausted in meeting bills drawn by his partners, The firm became insolvent in 1804, owing N. & Co. upwards of 120,000%, in respect of transactions, some of which were prior to R.'s joining it. In N. & Co.'s accounts the 10,000L was charged against the firm. A composition was entered into for 42,000l., whereof 10,000l. was to be paid by R., who gave a mortgage on his estate to secure the same. The remaining 32,000% was otherwise secured, and thereupon N. & Co. executed a release to the firm, releasing them, and upon a judgment against a defendant at law, every or any of them, from all claims or demands Bli. (N.S.) 483.

A., being entitled under a deed of 1784 to a charge affecting the estate of B., in 1814 excented a release in order to enable B. to sell the estate for the payment of ereditors claiming under a trust deed of 1809, a decree to account and report the priority of incumbranees having been made : -Held, that the charge of A. retained its priority under the deed of 1784, except as to purchasers who had bought upon the faith of the release; it appearing from depositions, in aid of the account, that no consideration was paid upon the excention of the release and that the charge had not been satisfied, although the release had not been set aside or impeached in any suit instituted for that purpose :-Held, also, that the acceptance by A. of a bond with warrant, though accompanied by a release, could not, under the circumstances, be considered as a substituted security. Hatchell v. Cremorne, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 236.

A bond from the owner of an estate charged to incumbrancer, who signed a receipt for the amount, is not a substitution for the charge, but merely an additional security, and the estate is not thereby released. It is not incumbent on the creditor to prove that it was not the intention of the parties to this transaction that the bond should be a substitution of the charge, but it lies on the owner of the estate to make out that the estate is discharged. Saunders v. Leslie, 2 Ball & B. 509; 12 R. R. 114.

The wife of a partnership creditor of an intestate, being one of the intestate's next of kin, duly executed a proxy of renunciation of the administration of the intestate's effects. A few days afterwards the creditor executed a deed-poll, by which, after reciting the insolvency of the intestate's estate, and that a composition deed had been executed by the creditors, in which they had agreed that A. should have administration of the intestate's effects, and reciting that A. had executed to the creditor a bond, which the latter had agreed to accept in satisfaction of the debt, it was declared that the same when paid should be accepted by him, the creditor, in full payment and satisfaction of all and every sum and sums of money due, or owing by or from, the said intes-tate to him the said creditor on account of the partnership or any other account whatsoever, and of all claims and demands whatsoever of him the said creditor on the estate and effects of the said intestate:—Held, that this amounted to a release by the creditor of the wife's distributive share in the residue of intestate's personal estate, although such residue was not mentioned or referred to in the deed-poll. Sheffington v. Whitehurst, 3 Y. & C. 1; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 65.

Action on Security after Debt Released. ]-A., the purser of a mine, in order to earry it on, raised money by the deposit of a promissory note made in his favour by seven of the shareholders, and which two other shareholders had refused to sign, and applied the money so raised in paying the workmen. At a subsequent meeting of the shareholders and creditors, an assignment of the mine, in order to sell it, and pay the debts, was resolved upon, and A. then claimed to be admitted as a creditor "for money which he had raised on note of hand to pay the workmen." A deed of assignment was accordingly executed to which by N. & Co.:—Held, that the mortgage was not a substitution for the bonds, and that the release add not, in equity, extend to the balance due on the bonds. *Neel v. *Rachfort, 4 Cl. & F. 158; 10 other persons therein described of the first part. as adventurers, for supplies to, and debts incurred by, them for or in respect of the mine, to the amounts set opposite their respective names," of the second part. This deed, after reciting that the sharcholders had in the prosecution of the mine incurred debts thereon with the persons parties thereto of the second part, contained a eonveyance in trust for those creditors, and a provision that no action should be brought by any of the persons parties thereto of the second part against all, any, or either of the persons parties thereto of the first part, for the recovery of any debts due or owing upon the mine, or in anywise relative thereto; and that, if any such action was brought the deed might be pleaded as a release. A. executed the deed, the amount of the note and interest thereon being placed against his name. To an action by A. upon the note against the seven persons who signed it, they pleaded the deed as a release, averring that A. signed it as a creditor of the parties thereto of the first part, in respect of the eauses of action in the declaration, which allegation was traversed by the replication:—Held, that A. must be held to have signed the deed in respect of his claim for the advance of money raised upon the note and applied for the use of the mine, and not in respect of his claim upon the note itself, which therefore was not released, and that consequently the plea was not proved. Langon v. Dacey, 11 M. & W. 218; 12 L. J., Ex. 200.

If A. gives B., without consideration, a promissory note, to be negotiated by B. as a security for money, and the indorsee for a valuable consideration, without notice, releases B, from the note, and all claim and demand touching the matters in respect of which the maker's promises were made, this does not so extinguish the consideration of the note, but the indorsee may still recover against the maker. Curstairs v. Rolleston, 5 Tannt, 551; 2 Marsh, 207.

To an action on a joint and several promissory note against one of the makers he pleaded a release. The replication set out the release, which was contained in a deed of assignment to a trustee for the benefit of ereditors, made prior to the Bankruptcy Act of 1861, wherein was contained a recital that the debtor was indebted to his several creditors in the sums set opposite to their names in the schedule thereunder written, and it averred that the note declared on was not, nor was it intended to be, included in the sum set opposite to the plaintiff's name in the schedule, or in the release, and that no payment on account of the note had ever been made to the plaintiff under the deed :- Held, notwithstanding, that the effect of the deed was to release the note declared on. Wigens v. Pickwick, 14 L. T. 521.

Principal and Surety. - In general a release to the principal debtor is in equity a release to the surety, but if the surety has previously to the release given by the creditor paid part of the debt, and given a security for the remainder, the general rule will not apply, but the creditor, notwithstanding the release, will, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, retain his right against the surety. Hall v. Hutchons, 3 Myl. & K. 426; 3 L. J., Ch. 45.

A., and B. his surety, executed a joint and tuted by A.'s creditors after his death. Afterwards B. paid the 5,0001, and thereupon C. executed to him a general release of all claims and demands in respect of the bond, and by the same deed covenanted to stand possessed of all moneys to be received under the proof and of all the securities for the 5,000l. in trust for B., and to use his utmost endeavours to obtain payment of that sum for B.'s benefit :- Held, that the legal effect of the release was not controlled by the covenant, and that the master, when he made his report, in pursuance of the decree, was justified in disallowing the 5,000L as a specialty debt, and in allowing it merely as a simple contract debt to B. Warwick v. Richardson, 14 Sim. 281:

Married Women.]-The release by hasband and wife of a sum of money secured by bond to A., and payable to the wife after A,'s death :-Held, not binding on the wife on her surviving both A. and her husband. Rogers v. Acaster, 14 Benv. 445.

When a feme covert is entitled to a reversionary interest in a chose in action, the release of the husband is as inoperative as his assignment to bind his wife's right by survivorship. 1b.

A settlement was made of the choses in action of a female infant, on her marriage, in trust for her husband for life; and after his decease, in trust for her for life; and after the death of the survivor, and in default of children, in trust for such persons as she should by will appoint, with ultimate trust for her next of kin. The marriage, of which there was no issue, was dissolved by act of parliament, and the husband excented a release of his rights in her property under the settlement:—Held, that the property of the wife was not bound by the settlement, and that she was at liberty to resettle it on her second marriage. Hustings v. Orde, 11 Sim. 205.

Family Arrangements, ]-An aunt and niece lived together, the former being devisee, residnary legatee, and executrix under her husband's will, and the latter being a legatee of 2,000*l*, under the same will. An agreement was entered into between them, that the niece should release her legacy on the aunt making a will devising to the niece part of the lands devised by the original testator. A release and will were accordingly executed, and the will remained unrevoked till the niece's death; after that event the aunt married again :- Held, that the release must be treated as binding on the niece's representative. Penny v. Watts, 2 De G. & Sm. 501; 12 Jur. 993.

Upon appeal the decision was reversed upon another point, and issues were directed with a view to ascertain the facts. The case was eventually compromised. S. C., 1 Mac. & G. 150; 19

. Mistake as to Amount.]—To an action for re-covery of interest due to the plaintiff, on the sale by him to the defendant of a policy of insurance on life, he pleaded that, by indenture between plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff released, exonerated, and discharged the defendant of and from all claim and demand whatsoever for, upon, or in respect of the purchase of the policy; and all moneys due to the plaintiff in respect thereof.

several bond to C., conditioned to be void on [It appeared that the policy was sold subject to a payment of 5,000L by A.; C. proved 5,000L as a condition that the purchaser should pay down a specialty debt under the decree in a suit insti-[deposit of 20L] per cent, and sign an agreement for payment of the remainder on the 8th of June, 1835; but should the completion of the purchase be delayed, the purchaser was to pay interest on the balance of the purchase-money, at 51. per cent. per annum, from that day until the purchase was completed. The defendant did not complete the purchase till January, 1836, when he paid the purchase-money in full, with interest from the 8th of June ; and an assignment of the policy, duly executed by the plaintiff, containing a release in the terms stated in the plea, and having a receipt for the whole purchase-money indorsed, was handed to the defendant. It was afterwards discovered that the plaintiff's attorney, on that occasion, under-enculated the interest by 347. Held, that the release was a bar to an action for that sum. Harding v. Ambler, 3 M. & W. 279; 1 H. & H. 48; 7 L. J., Ex. 132; 2 Jur. 305.

Replication, that B. executed the deed in his character of trustee, and not in his character of creditor, and that he did so merely for the purpose of declaring the trust of the deed, and not with any intention of releasing the debt, that he did not sign or seal the schedule, nor was the debt of the plaintiffs contained therein, and that if the deed operated in law as a release, it was executed by mistake, and in ignorance that such would be its legal effect:—Held, first, that the release being general in its terms, the execution of the deed by B. operated as an extinguishment of the debt due to the plaintiffs. Tecde v. Johnson, 11 Ex. 840; 25 L. J., Ex. 110.

Held, secondly, that the facts disclosed by the replication did not afford any answer to the pleaon equitable grounds. 1b.

ii. Joint or Separate Claims.

Co-Debtors. ]-M. & H., who were partners, were jointly liable to G. on a bill of exchange accepted by them for goods sold to them by him. They dissolved partnership, and after their acceptance had been dishonoured H. filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and a composition was accepted by his creditors and duly paid; B., to whom G. had indorsed the bill, proving under the liquidation and receiving the composition. G. himself afterwards filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement, and a composition was agreed to and paid, the trustee being authorised by the creditors to transfer to G. the debts which were set forth in a schedule annexed, but which did not include the liability of M. in respect of the acceptances given by him and H.; the reason for such omission being that B. was at that time the holder of the bill, and the debt was considered by the trustee of G.'s estate of no value, and not from any intention of reserving to the trustee any right in respect of it. The bill was afterwards given by B. to G., and in an action against G. by M. for a debt due to him separately, G. set off what was due to him on the acceptance of M. & H.:-Held, that the disdeepfunce on a R. R. Frank, that the cus-charge of H. under the liquidation by composi-tion under the Bankruptey Act, 1869, did not release M., but left him liable to G., who, whether the right to sue for it was legally in him or in his trustee in trust for him, might maintain an equitable plea of set-off. The rule that a release of one joint debtor operates to release the other is founded upon the fact that the second would, if he was sued by the ereditor, have a right to enforce contribution from the first. At the date of the will and of the testator's death, B. owed the testator a debt of 50%, and he and his partner owed the testator 2,6001.; which the latter had lent to the firm, and for which B, and his partner had given the testator their joint and several promissory notes. B. and his partner having filed a liquidation petition, the executors claimed to prove in the liquidation for the 2,6001. :- Held, that as there was a separate debt due from B, to which the release could apply, it could not be extended to the partnership debt, and that the executors' proof must be admitted. To an action by a banking company, on a guarantee given by the defendant to secure advances made by the company to M., M. and B., earrying on business under the name of M. & Co., the defendant pleaded, that by deed between M., M., L. and B., of the first part, W., H. and O., of the second part, and the several persons or partnership firms who should execute the deed being creditors of M., M., L. and B., of the third part, H. being a member and partner in the banking company, released M., M., L. and B. from all actions, debts, &c. The deed, after reciting that M., M., L. and B. were indebted to W., and O., and to the several parties to the deed of the third part, and being mable to pay their debts, had conveyed all their property to W., H. and O., in trust for payment of their debts, stated that in consideration thereof, each of the creditors parties to the deed of the second and third parts, did for themselves, their heirs, executors, &c., and partners, release M. Cooper, 9 M. & W. 701; 1 D. (N.S.) 11; 11 L. J., Ex. 325.

An action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover the rent of property which had originally belonged to R. being made by the executors of M. (the father of the plaintiff) to the rent, an issue under the Interpleader Act was directed (in which the executors were plaintiffs, and the present plainexecutors were plaintiffs, and the present plain-tiff defendant), to try the right to the rent. A vertice was obtained by the executors, and a deed was subsemently executed by the bubbleth of the was subsequently executed by the plaintiff, of the was subsequency executed by one parametr, or the first part, the children of M., of the second part, and the executors, of the third part, whereby, after various recitals, in none of which any reference was made to the issue, the plaintiff released the parties of the second and third parts from all costs incurred by them, and all claims and demands in respect of certain transactions therein mentioned; but there was a proviso in the release, that it should not extend to or affect, or in any manner prejudice, the rights or title which the plantiff claimed in the estate or effects of R., or any costs, charges or expenses incurred by the plaintiff in relation thereto. The parties of the second and third parts, in turn, also released the plaintiff from all costs, charges, or expenses which they, or either of them, might have incurred in and about all the matters therein particularly mentioned, and also of and from all claims and demands which the parties of the second and third parts might have or claim

Salisbury, 2 D. & L. 763; 14 L. J., Q. B. 118; 9 Jur. 623.

There being no right of contribution between the person carrying on a business and an ostensible partner, the release of the ostensible partner does not operate as a release of the person carrying on the business. Reservation of Rights.]—When a release is given to one of two partners, with a proviso that it shall not prejudice the claims of the releasor against the other partner, it only operates in favour of the partner to whom it is given. Solly v. Forbes, 2 Br. & B. 38; 4 Moore, 448; 22 R. 16. 641.

A release to one of two surcties who had entered into a joint and several covenant to pay an annuity, in default of payment by the grantor, was accompanied by a proviso, that such release should not prejudice the right of the grantee to enforce its payment against the grantor and the other surety, or either of them :-Held, that the proviso restrained the operation of the release, and that the liability of the co-surety was not affected by such release. Thompson v. Luck, 3 C. B. 540; 16 L. J., C. P. 75. S. P., Kearsley v. Cole, 16 M. & W. 128; 16 L. J., Ex. 115. Currey v. Armitage, 6 W. R. 516.

- Parol Evidence. - To a declaration against a maker of a note, he pleaded that the note was a joint and several note of his and A., and that A. had been released, Replication, that A, had been so released at the defendant's request, and that the defendant, in consideration of such release at his request, ratified the promise in the declaration, and promised that he would remain liable on the note, as if there had been no such release :- Held, that the replication, Pleading.]—A plea of release which does not answer all that it professes to do, being bad in part, is bad in the whole. St. Germains (Eurl) v. Willan, 3 D. & R. 441; 2 B. & C. 216.

In an action by payee against acceptor of a bill of exchange, he pleaded, that, before the bill became due, and whilst the plaintiff was the holder, and before action, the plaintiff released the bill, without alleging that the release was after the acceptance :- Held, that the plea was bad for not averring that the release was after the acceptance. Ashton v. Freestone, 2 Man. & G. 1; 2 Scott (N.R.) 273; 10 L. J., C. P. 53.

Action by indorsees against the maker of a promissory note. Plea, that the promise was a joint and several one, by the defendant and A., to whom one of the plaintiffs executed a release against the plaintiff on account of any transaction which might have taken place between them executed at the request of them:—Held, that the costs afterwards and while the note was unpaid, in consideration of such release, ratified his promise, and promised to remain liable to the plaintiffs for the amount of the note :- Held, bad, because it set up a parol exception to a release under seal. Brooks v. Stuart, 9 A. & E. 854; 1 P. & D. 615; 8 L. J., Q. B. 184.

Where a declaration was for goods sold and delivered, and for money due on an account stated, and the defendant pleaded that by a deed the plaintiff released the defendant, to which the plaintiff replied non est factum :- Held, that, under this issue, the plaintiff was not entitled to shew that the cause of action accrued subsequently to the date of the release, but should have made it the subject of a new assignment.

Jubb v. Ellis, 3 D. & L. 346; 15 L. J., Q. B. 94; 9 Jur. 1057.

To an action to recover the amount of several bills of exchange and promissory notes, the defendant pleaded a general release by deed, which on being set out, appeared to be a composition deed, by which the plaintiff and other creditors of the defendant released him from all liability in respect of their demands, on condition of his agreeing to pay 11s. in the pound, by promissory notes, payable at periods therein specified; and the deed contained a proviso, that, in the event of any default in the payment of any of those notes, the composition and release should be void. The plaintiff having replied, that default had been made in payment of one of the notes, the defendant rejoined, that before any default was made, the plaintiff accepted a fresh note, at a longer date, in lieu and satisfaction of the former:—Held, that this rejoinder was a depar-ture from the plea. Nexill v. Boyle, 2 D. (N.S.) 747; 11 M. & W. 26; 12 L. J., Ex. 220; 7 Jur. 132.

To a declaration on a promissory note, the de-fendant pleaded that the note was the joint and several note of himself and G.; that the plaintiff, by deed-poll, without the defendant's consent, released G. from the note and all actions, and thereby also released the defendant from the same. Replication, non est factum :—Held, that as the plea did not set out the deed, the replication put in issue the execution of such a deed as released the defendant; and that a deed of release executed by the plaintiff and other creditors of G., containing an express clause that the release to G. should not operate to discharge anyone jointly liable with G. on securities to the orelitors, did not release the defendant; and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to the verdict on this issue. North v. Wakefield, 13 Q. B. 536; 18 L. J., Q. B. 214; 13 Jur. 731.

In an action on a bond, the defendant pleaded, that after executing the bond, an agreement was made by and between the plaintiff and the defendant and divers other persons, and scaled with the plaintiff's scal; and that it was agreed by the agreement, that the agreement might be pleaded by the defendant in bar to all demands and proceedings with respect to the alleged claim on the bond:—Held, that the plca ought to have set out so much of the deed as operated as a release, and to have expressly averred that the deed did so operate; and that, therefore, the plea was bad in substance. Wilson v. Braddyll, 9 Ex. 718; 23 L. J., Ex. 227; 2 W. R. 419.

A plea of a release pleaded puis darrein continuance after a demurrer and joinder in de-murrer, operates as a retraxit of the demurrer. Solomon v. Graham, 24 L. J., Q. B. 332; 1 Jur.

Action by a shipowner, upon a charterparty for nonpayment of freight by the charterer Pleas : a discharge before breach, payment, and a release after the cause of action accrued. plication, that before action accrued, and before rclease or discharge or payment, all the right, title and interest of the plaintiff in the ship, and in the charterparty, was assigned to S., and became, and were vested in him, of which the defendant had notice before the release or discharge or payment; that the defendant released and discharged the defendant, and made the payment without the authority, knowledge or consent of S.; that the release and discharge was given by the plaintiff to the defendant, and obtained by the defendant from the plaintiff, and the payment made fraudulently, and with the intent todefraud S. from recovering in respect of the causes of action, and that the action was brought by S. in the name of the plaintiff on bchalf of S.; that the plaintiff had no interest in the action, and that it had been commenced and carried on for the sole use and benefit, and at the sole expense and costs of S. :-Held, a good replication on equitable grounds. De Pottonier v. De Mattos, El. Bl. & El. 461; 27 L. J., Q. B. 260; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1034; 6 W. B. 628.

A plea of release, if the consideration be impeached, must contain averments supported fully by an answer covering the grounds upon which the consideration is impugned, and cannot extend to a discovery of the consideration.. Purker v. Alcock, 1 Y. & J. 432.

Evidence-Presumption. ]-If, in an action on a covenant for arrears of an annuity, the defendant pleads a release, lost by time and accident, and, to induce the jury to pressure a release, shews that the annuity was not paid for seven-teen years, and that the plaintiff lad borrowed money of the grantor of the annuity and regularity. larly paid him interest, without setting off theannuity; the jury ought not to find for the defendant, unless they are satisfied that there is fair ground for supposing that at some particular period during the seventeen years the plaintiff actually executed a release of the annuity; and to rebut the presumption of such release, the jury may look at the situation of the parties, and take into their consideration the circumstances of the plaintiff being a near relative of the grantor of the annuity, having large expec-tations from him, and of the grantor being a very old man, peremptory with his relatives, and very exact and attentive to his pecuniary conannuity deed in the hands of the plaintiff, if it had never been intended that it should be enforced. Bigg v. Roberts, 3 Car. & P. 43.

A jury may be instructed that they are at liberty, on evidence of long-continued nonobservance, to presume a release of a covenant, where, consistently with the evidence the release to be presumed might have been executed before the accrual of the breach complained of, Tennent v. Neil, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 418-Ex. Ch.

—— Secondary.]—The entries in the bill of eosts of a deceased attorney are good secondary evidence of the execution of mutual releases. Skeffington v. Whitehurst, 3 Y. & C. 1.

- Evidence of Fraud. ]-In an action in a county court by executors, the defendant having shewn that the action was brought by oneto him the day before the trial by the non-coucurring executor. The judge refused to allow the plaintiff's counsel to examine the executor, who had executed the release, as to the efreumstances under which he had executed it, for the purpose of eliciting from him whether it had been frauduleutly obtained:—Held, that the judge was wrong in so refusing, and that such examination ought to have been allowed. Robinson v. Vernon (Lord), 7 C. B. (N.S.) 231; 29 L. J., C. P. 135; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 610; 1 L. T. 67; 8 W. R.

On the morning of the trial of a plaint, in a county court, at the suit of several parties, the clerk of the defendant's attorney went to one of the plaintiffs, an illiterate person, and obtained his mark to a peculiarly-worded release. The judge, observing that the release was evidently a trick, gave judgment for the plaintiff :- Held. that the cirenmstances under which the release was obtained offered some evidence of fraud, so as to justify the judge in declining to give effect to it. Surgent v. Wedlake, 11 C. B. 732 : 15 Jur. 1184.

To support a replication of fraud to a plea of release of the debt, for which an action is brought, there must be evidence that the contents of the deed were misrepresented to the plaintiff, or that fradulent mispresentations were made to him to induce him to exceute it. But if he merely lent his name for a collateral purpose, as to enforce contribution from a shareholder, and the action was not instituted for his benefit, and he did not instruct nor retain the attorney who brought it, such evidence will be no evidence to support the replication of fraud to a plea of the release. Richards v. Turner, 1 F. & F. 1. See also ante. col. 454.

G. REGISTRATION.

Memorial-Form. ]-A lithographed memorial is a memorial put into writing, within 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 5, and ought to be registered by the registrar. Rep. v. Middlesen Registrar, 7 Q. B. 156; 14 L. J., Q. B. 200; 9 Jur. 871.

Where the deed, of which a memorial is to be registered, is indorsed on an earlier deed, it is not sufficient to describe the premises by such memorial in the terms used in the carlier deed without express reference to it, if the deed to be registered describes the premises simply by reference to the earlier deed. Reg. v. Middlesew Registrar, 15 Q. B. 976; 19 L. J., Q. B. 537; 14 Jur. 1001, Clerical mistakes do not vitiate involment under the Registry Act. Wyatt v. Barwell, 19 Ves. 435; 13 R. R. 236.

A deed contained recitals which described two persons as concurring in settling property to which they were "respectively entitled." It afterwards contained a grant to trustees of a certain part of this property, as if made by one of these persons, when in fact that part belonged to the other. The memorial of the deed desorbed both as the granting parties; this description was not one of the things required by the statute:—Held, not to vitiate the effect of the memorial under the Registration Act. Mill v. Hill, 3 H. L. Cas. 828.

Execution — Corporation.] — Under the S. P. Church Building Acts land in Middlesex was 290.

executor without the concurrence of his co-conveyed to the ecclesiastical commissioners, by executor, put in a release which had been given deed-poll executed by the grantor. The comdeed-poll executed by the grantor. The com-missioners assented by affixing their seal:—Held that under 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 5, the registrar was not bound to register a memorial of the conveyance without the attestation of the party who witnessed the execution by the grantor, and that the affixing the seal of the commissioners was not an execution by them of the deed, and was not an excention by them to the deet, and an attestation of the affixing such seal did not satisfy the statute. Reg. v. Middlesex Registrar, 1 El. & El. 322; 28 L. J., Q. B. 77; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 98 : 7 W. R. 64.

> Execution—Attestation.]—The provisions of 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 5, are imperative and not directory, and one of the attesting witnesses of the memorial must have attested the deed of which it is a memorial. Essew v. Baugh, 1 Y.& C. C. C. 620; 11 L. J., Ch. 374; 6 Jur. 1030.

Effect-Where Fraud. -A son who was heirat-law to his father, who was one of the executors and trustees of his father's will, though he had not proved the will, and whose christian names and description were identical with those of his father, after his father's death executed mortgages of freehold and leasehold property of the father, and applied the mortgage money to his own purposes. He handed over the title deeds to the mortgagees. The transaction took place without the knowledge of his mother and sister, who were co-trustees and co-executrices with him, and who had proved the will. The will had not been registered in the Middlesex registry, though the property was situate in that county. The mortgage deeds were registered. They purported to be executed by the absolute owner of the property, and the solicitor who acted for both parties believed the son to be the absolute owner. The son told him nothing about the father's will. The solicitor searched the Middle-sex registry. The son took a beneficial interest under the trusts of the father's will. After the son's death the fraud was discovered, and the mother and sister, as trustees of the father's will, brought an action against the mortgagees, claiming a declaration that the mortgages were void against them, and delivery up of the title deeds.
The other beneficiaries under the will were made defendants :- Held (by Kay, J., and the Court of Appeal), that the son in executing the mortgage deeds was personating his father; that the deeds were forgeries, and passed nothing to the mortgagees, except the son's beneficial interest under the father's will; and that the mortgagees could obtain no title by virtue of the Middlesex Registry Act. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862; 20 Ch. D. 611; 47 L. T. 89; 30 W. R. 648—C. A. Affirming, 51 L. J., Ch. 149; 45 L. T. 532; 30 W. R. 148. Per Lindley, L.J.: - The son could have been convicted of forgery by reason of his executing the mortgage deeds. Ib.

Where there were two assignments of the same lease of premises in Middlesex, and the last executed was registered first :- Held, that at law the deed last registered must be considered as fraudulent and void, under 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 1, although the party claiming under the second assignment knew, when it was executed, of the prior execution of the first assignment. Doe d. Robinson v. Allsop, 5 B. & Ald. 142. S. P., Doe d. Winser v. Rowley, 5 L. J., C. P.

Rents Received under Unregistered Deed.]—
A debtor deposited the title deeds of his houses with his creditors as a security, and afterwards executed an assignment of his interest in the houses to the same party; but this instrument was never registered, pursuant to 7 Anne, e. 20. The debtor afterwards became bunkrupt, and the assignment of his effects under the commission was duly registered. The assignees brought an action against the creditor for the rents of the houses which he had received from the time of the assignment made to him by the bankrupt:—Held, that although this instrument was void, the rents which the defendant, being equitable mortgagee, had received, could not be taken out of his hands by virtue of the registered assignment under the commission. Stampter v. Cooper, 2 B. & Ad. 228: 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 226.

After an assignment of a mortgage, payment to the mortgage with notice must be allowed by the assignee; the registry of the premises being in Middlesex is not untice for this purpose. Tender after the bill filed of the balance, deducting the payments to the mortgagee with costs, departed the assignee of subsequent costs. Will-linus v. Surrell, 4 Ves. 389.

The registry of a deed is not of itself notice as against a subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R.

The register of a mortgage will not by itself affect a subsequent incumbrance without notice. **Cutor v. Cooley, 1 Cox, 182.

Befford Level Act.]—By the Belford Level Act (15 Car. 2, c. 17) it was enacted that all conveyances by indenture of any part of the 95,000 ences allotted to the Earl of Bedford and bis co-adventurers entered with the registrar of the level should have equal force to convey the freehold and inheritance as a bargain and sale involled under the statute Hon. 3 and it was also provided "that no lease, grant, or conveyance of any part of the stall and, except leases for seven years or under in possession, should be of force but from the time it should be entered with the registrar." —Held, in a sult for specific performance, that the condition of registration was required only for the purpose of entitling the party to the corporate privileges conferred by the act, and that the absence of registration did not vitiate the title to the land. Willis v. Brown, 10 Sim. 127; 8 L. J., Ch. 321.

A conveyance of or charge upon lands in the Bediford Level is valid as against persons affected with notice thereof, although the same is not registered at the Fen Office. The enactment (15 Car. 2, c. 17, s. 8), that such instrument (15 Car. 2, c. 17, s. 8), that such instrument with the properties of the form of the shall be entered with the registrar has application only to the special purposes contemplated by that act, for the government of the corporation and the benefit of the undertaking. Ib.

A lesse of laud in the Bedford Level cannot object to an action by his landlord for a breach of covenant in not repairing that the lease was void by 15 Car. 2, c. 17, for want of being registered; such act enacting that "no lease, &c., should be of force but from the time it should be registered," not avoiding it as between the parties themselves, but only postponing its priority with respect to subsequent incumbrancers registering their titles before. Hodson v. Sharpe, 10 East, 350; 10 R. B. 324.

A., owner of estates in the Bedford Level. wishing to give his son a qualification as bailiff. for which, according to the Bedford Level Act, it is necessary to "have" 400 acres in the Level. wrote to the registrar of the Level, stating his wish, and asking him to find a qualification. The registrar thereupon, without any further instructions, selected out of A,'s land the smallest lot that exceeded 400 acres, and sent to him a deed, by which he purported to convey it to the son in fce, in consideration of natural love and affection. This deed was at once executed by A., and registered. The son died soon after, without having ever heard of the transaction. It clearly appeared that neither A, nor the registrar intended to consider the transaction to have the effect of making the son beneficial owner, nor intended any fraud or illegality. On a bill being filed by A. to establish his title to the land:—Held, that A. to establish his tole to the man — read, that the letter written by A. to the registrar excluded any defence grounded on the Statute of Frauds. Childers v. Childers, 1 De G. & J. 482; 26 L. J., Ch. 743; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1277; 5 W. R. 859. Reversing 3 Kay & J. 310.

Held, also, in the construction of the Bedford Level Act, that a mere legal estate was a sufficient qualification, and that, therefore, there was nothing illegal in A.'s design, no intention to represent the son as beneficial owner appearing. Ib.

Held, that on the ground of trust, or of mistake, or on both grounds, the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought. Ib.

Held, that this conclusion was not affected by the circumstance that the legal estate was outstanding under a mortgage in fee not known to the registrar. Ib.

Non-Registration — Effect.] — The want of registration of a conveyance invalidates the deed as to subsequent purchasers only, not as to assignees of the party conveying the property. Coles. Exparte, Rucker, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 100; 1 L. J., Bk. 18.

The object of Registry Acts is only to protect subsequent purchasers. They have no effect therefore to vitiate the conveyance for want of registration, as between party taking conveyance and him who conveyed, or his assignees under commission of baukruptcy. Jones v. Gibbons, 9 Ves. 407: 7. R. k. 247.

The East Riding Registration Act (6 Anne, 23) is imperative, and nules a will of lands in that riding is registered within six months after the testator's death, or a memorial of the impediment which disables the devisee from doing so registered in the manner pointed out by s. 15, the will is void as against subsequent purchasers and mortgagess. Chaddoids v. Terner, 34 Beav, 634; 34 L. J., Ch. 356. Aftirned, 35 L. J., Ch. 356. Aftirned, 35 L. J., Ch. 359. L. R. 1 Ch. 319; 12 Jur. (8.8) 239; 14 L. 7.86; 14 W. R. 491.

A. executed a legal mortgage of property in Yorkshire to B. for 700*L*; at the same time he borrowed 100*L* from C. and signed a memorandum agreeing to give C. a second mortgage on the property to secure that amount. A. sub-sequently executed another mortgage of the property for 500*L* to D. The first and the third mortgages were registered at Wakefield, but not the second. —Held, that the third mortgage had priority over the second. Wight or Wright, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 66; L. R. 16 Eq. 41; 28 L. T. 491; 21 W. R. 667.

Inquiries respecting Unregistered Instruments. ]-A purchaser or mortgagee is not discovery of unregistered instruments, though he may be bound by actual knowledge of such instruments. Lee v. Clutton, 46 L. J., Ch. 48; 35 L. T. 84; 24 W. R. 942—C. A.

— Notice.] — A landowner by deed in February, 1872, charged his land with two life annuities. He subsequently made several mort-gages of the property by deeds, some of which recited the annuity deed. The annuity deed had not been registered as required by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12:—Held, by the Master of the Rolls, that the annuity deed not being registered, was void as against all the subsequent incumbrancers, whether they had notice of it or not. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that as the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12, was in similar terms to the clauses in the Registry Acts, which had been decided not to make an unregistered conveyance void as against a subsequent purchaser who had notice of it, the legislature must be taken to have used the words in the later act in the sense given to them by those decisions, and that the annuities therefore were valid as against all the subsequent incumbrancers, who took with notice of them, and against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor. Greaves v. Tofield, 50 L. J., Ch. 118; 14 Ch. D. 563; 43 L. T. 100; 28 W. R. 840—C. A.

The plaintiff had lent money to a solicitor on the security of the deposit of deeds in Middlesex, with a letter charging the land, the legal estate in which was outstanding. The solicitor afterwards, by way of security, for money due to a client, made a mortgage of the land to the client, which mortgage was registered :- Held, that the client must be presumed to have had notice of the plaintiff's charge, which, therefore, though unregistered, retained priority. Bradley v. Riches, 47 L. J., Ch. 811; 9 Ch. D. 189; 38 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 810.

- Where Registration unnecessary-Eswhere Registration unnecessary—Ratoppel.—Vendors allowing Vendees to Register—Lien—Unpaid Purchase-money.]—Trustees of a charity conveyed land in Yorkshire to R. and W., part of the purchase-money remaining un-paid, and allowed R. and W. to register the conveyance, knowing that they wanted to do so in order to re-sell the land in lots :- Held, that the trustees had, by their conduct, precluded themselves from asserting their lien for unpaid purchase-money against bona fide sub-purchasers from B. and W. without actual notice, though the sub-purchasers had not examined, as it was their duty to have done, the conveyance to B. and W., a memorial of which was registered, and though the estate of one of the sub-purchasers was equitable only. Kettlenedl v. Watson, 53 L. J., Ch. 717; 26 Ch. D. 501; 51 L. T. 185; 32 W. R. 865—C. A.

What must be Registered—Copyhold Estate— Enfranchisement Deed.]—As, on the execution of a deed enfranchising copyhold land in the county of Middlesex, such land ceases to be copybold and becomes freehold, in such a case the exemption in s. 17 of 7 Anne, c. 20, does not apply, and therefore a memorial of such a deed must be registered under s. 1 of the act. Reg. v. Truro (Lord), 57 L. J., Q. B. 577; 21 Q. B. D. 555; 59 L. T. 242; 36 W. R. 775—C. A.

Appointment of Trustee in Bankruptcy. -The 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 27, does not require bound to make any inquiries with a view to the certificate of the appointment of assignees to be registered in order to protect them against subsequent purchasers of bankrupt's freehold property without notice, unless the property is in a register county. Anon., I Deac. & C. 349.

> Lease.]-Covenants imposed upon and to be performed by the tenant, are not equivalent to a rack rent, so as to bring the case within s. 17 of the Middlesex Registry Act, 7 Anne, c. 20, by which it is provided that the act shall not extend to leases at a rack rent. Doe d. Winser v. Rowley, 5 L. J., C. P. 290.

> Contract respecting Buildings to be Erected on Land-"Memorandum of Charge." ]-The owner of land in Yorkshire made an agreement in writing with the plaintiff by which the former agreed, in consideration of 2001, paid to him by the plaintiff, to complete certain buildings on the land, and the plaintiff agreed to purchase the buildings when completed for 7501., less the 2001. already paid: Held, that this agreement was not an "assurance" within the meaning of the Yorkshire Registrics Act. 1884, and could not therefore be registered. *Rodger v. > Moore v. Cuberhouse, 27 Beav, 639; 29 L. J., Ch.
> 419; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 115; 1 L. T. 386.

A memorandum of further charge in favour of the first mortgagee of lands in Yorkshire requires registration as much as the original mortgage, and in the absence of registration will be postponed to a second registered mortgage without notice of such further charge, nor will the first mortgagee be entitled to tack his further chargeit the second mortgage has given him notice of his charge. Chedland v. Patter, 48 L. J., Ch. 484; L. R. 18 Eq. 350; 30 L. T. 356; 22 W. R. 511. Affirmed, 44 L. J., Ch. 169; L. R. 10 Ch. 8; 31 L. T. 522; 23 W. R. 36.

A memorandum not under seal, accompanying a deposit by way of equitable mortgage of deeds relating to lands in Middlesex, requires registraton under 7 Anne, c. 20. Neve v. Pennell, Hunt v. Neve, 2 H. & M. 170; 33 L. J., Ch. 19; 9 L. T. 285; 11 W. R. 986.

— Registration of Final Order of Fore-closure.]—An order for foreclosure absolute in respect of lands in Middlesex is not a judgment within the meaning of 7 Anne, c. 20, s. 18, and 1 & 2 Viet. c. 110, so as to require a memorial tobe entered at the Middlesex Registry Office ; and a direction to the registrar of deeds to that effect was refused. Burrows v. Holley, 56 L. J., Ch. 605; 35 Ch. D. 123; 56 L. T. 506; 35 W. R.

- Share in Proceeds of Sale of Land-Mortgage.]—The local Registry Acts are intended to apply only to dealings at law or in equity with the land itself. Mortgagees of a share of the upon trust for sale do not acquire priority by registration, but by notice given to the trustees of the will. Arden v. Arden, 54 L. J., Ch. 655; 29 Ch. D. 702: 52 L. T. 610: 33 W. R. 593.

 Legacy Charged on Land—Assignment. -An assignment of a legacy charged upon land is an assignment of money only, and does not affect the land within the meaning of the Registry Acts. The registration of such an assignment therefore does not postpone a prior unregistered assignment of the same legacy. Malcolm v. Charlesworth, 1 Keen, 63. S. C., nom. Wilkinson v. Charlesworth, 5 L. J., Ch. 172.

 Sale under Decree—Transfer of Lien from Land to Purchase-money. ]—Where premises had been sold under a decree:—Held, that the lien of an incumbrancer was not transferred to the purchase-money, so as to be out of the Registry Acts, and he was, therefore, postponed to subsequent incumbrancers. Hennand v. More, 1 Eden,

- Equitable Interest of Married Woman.] -The statute of 7 Anne, c. 20, was intended to prevent fraud by secret conveyances, and consequently, if there has been notice, a subsequent incumbrancer who was first to register does not gain priority. Punchard v. Tomkins, 31 W. R.

A married woman, who was equitably entitled for life for her separate use to property in Middlesex, charged her separate estate by an instrument, dated the 29th of May, 1880, with the payment of a debt due from her husband. The property had been previously mortgaged by a deed, dated the 8th of April, 1880, which had not been registered. A receiver had been obtained by the plaintiffs in the action, who claimed under the deed of the 29th of May :- Held, that the deed of the 8th of April was entitled to priority, notwithstanding the want of registration, on the ground that the instrument of the 29th of May only operated upon what the married woman could honestly charge. Ib.

Vendor's Lien for Unpaid Purchasemoney.]—A vendor's lien for unpaid purchasemoney need not be registered under 2 & 3 Anne, e. 4. Kettlewell v. Watson, 53 L. J., Ch. 717; 26 Ch. D. 501; 51 L. T. 135; 32 W. R. 865—C. A.

- Will.]-A testatrix, having lands in the East Riding, died in 1854. Her will was discovered in 1861, which devised these lands, but before any registration of it, or of any impedi-ment, had been made, the heir mortgaged the property:—Held, that the mortgagee had priority over the devisee. Chadwick v. Turner, 35 L. J., Ch. 349; L. R. 1 Ch. 610; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 239; 14 L. T. 86; 14 W. R. 491.

To defeat the title of a registered purchaser from the heir-at-law, there must be clear and distinct notice amounting to fraud. Ib.

A registered conveyance of premises in Middlesex for valuable consideration, established against a prior devise not registered, the evidence of notice, which ought to amount to actual fraud. not being sufficient. Jolland v. Stainbridge, 3 Ves. 478; 4 R. R. 64.

on Same Day. ]-According to the memorandum their client, A., upon premises in Middlesex, which proceeds of sale of real estate in Middlesex devised of registration indorsed on two mortgaged securities of different dates brought to the Middlesex registry, they were both registered on the same day and at the same hour; but one was numbered 764, the other 768 :- Held, that the scenrity numbered 764 must be regarded as having been registered first. Neve v. Pennell, Hunt v. Nere, 2 Hem. & M. 170; 33 L. J., Ch. 19; 9 L. T. 285; 11 W. R. 986.

Mortgage by demise for a term of years; the mortgagor does not deliver to the mortgagee the purchase deed conveying the freehold to the mortgagor, but keeps it back, and subsequently deposits it with another person as a security for a loan. The conveyance to the mortgagor and the mortgagee were executed within a day of each other, and were both registered on the same day. The deposit was not made for a considerable time afterwards; but no notice by the subsequent incumbrancer of the mortgage being proved, and being denied by his answer, it was held that he was entitled to the benefit of the deposit, as against the mortgagee, and was not bound to deliver up to him the conveyance. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765.

—— Notice—What Necessary.]—Notice of an unregistered mortgage held to affect subsequent mortgagees, who had registered. Sheldon v. Cox. 2 Eden, 224.

To affect a registered deed by notice of a prior unregistered deed (the policy of which has been much doubted), actual notice must be clearly proved, amounting to fraud. Wyatt v. Barwell 19 Ves. 435; 13 R. B. 236. S. P., Jolland v. Stainbridge, 3 Ves. 478. Chadwick v. Turner, 35 L. J., Ch. 349; L. R. I Ch. 310; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 239; 14 L. T. 86; 14 W. R. 491,

A conveyance of, or charge on, lands within the Bedford Level is valid as against persons affected with notice, though not registered as required by the Bedford Level Act. Brown, 10 Sim. 127; 8 L. J. Ch. 321.

A solicitor induced a client to advance money for A., on mortgage of lands in Middlesex, and soon afterwards induced a second client to advance money on mortgage of the same lands without informing him of the existence of the first mortgage. The solicitor afterwards left the country, and the holder of the second mortgage registered it before the first mortgage was registered:—Held, that the holder of the second mortgage must be taken to have had, through the solicitor, notice of the first mortgage, and could not by the prior registration obtain priority. Rolland v. Hart, 40 L. J., Ch. 701; L. R. 6 Ch. 678; 25 L. T. 191; 19 W. R. 962.

A purchaser or mortgagee is not bound to make any inquiries with a view to the discovery of unregistered instruments, though he may be bound by actual knowledge of such instruments. The policy of the Registration Acts is to free a purchaser from the imputation of constructive notice. In the absence of actual notice, there-fore, to the principal or his agent, and of fraud, a later registered deed will have priority over a prior unregistered charge, notwithstanding that the purchaser knew that the title deeds were not in the possession of the vendor, but were in the hands of certain other persons, and abstained from inquiry. Lee v. Clutton, 46 L. J., Ch. 48; 35 L. T. 84; 24 W. R. 942—C.A.

A firm of solicitors took an equitable charge, Priority—Registration of Several Instruments | by a memorandum and deposit of title deeds, from they omitted in the register. A. subsequently | mortgage thereof to M. by way of under-lease, sold the premises to the defendant, who duly registered the conveyance. The solicitors filed a bill claiming priority for their charge, alleging that the defendant, when he took his conveyance, knew that the deeds were in their hands, and made no inquiry:—Held, that the facts alleged amounted only to constructive notice, and that in order that an unregistered charge should have priority over a subsequent registered conveyance, it must be shewn that the purchaser or his agent had actual notice of the prior charge, or if it is sufficient to allege anything other than actual notice, the allegation must amount to a clear charge of fraud, and not of omission to inquire only. Ib.

The plaintiff had lent money to a solicitor on the security of the deposit of title deeds of land in Middlesex, with a letter charging the land, the legal estate in which was outstanding. The solicitor afterwards, by way of security for money due to a client, made a mortgage of the land to the client, which mortgage was registered: Held, that the client must be presumed to have had notice of the plaintiff's charge, which therefore, though mnegistered, retained priority.

Bradley v. Riches, 47 L. J., Ch. 811; 9 Ch. D.
189; 38 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 910.

A testatrix, who died in 1871, by her will devised real estate in Middlesex to trustees upon trust for sale. The will was not registered in Middlesex. The heir-at-law of the testatrix having learned that the will had not been registered, mortgaged the property to different mortgagees, and registered the mortgages. mortgage deeds were prepared and registered by the heir-at-law himself. The surviving trustee received the rents of the property down to 1878, when he died, and in 1879 a receiver was appointed in an action to administer the estate of the testatrix. order of the court, and notice of the mortgages was then given by the mortgagees to the purchasers, and the purchase-moneys were paid into court subject to the claims of the mortgagees. The heir-at-law died in 1885. An application was made to transfer the purchase moneys to the account of the devisees under the will. The mortgagees resisted the application on the ground that the act of 7 Anne, e. 20, gave them a title, because the will had not been registered. Neither of the securities was for moneys advanced, but both for old debts, and the heir-ut-law acted in the mortgage transactions as agent of both the mortgagees :—Held, that, if persons claiming under the act had notice of the will, they could not set up the title of the heir-at-law; that in the present case the mortgagees were affected by the notice which their agent the heir-at-law possessed; and that consequently their claims failed. Weir, In re, Hollingworth v. Willing, 58 L. T. 792.

- Of Prior Equitable Interest.]-A party taking an equitable mortgage with notice of prior equitable mortgage, cannot, by assignment to another without notice, give him a better title. Ford v. White, 16 Beav. 120.

Property in Middlesex was mortgaged to A and afterwards to B., and subsequently to C. with notice of B.'s incumbrance. C. registered before B. and afterwards assigned to D., who had no notice of B.'s mortgage:—Held, that the interests being equitable, D. had no priority over retaining in himself a reversion of two days, He subsequently made an equitable mortgage by way of written memorandum to P. He again made a third mortgage to S., and assigned to S. the original term, including the reversion of two days. S. had no notice of the equitable notice to P., but had notice of M.'s incumbrance. P. registered in Middlesex, but S. did not search the register, and was therefore not affected by notice:—Held, by Malins, V.C., that the equities being equal, S. had a legal estate by virtue of the assignment to him of the original term, and the reversion of two days, which entitled him to priority over P. On appeal, the Lords Justices expressed themselves not prepared to affirm this view, and therefore desired a further question of fact to be argued; but the ease was compromised before any judgment was given. Russell Road Purchase-Moneys, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 673; L. R. 12 Eq. 78; 23 L. T. (N.S.) 839; 19 W. R. 520, 706.

- When effectual.]-A subsequent incumbrancer, who at the time of taking his security has no notice of the prior incumbrance, may, by properly memorialising his security, though after notice, obtain priority over the prior incum-brancer, if the memorial of the security of the Latter be defective. Lessex v. Baugh, 1 Y, & C. C. C. 620; 11 L. J. Ch. 374; 6 Jur. 1030.

A conveyance of lands in Middlesex, by settlement upon a marriage of the settler, registered under the statute 7 Anne, c. 20, is effectual against a prior unregistered conveyance, notwithstanding the party claiming under the settlement had notice of the unregistered conveyance after the marriage, but before the registry of his settlement. Elsey v. Lutyens, 8 Hare, 159.

A registered marriage settlement of leaseholds The property was sold in 1882 under an in Middlesex postponed to an equitable mortgage by deposit prior in date, but registered subsequently to the settlement, the trustees not having inquired for the title deeds when the abstract was delivered to them. Warmald v. Maitland, 6 N. R. 218; 35 L. J., Ch. 60; 12 L. T.

535; 13 W. R. 832.

- From Search of Register.]-Where incumbrancer on estate in Yorkshire searched the registry from a certain date only, it will not be presumed that he had notice of any of the contents prior to that date. Hodyson v. Dean, 2 Sim, & S. 221; 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 95; 25 R. R.

A subsequent incumbrancer is not bound, finding a memorial of a first mortgage on the register, to inquire how much is due to the first mortgagee, and will not be affected with notice of a prior unregistered second charge, made in favour of the first mortgagee. Credland v. Potter, 44 L. J., Ch. 169; L. R. 10 Ch. 8; 31 L. T. 522; 23 W. R. 366.

Expunging Registration.]-A judge of the High Court has no jurisdiction to make an order that the registration of a deed in the Middlesex Registry be vacated. By the indement in an action in the Chancery Division, a deed which had been entered in the Middlesex Registry was set aside on the ground of fraud :-Held, that, although it might be within the jurisdiction of the Master of the Rolls to direct that the registration be vacated, a judge of the High Court P., having a term of years in a house, made a could give no further relief than a declaration that the registration ought to be vacated. Gibbs 14 L. J., Ex. 76. And see Sichlemore v. Thistleton, v. Sidney, 49 L. T. 132. 6 M. & S. 9; 18 R. R. 280.

H. PROCEEDINGS ON BONDS.

1. WHEN MAINTAINABLE,

Upon Lost Bond. |- Though a court of law will permit a plaintiff to declare upon a lost bond, that does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery. Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. C. C. 218.

The jurisdiction of equity upon lost bonds is very ancient, and is founded upon the want of a remedy at law without profert, till that jurisdiction was lately assumed. East India Co. v.

Boddam, 9 Ves. 464; 7 R. R. 275.
Relief was given upon a lost bond against sureties, the principal being out of the jurisdicsureties, the principal being out of the jurisdictivity of action. Binas v. Fisher, 43 L. J., Ch. tion, upon giving an indemnity against demands 188. See Neede v. Deman, 43 L. J., Ch. 409; of the plaintitis or persons claiming under them L. B. 18 Eq. 127, 30 L. T. 200; 22 W. R. 400. by virtue of the bond, and such costs, damages and expenses as they may be put to by the loss of the bond. Ib.

A bill was filed for relief in respect of a lost bond, which was alleged to have been altered after execution: Held, that the doctrine laid down in Simpson v. Hoveden (Lord) (3 Myl. & Cr. 97: 6 L. J., Ch. 315) did not apply, for the bond being lost the objection would not, at law, appear on the face of it. Williams v. Flight, 5 Beav. 41.

Bond given up by Mistake.]—A. gives three bonds to B. for 500%, each, payable at different times. The two first are paid; but upon the parties settling an account relative to other matters, the third bond is delivered up by mistake, instead of a particular voucher belong-ing to that account. Equity will relieve against this mistake, by directing an issue to try whether there were two bonds or three, and whether the last bond was paid or not. Vanhoven v. Giesque, 4 Bro. P. C. 622.

Bond improperly obtained.]—The court has jurisdiction to restrain the East India Co. from paying money secured by their bonds, which have been wrongfully obtained possession of, to any other than the true owner. Glasse v. Marshall, 15 Sim. 71; 15 L. J., Ch. 25.

Obligation to pay Interest regularly-Default -Forfeiture.]-On a bond with a penalty conditioned for the payment of money at a given day, and interest at stated intervals in the meantime, the whole sum becomes demandable on default in the regular payment of interest. It is no defence to plead that the obligors credited the obligee with interest in their books upon which the obligee could draw. Goad v. Empire Printing Co., 52 J. P. 438.

Demand, when Necessary.]-Where to an action on a bond conditioned for the payment of a sum of money on demand, there is an issue as to the demand, the plaintiff must prove an

An action on a bond conditioned generally for the payment of a specified sum with interest, may be brought without a demand being made. Gibbs v. Southam, 5 B. & Ad. 911; 3 N. & M. 155.

At what Time.]—If an instalment secured by bond is not paid on the day, the bond is forfeited, and the penalty is the debt in law. Judå v. Ecans, 6 Term Rep. 399. S. P., Chates v. Hewitt, 1 Wils. 80; Talbot v. Hodson, 2 Marsh. 527 ; 7 Taunt, 251.

Where a bond becomes absolute, the penalty is the debt in law. Worthington v. Wigley, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 454; 3 Scott, 558; 5 D. P. C. 504; 1 Jur. 183.

Delivery up, on Payment. ]-A bill in equity will not lie for the delivery up of a bond, after the bond debt is paid, though by the tenor of the bond the money secured would be payable at a future date, so that there was no present

Assignment of Bond-Breach of Trust.]The obligor of a bond, which had been afterwards assigned to a trustee, of which assignment the obligor of the bond had notice, but not of the particular term of the trust, was held not liable for payments not warranted by the trust made by him under the direction of the trustee. but only for such payments as he had made without such direction. How affected by Modern Practice. ] - The indorsement on a writ claimed 500L, as the principal sum due on a bond conditioned for the payment by the obligor to the plaintiff of an annuity of 261. during the life of a child, and until she should attain the age of sixteen years, by specified quarterly payments, and alleged that two of such payments were due and unpaid: two of such payments were due and anpara :— Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to pro-ceed under Ord. XIV. r. 1, to obtain final judgment, but was limited to the procedure Specified in 8 & 9 Will. 3, e. 11, s. 8, and Ord, XIII. r. 14. Tuther v. Cavalampi, 21 Q. B. D. 414; 59 L. T. 141; 37 W. R. 94; 52 J. P. 616.

The plaintiff advanced 250L to a limited company, upon the security of ten mortgage debentures for 251, each, dated the 1st of September, 1890, and repayable the 1st of September, 1891, with interest. By his bond, dated the 1st of November, 1890, the defendant bound himself to the plaintiff in 500l, to repay the 250l, on the 1st of September, 1891, if the company should then dishonour their mortgage debentures, with a defeasance if the company should honour them, The company failed to pay, and the plaintiff issued a writ against the defendant, and applied for final judgment under Ord. XIV. r. 1:express demand before action. Corter v. Ring, Held, that this was a common money bond, and 2 Jenkins, 1 D. & L. 605; 12 M. & W. 614; the procedure under Ord. XIV., was applied to Jenkins, 1 D. & L. 605; 12 M. & W. 614; the procedure under Ord. XIV., was applied to the control of the control that the writ was specially indorsed within the rules; but that if the defendant brought into court the sum of 250d., he should have leave to defend. Gerard v. Clurces, 61 L. J., Q. B. 487; [1882] 2 Q. B. 11; 67 L. T. 204.

Bonds within.]—Bail bonds are not within the statute. Selby v. Lewes, 1 Tidd's Prac. 633. In an action of a bond conditioned to perform an award, the plaintiff must assign a breach, and cannot have judgment for the penalty, and take out execution for the single sum awarded, though the measure of damages is ascertained by the award. Welsh v. Ireland, 6 East, 613; 2 Smith, 666.

Breaches need not be assigned on nonpayment of an annuity seemed by a warrant to confess judgment on a mutuatus. Shaw v. Worcester (Murquis), 6 Bing. 385; 4 M. & P. 21; 8 L. J. (0.8.) C. P. 98.

A post-obit bond, upon which a forfeiture has taken place, is not within the statute. Murray v. Stair (Envl.), 3 D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82; 26 R. R. 282.

But a bond, conditioned for payment of a certain sum by instalments is. Willoughby v. Swinton, 6 East, 550; 2 Smith, 663.

But a bond, conditioned for the payment of a sum of money at the end of five years, with half-yearly interest in the meantime, with a proviso that, upon default in payment of interest, the principal shall be payable, is not. James v. Thomas, 2 N. & M. 663; 5 B. & Ad. 40; 2 L. J., K. B. 207. S. P., Smith. V. Zond, 3 M. & Scott, 528; 10 Bing, 125; 2 L. J. C. P. 280.

Hinst v. Jennings, 5 B. & C. 650; 8 D. & R. 424.
The stautic extends to a liability created by the breach of an indemnity bond, whereby the obliges is so far damulfied as that he may be required to pay moncy in consequence of a forfeiture, although the matter of the liability should be in some sort collateral to the direct breach, and actual damulfication has not ensued. Harrop v.
Armitags, 12 Price, 441.

In an action on a bond (with non est factum pleaded), to secure payment by instalments of the consideration for the purchase of a business, the plaintiff ought to suggest breaches. D'Aranda v. Houstoun, 6 Car. & P. 511.

To an action on a bond conditioned for payment of 1,000. on a day certain, and for the performance of the covenants in a deed, the defendant pleaded a general plea of performance of all aliangs mentioned in the condition. The plaintiff denied that the defendant paid the 1,000.—Held, that as the plaintiff was proceedings as 1—Held, that as the plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings to the breach in nonpayment of the morey, it was not necessary for him to assign the plaintiff was proceeding the plaintiff was proceedings. The plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings and the plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings of the plaintiff was proceedings.

3. UNDER 4 & 5 ANNE, C. 3.

How Affected by Modern Fractice.]—It is competent to the plaintiff in an action upon a common money bond within the meaning of 4 & 5 Amer. c. 16, s. 12, to proceed under Ord, XIV. for the purpose of obtaining final pindgment, ereman v. Clares, 61 L. J., Q. B. 487; [1892] 2 Q. B. 11; 67 L. T. 204.

Bonds within.]—A bond for payment by the executors of the obliger of a sum of money within six months after his death, in case of his dying before his wife, or, in the event of her dying first, for payment by the obliger of such a sum, not exceeding the same amount to such persons as she should appoint, is not a bond within the above statute. Empland v. Watson, 9 M. & W. 333; 1 D. (N.S.) 398; 11 L. J., Ex. 102; 6 Jur. 763.

A bond was given for the penal sum of 4,000L, the condition of which recited that the obligor was indebted to the obligee in 2,000%, and that the obligee had agreed to accept interest for the same at the rate of 5%, per cent., during the lives of the obligee and another party, in satisfaction of the debt, provided the same was regularly paid. If the interest was paid half-yearly, on the 1st July and 1st January, the bond was to be null and void; but, in case of failure for twenty-eight days next after each half-yearly payment had become due, the same having been demanded, the bond to be in full force; and in case of failure in making the payments within the respective times, the bond or payments made under it should not be taken in discharge of any part of the 2,000%, but the same should immediately after such default become payable under the bond. To an action on the bond, a plea as to one of the half-yearly payments, that payment had not been demanded on the day when it became due, or any time within twenty eight days, but that after the expiration of the twenty-eight days, and, before action, it was paid, and that no other sum was due, is bad as a plea of solvit post diem ; because, if the principal had become payable under the bond, payment of it should have been pleaded; and, if it had not become payable, the plea should have shewn that it had not, which it did not. Marriage v. Marriage, I C. B. 761; 14 L. J., C. P. 244; 9 Jur. 581.

4. WHAT RECOVERABLE.

Amount.]—Where there is a bond for payment of rent, the bond is only a security to the amount of the penalty. White v. Sealey, 1 Dougl. 49.

A bond, whereby the obligor bound himself "in 20%, to be paid yearly," is not like a bond with a penalty which can be forfeited, and so become a debt in law. Morrant v. Gough, 7 B. & C. 206; 1 Man. & Ry. 41; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 14; 31 R. R. 171.

In an action on a bond, conditioned for payment of the same sum as the penalty, with interest, the jury may give interest by way of damages for the detention of the debt. Francis v. Wilson. B. & M. 103.

In an action on a bond to secure the repayment of money with interest, the plaintiff can only recover to the amount of the penalty, with lw. for the detention of the debt. Hellen v.

Ardley, 3 Car. & P. 12.
On a bond to pay interest half-yearly, and the principal in three years, indement may be entered on failure of paying interest, but with a stay of execution on discharging it. Masjon v. Twuchet. 2 W. Bl. 706.

When a defendant is charged in execution with the penalty of a bond, it may be reduced to the principal and interest. Amery v. Smalridge, 2 W. Bl. 763.

To an action on a bond in the penal sum of 2,800, given by the defendant and O. to the plaintiff to scenre payment of 1,400L, he pleaded, that the plaintiff sued O. on the bond and obtained judgment, and thereupon sued out a fi. fa. against the goods of O. for the debt and damages, indorsed to levy 1,417L 178. 8d., that the sheriff took goods of O. to that amount, and thereout paid the plaintiff his debt and damages:—Held, that such levy was no answer to an action on the bond for the penal sum of 2,800L. Parker v. Watson, 8 Ex. 404; 22 L. J., Ex. 167.

A bond was given from A., B. and C., to D. reciting "that A., having received from D. a certain sum of money in the East Indies, had drawn bills of exchange there payable to D. on a house in Engand; and that the obligors had agreed with D., if the bills should not be accepted and paid, that they would pay the amount thereof, with interest, from the day of their respective dates, by way of penalty"; with a condition to be void if the bills should be accepted and paid according to the tenor thereof. On non-payment of the bills, D. was entitled to recover no more than the amount of them with interest from the time of their becoming due.

Orr v. Churchill, 1 H. Bl. 227; 2 R. R. 750. Interest is due in the case of a bond conditioned for the payment of a lesser sum, though not expressly reserved. Farquhar v. Morris, 7 Term Rep. 124.

But interest was held not payable on a single bond. Hogan v. Page, 1 Bos. & P. 337.

A bond and warrant of attorney executed in reland by a landed proprietor in that country to receive a sum of &——"sterling, good and lawful money of Great Britain," the lawful money of Great Britain," to English bunkers who had advanced the money, was held payable in British currency, in London. Nord v. Rockfort, 4 Cl. & F. 158; 10 Bli. (N.S.) 483.

— Voluntary Bond—Contingency. ]—A bond conditioned for the payment of a specified sum to A., after the death of B. and C., and the Survivor of them, will bear interest after the death of B. and C., although the engagement was perfectly voluntary, and although the principal was payable on a contingency. Hellier v. Franklin, 1 Stark, 291.

Joint and Several Bond-Bankruptcy of one Obligor. - Where one of two obligors in a joint and several bond had become bankrupt. and the obligee having by several dividends in the bankruptcy been paid 20s. in the pound upon the amount of principal and interest due at the rate of the commission, also carried in a claim in respect of the same bond, under a decree in a suit for the administration of the estate of the co-obligor who had died :- Held, that the amount due to the obligee in respect of such claim was to be computed by treating the dividends as ordinary payments on account, that is, by applying each dividend in the first place to the payment of the interest due at the date of such dividends, and the surplus, if any, in reduction of the principal; and, semble, the same principle of computation is applicable in bankruptcy as between the bankrupt and the creditors, where there is a surplus of the estate after payment of 20s, in the pound upon all the debts proved. Bower v. Marris, Cr. & Ph. 351: 10 L. J., Ch. 356.

— Monthly Instalments.]—By the condition of a bond, the obligor was to pay the money by mouthly instalments, and "when and as often as he should make default in the payment of any of the mouthly instalments, he should pay to the obligees is. in the pound for each and every pound of the said instalment so left unpaid", the obligees were not entitled to anything in respect of fractional parts of a pound. Three Towns Loan Society v. Doyle, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 200; 7 L. T. 276; 11 W. R. 22.

The plaintiffs lent money to 8, upon his bond, under which the principal was to be paid in five years by instalments, in case the debtor should so long live, the instalments being calculated so as to cover the principal of the loan, interest thereon, the expenses of negotiating it, and a nuargin representing a premium for the insurance of the debtor's life. The condition of the bond made it void; first, if the instalments were regularly paid till the expiration of the five years or till the debtor's life. The condition of the five years which would have become payable at the expiration of the five years, if the debtor lived so long, were at any time paid up, the balance of instalments being at once payable on the failure of any single instalment. The defendant as surety executed the bond, and default having been made in payment of one instalment, the leftled, that the amount claimed was not a penalty, and could be recovered. Protector Endowment Loan. Company v. Grice, 49 L. J., Q. B. 812; 5 Q. B. D. 592; 48 L. T. 564.—Cl. A. J., Q. B. 812; 5 Q. B. D. 592; 48 L. T. 564.—Cl. A.

Costs.]—In an action on a money bond, conditioned for payment of a less sum than 20t, the penalty not exceeding 20t, no costs are recoverable by virtue of 18 & 14 Vict. c. 61, s. 11. Goncess v. Moure, 3 H. & N. 540; 27 L. J., Ex. 391; 31 L. T. 20s.

And see PENALTY-DAMAGES.

Interest — Apportionment.] — Apportionment of interest upon a bond according to the general rule as according de die in diem, not as dividend or rent not provided for by the statute, is not prevented by the condition, reserving it by equal half-yearly payments. Banner v. Lonce, 13 Ves. | be recovered at law in an action of debt on the Mortgage Bonds of Railway Company.] Railway contractors issued a public loan secured by mortgage of their railways, and concessions, in bonds bearing 7 per cent. interest, redeemable in ten years by semi-annual drawings, at each of which drawings at least 5 per cent, of the loan was to be paid off. By a clause of the mortgage deed the trustees were to apply the residue of the moneys come to their hands, first, in payment of arrears of interest actually due on outstanding bonds; secondly, in redemption of any such bonds as ought to have been redeemed at the previous drawing, but were not so re-deemed; and thirdly in payment of future interest and future redemption of bonds. A holder of bonds which had been drawn for payment, but were unpaid, sought to recover interest on the bonds from the time at which they were drawn for payment, until payment :-Held, that he was so entitled to payment pari passu with the holders of andrawn bonds. Gardillo v. Weguelin, 46 L. J., Ch. 691; 5 Ch. D. 287-C. A.

Interest beyond Penalty-When Recoverable. Interest reyond remaity—when recoverance.

—No interest beyond penalty of bond, except on special grounds. Clarke v. Seton, 6 Ves. 411, 8. P., Mille, Emperte, 2 Ves. J. 301; Gravenon v. Cook, Dick. 305. Gibson v. Egeron, 1d., 408. Kettleby v. In an action on a bond, damages cannot be recovered beyond the amount of the penalty. Branscombe v. Searbrough, 13 L. J., Q. B. 247.
Arrears of an annuity secured by bond not allowed beyond the penalty in the administration Mackworth v. Thomas, 5 Ves. 329; S. P., Maore v. McNamara, I Ball & B. 309. Atkinson v. Atkinson, Ib., 238; Sharpe v. Scarborough (Earl), 3 Vcs. 557.

Where, in a creditor's suit, bond ereditors had been allowed by the master their principal and interest to the extent of the penalties of the bonds, and had received an apportionment upon the amount of the penalties upon further funds becoming available for the creditors, they were beld entitled to subsequent interest on the sums mentioned in the conditions of the bonds remaining due, provided that such interest, together with the sums remaining due, did not exceed the penalties. Walters v. Meredith, 3 Y. & C. 264.

Obligees in a bond held entitled to be paid out of the assets of a deceased obligor a sum exceeding the penalty of the bond. Jendwine v. Agate, 3 Sim. 129; 30 R. R. 136.

A person conveyed estates to trustees upon trust to sell, and apply the produce of sale in discharging all his bond debts, together with the interest then due and to grow due for the same, to the day of payment. A bond creditor claiming under this deed is not entitled to principal and interest beyond the amount of the penalty of the bond. Hughes v. Wynne, 1 Myl. & K. 20; 2 L. J.,

Interest beyond the penalty of a judgment claimed in a creditor's snit; 1, because the cognizor had assigned his property in trust to pay scheduled creditors, of whom the cognizee was seneumen creamors, or when the cognitive was one; 2, because there had been a decree to account, before the arrear reached the penalty under which the creditor might have been prejudgment; but not allowed. Elliott v. Tynte, Beat, 478.

Where a mortgagee has tacked a judgment to his mortgage, he shall not be confined to the penalty of his judgment; but he is entitled to interest upon his judgment debt, though it should exceed the penalty. Id. 518.

A declaration in a decree, that a bond should be paid with interest from the 21st August, 1828: Held, not sufficient to exclude the general rule, that the interest should not exceed the penalty. Purcell v. Blennerhassett, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 470.

Where prevented from Suing. ]-In court of equity a debt secured by bond may be carried beyond the penalty of the bond if the debtor has, by injunction, restrained the creditor from proeceding at law, and there has been no misconduct on the part of the creditor. Grant v. Grant, 3 Russ. 598; 3 Sim. 340; 27 R. R. 135; 30 R. R.

Where in a suit by annuity creditors against the Crown (as the personal representative) and no contest between them and any other creditor, and by reason of the debt having been ascertained by a former decree, payment could not have been enforced by any proceeding:—Held, that interest was allowable at 5 per cent, as on a legal debt, out of the fund in court, and beyond the penalty of a bond. Hyde v. Price, C. P. Cooper, 193; 8 Sim. 578.

Interest beyond penalty of bond not allowed to assignee of judgment, although he had been restrained by injunction for a short time from proceeding at law. Denny v. Ennishillen (Lord), 2 Moll. 535.

- Surety. ]-Interest beyond the penalty of a bond upon a mortgage for the same debt, though by a surety. Clarke v. Abingdon (Lord), 17 Ves. 106; 11 R. R. 31.

- Against Purchaser for Value. ___ A mortgagee had also a bond on which the interest due exceeded the penalty. The mortgagor conveyed the equity of redemption for the use of his creditors, paying this bond first. Nothing beyond the penalty can be claimed. Lloyd v. Hatchett, 2 Austr. 525. S. P., Hatton v. Harris, 62 L. J., P. C. 24; [1895] A. C. 547; I R. I; 67 L. T. 722—H. L. (Ir.)

- Stale Demand.]-Interest on an old bond caunot be computed beyond the penalty. Two v. Winterton (Earl), 3 Bro. C. C. 489; 1 Ves. J. 451. S. P., Knight v. Muclean, 3 Bro. C. C. 496.

____ In other Cases.]—Annuity bond forfeited when the grantor was discharged under an insolvent act which provided that future estate should not be discharged. The penalty being less than the subsequent arrears was allowed as the debt, and not only in favour of the purchaser of an annuity, but also of a co-obligor, as surety, having compounded with the purchaser, and obtained possession of the securities by repaying the money advanced with the arrears then due, being at that time less than the penalty. Butcher

v. Churchill, 14 Ves. 567. One of the residuary legatees of a testator owed his estate three bond debts, under heavy penalties. One of the bonds was in the penalty vented suing at law; 3, because interest might be paid within three months next after the legatee should take an absolute interest in one | death of the person, at whose decease the money moiety of the testator's residuary personal estate. The testator charged the legatee's share of the residue with the payment of all debts at that time due from him, and of all interest thereon, and directed the same to be deducted from his share of the residue. The testator died in 1821, and the bond debtor obtained the prescribed interest in the residuary estate in 1864. At that time the principal and interest on the bond debts far exceeded in amount the penalties in each case:—Held, that in settling the amount due to the bond debtor, or his representatives, in respect of his moiety of the testator's residuary personal estate, there was to be deducted the full amount of the penalties of the bonds, and no more for the interest. Matthews v. Keble, 37 L. #### a. Claim.

What must be Stated. ]-If a person enters into a bond by a wrong christian name, and is sued on such bond, he should be sued by such name. A declaration against him by his right name, stating that he by the wrong name executed the bond, is bad. Gould v. Barnes, 3 Taunt. 504. See Bryant v. Williams, 5 M. & W. 447 : 7 D. P. C. 502.

In an action on a money bond, it is not necessary to aver a breach in non-payment of the money. The bond creates the debt, and therefore it is sufficient for the plaintiff to shew the debt due, and then it lies on the defendant to discharge hinself. Ashbev. Pidduck, 1 M. & W. 564; 2 Gale, 116; 1 Tyr. & G. 1016; 5 L. J., Ex.

In an action on a bond, the declaration stated, that the defendant and L acknowledged themselves bound to the plaintiff in 8,0001., to be paid to the plaintiff, or to one E., on request, and that thereby, and by reason of the non-payment thereof, an action hath accrued:—Hekl, that it was unnecessary to allege a request, and that nonby agreet 6 C. In an action upon a bond for the penalty, where there are alternative parts of the condition, the plaintiff must confine himself to a particular breach. Cornwallis v. Savery, 2 Burr.

772; 2 Ld. Ken. 492.

Upon demurrer to a declaration upon a bond, the judgment of the court is upon the declaration, and not upon the breaches assigned. Kingsford v. Dutton, 1 L. M. & P. 479.

Where, therefore, a declaration upon a bond assigned two breaches, one of which was good and the other bad, the court gave judgment generally for the penalty of the bond; and not for the plaintiff upon the good breach for the damages to be assessed upon it, and for the defendant as to the bad breach. Ib.

In an action on a bond to H., not to enter into the service of another person within ten miles of S., during two years after leaving H.'s service, some good consideration ought to be shewn on the face of the declaration, as the court will not presume one. Hutton v. Parker, 7 D. P. C. 739.

Where an obligor of a post-obit bond craved over, and set out the condition:—Held, that it over, and set out the condition:—Held, that it — Satisfaction.]—In an action upon an was not necessary for the obligee to aver the obligation without any condition, satisfaction secured by the bond was to become payable.

Murray v. Stair (Earl), 3 D. & R. 278; 2 B. & C. 82 : 26 R. R. 283.

The breach of the condition of a bond, otherwise well assigned, is not vitiated by the superaddition of immaterial allegations. Stothert v. Goodfellow, 1 N. & M. 202.

b. Defence.

What must be Pleaded. —A defendant eannot take advantage of a void condition in a bond without setting it out. Collon v. Goodridge, 2 W. Bl. 1108.

A plea of payment before the day is bad in an action on a bond. Anon., 2 Wils. 150.

But where to an action on a bond, conditioned to pay money on or before a certain day, the defendant pleaded that he did pay it before the day, to wit, on such a day, held good. Anon., 2 Wils, 173. S. P., Hetcher v. Hennington, 2 Burr. 941; 1 W. Bl. 944.

To an action upon a bond, the defendant may plead as to part payment post diem. Husband v. Davis, 2 L. M. & P. 50; 10 C. B. 645; 20 L. J.. C P 118

In an action on a bond, conditioned for payment to third persons, solvit post diem is a good plea. Giddings v. Giddings, 1 Ld. Ken. 335.

The defendant may plead solvit post diem as to interest due on a bond. Hodghinson v. Wyatt,
1 D. & L. 668; 13 L. J., Q. B. 73; 8 Jur. 216.
Nil debet pleaded to a bond, is bad on general demurrer. Anon., 2 Wils. 10.

Non damnificatus cannot be pleaded to an action on a bond, conditioned for the payment of a sum of money at a certain day, though it appears by the condition that the bond was given by way of indemnity. Holms v. Rhodes, 1 Bos, & P. 638.

So, a plea that was given as an indemnity to the plaintiff's testator against another bond, and not damnified, is bad, Mease v. Mease, Cowp. 47.

To an action by husband and wife on a bond conditioned for the payment of a certain sum at a certain day, the defendant pleaded, that by articles of agreement between the wife, her sister, and the defendant, the interest of the money was to be paid to one of the sisters upon an event which had happened; but as the plea did not allege the payment of the interest accordingly it was bad. Buldee v. Elers, 5 Term Rep. 250.

A tender and refusal of principal and interest due on a bond after the day mentioned in the condition, and before action, cannot be pleaded. Underhill v. Mathews, Bull. N. P. 171.

Action on a money bond for 2,800L, the penal m. Plea, after setting out the condition (which was for securing the repayment of 1,400l. and interest), as to 800%, parcel of 1,400%, in the condition mentioned, that after the day named of 1,400*l*. is bad. Ashbee v. Pidduch, 1 M. & W. 564; 2 Gale, 116; 1 Tyr. & G. 1016; 5 L. J., Ex. 251. in the condition, the defendant paid 800%, parcel

Where the condition of a bond is not to indemnify, but to do substantive acts, the plea in discharge should show what has been done to satisfy the conditions. Collins v. Gwynne, 7 Bing. 423; 5 M. & P. 276; 9 L. J. (0.s.) C. P. 130.

v. Christmas, 2 Wils. 86.

Where to an action on a bond, which contained a condition that the defendant should not open a shop within a certain distance of premises demised in a lease, he pleaded that he opened a shop by the licence of the plaintiff:—Held, that such plea was bad, on the ground that a licence, after breach, was not good unless by deed. Sellers v. Bickford, 1 Moore, 460.

Where J. H., being indebted on simple contract to W., prevailed on his father to execute a bond for the payment within four years, within which period the latter died, and W. obtained from the son, who was the heir, and also from the representative of the father, a fresh bond for payment by yearly instalments; upon a creditor's suit for administering the father's estate, W. having elaimed to come in upon the original bond, which he had retained :--Held, that the second bond was to be presumed a satisfaction of the first. Clarke v. Henty, 3 Y. & C. 187.

Loss.]-Where, to an action on a bond, to save harmless from expenses by reason of naming one to a curacy, or from suits by reason thereof, the defendant pleaded non damnificatus, and the plaintiff replied, and assigned for breach, that he was obliged to pay such a sum by reason of such nomination, but did not say how he was obliged : -Held, well enough. Simmons v. Langhorne, 2 Wils, 11.

By Executor.]-Action on a common money bond, by executor of obligee against executor of an obligor; plea, that the money mentioned in the condition was part of the personal estate of A., deceased, by whom it had been bequeathed to the testator of the plaintiff and the testator of the defendant, and the survivor of them, and the executors and administrators of such survivor, upon trust to put and place the same out at interest, upon such real or other sufficient security as they might approve of, and to pay the interest; and that the testator of plaintiff died, leaving the testator of the defendant surviving; where-upon the estate of A. vested in the defendant's testator, to be by him applied according to the trusts of the will of A .- is a bad plea. Gleadow v. Athin, 2 C. & J. 548.

Performance.]-To an action on a bond, the defendant, after setting out the bond, which recited that G. had been appointed elerk to a banking company, and was conditioned for his fidelity while in the service of the company, pleaded that before any breach, "to wit on the 1st January, 1836, he was appointed manager; that the office of manager is different from that of a clerk, and the responsibilities greater; that G., from the day and year aforesaid, ceased to be clerk of the company, and that he performed the condition whilst he was clerk, and before he was appointed manager":—Held, that the plea was bad, because the time of G's appointment as manager being immaterial and laid under a videlicet, the plea, if put in issue, might have been supported by proof that G. had been appointed manager on some day previously to the day mentioned, and that he ceased to be the clerk on the day mentioned, or some subsequent day, so as to leave an interval between the appointment to be manager and ceasing to be clerk; and therefore the plea did not shew that clerk; and therefore the plea did not shew that G. ceased to be clerk when he became manager. on a bond for 4,000% conditioned to indemnify must be pleaded to have been by deed. Preston | Anderson v. Thornton, 2 G. & D. 502; 3 Q. B. 271; 11 L. J., Q. B. 265; 6 Jur. 1109.

To an action on a bond, by the executors of the obligee, the defendant, after setting out the condition, which was, that "if the obligor should practise as a surgeon or anothecary at S., at any time, without the consent in writing of the obligee, then, if the obliger should pay the obligee 1000%, the bond should be void, otherwise it should remain in force," pleaded that he did not practise as a surgeon or anothecary at S. without the consent in writing of the obligee :-Held, bad, for not shewing the performance of the condition which rendered the bond void, Hastings v. Whitley, 2 Ex. 611.
The condition of a bond, after reciting that the defendant and S. had indorsed to the plaintiff a bill of exchange, drawn by S. and accepted by A., was, that the defendant and S., or either of them, should pay or cause to be paid to the plaintiff the sum secured by the bill, within one month after it should become due, in case it should not be then paid by the acceptor to the plaintiff, according to the tenor of the bill, together with interest from the time the bill became due :-Held, in an action on the bond, that it was not a good plea, that the bill, when due, had not been presented for payment to the acceptor, or that due notice of its dishonour had not been given to the defendant and S, or either of them. Murray v. King, 5 B. & Ald, 165. Action on a bond, conditioned for the performance by G, of all the covenants on his part mentioned in an indenture, bearing even date with the bond, made or expressed to be made between the plaintiff and G. Plea, that before the execution of the boud it was agreed that the plaintiff should grant to G. a lease under certain covenants, and that the defendant should enter into a bond as surety for the performance of those covenants: that the defendant did accordingly cuter into the bond on which the action was brought, and that the indenture mentioned in the condition was the lease so agreed upon, and no other, but that the lease never was executed :- Held, that the defendant was estopped by the condition of the bond from pleading this plea. Hosier v. Searle, 2 Bos. & P. 209.

Foreign Law.]-To an action on a bond the defendant pleaded, that the bond was executed by him in France, where he was then domiciled; that it was not taken or passed by any public officer authorised by the laws of that kingdom, nor was it written throughout by the hand of the defendant; that though the defendant signed the bond with his own hand, he did not write thereon with his proper hand the formula styled in the French tongue a "bon," or "approuvé," bearing in words at length the sum secured, nor was the defendant at the time a merchant or tradesman, &c.; concluding that, by reason of the premises, the bond, by the laws of France, never was nor is obligatory or binding on the defendant, but always was and is of no force, effect, or validity" :- Held, that the plea was bad, as being a mere argumentative and inferential statement of the French law; which, being pleadable only as matter of fact, ought to have been distinctly and affirmatively alleged. Benham v. Mornington (Eurl), 3 C. B. 133; 4 D. & L. 213; 15 L. J., C. P. 221.

the condition, whereby C. covenanted with the obligees to repay 2,000%, lent him on mortgage of a policy of insurance, to keep the policy up, pay the premiums, and pay the interest on the loan. Breaches were assigned, inasmuch as C. had not paid interest, and had not paid premiums, and the defendant had not indemnified. Plea, by way of equitable defence, that the defendant was surety for C. only, and that he had offered and was ready to pay all that was in equity due to the obligees, on receiving an assignment of the securities :- Held, that, assuming that the facts entitled the defendant to an equitable decree, giving him relief on condition of his hereafter paying what was due, a court of common law could pronounce no such decree, and that a plea on conitable grounds in a court of law was not good, unless disclosing facts which would, in equity, entitle the defendant to a decree such that the common-law judgment that the defendant go without day, would do complete and final justice between the parties. Wodehouse v. Farebrother, 5 El. & Bl. 277; 25 L. J., Q. B. 18; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 798.

Finding of Jury—Laches.]—Where a defendant conveyed an estate to the plaintiff, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and also gave an indemnity bond with sureties against "all costs, claims, demands, damages, and expenses whatsoever," the plaintiff having been obliged to pay divers sums for arrears of an annuity charged on the estate, such the defendant on the bond to recover them back with interest; the jury found that the plaintiff had been negligent in not suing the sureties on the bond at the time the payment was made:—Held, that this finding prevented the plaintifffrom recovering the interest. Anderton v. Arrowsmith, 2 P. & D. 408.

Set-off. |- In an action on a bond, where the interest of the sum secured has not been paid on the appointed day, a set-off, equivalent to the interest which existed before the commencement of the action, though not at the time of the interest falling due, may be pleaded under 8 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 5. Lee v. Lester, 7 C. B. 1008; 7 D. & L. 137; 18 L. J., C. P. 312.

Other Equitable Defences-Release. ]-Creditor having, among other things, a bond with a surety taking a mortgage from the principal debtor, and agreeing to receive the residue by instalments, secured by warrant, &c., without prejudice to any security he now holds; injunction granted against suing the surety. Boulthee v. Stubbs, 18 Ves. 20; 11 R. R. 141.

Bond for a sum of money ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled, the Lord Chancellor being of opinion, upon the cvidence, first, that the bond was not intended to operate as a security for money at all events, but was given for a collateral purpose, which had been fully satisfied; and, secondly, if that were doubtful, that the obligec's subsequent conduct and mode of dealing with the bond during the whole of his life amounted in equity to a release of the debt. Flower v. Marten, 2 Myl, & Cr. 459; 6 L. J. (N.S.) Ch. 167; 1 Jnr. 233.

A. bequeathed to B. 700L, part of 1,200L which B. owed him on bond. A. afterwards revoked the bequest, but made an indorsement on the bond, by which he forgave B. the 700%. creditor subsequently took from the principal the obligors against the defaults in observance the 1,2001., B. filed a bill to restrain the action. by C. of the covenants in a deed, referred to in offering to pay to the executors the balance of 5007. The court refused the injunction, because B. had given no consideration for the indorsement on the bond. Tufnell v. Constable, 8 Sim. 69.

> Agreement to give Time. ] - Where a bond ereditor agrees to postpone the time of payment and takes interest on his debt by anticipation, a court of equity will restrain an action on the bond, whether brought against the principal or the surety. Blake v. White, 1 Y. & C. 420; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 48.

- Collateral Matters. ]-Where the penalty of a bond is only to secure the enjoyment of a collateral object, equity will grant an injunction against a suit for the recovery, and an issue quantum damnificatus to try the real damage. Sloman v. Walter, 1 Bro. C. C. 418.

A bond for performance of covenants to build a bridge, and the sum agreed for actually paid ; an injunction granted to restrain an action on the bond, and an issue quantum damnificatus ordered, the sum mentioned in the bond being a penalty. Errington v. Aynesly, 2 Bro. C. C. 341; Dick. 692.

Bond for a sum of money ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled, the Lord Chancellor being of opinion, upon the evidence, that the bond was not intended to operate as a security for money at all events, but was given for a collateral purpose, which had been fully satisfied.

Flower v. Marten, 2 Myl. & Cr. 459; 6 L. J., Ch. 167 : 1 Jur. 233.

- Accord and Satisfaction.]-In equity joint creditors are prima facie tenants in common. A defence of accord and satisfaction with one of two joint creditors in an action by both is a good answer as an equitable defence to the elaim of the joint creditor to whom satisfaction was made; but it is no answer to the claim of the other. Steeds v. Steeds, 58 L. J., Q. B. 302; 22 Q. B. D. 537; 60 L. T. 318; 37 W. R. 378.

- In Other Cases. ]-The court will not grant an injunction to restrain a confidential agent from suing his employer upon a bond given by the latter, in respect of demands that arose during the continuance of the agency, but given after its termination. If a case were made of peculiar distress at the time of the bond given, the court might interfere. Strathmore v. Fortune, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 108.

Where a policy of life insurance had been effected as part of a family arrangement to secure to the wife and children of the insured a sum of money, and the husband, in breach of the condition of a bond which he had executed, omitted on one oceasion to pay the premium on the policy, whereby the insurance dropped, but afterwards revived it; the court, under the circumstances, and being of opinion that the manner in which the object and intention of the insurance and the bond had been described to the husband in a correspondence on the subject, had misled him, and that he was mistaken as to the consequences of the omission to pay the premium, restrained an action on the bond in respect of such breach, upon the terms of the husband paying the costs. Shearman v. M'Gregor, 11 Hare, 106.

A. B. entered into a bond as a surety; the A.'s executors brought an action against B. for debtor a promissory note for the amount, payable in two months, but afterwards, in consequence formance of covenants, breaches may be assigned of the insolvency of the debtor, sued A. B. on the bond. A. B. then filed his bill to restrain the action on the ground that he was discharged from liability by the giving of the promissory note: the creditor, by his answer, denied that such was the effect of the transaction; and, on the hearing, an inquiry was directed in respect of the circumstances under which the promissory note had been given. The master reported that though there was not any written or any distinct parol agreement between the parties, yet there was a general understanding that the giving of the note was not to affect the bond:—Held, on further directions, that under these circumstances there was no case for the interference of a court of equity. Wyke v. Rogers, 1 De G., M. & G. 408; 21 L. J., Ch. 611.

The loyalists' estates in America were, under the forfeiting acts, to be sold for the payment of debts. This no ground for injunction to restrain an action here on a bond.

Antill, 2 Bro. C. C. 11.

c. Assignment of Breaches.

Necessity of .]-Although, to the ordinary condition of a common money bond—upon which judgment has been entered—there is added to and incorporated into the scaled instrument a proviso containing an agreement that the sum secured shall be paid by instalments, yet a suggestion of breaches is not necessary, if, upon the construction of the condition and proviso taken together, it appears to have been intended that the whole sum remaining secured by the judgment should become payable upon default made as to any one instalment. Buchanan v. Jack, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 41.

A fortiori, where such an agreement is not under senl. Ib.

An unsealed agreement not to proceed for payment, except on defaults differing from those mentioned in the sealed instrument, cannot have the effect of rendering a suggestion of breaches necessary. Ib.

Under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11. ]—The 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, is compulsory on the plaintiff, and he cannot enter up judgment for the whole penalty on a judgment by default, as he might have done at common law. Roles v. Rosewell, 5 Term Rep. 538. S. P., Hardy v. Bern, 5 Term Rep. 636.

An assignment of breaches in an action on a bond to perform an award in the words of the award generally, is sufficient. Willcocks v. Nichols, 1 Price, 109.

Time. and Method of.]-The plaintiff may suggest breaches at the conclusion of his replica-tion, or in making up the issue. Humphrey v. Rigby, 2 Chit. 298; 5 M. & S. 60; Ethersey v. Jackson, 8 Term Rep. 255.

Where a defendant pleaded to a declaration that all sums of money which became due on the bond were paid :-Held, that the plaintiff might reply generally, negativing the allegations in the words of the plea, without assigning any special breach. Turner v. McNamara, 2 Chit. 697.

in the replication; and on demurrer, an interlocutory judgment may be given, and final judgment stayed till after award and execution of a writ of inquiry. Johnes v. Johnes, 3 Dow, 1; 5 Taunt. 656.

After judgment for the plaintiff on demurrer in an action on a bond conditioned to pay an annuity, the plaintiff cannot issue execution for the arrears due, but must assign breaches. Walcot v. Goulding, 8 Term Rep. 126.

In an action on a bond, conditioned not toassault, molest, or injure the person of the plaintiff, a replication alleging that the defendant assaulted, molested, and injured the person of the plaintiff, by beating and otherwise ill-treating him, is a sufficient assignment of a breach of the condition for which the jury is to assess damages, although such breach is not alleged in formal terms, according to the statute. Tombs v. Painter, 13 East, 1.

Where one gives a counter security to another, containing a covenant to pay an annuity and indemnify him, and also a warrant of attorney by way of collateral security, and it is agreed that in default of any one payment of the annuity, judgment may be entered up, and execution issue for the whole sum specifically, being the price of the annuity, it is not necessary to assign breaches, but execution may issue for the whole sum. Howell v. Stratton, 2 Smith, 65.

In an action against executors on a bond of their testator, conditioned for making it void on payment of a certain sum at a future day, or within one month after his decease, whichever should first happen, it is unneccessary to suggest breaches. Cardozo v. Hardy, 2 Moore, 220.

Where in an action on a bond, a plaintiff has suggested breaches on the roll, the court, after a plea of non est factum, refused a rule to shew cause why some of them should not be struck out, or judgment by default suffered on them, with entry of nominal damages; for, by the statute, the plaintiff may suggest breaches on every part of the condition, and the jury is to inquire of the truth of them : and the defendant had another course, viz., by pleading performance of the condition, and suffering Judgment by default on the replication. Conterbury (Archbishop) v. Robertson, 3 Tyr. 419; 1 C. & M. 181; 3 L. J., Ex. 101.

The 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 1, does not authorise the assignment of breaches in a replication which traverses a material averment in the plea. Webb v. Jumes, 8 M. & W. 645; 1 D. (N.S.) 36; 11 L. J., Ex. 38.

Where breaches must be assigned or suggested under the statute, if the defendant does not rejoin, the ordinary course is for the plaintiff to sign judgment for want of a plea, strike out all the pleadings subsequently to the declaration and suggest breaches, if the declaration itself does not state them. But this is only a rule of convenience; and, if the nature of the case requires that the pleadings, down to the default, should continue on the record, they ought to be stidate constitue of the record they origin to me retained. Marriage v. Marriage, 1 C. B. 761; 14 L. J., C. P. 244; 9 Jur. 581. S. P., Lawes v. Shaw, D. & M. 714; 5 Q. B. 322; 8 Jur. 461.

To an action on a judgment on a bond the defendant cannot plead that the bond was conditioned for the performance of covenants, and that no breaches of covenant were suggested or assigned in the original action as the statute was that A. should deliver a true account of all moneys received by him in pursuance of his office, the defendant pleaded performance generally. The plaintiff assigned for breach that A. was requested to deliver a true account of all moneys received by him in pursuance of his office, but refused so to do :-Held, that this assignment of the breach was bad, in not alleging that A. had received any moneys by virtue of his office. Serra v. Fyffe, 1 Marsh, 441. S. C., nom. Serra v. Wright, 6 Taunt. 45.

Assessing Damages on. ]-Where the breaches are assigned in the declaration, the jury, upon non est factum pleaded, may assess the damages without a special award of venire for that purpose. Quin v. King, 1 M. & W. 42; 4 D. P. C. 736; 1 Gale, 407; 1 Tyr. & G. 407; 5 L. J., Ex. 140.

Where in an action on a bond for securing a sum of money payable by instalments, there are no breaches alleged in the declaration, but the defendant in his plea sets out the condition and alleges performance, to which the plaintiff replies that mouey is in arrear, it is competent for the jury to assess the damages on that issue, without a special award of venire. Scott v. Stuley, 6 D. P. C. 714; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 724; 6 Scott, 598; 1 Arn. 274; 2 Jur. 518.

Judgment being entered on a bond to secure the quarterly payment of an annuity, and a fi. fa. having issued for the arrears of the last half-year, a second fi. fa. may be taken out for the past quarter, without reviving the judgment. Scott

v. Whalley, 1 H. Bl. 297.

In an action for a penalty for non-performance of covenants, a judgment on densurrer may be entered up for the penalty, in like manner as before the statute, but it can stand only as a security for the damages sustained. Goodwin v.

Crowle, Cowp. 357. Leave was given to a plaintiff in an action on a bond conditioned to perform an award, after judgment for him upon a plea of judgment re-covered, to execute a writ of inquiry under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, after a writ of error allowed, and to sign a new judgment, on the terms of paying costs, and putting the defendant in statu quo. Hanbury v. Guest, 14 East, 401.

In an action on an administration bond, judgment by default having been suffered and breaches assigned, the court allowed a writ of inquiry to be executed before the chief justice, notwithstanding 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 16, but only granted a rule nisi in the first instance. Canterbury (Archbishop) v. Burlington, 1 D. (N.S.) 285.

Waiver of Irregularities. - Where a defendant was present and suffered an inquiry to proceed to assess damages, upon breaches which occurred after verdict, he cannot afterwards set aside the inquisition on the ground of surprise, nnless as a matter of indulgence, and on terms. In an action on a bond conditioned for the performance of covenants, if the defendant pleads performance of each covenant specially, and also general performance, the plaintiff must assign specific breaches in his replication, if he has not done it in his declaration; and if he merely takes issue on the general performance, and enters a separate assignment of breaches on the record, no damages can be assessed on them, and the court will award a repleader. Plomer v. Ross, 5 Taunt. 386; 1 Marsh. 95.

To an action on a bond, against one of two obligors, he pleaded that the plaintiff released his co-obligor. The plaintiff replied that the release was executed by him with the consent and at the request of the defendant, and ou an express promise and nudertaking by him that the release should not operate to discharge the defendant from or in any way prejudice the plaintiff's rights or remedies against the defendant in respect of the bond :- Held, that the under seal. Cheks v. Nash, 2 M. & Scott, 434; 9 Bing, 431; 2 L. J., C. P. 17.

In an action by A. against B., on a bond entered into jointly and severally by B. and C. to A., in the penal sum of 5001., the condition, after reciting that C. had been appointed collector of taxes, and that A. had consented to become one of his sureties, was stated to be that B. and C. should keep harmless and indemnify A, from and against all costs and charges which he should incur in consequence of his becoming surety. B. pleaded that A. had not, at any time since the bond, been in any way damnified by reason or means of any matter, cause or thing in the condition mentioned. A. replied that, during the time that C. continued collector, there came to the hands of C., as such collector, sums of moncy exceeding 500l., to wit, 2,006l. 7s. 10d.; and that C. did not pay over the same to the receiver-general; and A., for assigning a breach of the condition of the bond, said, that by reason of such default he was called upon by the receiver-general and forced and compelled to pay to the receiver-general a sum of money, to wit, 500%, parcel of the moncy so received by C. as such collector. B. rejoined that A. was not forced or obliged to pay the sum of money in the replication, or any part thereof .—Held, that, by this rejoinder, the receipt by C. of 5001, was not admitted; and that, in the absence of evidence to shew that some money had been received by C., noninal damages only could be assessed on the breach assigned. King v. Norman, 4 C. B. 884; 17 L. J., C. P. 23; 11 Jur. 824.

Osborne v. Eales, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 125; 12 W. R. And see Protector &c. Co. v. Grice, col. 490, supra.

A parish being indebted to A. for repairs done to the church, the parishioners agreed, at a vestry, that the parish officers should give a bond for the amount; that A. should give the parish twelve months' notice when he required payment, and that the parish should be at liberty to pay the debt by instalments. At another vestry held shortly afterwards it was resolved that the obligors should be indemnified by the parishioners and out of the rates, and the parish officers for the time being were anthorised and directed to pay the interest and the principal when required out of the rates. A., who was himself a parishioner, and several of the other parishioners, signed the agreement and the resolution. A. received the interest on his debt for several years, and part of the principal also, out of the rates, and never called on the obligors to pay the interest :- Held, that, as the parishioners had no power to bind the parish, the obligors were not exempted from their liability on the bond, notwithstanding A. had signed both the agreement and the resolution. Juquet v. Lewis, 8 Sim. 480; 6 L. J., Ch. 313 ; 1 Jar. 511.

Relief granted under exceptional circumstances on the ground that the plaintiff would have been under a mistake as to his liabilities under a family arrangement. Sheurman v. Mc Gregor, 1 W. R. 302.

Default-Interest.] - If default is made in payment of the interest on a bond, the principal whereof is not yet due, the court will not stay proceedings on payment of the interest and costs. Tighe v. Crafter, 2 Taunt. 387.

A joint and several bond was conditioned for payment of the principal after six months' notice, and in the meantime for payment of interest on the usual quarter-days; default having been made in payment of one quarter's interest (as it was said, through inadvertence); the obligee gave notice to pay the principal, and the next day brought actions on the bond against the several obligors :- Held, that the court had no power to stay the proceedings on payment of the interest due, and costs. Wheelhouse v. Ladbrooke, 3 H. & N. 291; 27 L. J., Ex. 307; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 417;

Instalments. - Proceedings on bond for payment of money by instalments, and on default to stand in force for the whole sum due, will not be stayed upon payment of the instalments in arrear. Gowlett v. Hariforth, 2 W. Bl. 958.

A bond was conditioned to pay 165% by instalments, until the whole should be paid; but if default was made in paying any one, the obligation was to remain in force. An action having been brought upon the bond, in consequence of a default in payment of the second instalment, a judge ordered that, on payment of the 15£ and costs, proceedings should be stayed:—Held, that the judge had no power to make such order.

one instalment was not paid at the time it became due, then that the whole sum should be payable. The court, on the appearance of fraud in not accepting one instalment when offered, stayed execution; but ordered the judgment to stand as a security. Stafford's Case, 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B.

In other Cases. ]-Proceedings were stayed in an action on a bond for performance of mortgage covenants, on payment of principal and interest, and costs to be computed and faxed on 5 & 6 Anne, c. 16. Skinner v. Stacy, 1 Wils. 80.

The court will not interfere, under 4 & 5 Anne. c. 16, s. 13, to stay the proceedings in an action upon a bond, where it is at all doubtful that the payment stipulated by the condition is not subject to a contingency. Robinson v. Brown, 3 C. B. 54.

In an action against surcties on a bond, particulars of several breaches of the condition were given, of which only one was contested; the conrt has no power to order a stay of proceedings as to the admitted breaches upon payment into court of the damages sustained on those breaches. Kepp v. Wiggett, 4 C. B. 678; 5 D. & L. 164; 16 L. J., C. P. 235; 11 Jur. 876.

If a man agrees not to do an act, and enters into a bond, with a penalty to be forfeited on his doing it, the penalty is never to be considered as the price for doing such an aet; but the court relieve by injunction, until the actual damage sustained is ascertained by an issue. Hardy v. Martin, 1 Cox, 26.

A vendor conveyed his estate to a purchaser and took a bond for the purchase-money. He afterwards sued on the bond, and in equity, insisting on his equitable lien. He was put to his election in which court he would proceed. Burker v. Smark, 3 Benv. 64.

A bond given by a schoolmaster of an ancient public school, who had a freehold in his office, to resign at the request of his patron, is good at law; but equity will restrain any improper use of it by the patron. Legh v. Lewis, 1 East, 391. Affirmed (in error), 3 Bos. & P. 231; 6 R. R. 290.

Under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—On applications under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1, to stay proceedings in an action on a bond, securing the principal and interest payable on a mortgage, if the mortgagee seeks to obtain interest for the interval between granting the rule and the actual payment of the principal into his hands, he must make his claim to it at the time when the rule is diseussed. Jordan v. Chowns, 8 D. P. C. 709.

Form of Order.]—The court granted an application, on behalf of the defendants, to refer it to the master to see what was due for principal, interest, and costs on a bond, which was the cause of action; and to stay all proceedings upon payment of the sum due and costs. Smith v. Alsop, M'Cl. 309.

A bond was conditioned to pay 165l. by certain instalments until the whole should be paid, And if default was made in paying any one, the obligation was to remain in force. An action having been brought upon the bond, in consequence of a default in payment of the second instalment a judge ordered that, on payment of 151, and costs, proceedings should be stayed:—Held, that the judge had no power to make an order A sum of money, secured by a bond, was made in this form. Naylor v. Mapsey, 4 D. P. C. 669.

8. PAYMENT INTO COURT.

On Equitable Defence.]—In 1827, a bond to secure the payment of a sum of money was given to S. by L. M. joined in the bond as surety. In 1829 L. died. In 1832 S. brought an action in Ireland against M. upon the bond, and M. then filed a bill in Ireland for an injunction to restrain the action, on the ground that the bond was founded on a gambling transaction. An injunction was granted, and subsequently a decree nisi for taking the bill pro confesso was made against S., and the order was served upon him two days before his death, which happened in 1833. In 1837 S.'s personal representatives brought an action upon the bond against M. in England. M, then filed a bill for an injunction. S.'s representatives in their answer, stated that they were entirely ignorant as to the nature of the consideration for the bond, and that they had found among S.'s papers certain memorandum books relating to bets upon horse races, which books they had destroyed as useless; but they denied that the books showed the consideration for the bond. Upon this answer the Vice-Chancellor granted an injunction, which was continued upon appeal, without obliging the plaintiff to bring the money into court. Military (Eurl) v. Stewart, 3 Myl. & C. 18; 6 L. J., Ch. 298. Affirming 8 Sim. 371.

Since 23 & 24 Vict. c. 126. |-Payment of money into court, in discharge of principal and interest on a bond, and costs, could not be pleaded to an action on the bond before this enactment. England v. Watson, 9 M. & W. 333; 1 D. (x.s.) 398; 11 L. J., Ex. 102; 6 Jur. 763. S. P., London (Bishop) v. Mr.Niel, 9 Ex. 490; 2 C. L. R. 561; 28 L. J., Ex. 111; 18 Jur. 211; 2 W. P. 232 And 256 K. J. W. The Common Law Procedure Act, 1860, s. 25. which permits payment into court to be pleaded by leave of the court or a judge in any action on a bond "which has a condition to make void the a som: which has a condition to make void the same upon payment of a lesser sum at a day or place certain, does not apply to an action on a bond conditioned to be void upon payment of a lesser sum by instalments. Preston v. Dunia, 42 L. J., Ex. 33; L. R. 8 Ex. 19; 27 L. T. 612; 21 W. R. 128.

9. EVIDENCE.

Presumption of Payment. - Presumption of payment of a bond upon twenty years or less, without payment of interest, unless repelled by Hillary v. Waller, 12 Vcs. 266. circumstances.

The presumption of payment of a bond after twenty years, may be repelled by evidence that obligor had no opportunity or means of paying.

Fladong v. Winter, 9 Vcs. 196.

To support Plea of Payment.]—M., a solicitor, by whom an advance of 2001. from L. to W., secured by the bond of W., had been negotiated, upon being applied to by L. for payment of the bond, pledged the bond with bankers in his own name, and paid the money thus obtained to L. in respect of the money due on the bond. In doing so he acted without the knowledge or consent of the obligor, W.:—Held, that these facts did not support a plea of payment in an action on the bond at the suit of L, but in which the bankers were the real plaintiffs. Lucas v. Wilkinson, 1 H. & N. 420.

To support Pleadings. |- If issue is joined on non est factum, the only proof required on the part of the plaintiff is proof of the execution of the bond by the defendant. Hutchinson v. Keams, 1 Selw. N. P. 589.

A bond was executed by a person who could not write:—Held, that if there was no other plea besides non est factum, the defendant's counsel could not ask whether the bond was read over to the defendant before he signed it, nor what was the transaction respecting which it was given. Cranbrook v. Dodd, 5 Car. & P. 402.

It cannot be proved under non assumpsit that a bond was accepted by the plaintiff, in satisfaction of money which was lent and advanced two days before the bond was given. Weston v. Foster, 2 Hodges, 59; 3 Scott, 155; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 693; 5 L. J., C. P. 242. Weston v.

Illegality. ]-A defendant cannot give in evidence illegality in the consideration of a bond, nnless he pleads specially. Harmer v. Rowe, 2 Chit. 334; 6 M. & S. 146; S. C. nom. Harmer v. Wright, 2 Stark. 35; 19 R. R. 673.

Fraud and Mistake.]—On a plea that a bond was obtained by fraud and covin, evidence is not admissible to shew that the defendant executed it with full knowledge of its contents, but in consequence of previons fraud. Muson v. Ditch-bonrue, 1 M. & Rob. 460. But the court afterwards made a rule for a new trial absolute, that the admissibility of such evidence might be more distinctly raised. S. C., 2 C., M. & R. 720, n.

In an action on a bond to secure the payment by instalments of the consideration for the purchase of a business, to support a plea that the bond was obtained by frand, covin and misrepresentation, it is not enough to shew that the business did not produce to the purchaser the sum represented by the seller; but if it is shewn that it did not produce to the seller himself, it will be enough, as in such case it may be assumed that the representation was untrue to the know-ledge of the party making it. D'Aranda v. Houson, 6 Car. & P. 511.

Where a party who executes a bond is at the time competent to execute it, he cannot, under ome competent to execute it, he cannot, under non est factum, shew that he was misled as to the legal effect of the bond. Edwards v. Brown, 1 C. & J. 307; 1 Tyr. 182; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 84; 3 Y. & J. 423.

In an action on a bond, the plaintiff com-plained against W. F. B., sued by the name of W. B. The defendant pleaded non est factum. At the trial, it appeared that the defendant did in fact execute a bond, agreeing with that described in the declaration by the name of W.B., and that, at the time of the execution, he was known by that name :- Held, that the proof was sufficient to sustain the issue, and that it was no variance. Williams v. Bryant, 5 M. & W. 447; 7 D. P. C. 502; 9 L. J, Ex. 47

Held, secondly, that even if the objection was valid, it was not one of which the defendant could avail himself under non est factum. Ib.

Reduction of Damages. |- The defendant was a surety by bond to the plaintiff for the due performance of a contract by S., according to an agreement. By that agreement, S. was to complete the works for a certain sum, and pay-ment was to be made to him by the plaintiff, during the continuance of the work, by instalcertified to have been done every two months seals:—Held, that the deed was not avoided by and the remaining one-fourth one month after the erasure. Caldwell v. Parker, 3 Ir. Eq. R. the whole was completed. S. applied for and 519; 17 W. R. 955. received advances from the plaintiff, exceeding in amount the value of the work done by him, for some of which advances he gave security. The work not being done at the specified time. the plaintiff called in another builder to complete the work, and the amount paid to him, added to the advances made to S., greatly exceeded the original contract price. In an action against the surety on the bond, to which there was a plea of non est factum :- Held, first, that he might shew in reduction of damages, that the advances were made by the plaintiff not according to the contract, and that, as the work had been completed within the contract price, the plaintiff was only entitled to nominal damages; and, secondly, that it would have been improper to plead non damnificatus. Warre v. Calcert, 2 N. & P. 126; 7
A. & E. 143; W. W. & D. 528; 6 L. J., K. B. 219; 1 Jur. 450,

Bond and mortgage given by an only son to his father :- Held, under the circumstances of the case, to be a running security for advances actually made, and not a security for the precise amount expressed in the instrument; and there being no evidence against the son, as to the amount of the actual advances, he was charged in that respect to the extent of his admissions only. Melland v. Gray, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 199.

I. ALTERATION.

By Deed. -An obligation by deed cannot be altered but by deed. Thompson v. Brown, 1 Moore, 358; 7 Taunt, 656.

But it is not necessary that a power of attorney given by deed should be revoked by deed. Rev v. Wait, 11 Price, 508; 7 Meore, 473; 1 Bing, 121.

Interlineations. —A memorial executed by the grantee only is admissible to shew that interlineations in the original deed, existing and produced, were made before its execution. Brown v. Armstrong, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 130.

The presumption is, that an erasure or interlineation in a deed was made at the time of the execution of the deed. Doe d. Tatham v. Catta-more, 16 Q. B. 745; 20 L. J., Q. B. 364; 15 Jur. 728.

Effect of. ]-What alterations in a document invalidate it, considered. Love v. Fox, 56 L. J., Q. B. 480; 12 App. Cas. 206; 56 L. T. 406; 36 W. R. 25; 51 J. P. 468—H. L. (E.)

Three persons who had taken shares in a company proved, that when they signed the company's deed, it contained a false sheet (which had been fraudently inserted, and to all appearance formed an integral part of the instrument), limiting the liability of shareholders to the amount of their shares, whereupon in winding up the company, and settling the list of contributors, they were released :-Held, that their release did not affect the liability of those who executed the deed after the false sheet had been removed, and the deed restored to the form in which it was originally registered, notwithstanding the latter had executed the deed upon the faith of those persons being shareholders. Richards, In re. Painter, In re, 4 K. & J. 305.

An indenture was made between A., B., C. and ments, viz. three-fourths of the cost of the work signatures of B. and C., without breaking the

A, and B, entered into a joint and several bond to C., D. and E. C. delivered the bond to A., who was her son, for safe custody, and after for some time receiving the interest from A., she and D., another of the obligees, died. B., one of the obligors, also died, when his executors and A. made an arrangement together, without the privity of E., the surviving obligee, and crased the name and seal of B. from the bond :-Held, that this did not invalidate the bond against A. Smith, Ex parte, 3 Mont. D. & D. 378.

Alterations made in a deed after execution by the grantee named in it, though material, will not prevent the deed being received in evidence on his behalf to shew the estate which passed by it, and which was not divested by the alterations. Stewart v. Aston, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 35-Ex. Ch.

Where a deed is altered in a material part, it ceases to have any new operation, and no action can be brought in respect of any pending obliga-tion which would have arisen from it, had it remained entire, but it may still be given in evidence to prove a right or title created by it having been executed, or to prove any collateral fact. Agricultural Cattle Insurance Co. v. Fitz-gerald, 16 Q. B. 432; 20 L. J., Q. B. 244; 15 Jur. 489.

Affixing two seals after signature of a document, held a material alteration. Davidson v. Cooper, 13 M. & W. 343; 1 D. & L. 377; 13 L. J.,

Ex. 276-Ex. Ch. Filling in by a mortgagee of the date, the period for redemption, and the names of the tenants of the mortgaged premises after the execution of the deed by the mortgagor, are not such alterations as will invalidate the deed. Adsetts v. Hires, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1063; 9 L. T. 110.

Action against surety on a bond for securing a loan of money. Plea, that after sealing the bond a material addition was made to the condition by the plaintiff without the defendant's knowledge, namely, that the giving day of payment to the principal should not discharge the sureties, whereby the bond was void; the plea not alleging in what way the addition was made, nor that it was in writing, is bad. Harden v. Clifton, 1 Q. B. 522; 1 G. & D. 22; 10 L. J., Q. B. 159; 5 Jur. 962.

- Deed Carrying out Several Objects-Alteration in One Particular. ]-Where a mortgagee conveyed the legal estate to the mortgagor by a deed on being paid the mortgage-money, and the latter re-conveyed it to trustees for the purpose of securing an annuity, and at the time of the execution by the mortgagee there were several blanks left in the deed, but not in that part which affected him, but merely for the sums to be received by the mortgagor from the grantees of the annuity, which were all filled up at the time of the execution of the deed by the mortgagor, but several interlineations were made in that part of it after the execution by the mortgagee :- Held, that the deed was not void. but operated as a good conveyance of the estate from the mortgagor to the trustees for the payment of the annuity. Due d. Lewis v. Bingham, 4 B. & Ald. 672; 23 R. R. 438.

Insertion of Omitted Word by Stranger, 7 -In a bond conditioned "for the payment of one D., and after it was executed, B., without any hundred pounds by instalments, till the full sum fraudulent intention, drew a pen through the of one pounds be paid," the word "hundred."

having been omitted in the second place where it occurred in the condition :- Held that the insertion of it by a stranger was an immaterial alteration, and did not avoid the instrument. Waugh v. Bussell, 1 Marsh, 214, 311; 5 Taunt, 707; 15 R. R. 624.

By Parol. -At the time of executing a bond to secure a sum of money, the obligors procured a letter from the obligee, stating his intention not to call in the money within a specified period if the interest was regularly paid:—Held, to be a binding undertaking. Norton v. Wood, 1 Russ, & M, 178; 32 R, R, 181.

To debt, upon bond, against a surety, he pleaded that after the making, &c., "a certain material addition was made to the condition thereof by the plaintiff, and with his privity, and without the knowledge or consent of the defendant, which addition is as follows," &c. :—Held, that the plea was bad for not stating that the addition was in writing. Harden v. Člifton, 1 G. & D. 22; 10 L. J., Q. B. 159. A. being indebted to B., C. and D., three sisters, who were his near relations, partly on his own account, and partly as executor of his father, executed to them a bond for 500%. At the time of giving the bond, A. objected to give it, and agreed to do so only on a verbal representation, that it was not intended to be enforced unless B., C. and D. should come to want, an event which did not happen. The bond remained in the hands of the three till the death of B., and after her death in the hands of her survivors, and after the death of C. in the hands of D., whose property (by mutual arrangement) it was at the time of her death. On the bond was found the followagainst A. Witness, C. & D." This was dated eleven years after the date of bond. It was not made clear that C.'s name was written by herself; it was said that D. had written it. It was, however, proved that if D. had written it, she did so with the authority of C.:—Held, that without saying whether the indorsement amounted to a release, which was a legal question, there was an equity under the circumstances against enforcing the bond; that, if put in suit, the action would be restrained; and that there was nothing due on the bond to the estate of D. Major v. Major, 1 Drew 105.

A bond having been given for 2,000l., the obligor died, and his executor gave the obligee a fresh bond, and received back the original bond. with a memorandum indorsed upon it and signed by the obligee, in which he declared that he had accepted the fresh bond in lien of the first : Held, that the obligee could only claim under the second bond, and that the estate of the original obligor was discharged so far as the obligee was concerned. Shore v. Shore, 2 Ph. 378; 17 L. J., Ch. 59

A bankrupt, previous to his bankruptey, gave a bond to trustees for the payment of 5,000*l*., and interest as a provision for his daughter on her marriage. The trustees having proved the amount under the commission, a petition was presented to expunge the proof, the bankrupt alleging, that when the bond was given it was understood between him and the obligees that it was only to be available in the event of the success of a certain speculation:-Held, that such parol evidence was not admissible to control the absolute effects of the bond. Morley, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 50.

A. having previously borrowed 1,000% of B., executed to him a bond for that sum, and B., two days afterwards, executes deed, whereby he covenants that bond shall not be enforced; and some years afterwards, B. having become bankrupt, his assignees bring action on bond, and file bill to have deed of covenant declared fraudulent :- Held, that court will not interfere against legal operation of deed, there being nothing to show that B, was insolvent when he executed it, and there being evidence that A. had also, at that time, peemiary claims on B., and that execution of bond was accompanied by agreement that payment of it should not be enforced. Slach v. Tolson, 1 Russ, 553,

A, bequeathed to B, 700l, part of 1,200l, which B, owed him on a bond. A, afterwards revoked the bequest, but made an indorsement on the bond by which he forgave B, the 700L. A.'s executors brought an action against B, for the 1,200l.; B. filed a bill to restrain the action, offering to pay to the executors the balance of 500l. The court refused the injunction, because B. had given no consideration for the indersement on the bond, Tuffnell v. Constable, 8 Sim. 69.

----- Burden of Proof.]--Two ladies entrusted much of the management of their affairs to A.. who was not a professional person. In the course of business A. became bound with them in a bond for 10,000l., given on their account; on the same day they executed a bond to A, for 12,000%. The survivor of the two ladies afterwards, by her will, left a legacy of 2,000l, to A. The bond for 12,000l. was, on the face of it, a simple money-bond :— Held, that it must be taken to be a simple moneybond, unless impeached by evidence, which showed that it was partly for indemnity, and that the barden of proving it to be an indemnity bond lay on the party impeaching the bond. Nivol v. Vaughan, 2 Dow & Cl. 420; 1 Cl. & F. 49; 6 Bli. (N.S.) 104.

To effectuate Objects.]—Lease of lands by A. to B., at the request of C., D. and E., out of which B. was to grant underleases at the direction of C., D. and E. (the object of which underleases was to secure a ground-rent to A. and C.), and, subject to such underleases, B. was to stand possessed of the lease in trust for D, and E., who were parties to the original lease; after C., D. and E. had executed that lease, and before A. or B. had executed it, the lease was altered with the consent and privity of C. only, by an erasure which excluded a certain portion of land inserted by mistake, but in which D. and E. had no interest. A, and B, then executed the lease :-Held, that this alteration did not render it invalid.

Chandless, 4 Bing. 123; 12 Moore, 316.

The necessary parties met to execute a marriage settlement. Immediately after the conveying party had executed, and before the execution or assent by any other party, the father of the intended wife objected to a clause; the objection was acquiesced in, and the clause was struck out, and then the conveying party immediately re-executed, and the other parties exe-euted:—Held, that the execution of the deed was in fieri only when the alteration took place, and that the alteration did not make a fresh stamp requisite. Jones v. Jones, 1 C. & M. 721; 3 Tyrw. 890; 2 L. J., Ex. 249.

Annexing Names.]—A defendant pleaded to an action on a bill of exchange a composition deed. The deed had been executed by the requisite majority of creditors, and had then been registered; afterwards, the names of two others of the creditors, with the amounts respectively due to them, were added to the schedule of ereditors annexed to the deed :- Held, that this was not an alteration which invalidated the deed. Wood v. Slack, 37 L. J., Q. B. 130; L. R. 3 Q. B. 379; 18 L. T. 510; 16 W. R. 859.

In an action on a joint and several bond, the obligecs declared against one of three obligors, and set out the condition to be for payment by the defendant. C. and D., any or either of them. On the production of the bond it was conditioned for payment by the defendant, C. and E.; and it appeared that after its execution by the defendant the name of E. was substituted for that of D., at the request of the party to whom the money for which the bond was given was advanced, and with the assent of the obligees; but without the knowledge or assent of the defendant :- Held, that this was a fatal variance, and avoided the bond as against the defendant, although he afterwards assented to the alteration, and paid some instalments due on the bond. Adams v. Bateson, 3 M. & P. 839; 6 Bing, 110; 7 L. J. (0.8.) C. P. 251.

Principal and Surety—Separate Agreements.]

—By an agreement between the plaintiff and S., the plaintiff agreed to purchase of S. a ship called the "Devouport," the price of such purchase being the payment of a sum of money, and the transfer to S, of the plaintiff's ship called the "Lord Dalhousie"; and upon the delivery of the "Devonport," the plaintiff agreed to lend S. 6,000L on mortgage of the "Lord Dalhousie," and S. agreed to repair the "Lord Dalhousie" so as to class her eight years A 1 at Lloyd's, and anything remaining to be done to the "Devonport was to be done by S. within two weeks after the ship's arrival in London. The defendant, as surety for S., gave a bond to the plaintiff, which, after reciting the agreement, was conditioned to be void if S. forthwith repaired the "Lord Dalhousie, and if that vessel should within three months be classed eight years A I at Lloyd's, and if S, should within two weeks after the arrival of the " Devonport" in the port of London do all that remained to be done to that vessel. The plaintiff and S. afterwards, without the consent of the defendant, made another agreement, by which the time for the completion of the "Devonport" was accelerated, and more things were required to be done to complete that vessel than remained to be done according to the original agreement :- Held, that the stipulations in the condition to the bond as to the "Lord Dalhousie" were so separate from those as to the "Devonport" that the defendant was liable on the bond for a breach of the condition as to the "Lord Dalhousie," notwithstanding his liability under the bond, so far as related to the "Devonport," was discharged by the alteration which the second agreement made in the terms of the first, Harrison v. Seymour, 35 L. J., C. P. 264; L. R. 1 C. P. 518; 12 Jur. (N.s.) 924.

a. By Court.

delivery up of a void lease may not be demurface of it. Melesworth v. Howard, 2 Coll, 145. been made for an illegal consideration not Equity has jurisdiction to order an instrument to be delivered up, though void as law, as if against policy. St. John (Lord) v. St. John (Lady), 11 Ves. 535. S. P., Hogward v. Dimadale, 17 Ves. 111; Colchester (Mayor) v. Lowten, 1 V. & B. 244; 12 R. R. 216.

Jurisdiction of equity to order instruments to be delivered up, even upon legal objections, as under the Annuity Act; arising incidentally in the exercise of equitable jurisdiction; as upon extreme inadequacy of consideration and contribution among several sureties. Ware v. Horwood, 14 Ves. 28. Affirming 10 Ves. 200.

Principles on which courts of equity proceed, in ordering the delivery up of instruments on which actions may be brought. Cooper v. Joel, 27 Beav. 313; 1 De G., F. & J. 240; 1 L. T. 351.

A written guarantee was given for moneys payable by instalments; though invalid, there was no invalidity on the face of it. In an action for the first justalment the plaintiff was nonprossed :- Held, that, although there was a legal defence, the instrument ought to be cancelled, on the ground that future actions were contemplated, and that the future defence might fail from the loss of evidence. Ib.

- Order Discretionary.]-The cases in which equity orders instruments, to which there is a legal objection, to be delivered up, are rare, and the relief on terms. Browley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 618, 6 R. R. 58. S. P., Sathevland (Duke) v. Heathcate, 61 L. J., Ch. 248; [1892] 1 Ch. 475; 66 L. T. 210-C. A.

The court refused to decree a bond for which no money passed at the time of its execution, to be cancelled on the evidence of the petitioner alone against the affidavit in auswer of the respondent, that the bond was the free and voluntary act of the petitioner and given for past services and advances of money. Wyse v. Lambert, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 878.

Bill to have deeds, assigning stock, delivered up, as obtained by undue influence by a servant over her master, and an account. The evidence of direct influence considerably subsequent to the deeds. The defendant a married woman; her only separate property, stock; and not liable, therefore, without a lien. An issue being de-clined, bill was dismissed. Nautes v. Carrock, 9-Ves. 182; 7 R. R. 156.

Burden of Proof - Pressure - Undue Influence. |-An action was brought by a married woman to set aside a mortgage of her property to the defendants, who were the trustees of a land society, to secure moneys which had been misappropriated by her husband, who was the secretary of the society, on the ground that the security was given under threats of a criminal prosecution against her husband :- Held, that the burden was on the plaintiff to prove pressure or undue influence, neither of which had been substantiated; and that consequently her action could not be maintained. Me Clatchie v. Haslam, 65 L. T. 691; 17 Cox, C. C. 402-C. A.

A widower, two days before going through the ceremony of marriage with his deceased wife's sister (which ceremony was known to both parties to be invalid), executed a deed by which it was recited that he was desirous of making a settlement and provision for the lady, and had transferred certain shares into the names of trustees upon the trusts thereinafter declared, being for the separate and inalienable use of the lady during her life, and after her death as she should by deed or will appoint; and they afterwards lived together as man and wife until the widower's death. Ten years after such death, and some time after the lady had married, the legal personal representative of the settlor instituted a suit to set aside the settlement, as being founded on a bad and illegal consideration: -Held, that the suit could not be maintained. Ib.

In order to deprive a plaintiff of his right to relief in equity on the ground of illegality in the transaction in respect of which such relief is sought there must be such a degree of illegality as is free from all donbt. Barton v. Mair, 44 L. J., P. C. 19; L. R. 6 P. C. 134; 31 L. T. 593; 23 W. R. 427.

The court will not refuse relief to an injured party to a deed on the ground that he has executed it with an illegal purpose, if that purpose has not taken effect. Symes v. Hughes, 39 L. J., Ch. 304; L. R. 9 Eq. 475; 22 L. T. 462.

- Nature of Illegality. ]-An action having been brought against the defendant for illegally pledging quantities of tobacco, and he having pleaded a release given to him by one of the parties interested in the tobacco, the court refused to set aside the plea, the releasor having an immediate interest in the money sought to be recovered, and no fraud being shewn. Phillips v. Clagett, 11 M. & W. 84; 2 D. (N.S.) 1004; 12 L. J., Ex. 275.

A court of law has no jurisdiction to set aside a release which is good in law; but, in the exercise of its equitable jurisdiction, it may interfere to prevent a defendant from pleading a release where it would be a manifest fraud on a third party seeking to enforce a demand against the defendant, and a party to the fraud. A bond given to persons to whom the obligor had lost bets on horse-races, which he was mable to pay, in order to prevent them from taking the steps which, under the conventional code established among betting men, they were entitled to take, and which would have been followed by consequences involving the obligor in considerable pecuniary loss, is valid, and provable against the obligor's estate. Bubb v. Yelverton, 39 L. J., Ch. 428; L. R. 9 Eq. 471; 22 L. T. 258; 18 W. R. 512.

To an action on a bond against an excentor, he pleaded that the plaintiff had seduced and committed adultery with the wife of his testator, between whom and the plaintiff it was agreed that in consideration that the testator would not expose and make public the conduct of the expose and make plante the conduct of the plaintiff, he would not sue on the bond: —Held, that there was no valid consideration for the agreement, and that the plea was bad. Brewn v. Brine, 45 L. J., Ex. 129; 1 Ex. D. 5; 33 L. T. 703; 24 W. R. 177.

A bond conditioned to take possession of the effects of persons dying intestate in a settlement on the coast of Africa, and sell the same, and remit the produce to the African Company in Europe, to be by them delivered to the lawful administrator, was a legal bond. African Co. v. Torrane, 6 Term Rep. 588.

Fraud. ]-To a defence in an action for personal injuries of a release by deed, it was replied that the execution of the deed by the plaintiff was procured by the company fraudulently representing for that purpose that his injuries were of a trivial and temporary nature, and that if they should afterwards two out to be more serious than he then anticipated he would still even though he had executed the deed, be in a position to obtain and would obtain further compensation from the company:-Held, that there was a fraudulent misrepresentation of fact alleged sufficient to avoid the deed as against the plaintiff, who had been thereby induced to execute it, Hirschfield v. L. B. & S. C. Ry., 46 L. J., Q. B. 94; 2 Q. B. D. 1; 35 L. T. 473.

Semble, that the deed would equally have been avoided by the second allegation that the fraudulent misrepresentation had been as to the legal effect of the deed which the plaintiff was thereby induced to sign. Ib.

A passenger who was injured by a railway accident, sent in a claim for 691*l*, compensation. The traffic manager of the company called upon him, and after some discussion the passenger accepted 400L, and gave a receipt acknowledging it to be in full discharge of his claims. About a year afterwards he commenced an action against the company for further compensation, to which the company pleaded that he had accepted 4001. in full satisfaction and discharge of the causes of action. The plaintiff then filed a bill to restrain them from relying on the plea, and from setting up the acceptance of the 400L or the receipt, as a satisfaction or discharge of the damages, except to the extent of 400l. The bill did not allege fraud, but that the plaintiff had signed the receipt on the express condition that he should not thereby exclude himself from further compensation if his injuries turned out more serious than was supposed at the time :- Held, that as the statement in the receipt could be rebutted by evidence that the plaintiff did not receive the money in full satisfaction of all demands, the whole case could be tried at law better than in equity; and that the bill ought to be dismissed. Lee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry., L. R. 6 Ch. 527; 25 L. T. 77; 19 W. R. 729.

Action to set aside Marriage Settlement-Fraud. |- In an action to set aside a marriage settlement, the plaintiff alleged as the grounds of his action that, previous to the execution of the settlement made upon the marriage between himself and J. S., the latter stated to him that her first husband had been divorced from her, at her suit, by reason of his cruelty and adultery; that such statements were made to induce him to execute the settlement and contract the marriage; that, in reliance on the representations, The illegality of the condition of the bond may he executed the settlement, and married J. S.; be shewn by the plaintiff in stating the bond that he subsequently discovered that the repre-itself, with the condition in his declaration; or, sentations were false to the knowledge of J. S. and that she had been divorced from her husband at his suit, and by reason of her adultery : -Held, on motion by the defendant, that the plaintiff's statement of claim must be struck out under Ord. XXV. r. 4, as disclosing no reasonable ground of action. Johnston v. Johnston, 52 L. T. 76; 33 W.R. 239—C. A. Affirming 53 L. J., Ch. 1014.

Setting Aside-Family Settlement-Influence of Father - Independent Advice - Benefit to Father. - In regarding claims to upset resettlements of family estates, the court gives weight to considerations which in other cases would not be allowed in the scale. For the validity of such a resettlement, the son being tenant in tail in re-mainder, it is not essential that the son should have independent advice, and the court will not inquire whether the influence of the father was exerted with more or less force. Where the father obtains a benefit, the jealousy of the court is necessarily aroused; but such a transaction is not necessarily unfair, nor if unfair is it fatal to the validity of the entire arrangement; and the objectionable provisions may be expunged with-out affecting the rest of the deed. Where in such a case the father abandons the benefit which he has obtained, the rest of the settlement may stand good. Hoblyn v. Hoblyn, 41 Ch. D. 200; 60 L. T. 499; 38 W. R. 12,

- To evade Payment of Costs. ]-A remainderman who failed in a suit instituted by him against the tenant for life in respect of alleged waste, and who was ordered to pay the costs of the suit; sold his remainder, and executed a convevance of it to the purchaser before the costs could be taxed, and he paid his solicitor's bill out of the proceeds of the sale without leaving sufficient to pay the defendant's costs of the snit, and without having any means of paying them :-Held, that the defendant was not entitled to have the conveyance set aside or declared fraudulent, or to recover from the remainderman's solicitor the portion which the solicitor had received of the proceeds of the sale in payment of his costs, and that the fact of the purchaser having or not having notice of the circumstances attending the sale, or the purpose of it, was immaterial. Norteliffe v. Warburton, 4 De G., F. & J. 449.

Obtained by Fraud of Sheriff's Officer. ]-A sheriff cannot recover on an indemnity bond which has been procured by the fraud of his own officer. Raphael v. Goodman, 3 N. & P. 547; 8 A. & E. 565; 1 W. W. & H. 363; 7 L. J., Q. B.

A plea to an action on such a bond that it was obtained by the sheriff and others in collusion with him by fraud and covin, is a good plea. Ib.

To escape Forfeiture for Felony. ]—A person being in prison on a charge of felony, in order to avoid a forfeiture of his property in the event of a conviction, executed a voluntary deed, assigning his personal estate to his brother absolutely. He was tried, found not guilty, on the ground of insanity, and ordered to be imprisoned as a lunatic during her majesty's pleasure :- Held, that the deed, being without consideration, and executed by an insane person under a total misapprehension, was inoperative, and that the representatives of the brother took no interest under it. Munning v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 736; L. R. 13 Eq. 485; 26 L. T. 14; 20 W. R. 357; 12 Cox, C. C. 274.

A plaintiff, while lodging at an hotel, and seriously ill, executed a bond to the landlord for 10001., payable at six months' date, to secure moneys paid and advanced for the plaintiff for hotel charges, the landlord undertaking to rectify all errors in the accounts; a court of equity restrained an action on the bond, the plaintiff giving judgment for the amount of the claim. Edwards- Wood v. Baldwin, 4 Giff, 613.

Arrangement not Complete. ]—A voluntary deed, by which a father purported to convey his property to his son absolutely, but which did not carry into effect the whole arrangement between them, was set aside at the instance of the father after the son's death. Hughes v. Seanor, 18 W. R. 1122, Cancellation-Inchoate Marriage Settlement. In contemplation of marriage, an intended wife and her father executed the engrossment of a settlement of, inter alia, funds to be provided by the father, and the present and after-acquired property of the intended wife. The engrossment was given into the custody of the solicitors of the intended husband: it was not executed by him or the trustees. The engagement was broken off by agreement. After the lapse of three and a half years the court declared the engrossment void as a settlement, and directed it to be given up. Bond v. Walford; 55 L. J., Ch. 667; 32 Ch. D. 238; 54 L. T. 672.

By a settlement executed in 1877, in consideration of a then intended marriage, it was declared that a sum of stock, the property of the intended wife, which had been transferred by her to two trustees, should be held by them on trust for the benefit of the intended wife, the intended hus-band, and the issue of the intended marriage. The marriage was not solemnized, but the parties cohabited without marriage, and three children were born. In 1883 an action was brought by the father and mother against the trustees of the settlement, to obtain a transfer of the fund to the mother :—Held, that the contract to marry had been absolutely put an end to, and that the court could order the stock to be transferred to the lady. son and heir-at-law of his father, B., to shares in | hold the same for his wife and children, if any, a company, executed a deed of indemnity in favour of the directors of the company. A. afterwards ascertained that the shares were personal property, and that he was not entitled to them. Prior to the execution of the deed by A., a call on the shares had been paid by B.'s executors, and such payment was entered in the company's books as having been made by the executors of B. :-Held, that A, was entitled to have the deed set aside as against himself, as having been obtained under a mistake of fact and law. Broughton v. Hutt, 3 De G. & J. 501; 28 L. J., Ch. 167; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 231; 7 W. R. 166.

On the Ground of Surprise, - Agreement decreed to be delivered up on the ground not of frand but surprise, neither party understanding the effect of it, viz. a lease with covenant for perpetual renewal at a fixed rent of premises, held under a church lease renewable upon fines continually increasing. Voluntary Settlement - Power of Revocation.]—The absence of a power of revocation, and the fact that the attention of the settlor was not called to that absence, do not make a voluutary settlement invalid; they are merely circumstances to be considered in deciding on the validity of a voluntary settlement. A widow instructed a solicitor to prepare a deed settling certain houses and buildings on herself for her life, and after her death for the benefit of her children. The deed, as prepared, did not exactly correspond with the instructions, but was read over to and executed by her. There was no suggestion made to her that the deed ought to contain a power of revocation. Some years afterwards she burnt it, and expressed satisfaction at having got rid of it. She executed a mortgage of part of the settled property, after asking the or part of the settled property, arter asking the consent of a son who was both beneficially in-terested and a trustee of the settlement, and made a will purporting to dispose of the whole property:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the deed of settlement was valid, and not affected by the want of a power of revocation or by the divergence from the instructions. - Explanation of Terms. - In order to support a voluntary settlement, it must be shewn that all the provisions are proper and usual; or if there are any unusual provisions, that they were brought to the notice of and understood by the settlor. Phillips v. Mullinys, 41 L. J., Ch. 211; L. R. 7 Ch. 244; 20 W. R. 129.

No general rule can be laid down as to the proper and usual provisions in such a settlement, but a power of revocation is not essential. Ib.

A young man of improvident habits, being entitled to a sum of money, was induced by the trustee of the money, and by a solicitor, to execute a settlement by which he assigned a part of and subject thereto for certain cousins of his He had no power of appointment in default of issue, and no power of revocation, and no power to appoint new trustees. The deed was explained to him, and the particular clauses were brought to his notice:—Held, that the deed could not be set aside by the settlor. Ib. And see Hall v. Hall, supra.

- Costs. ]-A decree being made for setting aside a voluntary settlement, on the ground of the omission of a power of revocation :-Held, that the solicitor who had prepared the deed, and who was one of the trustees named in it, must pay his own costs as a penalty for not having called the settlor's attention to the absence of the power. Voluntary Settlement of Lands - Power of Attorney. ]—B. excented a voluntary settlement of land in favour of his wife and children, which contained a power of sale. Subsequently, B., being about to leave England, executed a power of attorney to E., authorising him to sell all or any of his lands, but in general terms. E., as B.'s attorney, agreed to sell a portion of the land comprised in the settlement to the defendant; and the defendant contracted the next day, the 4th May, 1876, to sell the same piece of land to the plaintiffs. On the execution of this contract a deposit of 2001, was paid, and the purchase was a depise of 2000, was plain, and the pircanse wis to be completed on the 1st January, 1877. The title was objected to by the plaintiffs on the ground that the power of attorney did not authorise the sale to the defendant, and an action was commenced in the Exchequer Division in August, 1877, for the return of their deposit, and for damages for breach of the contract : the defendant asserted that the contract was binding and the title good, and by his counter-claim asked for specific performance. An order had been obtained by consent in another action to administer the trusts of the settlement, confirming the proposed sale by E. to the defendant, and it had also been decided in the action that an order might be made directing a person to convey for B. The defendant subsequently offered a conveyance direct from B. or from the trustees of the settlement, which was declined: -Held, by Bacon, V.-C., that the power of attorney did not authorise E. to sell to the dethe money to trustees to invest and to pay him fendant any portion of the land comprised in the during his life the income on such part as they settlement; and that such a sale was not suffishould think fit, and after his death on trust to climate to call into operation the statute 2T Eliz. c. 4; that the plaintiffs could not be affected by the order of the administration action; and that, the title being defective, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the deposit, with the costs of the action; the damages, to be ascertained, to be limited to the conveyancing costs, General Meat Supply Association v. Bouffler, 41 L. T. 719-C. A.

Decision of Bacon, V.-C., affirmed on appeal, on the ground that the trustees' suit, being a suit for the execution of the trusts of the settlement, there was no jurisdiction in it to make an order to confirm a sale in derogation of those trusts. Ih.

Reconveyance on. ]-Decree, on setting aside an annuity for want of a memorial registered, for an account of the consideration with interest and costs, and of all the annual payments, the balance on either side to be paid, the securities

Deed set aside upon the ground of ignorance and mistake as to its purport and effect, no fraud or undue influence in obtaining its execution being alleged, and the deed itself being inconsistent with the offect contended for by the grantee under it as against the plaintiff. The plaintiff intending to assist the defendant, his illegitimate son, in raising money upon mortgage, and to give scenrity for him, had executed a deed which recited a contract for sale, and in consideration of 501, conveyed the equity of redemption in the property, which had been mortgaged to the defendant. No consideration was ever paid, and the defendant, who insisted that the deed was a voluntary conveyance to himself from the plaintiff, had not questioned a subsequent sale of a portion of the property by the plaintiff. Deed set aside, and re-conveyance ordered. Cov. v. Bruton, 5 W. R. 544.

When a suit is instituted to set aside a voluntary settlement of real and personal estate, and the right to the relief asked is not contested, the court will order a re-conveyance of the property the subject of the settlement, and direct payment of the costs out of the property so settled. Thompson v. Milligan, 18 L. T. 809.

The plaintiff, in 1833, gave a post obit security on his expectancy in a certain fund, payable on the death of his father, to W., in consideration of certain gaming debts. He subsequently won a large sum of W. by bets on horse-racing, and both parties having submitted to the arbitration of the Jockey Club, in 1837, the steward decided that one debt should be set off against the other, and the security given up. W. refused to give up the security, and in 1842 assigned it to C. for valuable consideration, who gave notice to the trustees of the fund. The plaintiff having filed his bill to have the security delivered up to be caucelled :-Held, first, that after the lapse of time the deed must be considered to have been for good consideration. Secondly, that the submission to the arbitration of the Jockey Club amounted to an agreement, which could not be impeached under the acts against gaming, if any part of the account between the parties was legal. Thirdly, that although the trust fund was directed to be laid out in land, it must be treated as a mere chose in action, and C. took it subject to all the equities of W. Hawker v. Wood, I W. R. 316,

Upon the dissolution of partnership and the settlement of all accounts between the partners. A. B. (the continuing partner) took some of the debts as good debts. Campbell. settlement of accounts.

The plaintiffs brought an action. on the deed :-Held, that, although retained in the office of the company, under the above eircumstances the deed was fully perfected, and constituted a complete contract of insurance between the parties; and as the broker had no Parties, —A person partially interested in an authority to cancel it the action was maintain-state may maintain a suit to set aside a convey-ance of such interest fraudulently obtained from L. Smith, Ex purte, 3 Mont., D. X. D. 378.

Evidence, 1—The production of a bond out of the hands of the assigness of a bankrupt who was the principal obligor to the defendant in a cancelled state is prima fance evidence that it was cancelled with the consent of the obliges. Mosger v. Close, 10 M. & W. 576; 12 L. J., Ex. 50.

Marriage settlement of personal property, in general terms, all moneys, bonds, bills, debts, notes, etc.:—Hold, there is no inference of fraud from cancelling a note, the only instrument of that description, during the treaty, on a fair, mond consideration, the marriage not taking place on representation of particulars, or amount of such personal property. De Monneville v. Crampton, 1 Ves. & B. 354; 12 R. R. 233.

Intention.]—A. having advanced to B. two sums of money, received as a security two bils of sale of goods by way of mortgage. The sams advanced having afterwards been incorporate with a debt of 1,100% due from B. to A., and secured by an assignment of a policy of assurace on B.'s life, the bills of sale were thereupon cancelled. The goods had always remained in the possession of B, the nortgager:—Held, that the effect of the cancellation was not to release the debt and to revest the interest of the goods in B.; that it was for the jury to say with what intent the cancellation was made; and that the plaintiff ought not to be nonsulted. Gummer v. Adonns, 18 L. J., Ex. 40.

Plea, that a premium clare void the policy. having remained unpaid for the time specified the directors then cancelled and declared void the policy : on demurrer, on the ground that the plea did not show that the cancellation was not after the liability for the loss declared on :- Held, that the caucellation, even assuming that it was after the liability arose, had the effect of avoiding the policy ab initio, and destroyed any right of action that might previously have accrued to the assured under it. Bumberger v. Commercial Credit Mutual Assurance Society, 3 C. L. R. 568: 15 C. B. 681; 24 L. J., C. P. 115; 1 Jur., (N.S.) 500.

2. RECTIFICATION.

Burden of Proof. ]—The omes lies on those who seek to alter an instrument to shew why it should be altered, not on those who support it to shew why it should not be altered. A settlement on marriage will not be rectified or altered, unless it is shewn that at the time when the deed was executed there was sone definite arrangement in accordance with which it ought to have been prepared as it is desired to rectify or alter it. As to nersons not within the consideration, such a settlement cannot be regarded as ou the same footing as a voluntary settlement. Tucker v. Bennett, 37 L. J., Ch. 507; 38 Ch. D. 1; 58 L. T. 650—C. A.

On an application to reform a deed, the burden of proof lies on the plaintiff; the court examines the evidence very jealously, and must be convinced that there has been a mistake on the part of all parties to the deed before it will reform it. Wright v. Hoff. 22 Beav. 207; 25 L. J., Ch. 803;

2 Jnr. (N.S.) 481; 4 W. R. 522.

Sufficiency of Evidence.]—The court has jurishiction to rectify a columbry deed; but in a case in which the alleged real intention of the parties to the deed is evidenced by their statements alone, uncorroborated by any further evidence, such as written instructions, and notwithstanding that the proposed rectification would bring the deed more into harmony with recognised precedent, the court will act warily in the exercise of such jurisdiction. In such a case the court is reductant to proceed on affidavit evidence, it being in general musefa and numbes to dispense with oral evidence. Bonhate v. Henderson, 64 L. J., Ch. 56; [1895] D (h. 742; 18 L. 523; 7; T. L. 7.55; 48 W. R. 569. Affirmed, [1895] 2 Chi. 202; 13 R. 529; n.; 72 L. R. 514; 43 W. R. 589.—C. A.

The court will rectify an instrument upon parol testimony only, on being satisfied of the non-existence of any written instructions. Lackersteen v. Lackersteen, 30 L. J., Ch. 5; 6

Jur. (N.S.) 1111; 3 L. T. 581.

In suits for rectification of deeds, where no written instructions were given by the parties preparatory to the preparation of the deeds, parol evidence will be received as to the intention of the parties. Ib:

The court will order rectification of a deed on the ground of mistake upon the evidence of the plaintiff alone, where no further evidence can be obtained. Hanley v. Peurson, 13 Ch. D. 545; 41 L. T. 637.

In reforming a deed it is essential that the extent of the proposed alteration should be clearly defined and ascertained by evidence contemporaneous with or anterior to the deed. Bradford (Eurl) v. Ronney (Eurl), 30 Beav. 431; 6 L. T. 208; 10 W. R. 414.

Voluntary Deed—Rectification after Death of Settlor:]—The court will rectify a voluntary deed after the death of the donor where it is clearly shewn that, through mistake, the deed falled to carry out the proved intention of the donor. M. Mechan v. Warburton, [1896] 1 fr. R. 435—C. A.

Suing on Unrectified Deed.]—Where a plaintiff to cases of mutual mistake. Williamson v. tes on a written contract, and the defendant Moriarry, 19 W. R. 818. S. P., Bradford (Earl) sues on a written contract, and the defeudant pleads as a defence matter which he is in equity precluded from setting up by a term of the con-tract not stated in the written instrument, a court of law may give equitable relief without the instrument being first reformed. Wood v. Dwarris, 11 Ex. 498; 25 L.J., Ex. 129; 4 W.R. 262.

In an action by a wife against her husband and others, to have the trusts of her settlement declared and carried out, so far as the same related to an annuity thereby created for her, it plainly appeared on the face of the settlement that the annuity was intended to be payable during the joint lives of the husband and wife, and to be secured by an immediate term, but that, by mistake, it was secured by a term not to arise until after the husband's death. The plendings did not state the mistake, or pray relief in respect thereof by rectification :- Held, that the court could declare the annuity well charged on the lands, without rectifying the settlement. Annesley v. Annesley, 31 L. R., Ir. 457.

Where a boud was in form only a joint bond, but it was suggested to have been the intention of the parties to make it joint and several, and such intention appears on the face of the bond, the court will treat it as a joint and several bond, although it is only a joint bond in form. Symonds.

A deed was executed, by which it was intended to pass the whole of certain reversionary interests in an estate, but by mistake one share was omitted: -Held, that the intention was so clear that the whole estate must be considered to have passed. Knapping v. Tomlinson, 18 W. R. 684.

Since the Judienture Act, 1873, the court has jurisdiction (in any case in which the Statute of Frauds is not a bar), in one and the same action to rectify a written agreement, upon parol evidence of mistake, and to order the agreement as rectified to be specifically performed. On the Ground of Mistake.]—By a mistake in pencil directions given to a clerk or a stationer, a clause of a sentence was inserted in a marriage settlement, which, on the face of the deed, was repagnant to the sense, and which led to a highly improbable result. The fact of the mistake was not admitted by all parties. The court did not order the settlement to be rectified ; but, prefacing the order with a declaration that it appeared that the words in question were inserted by mistake, made an order for distribution of the fund, as if the clause had not been inserted. 4 Y. & Coll. 42.

Although in general, in order to induce the court to rectify an instrument on the ground of mistake, it must be shewn that the mistake was the current mistake of all the parties, yet, semble, this rule ought not to be applied where the object of the rectification is to set aside the deed pro tanto as against the party alleging the mistake. The bond, on the face of it, was usurious, and, an action having been brought on it, the plaintiff failed. The plaintiff afterwards came into equity, shewing that the bond had been erroneously prepared; and that, in fact, the contract was not usurious, and praying that the instrument might be reformed, and effect given to his equitable deposit. The court, being to his equitable deposit. The court, being satisfied of the error:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief he asked. Hodgkinson v. Wyatt, 9 Beav. 566.

___ Mistake as to Parcels.]—Where there has been a mistake in the parcels contained in an executed lease, although it may be a mistake by the plaintiff only, the court will order the annulment, or, at the option of the defendant, the rectification of the lease. Welman, ante, col. 517. Right of Way.]—Where two closes in one The principle of reforming a deed is confined ownership adjoin, and a formed way leads over one to the other, and is used therewith. and the owner grants the latter close "with all ways now used therewith," a right of way over the way passes to the grantee, whether the way was constructed before the unity of possession or not. The defendant, the owner of two pieces of land, P. and B., made an agreement with the plaintiff to convey so that P. should belong to the defendant and B, to the plaintiff. The only access to B, was by a defined gravelled path crossing P., which path it was assumed in this action had not existed before the unity of possession. By a conveyance executed in pursuance of the agreement, P. and B., "with all ways with the same now enjoyed," were conveyed to a trustee as to half thereof to the use of the defendant, and as to half to the use of the plaintiff. P. was then occupied by the defendant, B. by the plaintiff. The defendant stopped up the path, and the plaintiff was compelled to buy a right of way over adjoining land. The plaintiff brought this action, asking that the conveyance might be rectified by vesting B. in her with a right of way over the path, and vesting P, in the defendant, subject to the right of way :-Held, that a conveyance executed in pursuance of the agreement ought to have contained an express grant of the right of way; that such right would have passed by a convevance containing the common general words; that it was immaterial whether the way was constructed before the unity of possession or not; that the plaintiff had not abandoned her right; and that she was entitled to rectification as claimed. See also VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

Where Lapse of Time. |-The conveyance on a sale of land contained a reservation of the minerals lying thereunder to the vendor, which the evidence showed was not intended by either the vendor or the purchaser. Five years after-wards the purchaser discovered the mistake, and filed a bill to have the conveyance rectified. The vendor after putting in an answer, by which he denied that there had been any mistake on his part, died before he could be cross-examined, and the suit was revived against his legal representative :- Held, having regard to the lapse of time and other circumstances, that if the defendant did not consent to have the conveyance rectified, the whole transaction must be set aside, in which event the plaintiff would be fixed with an occupation rent, while the defendant would have to repay the purchase-money, with interest, and also all sums expended by the plaintiff in permanent improvements. Bloomer v. Spittle, 41 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 13 Eq. 427; 26 L. T. 272; 20 W. R. 485.

Doubtful Instrument.]—A deed may be reformed so as to be plainly confined to the object intended, where its operation, as it stands, is doubtful. Walker v. Armstrony, 8 De G., M. & G. 53l; 25 L. J., Ch. 738; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 959; 4 W. R. 770.

Power of Disposition on Failure of Issue mitted.]—By a voluntary settlement property refused to trustees in trust for the settlor for life, virth remainder for any wife he might marry those detection life, remainder for any wife he might marry those detection for life, with remainders to his issue, and in default or failure of issue in trust for his paternal the deed we next of kin :—Held, that though a settlement L. T. 681, L. T. 681, was proper to be made, and though the settlor understood the terms of this settlement, yet a fast attention was not drawn to the fact that he might have had a power of disposition over the property in default or failure of issue, such a power ought to be given, and the settlement must be rectified accordingly. James v. Ouchman, 34 L. J., Ch. 838; 29 Ch. D. 212; 52 L. T. 341; 33 W. R. 452.

Lease.]—Upon parol evidence explaining a term used in an agreement for a lease in regard to which there was a latent ambiguity, the lease was rectified in accordance with what was thus shown to be the intention. Murray v. Parker, 19 Beav. 305.

Striking out Words—"In or near."]—Where the right was granted to hold a market "in sive juxta" a certain place:—Held, that it was contrary to a canon of construction of a grant or other document, which confers a right to strike out words unless it is absolutely necessary to do so; and that the grant must be taken to be of a right to hold the market in or near the place in question, that is, of a narket without metes and bounds. Att.-Gen. v. Harner, 34 L. J., Q. B. 227; 14 Q. B. D. 254; S3 W. R. 93; 49 J. P. 326—C. A.

Rectification—Mutual Mistake—No Claim for in Pleadings.]—A lense for twenty-one years, from 29th September, 1807, at a rent of 80%, payable half-yearly, was granted in consideration of 40%, paid by the lessee, and contained a chause that the sum of 40% should be taken as a discharge of the half-year's rent accruing due on the 29th September, 1888, the defendant pleaded that the date 1898 was inserted by mutual mistake for 1888. The reply in the alternative admitted that the lease expired on 20th September, 1888. The lessor at the trial admitted, and the jury found, that the figures 1888 were inserted by mutual mistake for 1888:—Held, that although these was no counter-claim to rectify the lesse, the court was not counter-claim to rectify the lesse, the court was entitled upon the pleadings and civilence to treat it as

Want of Independent Advice—Father Agent for Wife.]—On the marriage of a daughter, who is living on affectionate terms with her father, he is the proper person to recommend and advise her, and her natural guandian in matters relating to the preparation of her marriage settlement, and there is no occasion for any independent legal adviser beyond the family solicitor. Saith. v. Ilife (L. R. 20 Eq. 608) dissented from. Tucker v. Bennett, 57 L. J., Ch. 507; 38 Ch. D. 1; 53 L. T. 650—C. A.

— General Knowledge.]—Where in an action to obtain the cancellation or modification of a voluntary deed on the ground of undue influence and want of independent advice, the plantiff admits that he had an accurate general knowledge of what he was doing, and only refused to receive a detailed explanation of the deed because he trusted his solicitor to look into those details on his behalf, he is as much boand as if he were himself a lawyer and had drawn the deed with his own hand. Larell v. Wallis, 50 L. T. 681.

Mistake of fact is not the less a ground for relief because the person who has made the mistake had the means of knowledge. Willmatt v. Barber, 15 Ch. D. 96; 43 L. T. 95; 28 W. R. 911.

A party who, before executing, has had properly communicated to him the real purport of a deed, which he deliberately executes, will not be allowed to set it aside merely on his own statement that he did not understand what was sufficiently explained. Jenner v. Jenner, 2 Giff. 232; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 668; 8 W. R. 537.

- Solicitor taking indirect Benefit under Deed, ]-A man of full mental capacity, seised of property which, according to the opinion of one counsel, was limited to the use of himself for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, with remainder to himself in fee; and according to another opinion, was limited to the use of himself in tail male; instructed a solicitor who hadacted generally for him, to prepare a voluntary cleed for the benefit of his three nephews-young men in the prime of life, brothers of the halfblood of the solicitor, their father being then alive. The solicitor sent instructions to counsel to prepare a deed barring the entail, and settling the lands in equal shares among the nephews. The deed was drafted by counsel, limiting the lands to the settlor for life; remainder to his wife for life; remainder to the three nephews as tenants in common in fee, with onerous covenants on the part of the settlor, and without any power of revocation. It was duly executed in 1852, but was not registered. The last survivor of the three nephews died in 1864, leaving the solicitor his heir at law. The settlor in 1868, after being further advised by counsel as to the effect of the deed of 1852, and his position with respect to it, executed another voluntary deed, duly registered, to the trustees of the deeds of 1852, limiting the property in favour of the plaintiff, his adopted child, but took no proceedings to set aside the deed of 1852, and died in 1874. In an action brought by the plaintiff in 1882, to have the so icitor declared a trustee for the plaintiff and others entitled under the deed of 1868, there being no exidence of fraud or midne influence in the preparation and execution of the deed of 1852: -Held, that although there was no evidence of fraud or undue influence, it was the duty of the solicitor under the circumstances to have distinctly called the attention of the settlor to the advisability of inserting a clause of revocation in the deed of 1852, and to have pointed out the results that might ensue from its omission; and that therefore the solicitor could not hold a title depending on the absence of a clause of revocation in the deed. Horan v. Marmahon, 17 L. R., Ir. 641-C. A.

— Infant Parties.]—A deed was excented purporting, by mistake, to convey a moisty only of real estate, the intention of the parties having been to pass the whole. Infants were interested. Upon a bill for rectification:—Held, that a conveyance of the other molecy by another deed was not necessary, and order made declaring that the deed was, in the particulars after specified, executed by mistake, that it was intended to pass the entirety, and that the deed ought to be rectified, ordering rectification by words and figures, accordingly, and directing a copy of the order to be indorsed on the deed. White v. White, 42 L. J., Ch. 288; L. R. 15 Eq. 247; 27 L. 7. 752.

— Form of Judgment Order.]—A lady being, under four several instruments, the done of powers of appointment amongst her three daughters, by four several deeds-poll appointed one-third of the several properties, subject to the powers, to one daughter, and died without otherwise having exercised any of the powers. One only of the instruments creating the powers contained a hotchpot clause —Held, upon the evidence, that there was shewn on the part of the appointor a clear and manifest intention to produce an equality between the three daughters, and that the three deeds-poll must be rectified by the insertion of clauses in the harture of hotchpot clauses. Killick v. Grag, 46 L. T.

By a post-nuptial settlement, real estate belonging to the wife was conveyed unto A. and his heirs "to the use of" A., his executors and administrators, during the life of the wife, "upon trust" to pay the rents and profits to her for her separate use; and from and after her decease, in ease of the death of her husband in her lifetime, "to the use of the heirs and assigns" of the wife for ever; but in case of the wife predeceasing the linsband, then to the use of the husband, his heirs and assigns for ever. The wife having survived her husband, she brought an action against A.'s legal personal representative to have the settlement rectified on the ground that by a technical mistake in the form of the settlement her equitable life estate and the legal estate in remainder did not coalesce within the rule in Shelley's Case, so as to give her, as was intended in the events that had happened, an absolute estate in fee:-Held, that a conveyance of the outstanding legal estate was unnecessary. Hanley v. Pearson, 13 Ch. D. 545; 41 L. T.

Form of order for rectification. Ib. And see White v. White, supra.

Blank.]—Covenant that if A. should at any time become entitled to any property exceeding in value the sum of —, he would assign the same to trustees upon certain trusts declared in a deed carrying out a family arrangement. A. became entitled in reversion, subject to his mother's interest during wildowhood, to property which had been bequeathed to his sister by their father's will. Upon bill filed by A. to have the covenant struck out, and for a declaration that he was absolutely cutified, the Lord Chancellor (affirming decision of Stuart, V.-Ch.) refused to strike out the covenant or to make the declaration on the grounds that there was no cridence of nistake, and that the application was premature. Fifter v. Arbuthout, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 5 W. R. 793.

Other Matters.]—Defect in a legal conveyance not supplied in favour of a natural child. Blake v. Blake, Beat, 575.

The defendant, being jointly interested with and G. in a foreign mine, agreed to sell his share to them, upon certain terms not to be fulfilled immediately. Under an arrangement negotiated between M. and the plaintiff, the whole property was conveyed to the plaintiff upon trust to secure him an anunity. The defendant concurred in this conveyance under the impression that the plaintiff was, at the same time, to execute a mortgage scentring the fulfilment of the terms upon which the defendant sold. The plaintiff, in fact, executed this mort-of the terms upon which he had sold :- Held, that the defendant ought to have communicated directly with the plaintiff, and that the court was justified in setting aside the second instrament alone, in a suit to which M. and G. were not parties. Leader v. M. Econ, 1 N. R. 251.

W. H. was entitled for life to the interest of certain residuary estate, to the principal of which the wife of A. J. was entitled absolutely. W. H. being largely indebted to A. J., executed an indenture, assigning to A. J. all his, W. H.'s, interest in the said residuary estate. It was subsequently discovered that the residuary estate consisted partly of a fund, the existence of which was unknown to either of the parties at the time of the execution of the indenture. W. H. thereupon filed a bill which, not complaining that the indenture had been executed by frand, sought to exclude from its operation the additional fund by treating the indenture merely as a scenrity for the amount then due from W. H. The bill dismissed on the ground that the words of the indenture were sufficient to pass the interest of W. H. in the fund in question, and that no case was made on the pleadings for reforming the instrument. Howkins v. Jackson, 2 Mac. & G. 372; 2 H. & Tw. 301; 19 L. J., Ch. 451.

K, REVOCATION AND CONFIRMATION.

Revocation—When Effectual.]—By a deed made between a corporation and the defendants. P. covenanted with the corporation that he would, on execution of the deed, commence and forthwith build and finish a gas-holder tank, the same to be finished within three months from the date of the deed; and in the event of P. neglecting to finish the work within the time specified, the corporation was empowered to determine the contract; and the corporation covenanted with P, as to the mode of payment for the work. By the deed it was further agreed that the whole of the work should be fully completed on or before the 30th June, 1853, or, in default thereof, P. should forfeit to the corporation 50l., and 20s. for every day the completion should be delayed beyond that time; and the defendants, as sureties for P., covenanted with the corporation that P. should perform the covenants and agreements on his part "which should be subsisting, and not annulled or avoided"; and in default thereof that the defendants would pay to the corporation such sum as E., or other the engineer for the time being of the corporation, should adjudge to be proper to be paid for such default. In an action by the corporation for not finishing the work on the 30th June, 1853, and for not paying the corporation 3001. which E. had adjudged proper to be paid to the corporation for the default of P. in performing the covenants:—Held, that the adjudication of E. was not in the nature of an award by an arbitrator, and that therefore his power to adjudicate could not be revoked by any of the parties to the deed. Northampton Guslight Co. v. Parnell, 15 C. B. 630; 3 C. L. R. 409; 24 L. J., C. P. 60; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 211; 3 W. R. 179.

A lady having actually married with the con-sent of guardians named by her deceased sup-posed putative father, and confirmed by the Court of Chancery, she suffered a recovery; and declared the uses to the joint appointment of herself and her husband, with remainder in strict gage, but without knowing what it was, and settlement. It being discovered that her sup-without having been informed by the defendant posed marriage was void, because at the time posed marriage was void, because at the time her legal father was alive, and did not consent to the marriage, the parties conceived that the settlement and recovery were void, and executed a deed of revocation, and suffered another recovery, after which the lady made a new settlement :- Held, that the recovery and first settle-ment were valid, although made under a mistake of the situation in which the parties stood. Broughton v. Sandilands, 3 Taunt. 342.

A termor assigned his estate to A. and B. in trust for certain purposes; and, by another indenture, executed the next day, he enfeoffed C. and D. of the same lands upon certain other trusts :- Held, that the term assigned to A, and B. was not destroyed by the enfeoffment, there being no proof that they had assented to it. Doe d. Maddock v. Lynes, 3 B. & C. 388; 5 D. & R. 160 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 77.

An assignment of goods to a circlitor, beneficially interested in them, for the benefit of himself and the other creditors, and communicated to him, is not afterwards revocable, as in the case of a mere power. Siggers v. Ecans, 3 C. L. R. 1209; 5 El. & Bl. 367; 24 L. J., Q. B. 305; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 851.

Where, by a marriage settlement, a power of revocation was given on certain conditions, and the conditions were not performed, the deed of revocation was held a nullity. Doe d. Willis v. Martin, 4 Term Rep. 89; 2 R. R. 324.

Confirmation.]—A confirmation of part is a confirmation of the whole. Goodwright d. Carter v. Strapham, Cowp. 210: 1 Dougl. 53, n.

Re-delivery by feme, after death of baron, of a deed delivered by her whilst covert, is a sufficient confirmation of such deed, so as to bind her without its being re-executed or re-attested.

Family Arrangement-Lapse of Time. ]-C., a doniciled Englishman, in 1834 married M., an Italian lady. On the 11th January, 1834, prior to the marriage, a contract in Italian was executed in the terms of the Sicilian law, the father of the bride having been domiciled in Sicily at the time of his death. On the 17th July, 1847, C. and his wife, to avoid certain doubts as to the true construction of the deed of 1834, resettled the real estate in England belonging to C., and released it from the contract of 1834. On the 9th June, 1886. C. and his wife executed a deed confirming the contract of 1834, and declaring the deed of 1847, so far as it purported to vary that contract, void. C. died in 1887, and by his will confirmed the marriage contract of 1834 and the deed of 1886. An action was then commenced by C.'s grandson, the tenant-in-tail in possession under the deed of 1847, asking the court to declare the deed of 1886 void, and to have the trusts of the deed of 1847 carried into effect. M., the widow of C., commenced a crossaction to enforce the marriage contract of 1834, and for a declaration that the deed of 1847, so far as it purported to vary that contract, was void :- Held, that there was a reasonable doubt in 1847 as to the true construction of the deed of 1834 :- Held, therefore, that the deed of 1847 was a family arrangement made for the purpose of settling that doubt, with which the court would not interfere. Cuse v. Cuse, 61 L. T. 789; 38 W. R. 183,

I IN GENERAL

When Written or Published. ]-An action may be maintained for words written, for which an action could not be maintained if they were merely spoken. Thorley v. Kerry (Lord), 4
Taunt, 355; 13 R. R. 626. S. P., Leicester (Earl) v. Wolter, 3 Camp, 214, n.; 2 Camp, 231.

A publication may be a libel on a private person, which would not be any libel on a person in a public capacity; but any inputation of unjust or corrupt motives is equally libelions in either case. Parmiter v. Compland, 6 M. & W. 105; 9 L. J., Ex. 202; 4 Jur. 701.

The rule with respect to libels on public characters and persons in anthority is, that every person has a right to comment openly and strongly on their conduct, provided it is done bond fide, and without imputing to them any corrupt or dishonest motives, Ib.

To constitute a libel, it is necessary not only that the words should be susceptible of a libellous meaning, but that in the mind of a reasonable man they should constitute an imputation upon Had they should constitute in imputation upon the person complaining. Movill v. Fine Arts and General Insurance Co., 66 L. J., Q. B. 195; [1897] A. C. 68; 75 L. T. 606; 61 J. P. 500— H. L. (E.)

- Asterisks instead of Name. ]—If asterisks are put instead of the name of the party libelled, to make it actionable it is sufficient that the party should be so designated that those who know the plaintiff may understand that he is the person meant; and it is not necessary that all the world should understand it. Bourke v. Warren, 2 Car. & P. 307.
- —— Initial Letters.]—Printing initial letters will not protect a libeller. Anon., 2 Atk. 469.
- Heading of Paragraph. ]-The heading prefixed to a paragraph will be read with the rest of it, and the whole taken in the ordinary meaning of the words. Harrey v. French, 2 Tyr. 585; 1 C. & M. 11; 2 M. & Scott, 591; 1 L. J., Ex. 231.

— Mistake,]—In a periodical publication v. Cole, 44 L. J., Q. B. 153; L. R. 10 Q. B. 549; circulating amongst booksellers and stationers, the 33 L. T. 12. proprietor, by a mistake in the arrangement of the "London Gazette" announcements, inserted the names of the plaintiff's firm (who were stationers) under the head " First Meetings under the Bankruptcy Act," instead of under "Dissolutions of Partnerships," In a count for libel, the innuendo was, "meaning thereby that the plaintiff had been bankrupt or had taken proceedings in liqui-dation or for composition." The jury having found the publication libellous, and having assessed the damages at 501., the court refused to arrest the judgment or to interfere with the finding. Shepheard v. Whitaker, L. R. 10 C. P. 502; 32 L. T. 402.

A railway company published a notice to the public, that the plaintiff had been convicted of an offence against its by-laws, and fined a certain sum for penalty and costs, with the alternative of three weeks' imprisonment in case of nonpayment. The period of alternative imprisonment fixed was, in fact, not three weeks, but a fortnight only :- Held, that the inaccuracy of the statement did not necessarily render it libellous, and that it was a question for the jury whether the statement was substantially true. Alexander v. North Eastern Ry., 6 B. & S. 240: 34 L. J., Q. B. 152; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 13 W. R. 651.

- Statement capable of Libellous and Harmless Meaning. ]-Where an alleged libel is capable both of a harmless and an injurious meaning, it is a question for the jury to decide which meaning the readers on the occasion in question would have reasonably given to it. Churchill v. Gedney, 53 J. P. 471.

Though one part of a statement taken alone is injurious to a man's character, if the jury thinks that the effect of that part is removed by the other part of the statement, it is not a libel. Chalmers v. Payne, 2 C. M. & R. 156; 1 Gale, 69; 5 Tyr. 766; 4 L. J., Ex. 151.

A plaintiff declared upon a letter written by the defendant in which it was alleged that the former had for many years, without cause, systematically done everything to amoy the latter, and had nunecessarily dragged him into the Court of Chancery, and put him to great expense: -Held, on demurrer, that the court could not so clearly see that the letter could not be libellous as to justify the court in withdrawing the case from a jury. Fray v. Fray, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 603; 34 L. J., C. P. 45; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1153.

In an action for a libel, imputing to the plaintiff that he was a truckmaster, there being no innucudo to explain the meaning of the word : Held, that although the word was not to be found in any English dictiouary, yet, as it was composed of two well-known English words, the plaintiff was not bound to give evidence of its meaning, nor the judge to explain it to the jury; but that it was properly left to them to say whether, under all the circumstances it was used in a defamatory sense. Homer v. Taunton, 5 H. & N. 661; 29 L. J., Ex. 318; 2 L. T. 512; 8 W. R. 499.

Statement not Libellous per se-Capability of Defamatory Meaning.]-An action will not lie in respect of words published, if an ordinary reader would not understand them in a defamatory sense, and they cannot be made actionable by being alleged to bear a meaning banks. The defendants informed him that if he which the evidence does not warrant. Mulligun would not do so they should issue an order to Declaration for a libel published in a Walsall newspaper: "Walsall Science and Art Institute. The public are informed that Mr. M.'s" (the plaintiff) "connection with the institute has ceased, and that he is not authorised to receive subscriptions on its behalf." Signed by the defendant as an officer of the institute. Immendo, that the plaintiff falsely pretended to be authorised to receive subscriptions on behalf of the institute. At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff was a certificated art master, and had been master at the institute. His engagement with the defendant ceased in June, 1874, and he got up and became master of another school, which was called "The Walsall Government School of Art," and was opened in Angust : in September the advertisement complained of appeared. The judge directed a nonsuit, on the ground that the advertisement was not capable of the defamatory meaning attributed by the innuendo :- Held, that the nonsuit was right; for that the advertisement was not capable of a defamatory meaning. Ib.

A dispute having arisen between a Scotch firm of manufacturers and their Dublin agent as to an item of the accounts between them, of trifling amount, the former sent to the latter a postcard as follows :- " Settlement. If you do not remit by return the matter will be handed to our Dublin solicitors," In an action by the agentfor libel, it appeared that the posteard was deposited in the ordinary course of post in the plaintiff's letter-box, from which it was taken by the plaintiff's porter, and placed upon a desk, to which his manager, bookkeeper, and junior clerk had access. It was read by the bookkeeper, who was aware of the state of the accounts, and the existence of the dispute, and also by the manager, who was not conversant with these matters. The card was not shewn to have been read by any other person:—Held, that a verilet was rightly directed for the defendants. Methan v. Edinburgh Roperic Co., 28 L. R., Ir. 24— C. A.

The defendant hoard of gnardians, being desirous of effecting a change in the management of their legal business, published advertisements to the effect following :- "Cork Union. To Solicitors. The Cark Board of Guardians will at their (next) meeting appoint a solicitor, other than the late solicitors, to do all the legal business of the union, &c." In an action for libel by one of such late solicitors :--Held, that the words were not per se libellous. O'Hea v. Cork Union, 32 L. R., Ir. 629.

The plaintiffs were the "Capital and Counties Bank," which had a branch at Chichester and other branches in Sassex and Hampshire, defendants were brewers at Chichester, and had many customers and tenants occupying publichonses in different parts of the same counties, These enstomers and tenants were accustomed to eash cheques for persons who visited their houses, and afterwards to hand the cheques, which were drawn on various banks, to the defendants' collector in payment of accounts. The collector used to pay the cheques into the plaintiff's necount at the Chichester branch bank, where the cheques were received as of course. But a new manager of that branch bank objected to eash such cheques as were drawn on other branch their tenants not to cash cheques of the plaintiffs' discovery. Delany v. Jones, 4 Esp. 191. And bank, at least with the intention of paying the see Maloncy v. Bartley, 3 Camp. 210. collector with them. The manager replied that he must certainly decline to cash cheques on the other branches of the bank when presented by parties unknown to him, though as a matter of grace he was quite willing to eash cheques to the defendants' representatives if properly introduced to him, with proof that they had power to sign for the defendants' firm, and that he was quite indifferent as to their sending out orders to their tenants not to eash the plaintiffs' cheques. Thereupon the defendants caused to be printed and sent to 137 of their customers and tenants aforesaid the following circular:—"Messrs. Henty and Sons hereby give notice that they will not receive in payment cheques drawn on any of the branches of the Capital and Counties Bank." -This publication of the circular caused a run on the bank and loss to the plaintiffs. They brought an action for libel. The statement of claim set out the circular as the libel, and alleged by an innuendo the meaning to be that the plaintiffs were not to be relied upon to meet the cheques drawn upon them, and that their position was such that they were not to be trusted to cash the cheenes of their customers. At the trial the question of libel or no libel was left to the jury, with a direction that the circular, if, under the circumstances, libellous, was published on a privileged occasion, unless there was express malice. The jury failed to agree, and were discharged. On motion to enter judgment for the defendants :- Held, by the Common Pleas Division that the circular was capable of the meaning alleged, and there was evidence to support the immendo and also of express malice, and the case must go again to a jury .- On appeal:—Held, reversing the decision of the court below (Thesiger, L.J., dissenting), that there was no evidence that the circular was defanatory in either a primary or a secondary sense, and that, even if there was any such evidence, the circular was issued on a privileged occasion, and there was no evidence of expressed Tables, Tapital and Counties Bank v, Heaty, 52 L. J., Q. B. 232; 7 App. Cas. 741; 47 L. T. 662; 31 W. R. 157; 47 J. P. 214—H. L. (E.)

Statements in Newspapers. ] -If a libel is sent to a newspaper, and the editor strikes out the most libellous portions, and publishes the remainder, the writer is liable for the part which is published. Durhy v. Ousley, 1 H. & N. 1; 25 L. J., Ex. 227; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 497.

Advertisement in Newspaper.] - An advertisement in a public newspaper strongly reflecting upon the character of an individual who has been declared bankrupt, is libellons; although published with the avowed intention of convening a meeting of the creditors for the purpose of consulting upon the measures proper to be adopted for their own security, if the legal object might have been obtained by means less injurious. Brown v. Crowne, 2 Stark. 297; 19 R. R. 727.

An advertisement published in a newspaper concerning any person, though conveying with it an imputation injurious to the character of the party about whom it is published, is not a libel if done bona fide, and with a view of obtaining information on the subject alluded to in the adver-

Letter in Newspaper applying to Plaintiff remarks made by Another upon Privileged Occasion.]-The defendant published a letter in a newspaper in which she referred all readers to a certain speech made in the House of Lords That speech contained a passage which, if it referred to the plaintiff, would have constituted a libel upon him if the occasion had not been privileged:—Held, that it was for a jury to say whether the defendant meant that the passage in the speech referred to the plaintiff, and whether by referring to it she intended to apply it to the plaintiff. Lawrence v. Newberry, 64 L. T. 797; 39 W. B. 605.

- Publication of Book in Mutilated Form. —A book was originally published in its com-plete form in 1886; in 1892 the publisher issued an edition of the book omitting the preface, table of contents, introduction, bibliographical notice and index; the author applied to restrain the publishing or selling of the book in its mutilated form on the ground that his reputation would suffer thereby: Held, that the plaintiff's remedy in law was libel. Lee v. Gibbings, 67 L. T. 263.

Words Spoken. ]-Slanderous words must be understood by the court in the same sense as the rest of mankind would ordinarily understand Woodnoth v. Mendows, 5 East, 463; 2 Smith, 28; 7 R. R. 742.

The question in an action for words is, not what the party using them considered their meaning by any secret reservation in his own mind, but what he meant to have understood as their meaning by the party to whom he rittered them. Read v. Ambridge, 6 Car. & P. 308,

In an action of slander for words, some of which, if spoken and understood in their ordinary sense, would certainly be actionable, the jmy may consider whether, taking the whole of the conversation together, the particular words are so qualified by the other parts of the conversation, as to shew that they were not intended to convey the idea which their primary and ordinary meaning would give. Shipley v. Tod-hunter, 7 Car. & P. 680.

- Words not Defamatory per se. ]-Where words not defamatory in their nature, even though productive of special damage, are spoken, the action is not maintainable. Kelly v. Partington, 3 N. & M. 117: 5 B. & Ad. 645; 3 L. J., K. B. 104. S. P., Sheahan v. Ahoarne, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 412.

- Imputation of Evil Inclinations. ] -Semble, that words imputing evil inclinations to a man which were never brought into action are not actionable. Harrison v. Stratton, 4 Esp. 218.

But an action for words which charge men with evil inclinations and principles will lie, Prince v. Have, 1 Bro. P. C. 64.

- Words of Suspicion.] - Words merely conveying suspicion will not sustain an action for slander. Simmons v. Mitchell, 50 L. J., P. C. 11; 6 App. Cas. 156; 43 L. T. 710; 29 W. R. 401; 45 J. P. 237—P. C.

- Repetition of Slander. ]-The repetition tisement by a person really interested in the of a rumour injurious to another is actionable

It is no justification that the rumour existed.

The general rule that the remedy of a slaudered person, in cases where the words are uttered by the original slanderer to another, who communicates them to a third person, whereby special damage arises, is against the intermediate person and not the original slanderer, does not apply where the words are spoken to a person who is under a moral obligation to communicate them to a third. Derry v. Handley, 16 L. T. 263,

In such case the communication is privileged, and the original utterer of the slander is responsible. Ib.

Where slanderous words are not actionable per se, no action will lie against the original utterer of the slander for damage resulting from Purking a repetition of it unauthorised by him. v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 153: 31 L. J., Ex. 331; 8 Jur. (N.s.) 593; 6 L. T. 394; 10 W. R. 562.

The defendant uttered a slander consisting of a false imputation upon the chastity of the plaintiff, an numarried woman, in the presence of the plaintiff's mother. The mother repeated it to the plaintiff, who repeated it to the man to whom she was engaged to be married, and he broke off the engagement. There being no evidence that the defendant authorised or intended the repetition of the slander, or that he knew of the plaintiff's engagement :- Held, that an action of slander could not be maintained against him. Speight v. Gosnay, 60 L. J., Q. B. 231; 55 J. P. 501—C. A.

Where special damage arises from the repetition of a slander, an action may be maintained against the person uttering the slander if he authorised or intended the repetition; or if the repetition was the natural consequence of his act : or, semble, if there was a moral obligation on the person in whose presence the slander was uttered to repeat it. Ib.

- Communication of Libel to Person Libelled.]—No claim can be maintained by the publishers of a libellous work against a person informing the individuals libelled of the publication who bring actions against the publishers resulting in the recovery of damages. Sannders v. Seyd and Kelly's Credit Index Co., 75 L. T. 193—C. A.

2. IMPUTATIONS OF CRIME OR FRAUD.

Generally. ] - Words are not actionable as imputing crime, unless they convey to the hearer an express imputation of some crime liable to punishment. Holt v. Scholefield, 6 Term Rep. 691; 3 R. R. 318.

Words imputing that the plaintiff has been guilty of a criminal offence will support an action for slander, without special damage ; and it is not necessary to allege in the statement of claim that they impute an indictable offence. Webb v. Bevan, 52 L. J., Q. B. 544; 11 Q. B. D. 609; 49 L. T. 201; 47 J. P. 488.

Words imputing a crime are actionable, though they describe it in vulgar language, and not in technical terms. Colman v. Godwin, 3 Dougl, 90;

2 B, & C, 285, n.

unless the occasion rendered it privileged. If words which, by themselves expressly Watkin v. Hall, 9 B, & 8, 279; 37 L, J, Q, B, charge a felony, are accompanied by an express 125; L, L, 3 Q, B, 396; 18 L, T, 551; 16 W, R, allusion to a transaction which merely amounts to a breach of trust, no action will lie. Thompson v. Bernard, 1 Camp. 48.

So, if the transaction was a mere breach of contract. Christie v. Cowell, Peake, 4; 3 R. R. 642. A declaration stating that the plaintiff was clerk to a mining company; that the defendant, intending to cause it to be believed that he had been guilty in the course of his employment of grave crimes and felouies, in a discourse of and concerning the plaintiff, spoke these words: "You have done things with the company for which you ought to be hanged, and I will have you hanged before the 1st of August"; (thereby meaning that the plaintiff had been guilty of felonies punishable by law with death by hanging) is good, on motion, in arrest of judgment. Francis v. Rosse, 3 M. & W. 191; 1 H. & H. 36; 7 L. J., Ex. 66.

The words "You have done an act for which I can transport you," are actionable without colloquium or innuendo. Curtis v. Cretis, 4 M. & Scott, 337; 10 Bing. 447; 3 L. J., C. P. 158. An action will lie for saying of the plaintiff, "he is a returned convict"; though the words import that the punishment has been suffered. Fowler v. Dowdney, 2 M. & Rob. 119.

The use of words imputing an indictable offence is actionable or not, according to the sense in which they may fairly be understood by bystanders not acquainted with the matters to which they relate, or which may render them a privileged communication; and the secret intent of the speaker in uttering them in the presence of such bystanders is immaterial. Hankinson v. Bilby, 16 M. & W. 442. See Daines v. Hartley, 3 Ex. 200; 18 L. J., Ex. 81.

Charge of Murder.]—The words, "You are guilty (innuendo of the murder of D.)," are, after the verdict, a sufficient charge of murder, though the colloquium was only of the death. Peuke v. Oldhum, Cowp. 275; 2 W. Bl. 960.

The words "I am thoroughly convinced that you are guilty (innuendo of the death of D.), and rather than you should go without a hangman, I will hang you," are actionable. Ib.

The words, "I think the present business ought to have the most rigid inquiry, for he, the plaintiff, murdered his first wife; that is he administered improper medicines to her for a certain complaint, which was the cause of her death," are actionable. Ford v. Primrose, 5. D. & R. 287; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 40.

Bigamy.]-A declaration for slandering thewife of the plaintiff alleged, that the wife of the plaintiff and A. B. were brother and sister, and that the defendant spoke the slanderons words of and concerning the plaintiffs, their intermarriage, and A. B., to the effect that it had been ascertained beyond doubt that the wife of the plaintiff and A. B. were not only brother and sister, but man and wife; meaning to impute bigany to the wife of the plaintiff. The defendant having pleaded the general issue :-Held, first, that it was not essential for the plaintiff to prove the introductory averment that the wife of the plaintiff and A. B. were brother and sister; and secondly, that the declaration was good, the words spoken sufficiently shewing an intention to impute felony. Heming v. Power, 10 M. & W. 564; 6 Jur. 858.

Charge of Theft or Robbery. ]-If one calls another thief, together with many other names of general abuse not imputing crime, and, on no other evidence being given to explain the sense in which the word thief was used, the jury finds for the plaintiff, the court will not set the verdict aside, for the action may be maintained for the word thief. Penfold v. Westevte, 3 B. & P. (N.R.) 335,

The words, "He is a thief and robbed me of my bricks," are actionable without any introductory averment. Sloman v. Dutton, '10 Bing. 402; 4 M. & Scott, 174; 3 L. J., C. P. 109,

The following words, alleged to have been spoken by the defendant of the plaintiff:—"You robbed me, for I found the thing you have done it with," are actionable, per se, without any colloquium or inunendo to explain the sense in which they were used. Roweliffe v. Edmonds, 7 M. & W. 12: 9 L. J., Ex. 278: 4 Jur. 684.

The words, "He robbed J. W.," are actionable, as imputing an offence punishable by law. Tomlinson v. Brittlebunh, 4 B. & Ad, 630 ; 1 N. & M. 455; 2 L. J., K. B. 105.

If they were said in any other sense the defendant must shew it. Ib.

The words, "He was put in the roundhouse for stealing ducks at Crowland," are actionable, if laid to have been spoken falsely and maliciously. Beaver v. Hides, 2 Wils, 300,

In slander the words were, "You are a thief; you robbed Mr. L. of 30!." The words were spoken in the hearing of B, and of several strangers. B. knew that the words did not mean to impute felony, but meant to impute that the plaintiff had improperly obtained 30%, from Mr. , to compromise an action for a distress :-Held, that, under these circumstances, the ques-tion to be left to the jury was, not what the defendant meant by the words he spoke, but what reasonable men, heaving the words, would under-stand by them. Hankinson v. Bilbu. 2 Car. & K.

Semble, also, that if all the persons present when the words were spoken had known that the words did not impute felony, that would have been an answer to the action. Ib.

At the trial of an action by A. against B. for slander, A. proved the words used to be "You're a thief and robbed J. C. of his money," while B. proved the words to be "You've got J. C.'s brass." The fact was J. C. had lost money, and it was thought A, had found it :- Held, that the judge rightfully told the jury that they were to consider whether A,'s version or B,'s version of the words used was correct, and, if they believed A, they were to find a verdict for him; and that he was not bound to tell them that the finding of J. C.'s money was no felony in itself, and that if they were of opinion that B, intended not to impute a felony but merely the circumstances of J. C.'s money being found, then they were to find for. the defendant. Atkinson v. Newton, 3 W. R. 14.

An allegation that the defendant said of the plaintiff, "She secreted 1s. 6d. under the till," stating, "These are not times to be robbed":— Held, to import that the plaintiff, when secreting the 1s. 6d., had used the latter words, and that therefore the allegation did not contain that which was actionable per se. Kelly v. Partington, 2 N. & M. 460; 4 B. & Ad. 700; 3 L. J., K. B. 104.

A plaintiff brought an action for the words, "Who stole the parish bell-ropes?" Innuendo, that the plaintiff whilst churchwarden had stolen the parish bell-ropes :- Held, that the church- 298.

warden had the possession of the bell-ropes belonging to the church, and that he could not be guilty of stealing them; and, therefore, no action would lie for the words spoken, as they did not impute an indictable offence. Jackson v. Adams, 2 Scott, 599; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 402; 1 Hodges, 339; 5 L. J., C. P. 79.

____ Larceny by Husband of Wife's Property. ]—It is no offence for a husband to take his wife's money while they are living together; sed aliter while they are living apart. Therefore, words spoken amounting in substance to an allegation that a husband has robbed his wife, and nothing more, will not support an action for slander by the husband against the speaker, since they do not in themselves impute an indictable offence. Lemon v. Simmons, 57 L. J., Q. B. 260; 36 W. R. 351.

Sect, 12 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, which alone creates any such offence on the part of the husband, contains a proviso that "no criminal proceeding shall be taken by any wife against her husband while they are living together as to or concerning any property claimed by her, nor while they are living apart as to or concerning any act done by the linsband while they were living together concerning property claimed by the wife, unless such property shall have been wrongfully taken by the husband when leaving or deserting, or about to leave or desert, his wife." Accordingly, nuless the words complained of allege that, besides robbing his wife, the husband was living apart from, or or deserting, or about to desert her, they contain no imputation of an indictable offence, and consequently impute no actionable slander. Ib.

Suspicion of. ] - A declaration, after stating by way of inducement that the defendant used the words, "I have a suspicion that you robbed my house," for the purpose of expressing, and that the words were understood as expressing, that the plaintiff had feloniously stolen goods of the defendant's, set out the slanderous words as follows: "I (meaning the defendant) have a suspicion that you (meaning the plaintiff) and B. have robbed my house (meaning that the plaintiff had feloniously stolen and carried away goods and chattels of the defendant), and there-fore I take you into custody":—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a verdict, unless the jury found that the words spoken by the defendant imputed to the plaintiff a direct charge of felony.

Toxer v. Mashford. 6 Ex. 539; 20 L. J. Ex. 225.

A libel was headed "Horse Stealer," and then alleged that the plaintiff was taken up on suspicion of having stolen a horse, by a constable who was informed that "such a character" was at a certain public-house; it then went on to state circumstances of suspicion against the plaintiff, and ultimately that, having obtained permission to go out of the constable's sight, he made his escape, but was retaken, and confined in goal for examination. The defendant pleaded a justification as to all of the libel except the word "horse-stealer," setting out the several circumstances related in the libel :- Held, that as the declaration alleged that the libel was intended to convey a charge of felony, and this intent was not denied by the plea, the statement of circumstances of suspicion to excuse part of the libel was no sufficient justification. Mountney v. Watson, 2 B. & Ad. 673; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B.

Charge of Buying Goods, knowing them to have been Stolen. —A declaration alleged that the defendant in a discourse, spoke and published of the plaintiff, and of his trade, the words following :- "I have been robbed of three dozen of winches; you have bought two, one at 3s, and one at 2s, ; you knew well when you bought them that they cost me three times as much making as you gave for them, and that they could not have been come honestly by": whereupon the plaintiff said to the defendant. " I have bought half-a-dozen winches from a new maker the week before"; and then produced and shewed some of such last-mentioned winches to the defendant, who thereupon replied to the plaintiff, "Oh, no! those are not my winehes, you know that well enough; these (the defendant meaning and pointing to certain other winches) are mine. I am sorry to say anything against any tradesman, but will bring the man who stole my winches and let you see him, for he is in my custody"; thereby meaning that the plaintiff had been guilty of buying the winches, knowing them to have been stolen :-Held, in arrest of judgment, that the declaration contained one count only; that the former words were actionable; that, all the words appearing to have been spoken by the defendant in one continued discourse, it was sufficient that some of them were actionable, though damages were given upon the whole declaration. Alfred v. Far-low, 8 Q. B. 854; 15 L. J., Q. B. 258; 10 Jur. 714.

Charge of Forgery.]—No action lies for these words: "I will take him to Bow-street on a charge of forgery," without inmendo, because they do not directly charge the person of whom they are spoken with felony. Hurrison v. King, 4 Price, 46; 7 Taunt. 431; 18 R. R. 524.

The words, "You are a rogue, and I will prove you a rogue, for you forged my name, actionable. Jones v. Herne, 2 Wils. 87.

Advertisement in a newspaper as follows: To bill-brokers and others, Caution. Reward. Whereas information has been given to me, that attempts have been made to obtain the discount of a bill of exchange bearing date, London, May 26, 1825, and purporting to be drawn by one John Stockley upon and to be accepted by the Dowager Lady P. Turner for 6,000l. with interest, payable twelve months after date to the order of the said J. Stockley; I hereby give notice on behalf of the Downger Lady P. T. that she has not accepted such bill, and that if her name should appear on any such instrument the same has been forged; or her handwriting to the acceptance of the bill, if genuine, has been obtained by fraud, in total ignorance on her part of the intended effect of the signature. Any person who will give positive information to me of the party in possession of the instrument shall be handsomely rewarded. Thomas Binns":—is not a libel on Stockley, at least without innuendo and proof that he was the person designed to be charged with having forged Lady Turner's name. Stockley v. Clement, 4 Bing, 162; 12 Moore, 376; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 139.

Charge of Perjury. - Saying of the plaintiff that he had forsworn himself, and that the defendant had three evidences that would prove it, is not actionable, without shewing that the words

Secus, saving that he was perjured, because perjury can only be committed in a judicial or an authorised proceeding. Ib.

The words, "His oath ought not to be taken.

for he has been a forsworn man, and I can bring people to prove it; and that they who know him will not sit in the jury-box with him," are not actionable per se. Hall v. Weeden, 8 D. & R. 140: 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 204.

The defendant saying of the plaintiff, that "he was under a charge of a prosecution for perjury, and that G. W. (an attorney of that name) had the attorney-general's directions to prosecute the plaintiff for perjury," is actionable. Roberts v. Camden, 9 East, 93; 9 R. R. 513.

Charge of Embezzlement. ]-Slander for accusing the plaintiff of felonious embezzlement. The plaintiff had been ehosen and sworn in at a courtleet held by a corporation, as chamberlain of certain commonable lands. The duties of the chamberlain (who received no remuneration) were to collect moneys from the commoners and other persons using the commonable lands; to employ the moneys so received in keeping the lands in order : to account at the end of the year to two aldermen of the corporation, and to pay over any balance in his hands to his successors in office :- Held, that the plaintiff was not a servant, or person employed in the capacity of a servant, within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 47, as to embezzlement, Williams v. Stott, 1 C. & M. 675; 3 Tyr. 688; 2 L. J., Ex. 303; 3 L. J., Ex. 110.

Words Imputing Fraud or Dishonesty -Swindler.] — Saying to another "You are a swindler," without other words, is not actionable. Saville v. Jardine, 2 H. Bl. 531; 3 R. R. 502.

The speaking and publishing of a person that he is a swindler is not actionable, in the absence of an allegation that the word was spoken in relation to an office, trade, profession or business. Bluck v. Hunt, 2 L. R., Ir. 10.

To say of one who carries on the business of a corn vendor, "You are a rogue and a swindling rascal; you delivered me 100 bushels of oats worse by 6d. a bushel than I bargained for," is worse by the a busher than I beginned to, is actionable without proof of special damage, Thomas v. Jackson, 3 Bing, 104; 10 Moore, 425; 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 182; 28 R. R. 605.

To print of any person that he is a "swindler," is a libel, and actionable. I Anson v. Stuart, 1 Term Rep. 748; 1 R. R. 392.

A declaration, after reciting that divers persons had been associated together, under the name of "The Society of Guardians for the Protection of Trade against Swindlers and Sharpers"; and that the defendant, under colour of being the secretary of the society, had from time to time published printed reports for the purpose of denoting to the members of the society the names of such persons as were deemed swindlers and sharpers, and improper persons to be proposed to be balloted for as members of the society, set out the following libel of and concerning the plaintiff :- "Society of Guardians for the Protection of Trade against Swindlers and Sharpers: I (meaning the defendant) am directed to inform you, that G. (meaning the plaintiff) and C. are reported to this society as improper to be proposed to be balloted for as members. (Meaning that the plaintiff was a swindler and sharper, were spoken with reference to some judicial pro-ceeding in which the plaintiff had been sworn.

Society)." After verdict for the plaintiff, and been sworn.

After verdict for the plaintiff, and the property of the plaintiff, and the property of the plaintiff, and the x-bichelpfald, 6 Term Rep. 691; 3 K. 8.38. [with a few for error brought:—Held, that the innuendo was not warranted by the libel; and that the an averment that illegal gambling and play were words of the libel, unexplained by introductory intended. Forbes v. King, 1 D. P. C. 672 matter, were not actionable. Goldstein v. Foss (in error), 1 M. & P. 402 : 6 B. & C. 154 ; 2 Y. & J. 146; 9 D. & R. 197; 4 Bing, 489; 2 Car. & P. 252; 29 R. R. 610.

- Welcher. - A declaration alleged that the defendant called the plaintiff "a welcher" (meaning a person who dishonestly appropriates and embezzles money deposited with him). The evidence was that a welcher is a person who receives money which has been deposited to abide the event of a race, and who has a predetermined any intention to keep the money, and not to part with it in any event:—Held, that as the term does not necessarily impute the offence of embezzlement, it does not imply an indictable offence, and so is not actionable. Blackman v. Briant, 27 L. T. 491.

- Charge of Withdrawing Horses in order to Win Bets.]—A declaration shewed that the plaintiff was a member of the Jockey Club, and subscriber to the Derby Stakes at Epsom, and had withdrawn a horse which he intended to run. It set out words which imputed to the plaintiff that he had entered the horse to run for those stakes, and had afterwards withdrawn him for the purpose of getting an unfair advantage over parties with whom he had heavy wagers on the result of the race :- Held, that the action would lie, and this whether or not the transactions in which the declaration shewed the plaintiff to be engaged were legal. Grerille v. Chapman, D. & M. 553; 5 Q. B. 731; 13 L. J., Q. B. 172; 8 Jur. 189.

- Blackleg. - A declaration alleged that the defendant asserted of the plaintiff, "I am surprised that Mr. R. should allow a blackley" (meaning the plaintiff) "in this room" (meaning that the plaintiff obtained his living by dishonest gambling, and was a professed gamester). A witness having deposed that the defendant used the language with reference to the plaintiff, was asked, "What did you understand by the word 'blackleg?' "who replied, "A person who cheats at eards" :—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Watson, B. (dissentiente—Martin and Bramwell, BB.) first, that the word "blackleg" is not actionable without special damage. Barnett v. Allen, 3 H. & N. 376; 1 F. & F. 125; 27 L. J., Ex. 412; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 488.

Held, secondly, that the above evidence of its meaning was improperly received. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that even if the evidence was receivable, it did not prove the immendo as laid in the declaration. Ib.

The saying of a man that he is a blackleg is actionable without special damage, because it imputes conduct for which he is liable to be indicted under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17. Ib.—per Martin and Bramwell, BB, · Villain.]-A letter written to a third person, calling a person a villain, is actionable, without proof of special damage. Bell v. Stone, 1 Bos. & P. 331; 4 R. R. 820.

A writing in which a party is spoken of in language usually applied to the keeper of a gaming-house, is libellous, whether the words are capable of being applied by an immendo to specific charges of unfair practices or not. Digby v. Thompson, 1 N. & M. 485: 4 B. & Ad. 821: 2 L. J., K. B. 140.

____Affidavit-man.]—Calling a person an affidavit-man is libellous, for it means a man who is ready to swear on all occasions, without any connsance of the fact. Anon., 2 Atk.

- Convicted Felon-Punishment for Felony endured.]—An action will lie for saying of the plaintiff, "He is a returned convict"; though the words import that the punishment has been suffered. Fowler v. Dowdney, 2 M. & Rob. 119.

In an action by the editor of a newspaper for libel by printing and publishing of him in another newspaper that he was "a convicted felon," and also a "felon editor," the defendant justified, alleging that the plaintiff had been convicted of felony and sentenced to twelve months' hard labour. The plain-tiff replied that the conviction had taken place many years previously, that he had endured the punishment, and had thereby become in the same situation as if a pardon under the great seal had been granted to him. At the trial thejudge held that the alleged libels merely meant that the plaintiff had been convicted of felouy, and that this being true, the plaintiff could not recover :- Held, that upon demurrers to the justification and to the reply the plaintiff was entitled to judgment, and also that there must be a new trial. Per Branwell, L.J., that the words "felon editor" implied that the plaintiff had been guilty of felony, and the justification did not allege that he had actually committed felony; and therefore, although the plaintiff might be "a convicted felon," yet the justifica-tion being pleaded to the whole cause of action. was too wide and formed no defence. Per Brett, L.J., and Cotton, L.J., that the question as tothe meaning of the alleged libels ought to have been submitted to a jury : that by 9 Geo, 4, e. 32, s. 3. a person convicted of felony, after enduring the punishment is in law no longer a felon, and that the justification was bad for not alleging: that the plaintiff was then enduring the punishment. Other Imputations of Dishonesty. ] - The words, "He has defrauded a mealman of a roan horse," are not actionable without special damage. Richardson v. Allen, 2 Chit, 657.

An action for saying of a merchant, "He has brought a false bill of lading for half the cargo (meaning the lading of a particular ship) already," whereby he was injured as such merchant, and lost the confidence of several persons, was held not maintainable, and judgment accordingly arrested, because the words did not of themselves impute any crime. The following publication is not libellous:-"Notice, any person giving information where any property may be found belonging to H. G., prisoner in the King's Bench prison, but residing within the rules thereof, at 3, 4 and 5, Portland-place, Borough-road, shall receive 5 per cent, upon the goods recovered, for their trouble, by applying to Mr. Levy, Fetter-lane, Fleet-A. & E. 282; 1 W. W. & H. 728; 8 L. J.,

The plaintiff alleged in his statement of claim that the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of the plaintiff the words, "His shop is in the market," meaning thereby that the plaintiff was going away, and was guilty of fraudulent conduct in his business, inasmuch as he had received subscriptions from members of a certain club, well knowing that they would be unable to obtain any benefit therefrom :- Held, that the words, not being in themselves defamatory, and there being no evidence to wholly support the innuendo, the defendant was entitled to judgment. In an action of slander, where the plaintiff, in his statement of claim, annexes a meaning to the words complained of, and fails to sustain such meaning, he cannot diseard that and adopt another. Where words, which are not slanderous in their primary sense, are taken in a secondary sense distinct from their primary sense, there must be evidence of facts which would reasonably make them defamatory their secondary sense. Ruel v. Tatnell, 43 L. T. 507; 29 W. R. 172.

The words, "You are a regular prover under bankruptcies," as they convey no imputation upon the plaintiff in the way of his trade, are not in themselves actionable. An ander, 7 Bing. 119; 4 M. & P. 870. Angle v. Alex-

The publication of a placard, stating that the prosecutor is indebted in a large sum, and offering it for sale, is not necessarily libellous. Reg. v. Coghlan, 4 F. & F. 316.

In an action on a libel for publishing a handbill, offering a reward for the recovery of certain bills of exchange, and stating that A. is suspected of having embezzled them, it is a good defence on the general issue that the handbill was solely with a view to the protection of persons liable on the bills, or to the conviction of the offender. Finden v. Westlake, M. & M. 461; 31 R. R. 748.

A defendant published a placard of the plaintiff, who had formerly served some parochial offices, "That when out of office he had advocated low rates, but when he came into office he had advocated high ones, and raised a large sum of money not to be paid to the poor; and that he was a person in whose hands the defendant would not intrust 51. of his private property":-Held, that these words were actionable, per se, without any innuendo. Cheese v. Scales, 10 M. & W. 488; 12 L. J., Ex. 13; 6 Jur. 958.

Generally. ]-In general, any charge of immoral conduct, although in matters not punishable by law, is libellous. Tuam (Archbishop) v. Robeson. 5 Bing. 17; 2 M. & P. 32; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 199; 30 R. R. 530.

These words :- "The Rev. John Robinson and Mr. James Robinson, inhabitants of this town, not being persons that the proprietors and annual subscribers think it proper to associate with, are excluded this room," published by posting a paper on which they were written, purporting to be a regulation of a particular society, are not libellons. Robinson v. Jermyn, 1 Price, 11.

It is libellous and actionable to publish of a man that he has been guilty of gross misconduct, and insulted females in a barefaced manner. Clement v. Chivis, 9 B. & C. 172; 4 M. & R. 127; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 189.

Action for libel consisting of the following sentence in a newspaper: "Mr. Richards (the plaintiff) is an old man, being, as we hear, upwards of sixty years of age. He also exercises great power, necessarily delegated to him by Lord Gage, and ought, therefore, both on account of his years and of his influential station, to be the man to protect the wives and daughters of his neighbours from the ruffian's insult, rather than to violate in their persons not only the decencies of society but the modesty of nature. We should be sorry to hear that any man, who had lived to Mr. Richards' years had been pronounced guilty of such an offence as is alleged against him; yet the respect we bear our neighbours, and the feeble protection which it is our duty to throw over the modest and virtuous of the gentler sex, compel us to express a hope that Lord Gage will see the propriety of instituting some inquiry." After verdict for the plaintiff :- Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the sentence was libellous on the plaintiff. Richards v. Cohen, 1 L. J., K. B. 210.

As to a Person's Mind being Affected.]statement in writing that a person's mind is affected is primâ facie a libel. Morgan v. Lingen, 8 L. T. 800.

Such a publication is malicious, unless made in discharge of a public or private daty arising out of a matter in which the person making it is concerned, and then made without malice. Ib.

But if fairly wanted by any reasonable exigency, and honestly made, it is privileged. Ib.

Unchastity in Women.]-See 54 and 55 Vict. c. 51.

These words spoken of a woman: "I have kept her common these seven years; she hath given me the bad disorder, and three or four other gentlemen," are not actionable, because they may refer to time past. Carslake v. Mappledorum, 2 Term Rep. 478.

Charging a person with having had a contagious disorder is not actionable, because it is no reason why the company of a person so charged should be avoided. Ib.

Calling a woman a whore is not actionable except in the city of London, by reason of the cantom there to cart whores; but there the words must charge that she was a whore in Loudon, as it is not sufficient if the declaration merely alleges that she resided there. Roberton v. Parcell, 2 Selv. N. P. 1224. See Brand v. Roberts, 4 Burr. 2418. Kryer v. Eustwick, 4 Burr. 2032.

So calling a woman a strampet in the city of Bristol is actionable there, by the custom of the place. Pacer v. Shaw, 1 Wils. 62.

Words imputing to a woman want of chastity are not actionable, unless attended by the loss of some material temporal advantage. *Hoberts v. Haberts, 5 B, & S, 384; 33 L, J, Q, B, 249; 10 Jur. (X.S.) 1027; 10 L. T. 602; 12 W. R. 909.

The words, "to are nying by imposture; you used to walk St. Paul's Ghirrchyard for a living," spoken of a womau with the intention of imputing that she was a swindler and a prostitute, are not actionable without special damage. Wilby v. Elston, S. C. B. 142; 7 D. & L. 143; 18

L. J., C. P. 320; 13 Jur. 706.

An action by husband and wife, for words repeated to him by the wife, imputing to her want of chastity, will not lie against the author of the slander. Parkius v. Scott, 1 H. & C. 153; 31 L. J., Ex. 331; 8 Jur. (x.s.) 593; 6 L. T. 394; 10 W. R. 562.

Immorality in Mon.]—To say of a man that he has the venereal disease is actionable, without proof of special damage; though it is otherwise if the words are spoken in the past tense. Bloodworth v. Gray, 8 Scott (8.K.) 9; 7 Man. & G. 334.

Words spoken of a tradesman, inputing to him criminal intercourse with a female employed in his trade, are not actionable (although hid to be spoken of him in his trade), unless they can be construed as imputing that he keeps a bawdyhouse. Bryne v. Ctopper, 5 M. & W. 249.

Clergymen.]-See post, col. 556.

Keeping House of Ill-fame.]—A, brought an action for speaking these words: "Your house is a bawdy-house, and no respectable people will live in it." The words proved were addressed to his wife, and were as follows: "You are a nuisance to live beside of; you are a bawd, and your house is no better than a bawdy-house".—Held, that the words were actionable without special damage, and substantially supported the declaration. Heeklo v. Regunds, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 114; I. L. T. 9. See Bryne v. Cooper, 5 M. & W. 249.

In an action for exhibiting an inscription opposite to the plaintiff's house, instanting that it was a house of ill-fame, it was alleged in the declaration that he carried on the business of a retailer of wines there:—Held, that such allegation might be rejected as surplusage, there being no averment that the publication of the inscription was of and concerning the plaintiff as such retailer of wines. Spail v. Massey, 2 Stark, 599.

In an action for suspending a lamp before the plaintiff's house, for a similar purpose, the parish in which the declaration states the house to have stood, and the tort to have been committed, is to be considered as venue merely, and not as local description, and it is immaterial whether there is any such parish in existence. Jefferies v. Duncombe, 2 Camp. 3; 11 East, 226.

— Or Disorderly House.]—A declaration alleging that the plaintift, being proprietor of rooms adapted for a dancing academy, the defendant falsely and maliciously published of the building and rooms, and of the plaintiff as the proprietor, that "the magistrates in quarter sessions having refused to renew a music and dancing licence to the proprietor, all such entertainments there carried on are illegal, and the proprietor needees himself thereby indictable for keeping a disorderly house, and every person found on the premises will be apprehended and dealt with according to law," by means of which premises he was prevented from letting the rooms, discloses a good cause of action. Higued, V. Buzzard, 3 H. & N. 217; 27 L. J., Ex., 355.

4. CAUSING RIDICULE OR CONTEMPT.

Generally, ]—On demurer the court will not construct he words complained of mitiori sensu, but will see if there is anything which by reasonable intendment conveys an imputation. Mavee v. Pigutt. Ir. R. 4 C. L. 54.

To make words libellous, the imputation must be one tending to bring the party into latred, ridicule or contempt, with a society whose standard of opinion the court cannot recognise. Ih.

Written slauder tending to bring a justy into public hatred and contempt is actionable. Woudard v. Doursing, 2 M. & Ry, 74. See also Clement v. Chiris, 9 B. & O. 172; 4 M. & R. 127; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 189.

It is a libel to publish in a newspaper a story of an individual calculated to render him Indicrous, although the may have previously told the same story of himself. Cook v. Ward, 6 Bing. 409; 4 M. & P. 99; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 126; 31 R. R. 456.

If words charged to be libellous may, in their ordinary acceptation and without the aid of extrinsic circumstances, be reasonably understood as derogatory to the character of the plaintiff, judgment cannot be arrested. Wahleyv. Healey, 7 C. B. 591; 18 L. J., C. P. 241—Ex. Ch.

So where the words used in terms general, and the innuendoes apply them to the plaintiff, and the jnry so finds, the judgment cannot be arrested.

charging Ingratitude.)—To charge a man will ingratitude is libellous, and such a charge may also be libellous notwithstanding that the facts upon which it is founded are stated and they do not support the charge. Cov. V. Lea, 38 L. J., Ex. 219; L. R. 4 Ex. 284; 21 L. T. 178.

— Heartless Conduct.]—An action lies for a libel stating that although the plaintiff was aware of the death of a person occasioned by his improperly driving a carriage against that in which another person was riding he had attended a public ball in the evening of the same day. Charchill (Lora) v. Hunt, I Chit. 480; 2 B. & Ald. 685; 22 R. R. 807.

The plaintiff declared upon a letter published in a newspaper, in which it was alleged that he, being a hotel and job coach proprietor by trade, and a Presbyterian in religion, had, from mere motives of intolerance, refused the use of his hearse for the funeral of bis own deceased servant, damage. Brown v. Smith, 13 C. B. 596; 1 because the body was about to be interred in C. L. R. +; 22 L. J., C. P. 151; 17 Jun. 807; 1 a Roman Catholic burying-ground;—Held, on W. R. 288. because the body was about to be interred in a Roman Catholic burying-ground:—Held, on demurrer, that the court could not so clearly see that the letter could not be, in any view, libellous as to justify them in withdrawing the case from a jury. Tenen v. M. Kenna, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 374.

- Misconduct. - To write to the members of a charitable institution, calling on them "to reject the unworthy claims of Miss H.," and staring that "she squandered away the money which she did obtain from the benevolent in printing circulars abusive of Commander D.," the secretary of the institution, is libellous. Houre v. Silverlocke, 12 Q. B. 625; 17 L. J., Q. B. 306: 12 Jur. 695.

Other Expressions. -- A count charging that the defendant wrote of the plaintiff that he was a "man Friday" to another, is bad, for want of an averment to shew, that, by the term Friday. as applied to the plaintiff, degradation and subserviency were intended to be imputed to him.

Forbes v. King, 1 D. P. C. 672.

Where one newspaper copied a libellous paragraph from another, adding the word "Fudge" at the close:—Held, in an action by the party libelled against the publisher of the paper in which the word "Fudge" was added, that it was for the jury to say whether the object was to vindicate the character of the party by the addition of the word, or whether it was only introduced for the purpose of creating an argument in case proceedings should be afterwards taken. Hunt v. Algar, 6 Car. & P. 245.

Allegorical terms of a defamatory character or of evil import, such as imputing to a person the qualities of the "frozen snake," in the fable, are libellous per se, without innucudoes to explain their meaning. Houre v. Silverlocke, 12 Q. B. 625 : 17 L. J., Q. B. 306 : 12 Jur. 695.

The respondent, a member of parliament, asked a question in the House of Commons implying that one C. had been guilty of improper conduct. C, wrote to the respondent to complain of the imputation on his character, and subsemently published his letter in a newspaper of which the appellants were proprietors. letter contained the following passage: "Supposing, for example, I sent a question . based on hearsny evidence to the effect that I heard, from a gentleman whom I would not think of doubting, that 'you' were in a state of delirium tremens. . . Or suppose I had added to that further stories I had heard that" you were "afterly intoxicated" in the streets. The respondent brought an action for libel against the proprietors of the newspaper :- Held, that the words were capable of being reasonably understood in a libellous sense, and that, therefore, there was a question to go to the jury. Ritchie v. Sexton, 64 L. T. 210; 55 J. P. 389-H. L. (Sc.)

A declaration, after alleging that the plaintiff had been in prison and had applied for money to pay his quarter's rent, stated that he was a "mere man of straw." thereby meaning that he was insolvent and in bad circumstances :- Held, that it was not necessary to explain the meaning of that term by any prefatory averment; and that, as the libellous matter contained but one charge, viz. insolvency, the defendant could not plead or demur to part only, Eaton v. Johns, D. (N.S.) 602.

Saying of an innkeeper, "He is a bankrupt, he is a will be in the "Gazette pauper," is actionable, though he was not liable to the bankrupt laws. Whittaker v. Bradley, 7 D. & R. 649: 5 B. & C. 180: 2 Car, & P. 146:

4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 125; 29 R. R. 212.

Where a plaintiff declared that he had been a woolstapler at Circnester, and was a brewer at Oxford, and that the defendant spoke of him as such trader these words:-"Mr. H. (the plaintiff) and B, have both been bankrupts, Mr. H, at Circneester," and gave no evidence of his having been a woolstapler, but only that he was a brewer at Oxford, and proved the words spoken to have been these :- "He was a bankrupt at Circnester" :- Held, that this proof sustained the allegation that the words were spoken of him in his trade of a brewer, for a trader at Oxford may be a bankrupt at Cirencester. Hall v. Smith. 1 M. & S. 287.

So an action will lie for saying of a trader that his cheques are dishonoured. Rolin v. Steward, 14 C. B. 595; 2 C. L. R. 759; 23 L. J.,

C. P. 148; 18 Jur. 536.

Action for speaking of the plaintiff the following words :- "I will bet 51, to 11, that Mr. J. (the plaintiff) was in a sponging-house within the last fortnight, and I can produce the man who locked him up; the man told me so him-And in answer to the following question from a bystander :- "Do you mean to say that Mr. J., brewer, of Roschill, has been to a sponging-house within the last fortnight for debt ? The defendant said: "Yes, I do." The jury found that the words were spoken of the plaintiff in the way of his trade :- Held, that the action was maintainable, and that the verdict was right; as it was plain, from the conversation, that the words were spoken of the plaintiff in his character of a brewer. Jones v. Littler, 7 M. & W. 423.

The plaintiffs were the "Capital and Counties Bank," which had a branch at Chichester, and other branches in Sussex and Hampshire. The defendants were brewers at Chichester, and had many customers and tenants occupying publichouses in different parts of the same counties. The enstomers and tenants were accustomed to eash cheques for persons who visited their houses and afterwards to hand the cheques, which were drawn on various banks, to the defendants' collector in payment of accounts. The collector used to pay the cheques in to the plaintiffs' account at the Chichester branch bank, where new manager of that branch bank objected to cash such cheques as were drawn on other branch banks. The defendants informed him that if he would not do so they should issue an order to their tenants not to cash cheques of the plaintiffs' collector with them. The manager replied that | Williams v. Smith, 58 L. J., Q. B. 21; 22 hemust certainly decline to each cheques on the | Q. B. D. 134; 59 L. T. 757; 37 W. R. 93; 52 other branches of the bank when presented by J. P. 823. parties unknown to him, though as a matter of grace he was quite willing to cash cheques to the defendants' representatives if properly introduced to him, with proof that they had power to sign for the defendants' firm, and that he was quite indifferent as to their sending out orders to their tenants not to eash the plaintiffs' cheques. Thereupon the defendants caused to be printed and sent to 137 of their customers and tenants aforesaid the following circular :-"Messrs. Henty and Sons hereby give notice that they will not receive in payment cheques drawn on any of the branches of the Capital and Counties Bank." The publication of this circular caused a run on the bank and loss to the plaintiffs. They brought an action for libel. The statement of claim set out the circular as the libel, and alleged by an immendo the meaning to be that the plaintiffs were not to be relied upon to meet the cheques drawn upon them, and that their position was such that they were not to be trasted to cash the cheques of their customers. At the trial the question of libel or no libel was left to the jury, with a direction that the circular, if, under the circumstances, libellous, was published on a privileged occasion, unless there was express malice. The jury failed to agree, and were discharged. On motion to enter judgment for the defendants:-Held, by the Common Pleas Division, that the circular was capable of the meaning alleged, and there was evidence to support the inmendo and also of express malice, and the case must go again to a jury. On appeal :-Held, reversing the decision of the court below (Thesiger, L.J., dissenting), that there was no evidence that the circular was defamatory in either a primary or a secondary sense, and that, even if there was any such evidence, the circular was issued on a privileged occasion, and there was no evidence of express malice. · Publication in Trade Newspaper of Extract from Register of Judgments. - The plaintiff was a hatter against whom a judgment had been obtained in the county court. The judgment remained unsatisfied pending an appeal, which appeal the plaintiff subsequently abandoned, and thereupon he satisfied the judgment, but omitted to get the fact of satisfaction entered on the register. The defendants published a trade newspaper, and in a column headed "The Gazette" appeared a list of judgments entered on the county court register, in which the name of the plaintiff with the judgment against him was inserted. The plaintiff brought an action for libel, alleging by innuendo that the insertion of his name in that column implied that the judgment remained unsatisfied, and that he was unworthy of credit. The defendants denied the innuendo. The judge held that the publication was capable of being defamatory, and a jury found a verdict for the plaintiff :-Held, that the meaning of the allegation was properly left for the jury; and that, the jury having found such to be its meaning, together with the fact that the statement was not true, the statement as published was a libel, butcher, and then charged the defendant with,

Publication of Register of Protests for Nonpayment of Bills of Exchange in Scotland.]—
The register of protests for non-acceptance and nonpayment of bills of exchange and promissory notes, established by the Scotch Acts of 1681 and 1696, and the 12 Geo. 3, c. 72, and 23 Geo. 3, c. 18, is a public document, to which everybody has a right of access, and the publication of which in a printed paper does not constitute a libellous publication. A person whose name was upon this register applied to the Court of Session for an interim interdiet to prevent, so far as his own name was concerned, the publication of a copy of the register. The court decreed for the application:—Held, by the lords, reversing that decree, that the interdict ought not to have been granted. Fleming v. Newton, 1 H. L. Cas.

Imputation of Dishonesty in Conduct of Business.]—The plaintiff inquired of the defendant if he had accused her of using false weights that it he had accessed her or using dustweights in her trade. The defendant, in the presence of a third person, answered, "To be sure I did; you have done it for years":—Held, that the latter words were actionable, and not privileged by reason of the plaintiff's inquiry, the evidence shewing that such inquiry was caused by a former statement of the defendant himself. Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 61; 14 L. J., Q. B. 197; 9 Jur. 370.

A defendant published of the plaintiffs, coal merchants, what purported to be a report of an inquiry before a board of guardians respecting the fraudulent conduct of their agent, who, in performance of a contract for best coals, had delivered at the workhouse coals of an inferior description, and (by falsifying the weighingmachine by means of a wedge) deficient in weight. The libel commenced, "The way in which Messus. P. (the plaintiffs) do things at Carilliford Incerting the wedge"; and ended Guildford. Inserting the wedge"; and ended with a recommendation of one of the guardians ; and ended to "have nothing more to do with Messrs, P." innuendo, "the defendant meaning thereby that the plaintiffs were cognisant of and had sanctioned improper and fraudulent conduct by their agent at Guildford, and were accustomed tocarry on their trade there improperly and fraudu-lently." The defendant pleaded a justification, following the innnendo, and saying that the coals delivered, as mentioned in the libel, were inferior in quality, as the plaintiffs well knew, and deficient in weight. The judge ruled that the defendant having by his plea alleged that the fraud of their agent was sanctioned by the plaintiffs, he must prove it; and he told the jury that they must find for the plaintiffs, unless they were satisfied that the defendant had shewn some complicity on their part in the misconduct and fraud imputed to their agent. The jury having found for the plaintiffs:—Held, that there was no misdirection, and that the libel publishing of the plaintiff, in the presence of maintainable, although the declaration alleges other persons, these words of and concerning the that he has suffered special damage in consendintiff:—"You are a bloody thief! Who stole quence of the publication, and although the F.'s-pigs! You did, you bloody thief, and I can allegation of the superiority of his own goods prove it: you poisoned them with mustard and brimstone." Innuendo, that the plaintiff was guilty of pig-stealing. The jury found that the words were not intended to impute a felony, but were spoken of the plaintiff in relation to his trade:-Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, as the words used did not show that they were spoken of him in relation to his trade. Sibley v. Tomlins, 4 Tvr. 90, Imputing Want of Experience.]-To impute to a person actually employed to execute certain work that he has no experience in the work in which he is so employed is a libel upon that person in the way of his profession or calling; and it is no justification to say that such person cannot shew any experience in work of the kind which, in the opinion of the person making the imputation, was requisite. B., an architect, had been employed by a certain committee to superintend and carry out the restoration of T. church; thereupon W., who had no manner of interest in the question of the employment of B, to execute the work, wrote a letter to a member of the committee, saying, "I see that the restoration of T. church has fallen into the hands of an architect who is a Wesleyan, and can have no experience in church work. Can you not do something to avert the irreparable loss which must be caused if any of the masonry of this ancient gem of art be ignorantly tampered with?" In an action for libel, W., by way of justification, alleged "that the facts contained in the letter are true, and the opinions expressed in it, whether right or wrong, were honestly held and expressed by W.." and "that B. cannot show experience in church works, i.e. of the kind which in the opinion of W. was requisite":—Held, that the letter was a libel on B. in the way of his profession or calling. Botterill v. Whytehead, 41 L. T. 588.

Imputation of Immorality.]—Words spoken of a tradesman, which imputed to him impropriety in moral conduct—the prostitution of a female employed by him in his shop—though alleged to be spoken of him in his trade, are not actionable, unless they can be construed to mean that he keeps an improper house. Brayne v. Cooper, 5 M. & W. 249; 9 L. J., Ex. 80.

— Against Wife of Trader.]—An action by a trader alleging that the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of his wife, who assisted him in his business, and in relation to such business, words accusing her of having committed adultery on the premises where he resided and carried on business, whereby he was injured in his business, and certain specified persons and others who had dealt with him ceased to do so, is maintainable on the ground that the injury to his business is the natural consequence of the words spoken which would prevent persons resorting to his shop. Riding v. Smith. 45 L. J., Ex. 281; 1 Ex. D. 91; 34 L. T. 500; 24 W. R. 487.

Disparagement of Trader's Goods, 1a person, in publishing an account of his own goods, compares them with those of another, describing his own as superior to them, but not making any false representation as to the quality quence of the publication, and although the allegation of the superiority of his own goods may be false. Young v. Macrae, 3 B. & S. 264; 32 L. J., Q. B. 6; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 538; 7 L. T. 354; 11 W. R. 63.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff carried on the business of an engineer, and was the inventor and registered proprietor of an original design for making impressions on articles manufactured in metal, and sold divers articles on which the design was used; that the plaintiff had sold and had on sale, in the way of his trade, articles and goods called "Self-acting tallow syphons or Inbricators"; and that the defendant published a libel of him in his trade, and of his design, and the plaintiff, as the inventor and manufacturer of the articles with the design thereon, and of the goods which he had sold and had on sale, and the plaintiff as the seller, as follows, viz.: "This is to caution parties employing steam power from a person (meaning the plaintiff) offering what he calls 'Self-acting tallowsyphons or lubricators' (meaning the design, and meaning the goods and articles which the plaintiff had so sold, and had ou sale), stating that he is the sole inventor, manufacturer and patentee, thereby monopolising high prices at the expense of the public. B. H. (the defendant) takes this opportunity of saying that such a patent does not exist, and that he has to offer an improved lubricator." "Those who have already adopted the Inbricators, against which R. H. would cantion, will find that the tallow is wasted, instead of being effectually employed as pro-fessed":—Held, that the words were not a libel on the plaintiff, either generally or in the way of his trade, but were only a reflection upon the goods sold by him, which was not actionable without special damage. Evans v. Harlow, 5 Q. B. 624; D. & M. 507; 13 L. J., Q. B. 120; 8 Jur. 571.

To publish of a tradesman, falsely and withont lawful occasion, that the goods in which he trades are inferior in quality to similar goods in which his rivals trade is actionable if special damage results. Western Counties Manure Co. v. Lawes Chemical Manure Co., 43 L. J., Ex.

171; L. R. 9 Ex. 218; 23 W. R. 5.

A plaintiff alleged that he carried on in an honest and lawful manner the trade of a manufacturer of bitters, and that the defendant libelled him in his trade, by publishing that the bitters were made to adulterate porter, per quod the plaintiff was ruined :-Held, that under the general issue, the defeudant might give in evidence that the plaintiff's trade was illegal, and that his bitters had been condemned in the Court of Exchequer. Manning v. Clement, 7 Bing. 362; 5 M. & P. 211; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P.

Words not per se Defamatory.]-Words not defamatory in their nature are not actionable, even though followed by special damage. Sheahan v. Ahearne, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 412.

A plaintiff complained of defamatory words spoken of him concerning his trade, alleging spoked of him concerning in trace, august special damage; the words proved reflected on him personally, and were not defamatory in their nature:—Held, that he had been rightly nonsuited. Ib.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiffs were and character of the latter, an action is not manufacturers of bags, and manufactured a bag dant published, concerning the plaintiffs in their business, the words following: "As we have not seen the "Bag of Bags," we cannot say that it is useful, or that it is portable, or that it is elegant. All these it may be, but the only point we can deal with is the title, which we think very silly, very slangy and very vulgar; and which has been forced upon the notice of the public ad nauscam" :- Held, by Mellor and Hannen, JJ., that it was a question for the jury whether the words did not convey an imputation on the plaintiff's conduct in their business, and whether the language went beyond the limits of fair criticism.-By Lush, J., that the words could not be deemed libellous, either upon the plaintiffs or upon their mode of conducting their business, Jenner v. A' Beckett, 41 L. J., Q. B. 14; L. R. 7 Q. B. 11; 25 L. T. 464; 20 W. R. 181.

It is not actionable to say of a stonemason that he is the ringleader of the nine hours' system and that he has rained a town by bringing about the nine hours' system, and that he has stopped several good jobs from being carried out being the ringleader of the nine hours' system; nor is it material that the person alluded to has suffered special damage, if such damage is not intended as a consequence when the words are uttered. Miller v. David, 43 L. J., C. P. 84; L. R. 9 C. P. 118; 30 L. T. 58; 22 W. R.

A statement false and malicious, but not in itself defamatory, made by one person in regard to another, whereby that other may probably under some circumstances, and at the hands of some persons, suffer damage, will not, even though damage has resulted in fact, support an action for defamation. 1b.

Action on the Case-Falsehood in Relation to Man's Business - General Loss of Business-Special Damage. ]-In an action brought for a malicious falsehood intentionally published in a newspaper about the plaintiff's business-a falsehood which is not actionable as a personal libel, and which is not defamatory in itselfevidence to shew that a general loss of business has been the direct and natural consequence of such falsehood is admissible, and, if uncontradieted, is sufficient to maintain the action. Ratcliffe v. Ecaus, 61 L. J., Q. B. 535; [1892] 2 Q. B. 524; 66 L. T. 794; 40 W. R. 578; 56 J. P. 837-C. A.

Plaintiff of two Trades-Slander Proved as to One. |-A declaration alleged that the plaintiffs was of two trades, and that the defendant, intending to injure him in his several trades, and to prevent persons from employing him in the way of his several trades, in a discourse which he had of and concerning the plaintiff in one of his trades, spoke :- Held, that though the plaintiff failed to prove he was of both trades, yet he might recover upon proof that he was of that trade concerning which the defendant was charged to have spoken the words. Figgins v. Cogswell, 3 M. & S. 369.

Slander as to Former Trade.]-A tradesman brought an action for slander for words spoken of him when he carried on another trade twelve years before. It was submitted that words of this nature are not actionable, unless they are applied to the trade which the plaintiff is carrying on at the time they are spoken :-Held, that which they called the "Bag of Bags," and the defen- | the action was maintainable. Wadsworth v.

b. Of Clergymen.

Conduct in Church.]-To say of a clergyman that he came to the performance of Divine service in a towering passion, and thus his conduct was calculated to make infidels of his congregation, is libellous. Walter v. Broyden, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 65; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 671; 12 L. T. 495; 13 W. R. 809.

Comments by a churchwarden upon the couduct of a clergyman, in taking meals in the vestry and in causing books to be sold in the church during service, are matters of public interest, and may lawfully be published, if they do not exceed the boundaries of fair criticism. Kelly v. Tinling, 35 L. J., Q. B. 231; L. B. 1 Q. B. 699; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 13 L. T. 255; 14 W. R. 51.

Imputation of Incontinence — No Action unless Plaintiff holds Office of Profit. ]—No action will lie for a verbal imputation of incontinency in a clergyman, unless he is beneficed, or holds some clerical office or employment of temporal profit. Gallwey v. Marshall, 9 Ex. 295; 2 C. L. R. 399; 23 L. J., Ex. 78; 2 W. R. 106.

Charge of making Converts by offers of Money.]—It is a libel to publish of a Protestant archbishop that he attempts to convert Catholic priests by offers of money and preferment.

Tuam (Archbishop) v. Itobeson, 5 Bing, 17;

M. & P. 32; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 190; 30 R. R.

Imputation of Dishonesty.]-A first count stated that the plaintiff was a clergyman of the united church of England and Ireland, and a vicar, and that the defendant spoke of the plaintiff, in his profession of a clergyman, and relating to himself, the following words :- "The day I came into residence, Dr. P. sent for me. I went and dined with him, and the wine must have been drugged, for I took but two glasses, and was quite stupified. While in this condition, Dr. P. put a bill into my hands, and requested me to sign it, as a security for the payment of 130l, per annum for reading for me at the new church. The bill, I think, was drawn for 2,500L, but, having been stupified with wine, I do not rightly remember." And the following words:-"You cannot suppose that I can visit a man who so cheated me at my first coming." A second count stated that the defendant spoke of the plaintiff, in his profession, the following words:—"Dr. P. placed before me a bill. I signed. I do not know for what amount it was, whether for 2,000l. or 3,000l., for I was completely pigeoned by Dr. P.":-Held, that the imputation conveyed by the words in the first count reflected on the plaintiff in his professional character, but the imputation conveyed by the words in the second count did not so reflect; and the damages having been taken on the two counts jointly, a venire de novo was awarded. Pemberton v. Colls, 10 Q. B. 461; 16 L. J., Q. B. 403; 11 Jur. 1011.

Dissenting Minister. ] - A declaration stated as inducement that the plaintiff was a Dissenting minister, and that he had been in a grant in support of a Roman Catholic college, trade in partnership with  $P_n$  that the partnership  $|Ih\rangle$ had been dissolved, and that reports had been circulated of and concerning the plaintiff, and the partnership accounts and money transactions; that the defendant said of the plaintiff, and of him in his ministry, and of and concerning the partnership, "Mr. H. is a rogue, and I can prove him to be so by the books at S. Mr. H. pretends to say he has been as good as a father to him, but you see he has been robbing him, he has cheated P. of 2,000l. ; I will so expose Mr. H. that he will not be able to hold his head up in T. pulpit, or any other." A second count was for saying, "Mr. H. has cheated P., his brother-in-law, of upwards of 2,000/,; I wonder how any respectable persons can countenance such a man by their presence; I have been advising some other persons to go to the chapel, as they would there hear plain honest Special damage was alleged, that divers persons discontinued their attendance at the plaintiff's chapel. It was proved that the plaintiff received 30%, per animm, and house rent, but not how that sum was to be raised, or the parties by whom it was to be paid. It was also proved that the attendance at the chapel was diminished, but why, or whether the seccelers were contributors to the funds of the chapel, did not appear. The libels complained of were written by the defendant to A., acting for the plaintiff, in the course of a correspondence arising out of an invitation to the defendant by A., with the plaintiff's concurrence, to investigate certain charges brought against the plaintiff :- Held, first, that the words in the first and second counts were not actionable per se, and could not be deemed to have been spoken of the plaintiff quâ minister in any sense that would subject the defendant to an action. Hopwood v. Thorn, 8 C. B. 293; 19 L. J., C. P. 94 : 14 Jur. 87. Held, secondly, that there was no evidence of special damage resulting from these words so as to support an action on them. Ib.

Charge of imposing Degrading Penance—Roman Catholic Priest. - A declaration stated that the plaintiff was a Roman Catholic priest, and priest of a chapel named, and that the defendant, intending to injure him in his offices, published of him in those offices a libel, which was set out. The alleged libel contained an account of a Roman Catholic having been seen performing a penance which was suggested to be of a degrading kind, and added that the party performing the penance said that his priest would not administer the sacrament to him till he had performed it, and that his priest was the plaintiff. The libel was not otherwise connected with the plaintiff, nor was there any allegation shewing how the enjoining of such a penance would affect the character of a Roman Catholic priest. The court arrested the judgment, holding that the publication was not, on the face of it, libellous, plaintiff was charged with imposing the penance, called to petition parliament against making duced, the imputations appeared to be that the

c. Of Solicitors.

Generally.]-The words, "He is more a lawyer than the devil," are actionable when spoken of an attorney. Day v. Buller, 3 Wils. 59.

So are the words, "He deserves to be struck off the roll." Phillips v. Jansen, 2 Esp. 624.
But the words, "I have taken out a judge's order to tax his bill; I will bring him to book, and have him struck off the roll," are not. "He has defrauded his creditors, and has been horsewhipped off the course at Doncaster," spoken of an attorney, are not actionable unless applicable to his conduct in his profession; notwithstanding it may tend to injure him morally and professionally. D'Oyley v. Roberts, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 835; 5 Scott, 40; 3 Hodges, 154; 6 L. J., C. P.

The plaintiff, an attorney, was employed to bring an action; the defendant was commissioned to adjust the accounts, and finding that an action was about to be commenced, wrote a letter to the plaintiff's client, blaming him for allowing the plaintiff to sue, and concluded by saying, "If you will be misled by an attorney, who only considers his own interest, you will have to repent it; you may think when once you have ordered your attorney to write he will not do any more without your further orders, but if you once set him about it he will go to any length without further orders": in an action for libel :- Held, that it was properly left to the jury whether this letter applied to the plaintiff individually, or to the profession at large; and that it was nunecessary to direct them to find whether it was a confidential or a malicious communication. Godson v. Home, 3 Moore, 223; 1 Br. & B. 7.

The words, "How lawyer Bishop treats his clients," heading a report of a case in one of the vice-chancellor's courts, are libellous. Bishop v. Latimer, 4 L. T. 775.

Although prefixed to a particular case, the words, being general, are a charge of treatment, in the manuer asserted, not of that elient only but of all clients, and therefore are not met by proof that the charge was justifiable in the particular instance. Ib.

A declaration that the plaintiff was an attorney, and had been employed by the parishioners of a parish as vestry clerk; that while he was such vestry clerk certain prosecutions were preferred against M. for certain misdemeanours, and that in furtherance of such proceedings, and to bring the same to a successful issue, certain sums of money belonging to the parishioners were appropriated to the discharge of the expenses and law charges incurred on account of the proceedings; yet, the defendant, intending to injure and refusing, even upon the assumption that the plaintiff in his profession of an attorney, and to cause him to be esteemed a fraudulent practiser to intend that the jury had evidence before them in his profession and in his office as vestry clerk, of an injury to the plathiff which the declara-tion did not shew, though some evidence to and to be a person unfit to be trusted therein, that purpose was in fact given. Hearne v. be suspected that he had fraudilently appro-shneed, 12 A. & E. 719; 4 P. & D. 696; 6 Jur. printed money belonging to the parish, falsely and maliciously published of and concerning him, If the publication had been libellous, it and of and concerning his conduct in his office as would not have been justifiable on the ground that it was promulgated at a public meeting, aforesaid, the libel. When the libel was proplaintiff had appropriated money belonging to the parishioners in discharge of the express of the presentions after they had temparated:— Held, that of we had a second temperature of the Held, that of we had a second temperature of the school of the second temperature of the mission of the presentions, and the same, whether the money was so applied before or after the termination of the presentions, and the averment that the libel was published of and concerning the matters aforesaid not making it necessary to prove literally that the libel did relate to all the natters previously stated. May v. Brown, 4 D. & R. 670; 3 B. & C. 118; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B.

It is not libellous to write of an attorney that he did not present his bill for fifteen years, and having made his ellent's will, presented it after his death to his representatives. Revers v. Templar, 2 Jur. 137.

Sharp Practice.]—It is libellons to impute to an attorney "sharp practice" in his profession. Beydell v. Jones, 7 D. P. C. 210; 4 M. & W. 446; 1 H. & H. 408.

Gertificate not taken out.]—It is no objection to maintraining an action for libel on an attorney that it appears that, during the time of the grievances stated to take out his certificate for more than a year, as he may still sue as an attorney for damages in consequence of a libel imputing improper conduct to him in his character as such Junes v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235; 25 R. R. 714.

d. Medical Practitioners.

Immorality.]—In an action for defamation, for words charging a physician with adultery, it is not sufficient (unless special damage is alleged) to state that the misconduct was imputed to him in his profession. Agrev. Craven, 4 N. & M. 220; 2 A. & E. 2; 4 L. J., K. B. 35.

Breach of Professional Etiquetta, 1—A defendant pleaded truth in justification of a libed, part of which alleged that a physician refusing to act with the plaintiff, also a physician, had "honourably and faithfully discharged his duty to his medical brethren"—Held, that it was not competent to the defendant to offer in cytidence the opinion of medical witnesses on this head. Ramaday v. Ryan, 9 Bing, 333; 2 M. & Sc. 421; 2 L. J., C. P. 2 L. J., C. 2 L.

It is no libel to write of a physician that he is alleged that, in the opinion of the profession, meeting homecopathists in consultation; though it is alleged that, in the opinion of the profession, meeting homecopathists in consultation is improper and is against criquette. Notiner is it a libel, although alleged, in addition to the above, that meeting homecopathists is also disgraceful in the opinion of the profession. Clay v. Roberts, 9 Jun. (28.3, 850; 8 L. T. 397; 11 W. R. 649.

charges of Non-Qualification and Want of Skill.]—In an action for words spaken of the plantist as a physician, importing a denial that the plantist is duly qualified to practise as a physician, the plantist must, under the general issue, prove the inducement in the declaration alleging that the plantist exercised the profession of and was a physician and show not only that he practised as a physician but also that he practised lawfully. Collinar. Charagie, 8 N. & M. 703; 1 A. & E. E52; 8 L. J. K. B. 196

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff was a medical practitioner, and stated the libel to have been published of and concerning him in his practice. No evidence was given of any Heence or authority to practise, nor was the plaintiff mentioned in the libel as a regular medical man, but merely as "physician extraordinary to several ladies of distinction," and "doctor, or rather quack": "-Held, that this did not withdraw the claim of damages in the medical capacity from the consideration of the jury, but that they might give such damages as they thought right, both for that and the libel on the plaintiff's private character. Long v. (Bubb, 5 Car. & P. 55.

In an action for slander the declaration alleged that the plaintiff, an apothecary, having attended a child of the defendant, which was ill with a view to heal and cure such illness, and having, with the consent of the defendant, made up and administered medicines, and amongst others a saline injection, and the child having died of the sickness aforesaid, the defendant published of and concerning the plaintiff the following words:—"He killed my child; it was the saline injection that did it"; innuendo, that the defendant meant that the plaintiff had been guilty of feloniously killing the child. The defendant pleaded a justification, for that the plaintiff did injudiciously, indiscreetly and improperly, and contrary to his duty in that behalf, administer a saline injection to the child; and that the death of the child was caused or occasioned, or greatly accelerated, by the saline injection :-Held, that the plea was bad, for that it confessed the meaning imputed to the words spoken, that the plaintiff had been guilty of manslaughter, and afforded no instification for such an allegation. Edsull v. Russell, 4 Man. & G. 1090; 5 Scott (N.R.) 801; 2 D. (N.S.) 641; 12 L. J., C. P. 4; 6 Jnr. 96,

A second court alleged the words to be, "He made up the medicines wrong, through jealonsy; because I would not allow him his own judgment"; innucedo, that the plaintiff had intentionally, and from jealonsy and improper motives, made up the medicines in a wrong and improper manner, and that such medicines were, to his knowledge, unfit and improper:—Held, that it imputed no criminal offence. Ib.

A third count stated the words to be, "Mr. P. told me that he had given my child too much mercury, and poisoned it, otherwise it would have got well"; immendo, that the plaintiff had, through ignorance or inattention, administered to the child such an excessive quantity of mercury that the mercury had acted as poison and caused the death of the child. A plen that the plaintiff did, wrongfully and improperly, and contrary to his duty, administer to the child an excessive proportion of mercury, having reference to the state and condition of the child, neither confesses nor avoids the charge, and is therefore bad. 1b.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff was a suggeon and an accountent and that he had been employed to attend, and had attended, on R. in her confinement, and that the defendant, in a discourse with R., of and concerning the plaintiff in relation to his profession, spoke and published the following words — "I wonder you had him to attend you. Do you know him? He is not an apothecary; he has not passed any examination; he is a bad character; none of the medical men here will meet him. There have been many imquests had npon persons who have dided because died that the plaintiff has attended, and there imputing to him misconduct and consequent have been inquests held upon them":—Held, unfitness for the office, unless the imputation that the words as amended were actionable, Southee v. Denny, 1 Ex. 196; 17 L. J., Ex. 151. Semble, that the words "he is a bad character, none of the medical men here will meet him, were actionable, as importing the want of a necessary qualification for a surgeon in the discharge of his professional duties. Ib.

e. Of Others.

Candidates and Members of Parliament. ]-Defamatory words, which are actionable in themselves, are not the less so because they are alleged to have been spoken of one as a candidate to serve in parliament. Harwood v. Astley, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 47; 8 R. R. 756.

There is no such privileged relation existing between parliamentary candidates and the electors as will justify any of the latter in publishing statements injurious to the character of the former. Duncombe v. Daniell, 8 Car. & P. 222; 2

Jur. 32; 1 W. W. & H. 101.

Charging a member of parliament with want of sincerity is not actionable. Onslow v. Horne, 2 W. Bl. 750 : 3 Wils, 177.

Military Officer-Publication of Name in Pension List. ]-A military officer may be compulsorily removed by the government to the pension list, although he may originally have entered the service under a regulation that he should continue therein so long as he was physically and mentally efficient, and his removal is not on account of inefficiency in these respects. No action will lie against the Secretary of State in respect of such removal. And the publication in the "Gazette" of the fact that an officer has been placed on the pension list is not a libel in respect of which an action can be maintained against the Secretary of State where there is no allegation that he was personally cognisant thereof, and that the matter was published maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause. Grant v. Secretary of State for India, 46 L. J., C. P. 681; 2 C. P. D. 445; 37 L. T. 188; 25 W. R. 848.

Holders of Offices not of Profit-Magistrate.] —It is actionable without the aid of a prefatory averment to write of a maistrate, that, "as chairman of a finance committee, he audited accounts containing items of upwards of 12,000l. for the nominal purpose of furnishing lodgings, plate, &c., for the judges, but which expenditure was in reality to find accommodation for the magistrates, as the sheriff always found the judges suitable lodgings, without putting the county to any expense. Adams v. Merodew, 3 Y. & J. 219.

- Alderman-Imputation of Dishonesty in Office.]—A verbal imputation of dishonesty or corruption in the exercise of the office of an alderman is actionable without proof of special damage, although the office is not one of profit. Booth v. Arnold, 64 L. J., Q. B. 443; [1895] 1 Q. B. 571; 14 R. 326; 72 L. T. 310; 43 W. R. 360; 59 J. P. 215—C. A.

he had attended them." At the trial the words office of profit, cannot in the absence of special proved, as to the inquests, were "several have damage maintain an action of slander for words relates to his conduct in the office, or unless, if true, it would lead to his removal therefrom. Alexander v. Jenkins, 61 L. J., Q. B. 634; [1892] 1 Q. B. 797; 66 L. T. 391; 40 W. R. 546; 56 J. P. 452—C. A.

The plaintiff was elected town councillor of S. The defendants, after the election, but before the plaintiffs had taken the oaths or acted, spoke words of him imputing that he was an habitual drunkard and unfit for the council :- Held, that the words were not actionable without proof of special damage. Ib.

Treasurer of Relief Committee. ]-The holding of the office of treasurer of a relief committee for the purpose of relieving the poor of a parish is not such a circumstance as to dispense with an averment of special damage where the words do not impute an indictable offence. Currigan v. Ryan, 15 W. R. 61.

Holders of Offices of Profit.]-Where words are spoken of a person in an office of profit which have a natural tendency to occasion the loss of such office, or which impute the want of some necessary qualification for, or some misconduct in it, they are actionable. Lumley v. Allday, 1 Tyr. 217; 1 C. & J. 301; 9 L. J. (0.8.) Ex. 62.

- Clerk of Gas Company. Secus, if a clerk to a gas-light company is charged with immoral conduct with a woman, that imputation having no reference to his office, the words not being laid to have been spoken of him in his office as clerk, nor proved to have occasioned him any special damage. Ib.

— Secretary of Railway Company.]—An article in a magazine expressing the writer's sorrow at seeing the correspondence between the secretary of a railway company and another person published, and observing that had invention been taxed to blast the character and throw a shade over the honour of the company it could have devised nothing more effective than this stupid correspondence and still more stupid publication; and also imputing trickery and deception to the secretary, and, in reference to an answer he was about to put in chancery, reminding him that shuffling and low cunning would not do in that court :- Held, libellous after verdict, in an action by the secretary, where the declaration merely alleged the object and intention of the defendant to be to injure him in his character of secretary to the company, but did not contain any special averments or innucudoes. Robertson v. Wylde, 7 L. J., C. P. 196.

Superintendent of Police.]—Words spoken of a superintendent of police—"I saw a letter re-specting an officer of the Leeds police force who was superior in rank to A. B., and who had been guilty of conduct unfit for publication"-are not actionable without special damage, the conduct imputed to the party not being connected on the face of the declaration with his official character. James v. Brook, 9 Q. B. 7; 16 L. J., Q. B. 17; 10 Jur. 541.

— Town Councillor—Imputation of Mis-conduct.]—The holder of an office, not being an be maintained by a lessee or a rentor of tolls, for words spoken of him in his character of contractspoken. Bellumy v. Burch, 16 M. & W. 590.

Shipowner - Imputation that Ship unseaworthy, -A statement in a newspaper that a ship, of which the plaintiff was owner and master, and which he had advertised for a voyage to the East Indies, was not a seaworthy ship, and that Jews had bought her to take out convicts, is a libel on the plaintiff in his trade and business, for which he may recover damages without proof of malice on an allegation of special damage. Ingram v. Lawson, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 212; 8 Scott, 471; 9 L. J., C. P. 145; 4 Jur. 151.

And, in an action brought for such a libel, the ordinary profits of a voyage are the proper measure of damages. Ib.

Master Mariner-Charge of Drunkenness. ]-Words imputing to a certificated master mariner drunkenness whilst in command of a vessel at sea, are actionable without special damage. Irwin v, Brandwood, 2 H. & C. 960; 33 L. J., Ex. 257; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 370; 9 L. T. 772; 12

Stock Broker, ]—A declaration affecting the damage. It. plaintiffs in their business as sharebrokers, after stating that they had bought, as sharebrokers, on account of the defendant, shares in a railway company, set out the libel, as published in a newspaper, which, after commencing with the word "wanning," proceeded to inform the plaintiffs that the shares so bought, under a false representation of the market, at 8L per share, and sanctioned by the defendant, were being sent to the committee of the railway company with instructions to return the deposited balance to the defendant; and that, unless the plaintiffs arranged to return such deposit-money to the defendant, with certain expenses, the defendant would adopt legal measures. The libel then stated the following :- "The amount will be taken by instalments, on security being deposited with any bankers but those who recommended C. & Co." (meaning the plaintiffs) :-Held, that in the absence of any colloquium or immendo explaining the meaning to be attached to the words the publication was not libellous. Capel v. Jones, 4 C. B. 259; 11 Jur. 396.

In a declaration the plaintiff stated that he was a jobber or dealer in the funds or stocks, and as such had been accustomed lawfully to contract; that the defendant said of him as such jobber or dealer," He is a lame duck," meaning that he had not fulfilled his contracts in respect of the said stocks or funds; in consequence of which divers persons refused to fulfil their contracts with him, and he was prevented from fulfilling his contracts with other persons :- Held, that it did not sufficiently appear either that the words were spoken of lawful contracts, or that the plaintiff was a lawful jobber or dealer in the funds; and that the declaration was therefore bad. Morris v. Langdule, 2 Bos. & P. 284.

Owner of Newspaper-Charge of Vulgarity and Low Circulation. ] - A paragraph in one newspaper charging another with being vulgar or scurrilous, is not actionable ; but, aliter, where it asserts it to be low in circulation, as addressed to persons who are disposed to advertise in it. Heriot, v. Stuart, 1 Esp. 437.

Domestic Servant. |-A delaration alleged that ing for tolls, after he has cassed to contract for the defendant spoke and published of the plain-renting the tolls respecting which the words are spoken. Bellumy v. Burch, 16 M. & W. 590. to her employment: "I was so incensed with that girl for coming to hire with me, after having had a miscarriage at Mrs. B.'s house, and sent away by her in a car; and she afterwards to give the girl a good discharge" :-- Held, that the words were actionable per se, as relating to the plaintiff's employment. Conners v. Justice, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 451.

> Gamekeeper.-Spoken words imputing to a man misconduct in his office or in his trade are actionable, although the office or the trade is not one of which the court can take judicial notice. Finlger v. Newcamb, 36 L. J., Ex. 169; L. B. 2 Ex. 327; 16 L. T. 595; 15 W. R. 1181. notice. A declaration alleging that it was the duty of the plaintiff, as a gamekeeper, not to kill foxes. that he was employed on the terms of his not doing so, and that a person killing foxes would not be employed as gamekeeper; and that the defendant, knowing the premises, falsely and maliciously said of the plaintiff, as such gamekeeper, that he killed foxes is a good declaration, even without an allegation of special

> Persons carrying on Illegal Businesses. ]-A person who pursues an illegal avocation, such as keeping a public room for pugilistic exhibitions, cannot maintain an action for a libel regarding his conduct in such avocation. Hunt v. Bell, 7 Moore, 212; 1 Bing. 1; 25 R. R. 563.

> An action does not lie for anything written against a party, touching his conduct in an illegal transaction; but for misconduct imputed to him in any matter independently of the illegal transaction, though arising out of it, an action lies. Yrisari v. Clement, 3 Bing. 432; 11 Moore, 308; 2 Car. & P. 223; 4 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 128.

6. COMMENT ON MATTERS OF PUBLIC INTEREST.

Generally.]-Where an action of libel is brought in respect of a comment on a matter of public interest the case is not one of privilege, properly so called, and it is not necessary in order to give a cause of action that actual malice on the part of the defendant should be proved. The question whether the comment is or is not actionable depends upon whether in the opinion of the jury it goes beyond the limits of fair criticism. Campbell v. Spottiswoode (3 B. & S. 769) approved and followed. Henwood v. Harrison (L. R. 7 C. P. 606) dissented from. Mericule v. Carson, 20 Q. B. D. 275; 58 L. T. 331; 86-W. R. 231; 52 J. P. 261—C. A.

The fair and honest discussion of, or comments upon, a matter of public interest is in point of law privileged, and is not the subject of an action unless the plaintiff can establish malice. Henwood v. Harrison, 41 L. J., C. P. 206; L. R. 7 C. P. 606; 26 L. T. 938; 20 W. R. 1000.

A writer, in commenting upon matters of publie interest, is protected and excused if, in writing honestly and with reasonable moderation and self-control, he makes, through mistaken inferences on the matters of fact involved, defamatory statements, the truth of which he cannot substantiate. Hunter v. Sharpe, 4 F. & F. 983; 15 L. T. 421.

by way of advertisement, the effect of which not guilty, may adduce evidence to shew that the is to represent that he is in possession of a specific remedy for a disease hitherto regarded as incurable, are matters of public interest and fair and proper subject for public comment.

If a public writer in the press writes that which turns out to be not founded upon the inference he draws, and is unable to instify the conclusion at which he has arrived, yet if he has acted in good faith in the discharge of his duty, bringing to it the amount of care, reason and judgment which a man who takes upon himself as pertaining to fair description or criticism on a to discuss public questions is bound to bring, so that the jury is of opinion that he has acted reasonably and properly, he will be privileged, although he may turn out to be in error. Risk Allah Bey v. Whitehurst, 18 L. T. 615.

Fair Criticism of Work of Art not actionable -Character of Author not to be attacked. Whatever is fairly written of a work, and can be reasonably said of it, or of its author as connected with it, is not actionable unless it appears that the party, under the pretext of criticising the work, takes an opportunity of attacking the character of its author. Macleud v. Wakeley, 3 Car. & P. 311.

A fair, reasonable and temperate, though an erroneous criticism of works of art, not written for the purpose of hurting the artist in his profession, is not a libel. Soune v. Knight, M. & M. 74; 81 R. R. 714.

It is not libellous to ridicule a literary composition, or the author of it, in as far as he has personal slander, he cannot maintain an action for any damage he may suffer in cousequence of being thus ridiculed. Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. 355, n.; 10 R. R. 701, u.

If a critic, in criticising a work, goes out of his way to attack the private character of the author this is a libel. Fraser v. Berkeley, 7 Car. & P. 621.

The editor of a public newspaper is not justified in calumnious attacks on the private charae-Stark, 93: 19 R. R. 688.

Work of Art—Tradesman's Advertisement.]— A tradesman's advertisement, placard, or handbill, is open to fair criticism and remark, as a book or as a work of art. Paris v. Lory, 9 C. B. Gree (x.s.) 342; 30 L. J., C. P. 11; 7 Jun. (x.s.) 289; 340, 3 L. T. 323; 9 W. R. 71. S. C., at Nisi Prius, 2 F. x F. 71.

Extent of Fair Criticism. ]-The publication of a critique upon a literary work, conched in terms of condemnation, however strong, and even though imputing profamity or indecency, will be excused unless it appears that it is so unfair and reckless in its character that it may be presumed to have been published, not honestly, but maliciously. Strauss v. Francis, 4 F. & F. 1107; 15 L. T. 674.

It is not libellous fairly and honestly to criticise a painting publicly exhibited, though the terms of censure used may be strong, such as calling the painting a daub. Thomson v. Shackell, M. & M.

187 : 31 R. R. 728.

In an action for a libel upon the plaintiff in being in the habit of publishing immoral and complained of to be no more than a fair comment

Publications issued by a medical practitioner foolish books, the defendant, under the plea of supposed libel is a fair stricture upon the general run of the plaintiff's publications. Tubart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. 350; 10 R. R. 698.

An article in a newspaper describing leaden figures "reported to have been found in the Thunes," and sold as antiquities, as being of recent fabrication and stigmatising the sale as an attempt at deception and extortion, is not actionable, the alleged libel being aimed, not at any particular individual, but at a class, and being privileged, in the absence of evidence of malice, matter of public interest. Eastwood v. Holmes, 1 F. & F. 347.

In an action for a libel in a newspaper, imputing to the plaintiff, the proprietor and editor of Zadkiel's Almanack, that not only was he connected with that foolish publication, but that he gulled the public by means of a magic ball of crystal, by which he pretended to tell what was going on in the other world, and that he took money for those profane acts, and made a good thing of it :- Held, first, that within the scope of fair discussion a public writer is not liable unless the writes unreasonably, recklessly, and malicionsly. Marrison v. Beleher, 3 F. & F. 614.

Held, secondly, that this immunity does not extend beyond the discussion of the published writings or public or undoubted acts of the plaintiff, and does not extend to the gratuitous assertion of matters of fact for which there is no foundation. Ih.

Held, thirdly, that the privilege had extended to a denunciation of the almanack and the use of embodied himself with his work; and if he is not the ball as an imposture; but that if the libel followed into domestic life for the purpose of meant that the plaintiff had made money by a conscions and fraudulent imposture, by use of the magic ball, that was beyond the right of fair disenssion, Ib.

It is not within the limits of privileged criticism to print of an exhibitor of flowers, in observations touching the exhibition:—"The name of G. is to be rendered famous in all sorts of dirty work; the tricks by which he, and a few like him, used to secure prizes, seem to have ter of the writer of another. Stuart v. Lorell, 2 been broken in upon by some judges more honest than usual. If G. be the same man who wrote an impudent letter to the Metropolitan Society, he is too worthless to notice: if he be not the same man, it is a pity two such beggarly souls could not be crammed into the same carease, Green v. Chapman, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 92; 5 Scott,

> Comment on Petitioner to Parliament. ]-Quere, whether a petition to parliament on matters of general importance is such a publication as renders the petitioner an object of fair eriticism and comment. Dunne v. Anderson, 3 Bing, 88; 10 Moore, 407; R. & M. 287; 28 R. R.

The plaintiff, a surgeon and proprietor of a medical institution, having petitioned the House of Commons against quacks and empirics, the defendant, the proprietor of a periodical publication, in commenting upon, and criticising the petition, used expressions charging him with ignorance of his profession generally, and of chemistry in particular. The plaintiff sued the defendant, and declared against him for libelling him in his profession of a surgeon; and the jury his business of a bookseller, accusing him of were directed that if they thought the writing on the petition, it was no libel; and that they were to consider whether the publication imputed to the plaintiff ignorance in his profession of a surgeon, or merely ignorance of chemistry; and that if they thought the latter, their verdict must be for the defendant. The jury having accordingly found a verdict for him, the court granted a new trial. Ib.

Criticism of Scheme submitted to the Admiralty. ]-A navál architect, in 1867, submitted to the Admiralty proposals for the conversion of the old wooden line-of-battle ships of the navy into ironclad turret-ships. His proposals were considered by the Admiralty, and rejected. In September, 1870, the ironclad turret-ship "Captain," whilst on a cruise, capsized and sank with all hands. This disaster caused great excitement and anxiety in the public mind; and, with a view to explain the circumstances under which the "Captain" had been sent to sea, as well as the general course pursued by the board with reference to the placing the navy in a proper condition to meet the exigencies of modern naval warfare, a minute was prepared by the first lord of the Admiralty for presentation to parliament during the approaching session. This minute referred to and criticised the plans of conversion proposed by the plaintiff; and in a note was inserted a letter upon the subject addressed to the board in September, 1867, by the controller of the navy, which letter contained this passage: "These plans would have no weight whatever from the known antecedents of their author, but they derived weight from the approval of Mr. Watts, the late chief constructor of the Navy, and concluded by recommending their rejection. The minute was, by order of the lords of the Admiralty, printed by the Queen's printer; and copies of it were publicly sold by him before the meeting of parliament. At the trial of an action for this alleged libel, the judge—assuming the letter to be prima facie libelions, and it being conceded that the publication was without malice -nonsuited the plaintiff, on the ground that it was a fair criticism upon a matter of public and national importance, and therefore privileged :-Held, by Willes, Byles and Brett, JJ., that the nonsuit was right; but by Grove, J., that the publication was not privileged as being of public and national importance or interest, within the limits marked by previous decisions, and that it was not in the nature of a fair criticism of matter before the public, or, at all events, that it was not so clearly within the limits of such privilege as to be removed from the consideration of a jury. Henwood v. Harrison, 41 L. J., C. P. 206; L. R., 7 C. P. 606; 26 L. T. 938; 20 W. R.

Comment on Public Characters, ]—A welllatown public character in addressing meetings held to protest against a bill recently introduced into parliament, had burnt the bill and predicted much popular irritation in event of its being passed. Thereupon the defendant published or him that he was a political cheap jack, half booby and half humbug, and had defect the government and threatened civil discord, and that he was only seeking by agitation to obtain a government appointment :—Held, a question for the jury, whether this was fair comment or not, and a rule to set aside, as against evidence, a verdict for the defendant, was refused. Odger v. Mortimer, 28 L. T. 472.

In an action for a libel it is only on the very strongest grounds that the court will set aside, as against evidence, a verdict for the defendant on the question of fair comment upon the conduct of public men. 1b.

À barrister, who, after becoming a member of parliament, was made a Queen's counsel, and also a recorder, having been partly acquitted and partly censured by the benchers of his fun, after an inquiry into his conduct, private as well as professional; and having afterwards, on a public platform, alluded to their sentence as one of acquittal; upon which they published their sentence, and he published a protest and a letter, in which he impugned their proceedings and decision as unjust. A person, in a legal review, published an article fairly setting forth these documents, with comments, and also a narrative of the plaintiff's career, mixed up with some general reflections on his character, and particular observations, suggesting that he had obtained his appointments by parliamentary influence or services:—Held, first, that the matter of those appointments was a legitimate subject of public comment. Segment vs. Butterworth, 3 F. & E. 372.

Held, secondly, that even the private conduct of the plaintiff might, as tending to shew whether he was a man of honour and integrity, be also legitimate subject of such comment. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that as he had in a public speech alluded to all these matters, they were all legitimate subjects for such comments as were fair, and not, in substance, going beyond the matters which were the subject of comment. 1b.

The right to comment upon the public acts of public men is a right of every citizen, and is not the peculiar privilege of the press. Kune v. Mulcains, Ir. R. 2 C. L 402.

— On Conduct of Magistrates.]—A commentary in a newspaper upon the conduct of magistrates in dismissing a charge is privileged. Hibbins v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 243; 11 L. T. 541.

— On Conduct of Clergymen.]—The conduct of public worship by a clergyman, and the uses to which he puts his church and vestry, are lawful subjects of public comment, so as to excuse, under the plea of not guilty, the publication of matter otherwise libellous. Kelly v. Tinlings, 35 L. J., Q. B. 281; L. R. 1 Q. B. 699; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 13 L. T. 255; 14 W. R. 73.

The conduct and management by the clergyman of a parish of a charitable society in a parish, from the benofits of which dissenters are, by his sanction, excluded, is not lawful subject of public comment, so as to excuse, under the plea of not guilty, the publication of untrue and injurious matter respecting the clergyman in relation to the charity. Guthercole v. Midll, 15 M. & W. 319, 15 L. J. Ex. 179; 10 Jun. 387.

— On a Waywarden.]—No criticism on a person holding a public office, as that of a waywavden, is libellous nuless malice is shewn. Harle v. Catherall, 14 L. T. 801.

On Public Officer removable by Privy Council. —An action of libel may be maintained for statements in a letter addressed to the privy council injurious to the character of the plaintiff, a public officer removable by the privy council, upon proof of express malice in the defendant. Proctor v. Webster, 55 L. J., Q. B. 150; 16 Q. B. D. 112; 33 L. T. 753.

paper of a report of an inspector of charities under the Charitable Trusts Act, containing a letter, written some years before, reflecting on the plaintiff in his management of a college :-Held, that as the matter was one of public interest, the defendant was not liable, provided he published it fairly, from an honest desire to afford the public information, and that comments upon it were only material as evidence of malice. Cow v. Freney, 4 F. & F. 13.

—— On a Landlord. ]—A plea to an action of libel averring that plaintiff's dealings with his tenantry were a matter of public notoriety, and had formed the subject of a letter written on behalf of the tenantry by the parish priest to the plaintiff, and that the whole subject of laws of landlord and tenant was now a matter of public interest and discussion, discloses no grounds of justification, and was not permitted by the court, on an application to plead several defences under s. 57 of the Common Law Procedure Act (Ireland) Hogan v. Sutton, 16 W. R. 127.

- On Employers of Labour. ]-An article in a newspaper purporting to give account of the homes provided by the plaintiffs for their workmen, and representing them as in an insanitary condition and searcely fit for habitation, relates to a matter of public interest, and is, therefore, not libellous if it does not exceed fair comment. South Hetton Coal Co. v. North Eastern News Association, 63 L. J., Q. B. 293; [1894] I. Q. B. 133; 9 R. 240; 69 L. T. 844; 42 W. R. 322; 58 J. P. 196.

Comment on Circulation of Newspaper. |-The circulation and position of a newspaper are not matters of general public interest, and a discussion on the subject is not protected if libellous. Latimer v. Western Morning News Co., 25 L. T.

On Evidence in Court. ]-The right of free discussion on a subject of public interest excuses the publication of defamatory matter, provided it appears to have been published not in that unfair or improper spirit, that is, in the spirit of intemperate and inconsiderate imputations which implies malice, in a legal sense, but in the spirit of fair discussion. And the right of free discussion extends to comments in a journal upon sworn evidence given on a subject of public interest, even to the extent of imputing that such evidence is unfounded, or even ineautious or careless; but if it is imputed, apparently without any fair foundation, that it is wilfully, muliciously, or recklessly false, then there is an excess, which is evidence of what the law deems malice, and which takes away the protection or excuse arising from the exercise of the right of free discussion. Hedley v. Barlow, 4 F. & F.

A writer in a newspaper may comment upon proceedings in a court of justice, if he does so fairly and honestly, upon the facts in evidence; but if he departs from, or misrepresents or perverts the facts, or gives a one-sided and a partial view of them, so as to convey false and calumnious reflections upon personal or professional character, or uses epithets of contumely or ob-

— On Manager of College.]—In an action evidence of unfairness which will take away for libel, consisting of a publication in a news-the privilege and render him liable to an action. Woodgate v. Ridout, 4 F. & F. 202.

The evidence of a witness given upon oath in a public court of justice is a matter of public interest and importance, and a legitimate subject for fair and bonâ fide comment. Kane v. Mulrains, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 402.

On Place of Public Entertainment. ]-Theeditor of a newspaper may fairly comment on any place of public entertainment, and a paragraph in which he does so is not libellous. Dibdin v. Swan, 1 Esp. 28; 5 R. R. 717.

But if it is proved that the comment is unjust, is malevolent, and exceeds the bounds of fair opinion, it is a libel and therefore actionable. Ib, Comment involving Criticism of Conduct of Individuals. ]-Newspaper criticisms on the conduct or motives of an individual will be held privileged if the criticism has been made with an honest belief in their justice, and the writer has brought to the task a reasonable degree of judgment and moderation, so that the result may be what a jury shall doem, under the circumstances of the case, a fair and legitimate criticism on the conduct and motives of the party who is the object of criticism. Wason v. Walter, 8 B. & S. 671; 38 L. J., Q. B. 34; L. R. 4 Q. B. 73; 19; L. T. 409; 17 W. R. 169.

In an action by a musical critic for a libel imputing to him that he used his influence as a critic to extort the gratuitous services of eminent artists at his concerts, it appeared that he did obtain their services gratuitously, they of course knowing that he was a critic :-Held, that although the defendant might have been excused in commenting upon the system in severe terms, as likely to bias the criticism and have an unfair influence, yet that the imputation in the libel went far beyond the limits of fair discussion, and that a justification of it not proved was an aggravation. Ryan v. Wood,. 4 F. & F. 735.

The publication by a reform committee of a report imputing to the plaintiff that he had been guilty of bribery is not privileged within the rule of law allowing discussion of matters of public interest, the privilege not extending to imputations upon personal character, going, in the opinion of the jury, beyond the necessity for-discussion of the public question. Wilson v. Reed, 2 F. & F. 149.

- Belief in Truth of Imputations.]-When a writer in a newspaper or elsewhere, in commenting on public matters, makes imputations on the character of the individuals concerned in them which are false and libellous, as being beyond the limits of fair comment, it is no defence that he bona fide believed in the truth of these imputations. Campbell v. Spottiswoode, 3. B. & S. 769; 32 L. J., Q. B. 185; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1069; 8 L. T. 201; 11 W. R. 569. S. C., at Nisi Prius, 3 F. & F. 421.

A Roman Catholic having been appointed calendarer of foreign state papers, the defendant, in the course of a newspaper controversy on the subject of the propriety of the appointment, published loquy, even although they have already been letters, in which he argued that the papers might used by counsel in the action, there will be not be fairly epitomised by the plaintiff, and also threw out that such papers might not be in tice, in a man's own defence, against a charge upon safe custody while in the hands of persons of the plaintiff's views, and that such persons might Burr. 807; 2 Ld. Ken. 536. possibly, through religious prejudices, be induced to mutilate, alter, or abstract them :-Held, that if the defendant really believed it, the publica-tions were privileged, provided there was no wilful misstatement. Turnbull v. Bird, 2 F. & F.

B. PRIVILEGE.

I. ABSOLUTE.

a. Debates in Parliament.

Words spoken by a member of parliament in parliament are absolutely privileged : the court has no jurisdiction to entertain an action in respeet of them, and will upon motion set aside the writ of summons and statement of claim in such netion. Dillon v. Balfour, 20 L. R., Ir. 600.

h. Indicial Proceedings.

Statements made by Judges. -No action is maintainable against a county court judge for words spoken by him in his judicial capacity while sitting in his court trying a cause, even though the words are spoken falsely and maliciously, and without reasonable, probable or justifiable cause, and without any foundation whatever, and not bona fide in the discharge of his duty as judge, and though they are wholly irrelevant to the matter in issue before him. Scott v. Stansfield, 37 L. J., Ex. 155; L. R. 3 Ex. 220; 18 L. T. 572; 16 W. R. 911.

By Coroner. ]-Semble, that no action is maintainable against a coroner for anything said by him while he is acting as coroner, and addressing a jury impanelled before him, although he uses defaulatory language towards a person, and does so falsely and maliciously. Thomas v. Chirton, 2 B. & S. 475; 31 L. J., Q. B. 139; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 795 : 6 L. T. 320.

- By Court-Martial. - If a court-martial, after stating in their sentence the acquittal of an officer against whom a charge has been preferred, subjoins thereto a declaration of their opinion that the charge is malicions and groundless, and that the conduct of the prosecutor in falsely calumniating the accused, is highly injurious to the service, the president of the court-martial is not liable to an action for a libel for having delivered such sentence and declaration to the judge-advocate. Jekyll v. Moore, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 341; 6 Esp. 63.

- By Director of Military Inquiry. ]--- Where the commander-in-chief directed a military inquiry to be held, to investigate the conduct of a commissioned officer in the army, who afterwards sued the president of such court of inquiry for a libel stated to be contained in his report, and transmitted by him to the commander-in-chief :-Held, that such a report was a privileged communication, and properly rejected as evidence at the trial. *Lone v. *Restruch (Lond). * Moore, 563; 2 Br. & B. 130; 8 Price, 225; 22 R. R. 748.

him in a court will not lie. Astley v. Younge, 2

No action lies against a man for a statement made by him whether by affidavit or viva voce. in the course of a judicial proceeding, even though it is alleged to have been made falsely and maliciously, and without any reasonable or probable cause. Revis v. Smith. 18 C. B. 126; 25 L. J., C. P. 195; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 614; 4 W. B. 506.

Or although the statement was irrelevant, and was expanged from the affidavit as being prolix, impertinent, and scandalous, by an order of the court. Kennedy v. Hilliard, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 195; 1 L. T. 578.

And the party scandalised was not a party to the cause. Henderson v. Broomhead, 4 H, & N, 569: 28 L. J., Ex. 360; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1175: 7 W. R. 492-Ex. Ch.

If a servant summonses his master before a court of conscience for wages, and the latter in his necessary defence utters words imputing felony to the former, no action will lie. Trotman

v. Dunn, 4 Camp. 211.

The defendant having obtained judgment against the plaintiff, entered the judgment in the register of judgments by handing in a minute thereof to the officer of the court; the judgment was afterwards set aside :- Held, that handing in the minute would not sustain an action for libel against the defendant. McLaughlin v. Doey, 32 L. R., Ir. 518.

Letter and Affidavit of Complaint against Solicitor to Incorporated Law Society. ]-A letter of complaint against a solicitor in respect of his professional conduct, with affidavit of alleged charges attached, forwarded to the Registrar of the Incorporated Law Society, in accordance with Form I, in the schedule of the Rules under the Solicitors Act, 1888, is so essentially a step in a judicial proceeding that statements in such letter or affidavit will be absolutely privileged. Lilley v. Roncy, 61 L. J., Q. B. 727.

Letter from Creditor to Chief Commissioner of Debtors' Court. ]-A letter written by an opposing creditor to the chief commissioner of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, previously to the hearing of an insolvent's case, is not a privileged communication. Gould v. Hulme, 3 Car. & P. 625.

Statements made by Witnesses. ]-A witness in a court of justice is absolutely privileged as to auything he may say as a witness having reference to the inquiry on which he is called as a witness. Scaman v. Netherclift, 46 L. J., C. P. 128; 2 C. P. D. 53; 35 L. T. 784; 25 W. R. 159— C. A.

A statement as to another matter, made to justify the witness in consequence of a question going to the witness's credit, has reference to the inquiry within this rule. Ib.

The defendant, an expert in handwriting, gave evidence in a trial of D. v. M. that, in his opinion, the signature to the will in question was a forgery. The jury found in favour of the will, and the judge made some very disparaging remarks on defendant's evidence. Soon afterwards the defendant was called as a witness in favour of the genuineness of a document, on a charge of forgery before a magistrate. In crossexamination he was asked whether he had given Statements made by Parties.]—An action for evidence in the suit of D. v. M., and whether he libellous words spoken or sworn in a court of jusHe answered "Yes." Counsel asked no more questions, and the defendant insisted on adding, though told by the magistrate not to make any further statement as to D. v. M.: "I believe that will to be a rank forgery, and shall believe so to the day of my leath." An action of slander for these words having been brought by one of the attesting witnesses to the will:—Held, that the words were spoken by the defendant as a witness, and had reference to the inquiry before the magistrate, as they tended to justify the defendant, whose credit as a witness had been impagned; and that the defendant was, therefore, absolutely privileged.

— Affidavit.]—No action lies against a party who, in the course of a cause, makes an affidavit in support of a summons taken out in such cause, which is scandalous, false, and malicious, though the person scandalised, and who complains, is not a party to the cause. Hendown v. Bromathevit, 4. H. & N. 569; 28. L. J. Ex. 369; 5 Jur. (8.8.) 1175; 7 W. R. 492—Ex. Ch. S. P., Konnedy v. Hilliard, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 195; 1 L. T. 578.

A. obtained a rule uisi for a criminal information against B. for sending him a challenge, and A.'s affidavits contained untries of high consure against B. The affidavit of B. in showing cause against the rule was recriminatory, and would, under other circumstances, have been libellons. In an action by A. against B., for the libel contained in B.'s affidavit:—Held, that B. was justified in setting forth any such nattors respecting A.'s past conduct as hemight think would dishadine the court to entertain the application for A.'s rule. Doyle v. O'Doberty, Car. & M. 418.

— Affidavit in Interlocutory Matter.]—An affidavit in an interlocutory proceeding is privilegal, and, therefore, where an action for libel was commenced, founded on the contents of such an affidavit:—Held, that the defendant was not liable, Gompate v. Wide, 54 J. P. 2.

Court.]—A military man giving evidence before a military court of military, which has no power to administer an oath, is entitled to the same protection as that enjoyed by a witness on oath in an ordinary judicial proceeding. Dauchius v. Rokeby, 45 L. J., Q.B. 8; L. R. 7 H. L. 744; 33 L. 7, 194; 23 W. R. 931.

No evidence, whether written or oral, given by him in the course of the inquiry and relative to the inquiry can be made the foundation of an action, however strong the presumption may be that such evidence was not only mirne but was also known to be untrue by him who gave it, or even that it was dictated by malice. For the correctness of this presumption must always be a question until resolved by a Jury, and public policy requires that witnesses should give their evidence freely and openly, and without fear of being haussead by a civil action on an allegation, whether true or false, that they have spoken from malice. Ib.

When a witness before such a court handed in a written statement voluntarily and masked, after his examination was concluded:—Held, that evidence that the statements contained in such paper were untrue and were made maliciously was inadmissible. Ib.

— Witness before Select Committee of Commons.]—To an action of slander the defendents pleaded that the statements complained of were part of the evidence given by him in the character of a witness before a select committee of the House of Commons:—Held, that the statements so made were privileged, and that the action would not lie. Goffin v. Donnelly, 50 L. J., Q. B. 393; 6 Q. B. D. 307; 44 L. T. 141; 20 W. R. 440; 45 J. P. 433.

— Communication to Inquest not on Oath.]—
If a person has a communication to make to an inquest for its information, not on eath, he is bound to do it in such a way as to satisfy a jury, if he is afterwards charged with slander, that he was only staring the fact for the information of the inquest, and that he did it in a proper manner. Without v. Culting, 5 Car, & P. 373.

Statements by Counsel or Advocates.]—An action will not lie against a barrister for words spoken by him as counsel in a cause, pertinent to the matter in issue. Hodgsm v. Szarlett, 1 B. & Ald. 232; 19 R. B. 301.

A party in a matter before the court had kept a sum of money, which, by his contract, he ought not to have kept; counsel, in reference to this matter, used the language, "This gentleman has defrauded us," and was interrupted by the court before he had finished his sentence:—Held, first, that the words were not actionable. Newthern Y, Donvling, 15 L. J., C. P. 15.

Held, secondly, that they were not irrelevant to the matter before the court. Ib.

By an arrangement between A, and B., A, was to enter the service of B, as his clerk, and sell wine for him upou commission, B, to allow him the use of certain premises for that purpose, the contract to be determinable by either party on giving twelve months' notice. B. having made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, the assignces sold the premises to C., who sent D. and E. to take possession of the premises for him; and A, having refused to give them up. D. and E. put him out by force, not using excessive force for the purpose. A. having preferred a charge of assault against them before a bench of magistrates, F., an attorney, appeared as advocate for the defendants, and addressed the court as follows:—"I am going to take an objection in this case. This is a case in which I apprehend the bench has no jurisdiction whatever. Mr. A. claims certain rights and privileges under this agreement. I think there is sufficient eause for determining the connection between Mr. B. and Mr. A. Mr. B. has been plundared by this man to a frightful extent":—Held, that these words were privileged. Muckey v. Ford. 5 H. & N. 792: 29 L. J., Ex. 404; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 587; 2 L. T. 514; 8 W. R. 586.

An attorney acting as an advocate has the same privilege as counsel. Ib.

No action will lie against an advocate for defamatory words spoken with reference to and in the course of an inquiry before a judicial tribunal, although they are uttered by an advocate maliciously and not with the object of supporting the case of his client, and are uttered without any justification or even excuse, and from personal ill-will, or anger towards the person defamed arising out of a previously-existing cause, and are irrelevant to every issue of fact which is contested before the tribunal, Musster v. Lamb, 52 L. J., O. B. 726: 11

H. was charged before a court of petty sessions with administering drugs to the inmates of M.'s house in order to facilitate the commission of a burglary at it. M. was the prosecutor, and L., who was a solicitor, appeared for the defence of H. There was some evidence, although of a very slight character, that a narcotic drug had been administered to the inmates of M.'s house upon the evening before the burglary, and H. had been at M.'s house on that evening. During the proceedings before the court of petty sessions, L., acting as advocate for H., suggested that M. might be keeping drugs at his house for immoral or criminal There was no evidence that M. kept purposes. any drugs for those purposes :- Held, that no action by M. for defamation would lie against Kendillon v. Multby (C. & M. 402; 2 M. & Rob. 438), dissented from. Ib.

- Publication by Counsel subsequent to Case. ]-Semble, that although it may be lawful for a counsel in the discharge of his duty to utter matter injurious to individuals, yet the subsequent publication of such slanderous matter is not justifiable, unless it is shewn that it was published for the purpose of giving the public information which it was fit and proper for them to receive, and that it was warranted by the evidence. Flint v. Pike, 6 D. & R. 528; 4 B. & C. 473; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 272; 28 R. R. 335.

Objections by Solicitor to Bill of Costs.] -No action will lie against a solicitor for defamatory words contained in written objections lodged by him upon taxation of another solicitor's bill of eosts. Pedley v. Morris, 61 L. J., Q. B. 21; 65 L, T. 526; 40 W. R. 42,

c. Other Matters.

Parliamentary Papers and Proceedings.]-An action will not lie for printing a report of the House of Commons, though it reflects on the character of an individual. Rev v. Wright, 8 Term Rep. 293; 4 R. R. 649.

However injurious such publication may be to Walter, 1 Bos. & P. 525; 8 Term Rep. 298; 1 Esp. 457; 4 R. R. 717; 5 R. R. 743.
The House of Country

The House of Commons, in 1835 and 1836, made resolutions that parliamentary papers and reports printed for the use of the house should be publicly sold by the printer; and afterwards a report from the inspectors of prisons was ordered by the house to be printed: Held, that if this report contained a libel on an individual. the printer of the House of Commons who sold it was liable to an action, and that the resolutions of the house did not render this a privileged publication. Stochdale v. Hansard, 7 Car. & P. 731; M. & Rob. 9. Ruling upheld by the court.

Fleming v. Newton, 1 H. L. Cas.

> Communication in Writing on State Business by one Minister to another. ]-A communication relating to affairs of state made in writing by one minister to another is absolutely privileged. and is therefore not actionable, although it contains false defamatory matter and express malice India alleged. Chatterton v. Secretury of State for India, 64 L. J., Q. B. 676; [1895] 2 Q. B. 189; 14 R. 504; 72 L. T. 858; 59 J. P. 596—C. A.

> Report by Military Officer in course of Duty.] -To a declaration for libel, a plea that the defendant was the superior military officer of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff was under his command, and it was his duty as such superior officer to forward to the adjutant-general of the army letters written and sent to him as such superior officer, in relation to their military conduct, duties, and qualifications by the officers under his command, and to make, for the information of the commander-in-chief, reports in writing to the adjutant-general on the subject of such letters; that the defendant had received from the plaintiff letters in relation to his military duties and to certain orders received by him as such officer, and which the plaintiff requested might be forwarded by the defendant to the adjutant-general; and the defendant in the course of military duty, and as an act of military duty, forwarded the letters to the adjutantgeneral; and for the information of the commander-in-chief, when forwarding such letters, the defendant made certain reports in writing in relation to the letters of the plaintiff, which was the libel complained of. Replication, that the libel was written by the defendant of actual malice, and without any reasonable, probable, or justifiable cause, and not bonâ fide, or in the bonâ fide discharge of the defendant's duty as such superior officer:—Held, by Mellor and Lush, JJ., that the replication was bad: for that no action would lie against a military officer for an act done in the ordinary course of his duty as such officer, even if done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause. Cockburn, C.J., dissenting, and holding, that an action would lie if the reports, though made under the circumstances alleged in the plea, were made of actual malice and without reasonable or probable cause. Dawkins v. Paulet (Lord), 9 B. & S. 768; 39 L. J., Q. B. 53; L. R. 5 Q. B. 94; 21 L. T. 584; 18 W. R. 336.

After remand the plaintiff was discharged :-Held, that the defendant was not liable for falsely saying to the constable that the plaintiff was the thief, as the occasion was privileged. Shufflebottom v. Allday, 5 W. R. 315.

2. QUALIFIED.

a. Communications as to which the Person making them has an Interest or Duty.

i. Generally.

Meaning of Privileged Occasion and Communication. - The meaning in law of a privileged communication is a communication made on such an occasion as rebuts the prima facie inference of malice arising from the publication of matter prejudicial to the character of the plaintiff, and throws upon him the onns of proving malice in fact, but not of proving it by extrinsic evidence only: he has still a right to require that the alleged libel itself shall be submitted to the jury, that they may judge whether there is any evidence of malice on the face of it. Wright v. Woodgate, 2 C. M. & R. 573; 1 Tyr. & G. 12; I Gale, 329.

To create a privileged occasion there must be not only an interest in making a communication, but also a legitimate interest in the matter communicated. Simmonds v. Dunne, Ir. R. 5 C. L.

A communication made bonâ fide upou any subject-matter in which the party communicating has an interest, or in reference to which he has a duty, is privileged if made to a person having a corresponding interest or daty, although it contains criminatory matter which, without the privilege, would be slanderous and actionable; and this, though the duty is not a legal one, but only a moral or a social duty of imperfect obliga-tion. Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344; 25 L. J., Q. B. 25; 1 Jnr. (N.S.) 846; 3 W. R. 474. z. d., & D. 20; 1 JHP, (N.S.) 846; 3 W. R. 474. S. P., Whiteley v. Adams, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 392; 33 L. J., C. P. 89; 10 JHP, (N.S.) 470; 9 L. T. 483; 12 W. R. 153.

Semble, that this rule applies also when the communication is made to a person not in fact having such interest or duty, but who might reasonably be, and is, supposed by the party making the communication to have such interest or duty. Ib.

Privileged communications comprehend all statements made bona fide in performance of a duty, or with a fair and reasonable purpose of protecting the interests of the person making them, and the onns of proving malice lies on the plaintiff. Somerrill v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 583; 20 L. J., C. P. 131 ; 15 Jur. 450.

When once a confidential relation is established between two persons with regard to an inquiry of a private nature, whatever takes place between them relevant to the same subject, though at a the confidential relation began, may be entitled his conduct while master of a ship of which the him that B. has robbed him :- Held, not a privi- to protection, as well as what passed at the legred communication. Demonster v. H. revessus, 2 Man. & Ry. 176; 6 L. J. (0.8) K. B. 311. same subject, though apparently casual and voluntary, did not take place under the influence of the confidential relation already established between them, and was therefore entitled to the same protection. Beatson v. Shene, 5 H. & N. 838; 29 L. J., Ex. 430; 6 Jur. (N.s.) 780; 2 L. T. 378; 8 W. R. 544.

A man has a right to communicate to any other any information he is possessed of in a matter in which they have a mutual interest; and it is a perfectly legal and justifiable object for one to induce another to become a party to a suit, as to a subject-matter in which both have an interest; and it is not because strong or angry language is used in such a communication that it will be a libel; but the jury must go further, and see, not merely whether expressions are angry, but whether they are malicious. Shipley v. Todhunter, 7 Car. & P. 680.

Every wilful unauthorised publication jurious to the character of another is a libel; but where the writer is acting on any duty, legal or moral, towards the person to whom he writes, or where he has, by his situation, to protect the interests of that person, that which he writes under such circumstances is a privileged communication, and no action will lie for what is thus written, unless the writer is actuated by malice. Cochayne v. Hodykisson, 5 Car. & P.

Malice implied where Libel untrue.] -However honestly the party who publishes a libel believes it to be true, if it is untrue in fact the law implies malice, unless the occasion justifies the act; and whether the occasion justifies the act is a question of law. Durby v. Ouseley, 1 H. & N. 1; 25 L. J., Ex. 227; 2 Jur. (N.S.)

Information honestly communicated without Personal Interest. |- A person having information materially affecting the interests of another, and honestly communicating it privately to such other party, in the full belief, and with reasonable grounds for the belief, that it is true, is justified in so publishing it, although the publisher has no personal interest in the subject-matter of the libel, and although no inquiry has been made of him, and although the damage to the other party, or to his property, is not imminent. Per Tindal, C.J., and Erle, J. But per Coltman, J., and Cresswell, J., that such a communication is not privileged. Coxhead v. Richards, 2 C. B. 569; 15 L. J., C. P. 278; 10 Jur. 984.

Slander in Answer to Question by Slandered Person. - Where a person courts the alleged slander by a question, the occasion is privileged. Palmer v. Hummerston, 1 Cab. & E. 36.

Where a person originates a slander and afterwards repeats it in answer to a question by the person slandered, in the presence of a third person brought by him for the purpose of hearing the answer, such a statement is not a privileged communication. Griffiths v. Lewis, 7 Q. B. 61; 14 L. J., Q. B. 197; 9 Jur. 370.

Statement to Partner.]—A letter written by a defendant to a late partner, T., containing a time and a place different from those at which charge against the plaintiff, with reference to defendant and T. had been joint owners, is a privileged communication. Wilson v. Robinson, 7 Q. B. 68; 14 L. J., Q. B. 196; 9 Jur. 726.

Transmission of Privileged Matter by Telegram, —The transmission nunecessarily by a post-office telegram of libellous matter, which would have been privileged if sent in a scaled letter, avoids the privilege. Williamson v. Ferer. 43 L. J., C. P. 161; L. R. 9 C. P. 393; 30 L. T. 332; 22 W. R. 878.

Publication by Mistake—To Wrong Person.]—A person who has a duty or whose interest it is to publish defanatory statements of another, does not publish them upon a privileged occasion if he sents them to a person who has no duty to take any action and who has no particular interest with regard to them. The fact that he honestly believes that the person to whom he sends the statements has such duty or interest will not make the occasion privilegel. Tompson v. Dushvenod (11 Q. B. D. 43) overuled. Hebditch v. Maalkenie, 63 L. J. Q. B. S57 : [1842] 2 Q. B. 54; 9 R. 452; 70 L. T. 826; 42 W. R. 422; 58 J. P. 620—C. A.

The defendant wrote defanatory statements of the plaintiff in a letter to W under circumstances which made the publication of the letter to W, privileged, but by mistake the defendant placed it in an envelope directed to another person who received and read the letter. In an action for libel:—Held, that the letter having been written to W, under circumstances which caused the legal implication of malice to be rebutted, the publication to the other person, though made through the negligence of the defendant, was privileged in the absence of malice in fact on his part, Tompson v. Dushwood, 52 L. J., Q. B. 425; 11 Q. B. D. 43; 48 L. 7. 943.

A timekeeper, employed on behalf of a public department, having written a letter to the scoretary of the department a letter reflecting on the conduct of the contractor:—Held, that if the letter was written in good faith, and for the information of his employers, it was privileged, although to the wrong person. Searl v. Dixon, 4 F. & F. 300.

- Publication in Course of Duty as to Wrong Person.]-W. was surveyor to the owner of an estate, to which estate he, W., also acted as steward. The owner directed W. to make inquiries as to the existence on the estate of a house of bad character. W., in the course of his inquiries, was referred to the house of B., but doubting the accuracy of his information, made further inquiries, and in the course of doing so mentioned what he had heard of the character of B.'s house. He then ascertained that the address of B.'s house had been given him erroneously, and that, by a mistake in the number in the street, a reference had been made to B.'s house which was intended for another residence. In an action by B. against W. for the statements made by W., while following up the inquiries directed by his employer, and the further pursuit of which inquiries had been suggested by the erroneous information he, W., had received as to whether such inquiries were in excess of his duty, and beyond the directions he had received from his employer or not, but did not direct the jury that if the statements relied upon as slanderous were only made in the necessary course of pursning the inquiries he had been directed by his employer to make, he would have been within his duty, and they, the jury, should then consider whether there was any proof of express malice or not :- Held, that this direction was wrong, and that, in the absence of evidence of actual malice, the judge ought to have pointed out to the jury all the evidence bearing upon the character of the defendant's employment and the course of duty in which the statements charged as slanderous were made, in order that the jury might have expressly found whether such statements were or were not made in pursuance of his duties under his employment, and the court have been enabled to decide upon such finding whether there was or was not existing such malice as would be implied by law, and which might be rebutted by the character of privileged communication attaching to such statements. Brett v. Watson. 20 W. R.

- Record of Judgment Erroneously Registered.]-A judgment was obtained in England against A., as executor of his deceased father. and a certificate of the judgment was duly and correctly registered in the Queen's Bench Division in Ireland, under the Judgments Extension Act, 1868. In registering the judgment in the Registry of Judgments Office, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 90, owing to a mistake in the minute certified by the officer of the Queen's Bench Division, the judgment was described as recovered againt A. personally, and the particulars of the judgment personary, and the partenance in the judgment so registered were published in the publication known as "Stubbs' Gazette," which is issued weekly, for the assistance of bankers, merchants, traders and others, against risk and fraud. In an action for libel brought by A. against the proprietors of the Gazette, there being no evidence that the defendants had notice of the error, or acted with malice :- Held (dubitante Barry, L.J.), that the publication was privileged, and that the defendants were entitled to a verdiet. Annaly v. Trade Auxiliary Co., 26 L. R., Ir. 394—C. A.

Other Parties present at time of Publication. The defendant wrote down at the instance of W. T. a statement to the effect that he, W. T., had robbed W., whose manager the defendant was, with the connivance of the plaintiff, and that he, W. T., thereby promised to repay the moneys so stolen by weekly instalments. W., the defendant's wife, and D., who was also in the employ of W., were present at the time. Afterwards the defendant obtained the signature of D, as witness to the statement he had written down :-Held, that the communication, being made and written down in the interests of the employer, was protected, and that that protection was not taken away by reason of the presence of those other parties at the time of the publication. Jones v. Thomas, 53 L. T. 678; 34 W. R. 104: 50 J. P. 149.

of which inquiries had been suggested by the errous information he, W., had received as to B.'s house, the judge directed the jury to consider whether the statements made by W. had been made in the course of the inquiries which he had been directed by his employer to make, and the learning to the limit of the latter.—

Presence of Reporters-Meeting of Board of Guardians. ] - At a meeting of a board of guardians at which reporters were present, the defendant, who was a member of the board, made defamatory statements in a speech, bona fide believing them to be true, about the conthe board, the question being whether a sum of money should be given to the plaintiff in respect of his past services :- Held, that the presence of the reporters, which was not due to — Meeting of Railway Shareholders.]—A shareholder of a railway company having summoned a meeting of shareholders, at which he invited others, and especially the reporters for the public press, to attend, and at this meeting made defanatory comments on the conduct of one of the directors, relating to the affairs of the company :- Held, that though a discussion of the matter before a meeting of shareholders would have been excased, there was no excuse for a publication to others than shareholders. Parsons v. Surgey, 4 F. & F. 247.

Publication to one of two Persons Slandered-Privileged as to Other. ]-When words imputing misconduct, of which two persons are alleged to have been jointly guilty, are spoken to one of them under circumstances which make the communication privileged as to him, the slanderous statement is privileged as to the other, and the latter cannot maintain an action for defamation. Davies v. Sucad, 39 L. J., Q. B. 202; L. R. 5 Q. B. 608; 23 L. T. 126.

The defendant mentioned to the rector of her parish a rumour that she had heard publicly uttered, impugning his conduct and the conduct of his solicitor, the plaintiff, in the administration of a trust. The plaintiff having brought an action for slander against the defendant, the jury found that the words complained of were spoken bona fide and without malice, under the belief that it was important for the rector to know the rumour, in order that he might clear his character :- Held that the communication was privileged; and that the privilege extended to the alleged slander of the plaintiff, as the communication could not be made without mentioning him. Ib.

ii. Public and Official Communications.

Report to Foreign Government.]—In an action brought in Her Majesty's Supreme Court for China and Japan, for false representations made by the defendant, occupying an official post in the service of the Emperor of China, to the Tsung-li-Yamén, the head of the Foreign Board at Pekin, respecting the conduct of the plaintiff

Held, that the charge was privileged, if the alleged misrepresentations being, that he had defendant believed in its truth, acted bona fide, asked to be relieved from his duties, and declined and did not make the charge before more persons to perform them, and that he had absented himthan was necessary. Padmore v. Laurence, 11 self from Pekin at a time when his active services A. & E. 380; 3 P. & D. 209; 9 L. J., Q. B. 137; might be required at the college; the defendant, in reply, denied that he had made any false representations, and asserted that such representations as he had made were contained in a report made by him in the course of his duty as an officer of the Chinese Government. The judge in his summing-up directed the jury that, whether the defendant had made false representations, and the Chinese government had disduct of the plaintiff, who had been a servant of missed the plaintiff in consequence, was a thing specially for the jury to consider, and whether the representations were warranted by facts. The jury found for the plaintiff, and gave large damages. A rule nisi was afterwards obtained presence or the reporters which was not use to damages. A role as it was determine solutioned the action of the defendant, did not destroy the formula of a moustir, or for a new trial, on the ground privilege of the occasion. Pittural v. Oliver, of misdirection, and that the verifiet was against 0. L. J. Q. B. 219; [1801] 1 Q. B. 474; 64 L. T. (1) that the indge did not direct the jury that the representations were privileged; (2) not leaving to the jury the question, whether the representations were wilfully false; and (3) that there was no evidence to go to the jury that the representations were wilfully false. The Supreme Court discharged the rule. On appeal :—Held, that the summing-up was erroneous, that the representations complained of were privileged communications, that the judge ought to have explained to the jury the relation and position of the parties and have told them that the action would not lie if the statements were made honestly and in a belief of their truth, without proof of express malice, and not whether they were warranted in fact, and that the burden was on the plaintiff to prove that they were not so made. Hart v. Gumpach, 9 Moore, P. Communication of Town Councillor as to Public Contract Work-Letter to Newspaper.] —The plaintiffs were contractors for the erection of a gaol in a borough. The defendants were members of the town council, and from their business competent judges of the work. They published in a local newspaper a letter, in which they charged the plaintiffs with serious omissions as a professor in the college established there, and deviations from their contract:—Held, that which led to his dismissal by that board, the although the charges in the libel would have town council in their characters as conneillors, they were not privileged in the form of a letter in a public newspaper. Simpson v. Downs, 16 L. T. 391.

Meeting of Poor-law Guardians-Defamatory Statements by Member-Words spoken in Honest Discharge of Duty, without Malice, but "Care--At a meeting of a board of poor-law guardians certain defamatory statements were made by a member of the board, concerning the clerk of the board, he being accused of improperly retaining in his hands moneys belonging to the board. In an action for slander, the jury found "that the words were spoken honestly in the discharge of a public duty, without malice, but carclessly." The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for 40s, :-Held, on further consideration, that the occasion was a privileged one, and that the privilege was not taken away by the word "carelessly" at the end of the find-ing of the jury, and that, therefore, the judgment ought to be entered for the defendant. v. Olirer, 63 L. T. 247.

Report of Directors of Company to Shareholders.]—The plaintiff was manager of a limited company. The auditors in making up the year's accounts issued a report to the shareholders, and at the foot of the accounts they remarked, "The shareholders will observe that there is a charge of 1,306*l*. 1s. 7d. for deficiency of stock, for which the manager is responsible. His accounts have been badly kept, and have been rendered to us very irregularly." The directors presented this report to the shareholders at the annual meeting, at which it was resolved that the report should be printed and sent to all the shareholders :- Held, first, that the report of the directors was a privileged communication, and the mode of publishing it was reasonable and proper. Lawless v. Anglo-Egyptian Cotton and Oil Co., 10 B. & S. 226; 38 L. J., Q. B. 129; L. R. 4 Q. B. 262; 17 W. R. 498.

Held, secondly, that there being no intrinsic nor extrinsic evidence of malice, there was no question to be left to the jury. Ib.

Letter of Individual to Public Official. ]-The memorial of a tradesman addressed to the secretary at war, complaining of the conduct of a half-pay officer in the army, for not having paid a debt due to him, and stating the facts of his case fairly and honestly, according to his opinion and understanding of such facts, is not the sub-ject of an action for a malicions libel, although the statement of those facts is derogatory to the character of the officer. Fairman v. Ices, 1 D. & R. 252; 5 B. & Ald, 642; 1 Chit, 85; 24 R. R. 514.

A letter written to the postmaster-general, or to the secretary to the general post-office, com-plaining of misconduct in a postmaster is not a libel, if it was written as a bona fide complaint to obtain redress for a grievance, that the party really believed he had suffered; and particular expressions are not to be strictly scrutinised, if the intention of the writer was good. Woodward v. Lander, 6 Car. & P. 548.

A letter written by a private individual to a public officer, complaining of the misconduct of a person under him, is not privileged from disclosure as an official communication; but, if been privileged if made by the defendants to the | munication is not actionable as libellous, though the charges may not be true. Blake v. Pilfold, 1 M. & Rob. 198.

> Letter by Inhabitant of Borough to Home Secretary—As to Conduct of Magistrate. ]—The plaintiff was a justice of the peace for a county and in the habit of acting at petty sessions held The defendant, an elector and in a borough. inhabitant of the borough, signed a memorial addressed to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, complaining of the conduct of the plaintiff as a justice during an election for a member to represent the borough in parliament, and praying that he would cause an inquiry to be made into the conduct of the plaintiff, and that on the allegations contained in the memorial being substantiated, he would recommend to Her Majesty that the plaintiff be removed from the commission of the peace. The jury having found that the memorial was bona fide :- Held, that it was a privileged communication, inasmuch as the plaintiff had both an interest and a duty in the subject-matter of the communication; and the Secretary of State had a corresponding duty, a justice of the peace being appointed and removed by the sovereign. Held, also, that a communica-tion made bona fide for the purpose of obtaining redress was privileged, though made to a tribunal which had no direct authority in respect of the matter complained of. Harrison v. Bush, 5 El. & Bl. 344; 25 L. J., Q. B. 25; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 846 : 3 W. R. 474.

> - As to Conduct of Clerk to Justices. ]letter to the Secretary of State by an inhabitant of a borough, imputing to a person who was the town clerk, and clerk to the justices of the borough, corruption in the latter office, is not a privileged communication. Communication of Clerk to Guardians as to Medical Officer. ]—A. was clerk to the board of guardians of a union of which B. was the medical officer, and C. the relieving officer. A pamper was to be removed to another district, and had previously to be examined by B. A., in pursuance of directions from the board of guardians, called twice on B, for the purpose of getting him to see this pauper, but could not get B, to do so. A, then went to C., and asked him to try and get B. to examine the pauper, telling C. at the same time that when he, A., saw B. on the preceding evening, B. was not sober; whereupon C. served B with a formal order to examine the panper, and B. did so. In an action by B. against A. for slander :- Held, that the communication between A. and C. was privileged, and that B. must be nonsuited. Sutton v. Plumridge, 16 L. T.

Report of Chief Constable under Direction of Watch Committee. |- In obedience to the orders of the watch committee given at the request of the magistrates, a head constable compiled a book giving a list of the licensed houses with names, dates, "superintendent's remarks," and other particulars, for the purpose of facilitating the business at the general annual licensing meeting. The plaintiffs were the licensee and barmaid respectively of one of the houses named in the book, and their action was for defamation in respect of a statement in the book that the renewal of the licence of the house was to be opposed on the ground of improper conduct. Copies of the book were supplied by the head constable to the magistrates, and by their direction also to persons having business at the sessions, and to their legal advisers :- Held, that sessions and to their legal advisors.—Field, that the occasion of the publication was privileged.

Between Agents of Opposite Parties at Election.]—F, and B. were candidates at a parliamentary election. The defendants were agents of B., and on the day of election, whilst the poll was proceeding, one of them wrote to the agent of F., stating that bribery on F.'s behalf was going on. B. was returned, and on the next day the plaintiff's name was mentioned by the same defendant to F.'s agent as that of a briber. A discussion upon the imputation ensued, which resulted in the defendants transmitting to F.'s agent on the day following a document signed by both of them, "certifying" that the plaintiff had been personally guilty of bribery. In an action of defamation brought upon this doculeged. Dickeson v. Hilburd, 43 L. J., Ex. 37; L. R. 9 Ex. 79; 30 L. T. 196; 22 W. R. 372. ment :- Held, that the occasion was not privi-

iii. Ecclesiastical and Religious Matters.

Charge of Bishop. ]-The charge of a bishop to his clergy in convocation is, in the ordinary sense of the term, a privileged communication; on the well-known principle that a communication made bona fide upon any subject-matter in which the party has an interest, or in reference to which he has, or honestly believes he has, a duty, is privileged, if made to a person having a corresponding interest or duty, although it contains criminatory matter which, without that privilege, would be defamatory and actionable; provided that the occasion on which the communication is made rebuts the prima facie inference of malice, in fact, arising from a statement prejudicial to the character of the plaintiff, and the onus is upon him to prove that there was actual malice, that the defendant was actuated by motives of personal spite or ill-will, independently of the occasion on which the communication was made. Laughton v. Sodor and Man (Bishop), 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 318; 42 L. J., P. C. 11; L. R. 4 P. C. 495; 28 L. T. 377; 21 W. R. 204.

Letter to Bishop as to Incumbent.]—A letter written to a bishop informing him of a report, current in a parish in his diocese, that the inenmbent of a district in that parish had collared the schoolmaster, and that a fight ensued between them, is a privileged communication, if such letter was written to the bishop honestly to call his attention to a rumour in the parish which was bringing scandal on the church, and not from any malicious motive ; and it is not material that the writer of the letter did not live in the district of the incumbent to whom the letter refers. James v. Boston, 2 Car. & K. 4.

Statement by Clergyman in Pulpit. ]-Words spoken by a clergyman from the pulpit concerning a parishioner, though in good faith, and for a commendable purpose, are not privileged.

Magrath v. Finn, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 152.

By Clergyman to Curate. ]-A defamatory communication made by a clergyman to his enrate, for the purpose of obtaining his advice as to the course to be pursued by him in an ecclesiastical matter, is privileged. # iv. Solicitor and Client.

Retainer-Malice.]—If a solicitor reasonably believes that his services may be required by a relevant to it, and having that, and nothing else, in view, are privileged. Browne v. Dunn, 6 R. 67 —H. L. (E.)

If the retainer is a genuine proceeding, the fact that the solicitor is not well disposed to the person said to be defamed is not evidence of malice. Ib.

Per Lord Bowen: Whether, when a professional relation is created between a solicitor and a client, and communications pass between the solicitor and the client with reference to the prosecution of a third person, or with reference to proceedings being taken against him, the fact that the solicitor is animated by malice in what he says of the third person would render him liable to an action, provided he does not say anything which is outside what is relevant to the communications which he is making as solicitor to his client. Quære. Ib.

Letter of Solicitor to Protect Interests of Client-Evidence of Malice, - A solicitor in writing a letter in protection of his client's interests, whether before or after action brought, is acting in pursuance of his ordinary duty as a solicitor, and statements made by him therein are privileged. If the facts are as consistent with the defendant's honesty, believing such statements to be in the interests of his client and to be true, as with his not so believing, there is no évidence for the jmy of malice in fact. Buker v. Carriek, 63 L. J., Q. B. 399; [1894] 1 Q. B. 838: 9 R. 283; 70 L. T. 366; 42 W. R. 338; 58 J. P. 669-C. A.

Letter from Solicitor Vindicating Client's Character. -On the occasion of an unsuccessful application by A. for a summons against B., certain unfounded charges were made against B., and reported in the newspapers. B. having applied to his attorneys, they wrote and published a letter stigmatising the charges as "wicked and deliberate falsehoods," and stating that other falsehoods had also been uttered by A. against B. :—Held, on an indictment for libel against the attorneys of B., that if the letter was written without malice, and with the object of vindicating their client's character, its publication was privileged and excused. Reg. v. Veley, 16 L. T. 122.

Letter Warning Solicitor as to Client.] — Where a defendant wrote to a plaintiff's solicitor in an action of slander, in reply to a demand for an apology contained in a letter from the plaintiff's solicitor, and informed the plaintiff's solicitor of the alleged dishonourable conduct of the plaintiff, which caused the defendant to speak the words, and warned the solicitor to look after his costs, as a person guilty of such dishonourable conduct as the plaintiff had been guilty of to the defendant could not be trusted :- It was held, on demurrer, that the communication was privileged, and that the warning was a deduction from the subject-matter of the privileged communication, and that it was the province of a jury, and not of the court, to say whether this deduction was an excess of the privilege. Jucob v. Lawrence, 14 Cox, C. C. 321.

The plaintiff's attorney having at his desire written to the defendant demanding payment of possible client who does afterwards retain him, an alleged debt, the latter sent a letter to the plaintiff's character, wholly unconnected with the demand made upon him :—Held, not a privileged communication, although the jury found that the letter was written bona fide, and negatived malice in fact. Huntley v. Ward, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 514; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 18.

Bill of Costs sent by Solicitor. ]-A bill of costs, containing defamatory matter, delivered by an attorney to his client under a judge's order, is not a privileged communication. Bruton v. Doces, 1 F. & F. 668.

Publication by a Solicitor to his Clerk. ]-If a communication made by a solicitor to a third party is reasonably necessary and usual in the discharge of his duty to his client, and in the interests of his client, the occasion is privileged. Pullman v. Hill ([1891] 1 Q. B. 524) dis-*** Action 1. 110 (1981) 1 91 15 523) (1884) inguished. *** Bossius v. Golder, 63 L. J., Q. B. 401; [1894] 1 Q. B. 842; 9 R. 224; 70 L. T. 368; 42 W. A firm of solicitors, acting for a client, addressed a letter containing defamatory matter to the plaintiff. The letter was dictated to their shorthand-writer clerk, and copied into the pressbook by another clerk in their employment :-Held, that the occasion was privileged. Ib.

v. Persons in Fiduciary Positions.

Persons in present or past Fiduciary Positions. - A letter written confidentially to persons who employed A. as their solicitor, conveying charges injurious to his professional character in the namagement of certain concerns which they had intrusted to him, and in which the writer of the letter was likewise interested, cannot be considered as a libel and made the subject of an action for damages. M. Dougall v. Claridge, 1 Camp. 267; 10 R. R. 679.

A letter written confidentially to B., who employed the plaintiff as steward of his estates, to inform him of certain supposed malpractices on the part of the plaintiff, is not actionable, the defendant acting bona fide. Clearer v. Sarraude, 1 Camp. 268, n.; 10 R. R. 680.

A letter to the manager of a property in Scotland, in which the plaintiff and defendant were jointly interested, related principally to the property and the plaintiff's conduct respecting it, but also contained a passage reflecting on his conduct to his mother and aunt:—Held, that the latter part could not be privileged as a con-Warren v. Warren, fidential communication. 4 Tyr. 850; 1 C. M. & R. 250; 3 L. J., Ex.

A. was engaged to superintend the works of a railway company, and subsequently, at a general meeting of the proprietors, the engagement was not continued, but a former inspector was reinstated. A vacancy subsequently occurred in the situation of engineer to the commissioners for the improvement of the river Wear, and A. became a candidate. B. wrote to C., introducing D. as a candidate, and C., having written to B., informing him that another person had sueceeded in obtaining the appointment, B. wrote an answer to C., reflecting on the conduct of A. whilst in the situation of engineer to the railway attorney containing gross imputations upon the this letter having been shewn. B. and C. were both shareholders in the railway company, and B. managed C.'s affairs in the railway. B. had not been applied to for his opinion, and the letter containing the libel was written after the termination of one election, and before the other was in contemplation :- Held, in an action by A. against B. for the libel, that the letter was not a privileged communication. Brooks v. Blanchard, 1 C. & M. 779; 3 Tyr. 844; 2 L. J., Ex. 275.

The plaintiff, who had formerly been in trade in partnership with P., which partnership had since been dissolved, was a minister of a dissenting congregation, and brought an action against the defendant for uttering slanderous words, imputing that the plaintiff had taken an improper advantage of P. in the course of partnership, and in adjusting the partnership accounts. An investigation having been made into some charges brought by a Mrs. B., a member of the plaintiff's congregation, respecting the plaintiff's accounts and transactions in his former partnership with P., a correspondence respecting the same took place between a Mr. A., who acted therein on behalf of the plaintiff, and the defendant, who acted on behalf of Mrs. B.:—Held, that letters written by the defendant to Mr. A., in the course of such correspondence, were privileged communications. Hopwood v. Thorn, 8 C. B. 293: 19 L. J., C. P. 94; 14 Jur. 87.

A secretary of an insurance company, being charged with misconduct, was called upon to attend a board of directors, for the purpose of explanation, but declined to do so, whereupon the directors, after hearing the nature of the charges, passed a resolution declaring him to have been guilty of gross miseonduct, and dismissed him from their service; the defendant, who was a director of that company, and also of another company, communicated the fact of the dismissal from the service of the former company for gross misconduct, at a board meeting of the latter company, and proposed a resolution to dismiss him from his employment as their anditor, and in answer to an inquiry from the chairman, said that the misconduct consisted in obtaining money from the solicitor of the company under false pretences, and paying a debt of his own with it, and upon the plaintiff's appearing on a subsequent day with his attorney before the board, to meet the charges against him, the defendant refused to go into them :-Held, that the communication was privileged, and that the defendant's refusal to go into the charges in the presence of the plaintiff and his attorney was no evidence of malice that could properly be submitted to the jury; for that, such refusal being consistent with bona fides, bona fides must be presumed until the contrary was proved. Harris v. Thompson, 13 C. B. 333.

Communication by Surety. ] - Verbal communications, when confidential, are not actionable; and if A. is surety for B. to C., A., if acting bona fide, may lawfully state to C., in an unreserved manner, his opinion of B.'s conduct and character, whatever the charges may be which he thus imputes to him. Dunman v. Bigg, 1 Camp. 269, u.; 10 R. R. 680, u.

Arhitrator.]-To a count in libel alleging that the defendant had written and published of the company. There was a subsequent election, at which A was unsuccessful, in consequence of traveller for a printing house that he had been employment, the defendant pleaded that a disoute having arisen between himself and A., they had agreed to submit the matter in dispute to some respectable printer, who should be in-different between the parties, to be named by A., and that A. proposed the plaintiff, when the defendant refused to submit the matter to the plaintiff, and being subsequently called on to pay a part of the remnneration of the plaintiff as arbitrator, wrote to A. repudiating the demand, and stating as his reason for not submitting the matter to the plaintiff, that he had discharged the plaintiff from his employment for intemperance :- Held, on demnrer to this defence, that the defendant had an interest in alleging reasons why he should not pay the demand, that the words were relevant to the respectability of the plaintiff as arbitrator, and that the communication was therefore privileged. Hobbs v. Bryers, 2 L. R., Ir. 496.

vi. Landlord and Tenant.

A defamatory communication from A. to B. respecting the inmates of the house occupied by B. as his tenant, is privileged, when such com-munication is made bond fide in consequence of the relation of landlord and tenant, and without malice in fact. Knight v. Gibbs, 3 N. & M. 467;

1 A. & E. 43; 3 L. J., K. B. 135.

A., the tenant of a farm, required some repairs to be done to the farmhouse, and B., the agent of the landlord, directed C, to do the work. C. did it, but in a negligent manner, and during the progress of it got drunk; and some circumstances occurred which induced A, to believe that C. had broken open his cellar door, and obtained access to his cider. A., two days afterwards, met C, in the presence of D, and charged him with having broken his cellar door, and with having got drank and spoiled the work, afterwards told D., in the absence of C., that he was confident C. had broken open the door. On the same day A. complained to B. that C. had been negligent in his work, had got drunk, and he thought he had broken open his cellar :-Held, that the complaint to B. was a privileged communication, if made bona fide, and without any malicious intention to injure C. Toogood v. Spyring, 1 C. M. & R. 181; 4 Tyr. 582; 3 L. J., Ex. 347.

Held, also, that the statement made to C., in the presence of D., was also privileged, if done honestly and bona fide; and that the circumstance of its being made in the presence of a third person did not of itself make it unanthorised; and that it was a question to be left to the jury to determine from the circumstances. including the style and character of the language used, whether A. acted bona fide, or was influenced by malicious motives. Ib.

Held, also, that the statement to D., in the absence of C., was unauthorised and officious, and therefore not protected, although made in the belief of its truth, if it was in point of fact false. Ib.

To a count whereby the plaintiff complained that the defendant had written and published of him a libel, stating that he had forcibly re-entered a farm from which the defendant had had him ejected, and had feloniously cut and carried away hay off the farm, and had discharged for intemperance from the defendant's farm for their benefit. The defendant pleaded employment, the defendant pleaded that a disc that the plaintiff had been ejected by due process of law from the farm, and that the defendant was a candidate for a parliamentary constituency, and, before the election, published the matters complained of, bona fide and without malice, in a newspaper in answer to false charges caused to be published by the plaintiff in the same newspaper, imputing gross misconduct to the defendant as a landlord, especially in his conduct to the plaintiff:-Held, on demurrer, that the defendant had a privilege to publish matter of vindication and defence in answer to the plaintiff's charges. Dwyer v. Esmonde, 2 L. R., Ir. 243.

> Action for Slander against Husband and Wife for Words Spoken by the Wife. |---M. was tenant to T., and both were eesspayers. A house beburnt G. applied to the grand jury for compensation, alleging that the burning was malicious. The wife of M., without his direction, made a statement to T., that G.'s wife had burnt the house with intent to defrand the county :- Held, not privileged either by reason of the relation of landlord and tenant, or by the community of interest as cesspayers. Gillis v. M. Donnell and wife, 18 W. B. 346; Ir. B. 4 C. L. 342.

Letter to Wife of Landlord charging Landlord with Theft. ]-The defendant, who had for some time boarded and lodged with the plaintiff, having left the plaintiff's house, wrote a letter to the wife of the plaintiff, imputing to the plaintiff that he had opened the defendant's box and extracted receipts for board and lodging, and stating that if the plaintiff should not think proper to return them, he (the defendant) would expose him :-Held, that the occasion did not justify the writing of the letter so as to make it. a privileged communication, as no reasonable person could think the course the defendant took was one which he was justified in taking to enforce his own interest, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages although the jury negatived malice. Wenman v. 4sh, 13 C. B. 836; 1 C. L. R. 592; 22 L. J., C. P. 190; 17 Jur. 579; 1 W. R. 452.

vii. Other Cuses.

Moral or Social Duty-Statement as to a Person's Mind being Affected. ]-A statement in writing that a person's mind is affected is primâ facie a libel. Margan v. Lingen, 8 L. T. 800. Such a publication is malicious, unless made in discharge of a public or private duty arising out of a matter in which the person making it is concerned, and then made without malice. Ib.

But if fairly warranted by any reasonable exigency, and honestly made, it is privileged.

- Between Relations as to a Proposed Marriage.]—A letter from a son-in-law to his mother-in-law, volunteering advice respecting her proposed marriage, and containing imputations upon the person whom she was about to tions upon the person whom she was about to marry, is a privileged communication, and not actionable, unless malice is shewn. Todd v. Hawkins, 2 M. & Rob. 20; 8 Car. & P. 888.

- To Master as to Dishonesty of Servant. and carried away hay off the farm, and had —The plaintiff, who was valet to S., was with S. defrauded his sisters of money charged on the staying at the Mansion House at Newcastle,

Mayor, They had come from Edinburgh, and were going on further visits. While they were at Newcastle the chief constable there received from the chief constable of Edinburgh a letter. stating that a watch had been stolen from the hotel at Edinburgh where the plaintiff had been staving and suspicion had fallen upon him, but requesting that, as the suspicion was very slight. any inquiry made should be so cautiously con ducted as not to injure the plaintiff if innocent. This letter was sent to the defendant, who told S, privately the contents of it, S., in consequence, discharged the plaintiff, who brought an action for slander against the defendant :- Held (Lopes, L.J., dissenting), that the occasion was privileged; and, there being no evidence of malice, judgment must be entered for the defenslant. Stuart v. Bell, 60 L. J., Q. B. 577; [1891] 2 Q. B. 341; 64 L. T. 633; 39 W. R. 612—C. A.

The defendant bona fide believing that the plaintiff, who was a clerk to M., a customer of the defendant's, and who had been sent to the defendant's shop by M., had, while there, stolen a box from an inner room, went to M., and after telling him of his loss, intimated his suspicion of the plaintiff, saying, "There was no one else in the room, he must have taken it":-Held, that the communication was privileged by the occasion. Amann v. Damm, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 597; 29 L. J., C. P. 313; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 47; 2 L. T. 322;

8 W. R. 470.

Where Suspicion of Theft Committed. ]-A. suspecting B. of stealing meat from his shop, accused her of having done so (no one being by at the time). B. thereupon applied to a police magistrate for a summons against A. A., meeting magstrate for a summons against A. A., meeting a third person, who was in the shop at the time the supposed larceny was committed, told him that proceedings had been taken against him, and said to him, "You were in the shop; did not you see her take it?"—Held, a privileged communication. Faree v. Warren, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 806.

A, having accused B, of stealing ment, a friend of the latter, to whom she had mentioned the fact, called at A.'s shop and asked him if he had necused B. of stealing, to which A. answered, "Yes, and I believe it to be true":—Held, not a privileged communication. Ib.

The defendant, having a prima facie ground of suspicion, which afterwards proved to be unfounded, that he was being robbed by one of his assistants and the plaintiff, made certain inquiries from two persons having no connection with the matter. To each person the defendant said that the plaintiff had robbed him, and that he would get him imprisoned :-Held, that the occasion was not privileged. Harrison v. Fraser, 29 W. R. 652.

If B., a tradesman, is dismissed from serving A., one of his customers, A. stating as the reason of it that B. charged for goods never delivered, and B., after this, writes a letter to A., vindicating himself, and imputing the dishonesty to a servant of A., this is a privileged communication, if it is bona fide and without malice. Coward v.

Wellington, 7 Car. & P. 531.

Letter to Tradesman as to Authorship of Forged Order for Goods. ]-A tradesman received a letter in the name of the defendant, containing where S. was the guest of the defendant, the that he had not ordered them. At his request the tradesman sent him the letter containing the order, when he wrote to the tradesman, stating that in his opinion, and he firmly believed, the letter was written by the plaintiff :-Held, that the statement having been made bona fide, was a privileged communication. Croft v. Sterens, 7 H. & N. 570; 31 L. J., Ex. 143; 5 L. T. 683; 10 W. R. 272.

> Communication by Master to Servant of Misconduct of Dismissed Servant. - A railway company dismissed a servant for alleged negligence, and published his name, offence, and dismissal in a monthly list of punishments for serious offences which was exhibited in the rooms occupied by their staff throughout their system :-Held, in an action by the dismissed servant against the company to recover damages for libel, that, as the company had an interest in informing their servants, and the servants a corresponding interest in learning, that negligence would be followed by dismissal, the occasion of would be ionowed by dishibst, the occasion of the publication was privileged. Hunt v. G. N. Ry., 60 L. J., Q. B. 498; [1891] 2 Q. B. 189; 55 J. P. 648—C. A.

> Information by Bank Manager as to Person having Transactions with Bank. |- The defendant, manager of a bank, having been applied to for information respecting the plaintiff, who had had business transactions; with the bank with which the applicant was interested, gave to the applicant an anonymous letter, which he had received a year previously, and which contained libellous charges against the plaintiff:—Held, that the communication was privileged. Robshaw v. Smith, 38 L. T. 423.

Character of Persons in whom Defendant has an Interest - Subscriber and Secretary of Charity. ]-A letter by a subscriber to a charity, to the committee, impuguing the moral conduct of the secretary, in reference especially to a person whom the defendant had recommended as a matron, and a second letter to the committee in answer to an answer from them proposing an inquiry : and certain oral statements made before the committee during the inquiry, are privileged, if made in the honest and reasonable relief that the charges were true. Maitland v. Bramwell, 2 F. & F. 623.

Subscriber to Charity and Medical Officer. -But communications made by one member of a charitable association to another, reflecting on the conduct of the medical attendant of the establishment, are not privileged. Martin v. Strong, 1 N. & P. 29; 5 A. & E. 535; 2 H. & W. 336 ; 6 L. J., K. B. 48.

- Insurance Company and Master of Ship.] -The plaintiff, a certificated master mariner, was retained by a shipowner to take command of a ship, and was getting ready to do so when he found that the defendant insurance society had intimated to the owner that if the plaintiff were to take command they would refuse to continue to insure the ship, and by reason thereof the plaintiff lost his employment. The defendants pleaded that they acted on information which they believed to be true that the plaintiff was addicted to intemperance, and that they an order for goods. The goods were sent to communicated their refusal to insure, but not and returned by the defendant, on the ground their information, to the shipowner in good faith and without malice:—Held, that such defence (if proved) was good, the representation made by the defendants being clearly made in the conduct of their own affairs and in matters in which their own interest was concerned, and, further, that such defence was established by proof that the defendants had received such information, and had reason to believe it to be true, without conclusively establishing habits of intemperance against the plannitiff as upon a plea of justification. Hamon v. Falle, 4 App. Cas. 217.

Statement of Association to supply Information about Ships as to Ship.]-An association formed to supply, through an annually published registry, information as to iron ships, to members and subscribers, and reserving the right to make periodical surveys of ships registered, objected to certain alterations made in a ship of their highest classification, inserted the words "class snspended" opposite her name in their list, and refused either to omit those words or to withdraw her name from the list :- Held, that there being no proof of malice, falsehood, or unfair dealing, the association was entitled to publish their bonâ fide opinion, although it was injurious to the property of the shipowners, and a motion by the shipowners to restrain publication of the words "class suspended," and to compel the withdrawal of the ship from the list, was refused with costs. Clover v. Royden, 43 L. J., Ch. 665; L. R. 17 Eq. 190; 22 W. R. 254, Report of Surveyor as to Ship.]—If the surveyor to a society which publishes an account of the different classes of ships for the information of merchants, underwriters, &c., is requested by a shipawner to survey his ship, and does so in consequence, and makes a report to the society, which classes the vessel according to his report, such shipowner cannot maintain an action against the members of the society for a libed in misdescribing the ship; nor against the surveyor, unless he made a false report. Kerr v. Shedden, 4 Car. & P. 528.

b. Characters of Servants.

Not Actionable unless False and Malicious, ]— A servant cannot maintain an action against his former master for words spoken, or a letter written by him, in giving a character of his servant, unless the latter proves the malice as well as falsehood of the charge, even though the master makes specific charges of fraud. Weatherston v. Handbins, I Term Rep. 110.

In an action by a servain for a libel in the form of a character, it is necessary to shew implied malice by directly negativing the charge, or express malice altunde; and it is no proof express malice that the master has communicated to the party inquiring his belief as to misconduct, after the servant had quitted his service; nor that he has made a similar communication to persons from whom he received the servant with a good character. Child v. Afflech, 4 M. & Ry. 388; 9 B. & O. 408; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 272.

A statement made by a late master of a servant to another person who had thoughts of engaging that servant is not privileged where, from other evidence, though of a slight description, the jury has inferred actual malice. ** *Lelly v. Partington**, 2 N. & M. 460; 4 B. & Ad. 700.

If a master, in giving the character of a servant, states in a letter certain facts, the master, in defence of an action brought by his servant for libel, is not bound to prove the truth of every fact he stated: it is enough that he gives such evidence as convinces the jury that he wrote what he did with an honest conviction of itstruth. Ib.

See also Webb v. East, col. 633.

What is evidence of Malice.]—Although a master is not in general bound to prove the truth of a character given by him to a person applying for the character of his servant, yet if he officiously states any trivial misconduct of the servant to a former master, in order to prevent him giving a second character, and then himself, upon application for a character, gives the servant a bad character, the truth of which he is not able to prove, the jury may, from these circumstances, infer malice on the part of the master, in an action against him by the servant. Rogers v. Clifton. 3 Bos. & P. 587.

In answer to an inquiry as to the character of a governess, the defendant wrote a letter in which she said, "I parted with her on account of her incompetency, and not being lady-like or good-tempered." To this letter there was the following postseript :- " May I trouble you totell her, that, this being the third time I have been referred to, I beg to decline any further applications." In an action by the governess against the defendant for writing this letter, she gave evidence tending to negative the statement in it of her qualifications, and she proved that previously the writer had recommended her as a governess. The judge directed the jury, that the letter being an answer to an inquiry into the character of a servant, prima facic it was privileged, but that the letter itself and the facts proved were some evidence for them that the writer was actuated by express malice, to rebut any inference of which the defendant might have given evidence to show that the statement itself of the character was a true one, or that she be-lieved, or had reason to believe, it to be a true one:—Held, that this direction was right. Fountain v. Boodle, 2 G. & D. 455; 3 Q. B. 5

Correction of Previous Good Character. ] The plaintiff, a domestic servant, about to enter the service of B., referred B. for her character tothe defendant, in whose service the plaintiff had been. The defendant being unwell, her husband answered the application, and gave the plaintiff a good character, and B. took the plaintiff intoservice. The defendant recovered, and in a letter written to B. on other matters, said that she, the defendant, had lately been much imposed upon in her kitchen. B. in consequence made-further inquiries of the defendant as to the plaintiff's character; and the defendant in answer spoke the words complained of, viz. that she suspected the plaintiff of dishonesty. The jury, in answer to the judge, found that the defendant intended by her letter to induce inquiries on B.'s. part as to the plaintiff; and they found a verdict for the plaintiff :- Held, that the defendant was bound to correct any error as to the plaintiff's character, into which she supposed B. to have been led by the answer to B.'s former application ; and that the words were spoken under such cir-cumstances as prima facie to be privileged. Gardener v. Slade, 13 Q. B. 796; 18 L. J., Q. B. 334 : 13 Jur. 826.

Voluntary Statement. ]-Where a master, without being applied to, volunteers to give an unfavourable character of a discarded servant, it is prima facie malicious, and not a privileged 101; 8 B. & C. 578; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 26.

In answer to Letter sent to Obtain Libel. ]-Though a letter giving a false character of a servant may be the ground of an action, yet, if written as an answer to a letter sent, not with a view to obtaining a character, but with an intention of obtaining such an answer as should be the ground of an action, no action can be sustained. King v. Waring, 5 Esp. 14.

In an action for words imputing dishonesty and place, evidence of antecedent good conduct is admissible. Th.

Letter from Employer's Wife to Employed.]-The defendant, the wife of a tradesman, being informed that a female assistant in her husband's employment was dishouest, wrote at his request and sent a letter accusing her of theft, and strongly reproaching her. On an indictment for libel :-Held, that the occasion was privileged, and that, therefore, in the absence of malice the defendant was not liable; and held, also, that the terms of a letter under such circumstances could not be too nicely criticised. Reg. v. Perry, 15 Cox, C. C. 169.

Letter to Person Recommending Servant. -A letter addressed to a person on whose recommendation the writer had taken the plaintiff into his service, to the effect that his conduct had not justified the character given of him, that he had left a balance unaccounted for, and that he ought not to be recommended for morality or honesty, is a privileged communication. Dison v. Parsons, 1 F. & F. 24.

Communication in Interests of Society. ]-A report unfavourable to W. had been drawn up by the Charity Organization Society, and was shewn to persons who made inquiries from the society about W.'s character, with a view to giving her charitable assistance. In an action by W. against the society for libel the judge directed the jury that the communication was privileged, and left to them the question whether malice in fact was proved, which the jury negatived. On appeal from the Queen's Bench Division, which had refused a rule nisi for a new trial :- Held, that the communication was privileged, and that it was not made out that the verdict negativing express malice was against evidence. Where a person is so situated that it becomes right in the interests of society that he should tell to a third person certain facts, then, if he bouâ fide and without malice does tell them, it is a privileged communication. Waller v. Loch or Loch, 51 L. J., Q. B. 274; 7 Q. B. D. 619; 45 L. T. 242; 30 W. R. 18; 46 J. P. 484—C. A.

Third Person Present.]—The defendant, suspecting his shopman had embezzled a sum of money which he had received for goods sold by him in the shop, charged him with the embezzle-

Held, also, that the facts that the defendant discharged him from his service. Afterwards his alluded to the plaintiff and induced inquiries brother called upon the defendant to ask him about her were not evidence of malice. Ib. why he had refused to give the plaintiff a character, and in answer to questions put by hisbrother, the defendant spoke the following words, "He has robbed me. I believe he has robbed me for years past. I can prove it, from the circumstances under which he has been discharged by communication. Pattison v. Jones, 3 M. & Ry. me" :-Held, that the words spoken on both occasions were privileged communications, and was no question for the jury. Taylor v. Hawkins, 16 Q. B. 308; 20 L. J., Q. B. 313; 15 Jur. 746.

Held, also, that though there was only evidence of one embezzlement, the excess in the words spoken on the second occasion was not evidence of express malice to be left to the jury. 77

A master having given notice of dismissal to bad conduct to a servant by which she has lost a his footman and cook, they separately went to him and asked his reason for discharging them, when he told each (in the absence of the other) that he (or she) was discharged because both had been robbing him; whereupon each brought an action for the words so spoken to the other :-Held, a privileged communication, and not defamatory. Manby v. Witt, 18 C. B. 544; 25 L. J., C. P. 294; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1004; 4 W. R.

> Where Expressions exceed Privilege.]—A. being dissatisfied with B., his gardener, gave him notice to leave, and wrote a letter to C., who had recommended him, knowing at the time that B, had applied to C, to recommend him to another situation ; and in that letter stated, "I had another scene with B. in my garden; he was extremely violent, came towards me with an open clasp-knife in his hand, and his eyes starting from their sockets with rage, a perfect raving madman":-Held, that the communication was not privileged, as there were expressions in the kitneersley, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 422; 33 L. J., C. P. 96; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 441; 9 L. T. 415; 12 W. R.

c. As to Tradesmen and their Dealings.

Statement as to Solvency or Credit. ]-A., a trader, being indebted to B. upon an unexpired eredit, employs C, to sell his goods by auction, and absents himself under circumstances sufficient to induce B, to believe that an act of bankraptey has been committed. B. gives notice to C. not to pay over the proceeds to A., "he having committed an act of bankruptcy." In an action by A. against B., charging this notice as a libel: —Held, by Tindal, C.J., and Coltman and Erle, JJ., to be a privileged communication; dissentiente Cresswell, J. Blackham v. Pugh, 2 C. B. 611; 15 L. J., C. P. 290.

If A. has sold goods to B., a tradesmen, and before the delivery of them C., without being asked or solicited in any way to do so, speaks words injurious to the credit of B. as a tradesman, this is not a privileged communication; but if he had been asked by A. as to the eredit of B, it would have been so, King v. Watts, 8 Car. & P. 614.

In an action for slander imputing to the plaintiff want of means in his business as a road conment in the presence of a neighbour, whom he tractor, the defendant pleaded that at the time had called in to hear what took place when he the words were spoken he was a grand inror and acting in that capacity, and that a portion of the of justice. Houre v. Silverlock, 9 C. R. 629. proposed contractor and as a proposed surety for other contractors :- Held, that the occasion was privileged, although the proposals for the several contracts had been accepted at Presentment Sessions, under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 116, s. 23. Little v. Pomerou, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 50.

Complaint by Customer. ]-Although a customer may use words of reasonable remonstrance or complaint to a tradesman, and the words, though defamatory, may be excused by the occasion, yet if, from the expressions used, or the circumstances of the time and place of speaking, it appears that they were spoken with unneces-sary violence or publicity, then they go beyond the occasion, and there will be evidence of malice by which the excuse will be taken away. Oddy

v. Paulet (Lord), 4 F. & F. 1009.

The defendant, who had purchased a piece of lamb from a butcher, went into the butcher's shop on the following day, and, in the hearing of others, said to the butcher, "I meant to have dealt with you in future, but you changed a piece of lamb I bought yesterday, and substituted a course piece of muttou." Held, that, if used honestly, the words were privileged by reason of the occasion. Crisp v. Gill, 5 W. R. 494.

Repeating False and Prejudicial Reports.]-Where a person originates false reports prejudicial to a tradesman, and being called on by the employers of the tradesman to examine the matters complained of, repeats to them the false statements, such statements are not privileged communications. Smith v. Mutheres, 1 M. & Rob. 151.

Caution in Good Faith.]—Quere, whether a caution bona fide given to a tradesman, without any inquiry on his part, not to trust another, falls within the exception as to privileged communications. By Tindal, C.J., and Erle, J., that it does. By Coltman and Cresswell, JJ., that it does not, Bennett v. Deacon, 2 C. B. 628; 15 L. J., C. P. 289.

In Answer to Inquiry.]—If A. is going to have dealings with B., and he makes inquiries of C., who gives A. information respecting B., this is a privileged communication, as everyone is quite at liberty to state his opionions bonn fide of the respectability of a party thus inquired about. Storey v. Challands, 8 Car. & P. 234.

Circular sent by Secretary to Members of Society for Protection of Trade.]—A circular letter sent by the secretary to the members of a society for the protection of trade against sharpers and swindlers, furnishing information respecting certain bill transaction, is not a privileged communication. Getting v. Foss, 3 Car. & P. 160.

d. Matters of Public Interest.

i. Reports of Judicial Proceedings.

Fair Report of Trial in Court of Justice privileged. - It is a good defence to an action for a libel that it consists of a fair and impartial

By the law of England, a fair account of what takes places in a court of justice may be published, but the reporter ought not to mix with it comments of his own, and if the report contains only a fair account of what takes place in the court of justice, the person who publishes it has only to prove that fact under the general issue, and he is cutitled to entire immunity. Andrews v. Chapman, 3 Car. & K. 286.

It is not essential that every word of the evidence of the speeches, and of every word that was said by the judge, should be inserted, if the report is substantially a fair and a correct report of what took place in a court of justice. Ib.

Result of Evidence. |-- A party cannot be justified in publishing the result of evidence given in a court of justice, but the evidence itself must be stated. Lewis v. Wulter, 4 B. & Ald. 605: 23 R. R. 415.

Coloured Account of Proceedings. -- It is libellous to publish a highly-coloured account of indicial proceedings, mixed with the party's own observations and conclusions upon what passed in court, which contained an insinuation that the plaintiff had committed perjury. Stiles v. Nokes, 7 East, 493. S. C. nom. Carr v. Jones, 3 Smith,

A publication of proceedings in a court of justice must be strictly confined to the proceedings in court, and cannot be justified if it contains disparaging observations by any other Contains displaying observations by any other than a judge of the court. Delegal v. Highley, 5 Scott, 154: 3 Bing. (N.C.) 950; 8 Car. & P. 444; 3 Hodges, 158; 6 L. J., C. P. 337.

Report of Statement by Counsel. -A mere statement by counsel in his opening to the jury, unsupported by evidence, is not a fair and an impartial report. Saunders v. Mills, 3 M. & P. 520; 6 Bing. 213; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 24; 31 R. R. 394.

A report of a libellous speech of counsel given without the evidence by which it was supported, and without any object towards the prosecution of the cause, is not a report of the proceedings of a court of justice within the meaning of the privilege. Kane v. Mulrains, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 402.

A newspaper proprietor has a right to publish either a verbatim or an abridged and a condensed report of what passes in a court of justice, even reflectious there cast upon parties by counsel or otherwise. But it must be done fairly and honourably, so as to convey a just impression of what had passed there. Turner v. Sullivan, 6 L. T. 130.

Whether it is such a fair report is not a question of law for the judge, but a question for the opinion of the jury. Ib.

Citations from Reports of Judicial Proceedings.]-The privilege possessed by reporters of the proceedings in courts of justice, provided the reports are faithful or fair, although they may be derogatory or defamatory to individuals mentioned in them, extends to the writers of law books fairly and honestly citing those reports. Blake v. Sterens, 4 F. & F. 232; 11 L. T. 543.

But reasonable care and diligence must be (though not verbatim) report of a trial in a court used to secure correctness in such citations. 1b. solicitor) to whom such report related had been ordered to be struck off the rolls, whereas in fact the order was that he be suspended for ten years: -Held, that such was not a fair representation of the report, that reasonable eare had not been used, and therefore that it was not privileged.

Report of Trial must be Fair and without Malice. - A fair report of a trial, whether published in a newspaper or a pamphlet, is privileged : but it lies on him who sets up the privilege to shew that he comes within it. It is sufficient if such a report is a fair abstract of the trial; but where there is any evidence on which a jury could reasonably find that the report was not absolutely fair, the question of fairness must be left to the jury. Milissich v. Lloyds, 46 L. J., 7 Moore, 2 C. P. 404; 36 L. T. 423; 25 W. R. 353; 13 Cox, R. R. 533. C. C. 575-C. A.

The defendant, a solicitor, conducted a case in a county court, and sent a report of the proceedings containing matter defamatory of the plaintiff to several newspapers for publication. In an action for libel the jury found that the report was a fair one, but sent with malice :-Held (affirming the judgment of Cockburn C.J.), that no absolute privilege attached to the publication of a report, though a fair one of proceedings in a court of justice, and that the defendant, having been actuated by malice in sending the report. been actuated by mander in senting the reports was liable in the action. Stevens v. Sampson, 49 L. J., Q. B. 120; 5 Ex. D. 53; 41 L. T. 782; 28 W. R. 87—C. A.

A publication, reflecting on the character of the plaintiff, professed to contain a report of the proceedings before two judges of different courts at chambers, on applications, under 5 & 6 Vict.

c. 122, s. 42, to discharge a bankrupt out of custody. The defence was, that it was a fair account of what took place before those judges when acting in a judicial capacity:—Held, that if it was, the defendant was entitled to the verdict. Smith v. Scott, 2 Car. & K. 580.

Held, also, that if the report, though not eorrect, was an honest one, and intended to be a fair account of what really occurred before the

- Report containing Unfair Comment on an Acquittal. __The plaintiff was tried in Brussels for murder, and acquitted. A correspondent of an English journal wrote letters which were inserted in such journal, containing incorrect statements of the evidence, independent comments of the writer upon the character and bearing of the prisoner, and expressions impugning the verdiet of acquittal, and implying that the prisoner should have been found guilty of murder, and was certainly guilty of forgery and fraud. A leading article was also published adopting the same tone:—Held, that if in the opinion of the jury, looking at the letters indivi-dually and not collectively, they did not contain fair, honest and faithful representations of what passed at the trial, they were not privileged. Risk Allah Bey v. Whitehurst, 18 L. T. 615. Held, also, that if by some oversight or want
